advice published by the Department. We shall update the list as and when new guidance is issued or existing guidance is modified. In the meantime, we are working to make as many of the documents as possible directly accessible by hypertext link from the list.

This initiative is a practical demonstration of the government's policy to increase substantially the volume of business transacted by electronic means.

Mr. Stringer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions on what date he will publish Design in the Planning System. [96598]

Ms Beverley Hughes: The Good Practice Guide on Design in the Planning System will be an important contribution to our commitment to achieving urban renaissance. It must therefore be right. We therefore intend to publish it once we are satisfied that it is capable of meeting our requirements.

Housing Subsidy (West Oxfordshire)

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the impact on West Oxfordshire District Council's revenue and capital spending of his changes to the negative housing subsidy regime. [96599]

Mr. Mullin: My Department will be consulting later this Autumn on the detail of the proposals for changes in the Housing Revenue Account (HRA) subsidy regime. Consideration of the outcome of that exercise will be required before any decisions are taken. It is too early to say what the impact of any changes will be. The implications for any authority will depend upon both the results of the consultation exercise and conditions pertaining nearer the time that any changes are made.

Local Government

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has for changes to the structure of local government in England. [96689]

Ms Beverley Hughes: There are no plans at present to reform the structure of local government in England. Our programme of reform for local government is about how councils work and how they can be more in touch with the people whom they serve. This will also give the stability that local government needs in order to deliver an efficient and effective service.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Restraining Orders

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what requirement there is for all parties to be (a) informed and (b) represented before a restraining order can be agreed to by the courts; and if he will make a statement. [96699]

Jane Kennedy: Under the Protection from Harassment Act 1997, a court sentencing or otherwise dealing with a person convicted of an offence under section 2 or 4 of the Act may make a restraining order under section 5 of the Act to protect the victim of the offence (or any other person mentioned in the order) from further harassment. The defendant would be present at the time of sentence and would be entitled to be represented. The parties in a criminal trial are the prosecution and the defendant. There is no specific requirement for the court to inform the victim or any other person mentioned in the order, or for those persons to be represented at court, before the order is made. In the civil courts, an application for an injunction, the equivalent of a restraining order, would be served on the defendant before the hearing. There is no specific requirement for the defendant to be represented.

Performance Targets

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list all performance targets set for the Lord Chancellor's Department, agencies and non-departmental public bodies since May 1997, other than those listed in Public Service Agreements 1999–2002 [Cm 4181], stating in each case (a) the target to be reached and (b) the date by which it was to be reached. [94982]

Jane Kennedy: The Department has set out the key performance targets on which it will be judged in its PSA, and the measures of success it will use in the Output and Performance Analyses (OPA) published in March this year. The Lord Chancellor's Department Departmental Reports 1998–99 and 1999–2000 include targets and achievement for the Public Records Office, Her Majesty's Land Registry, and the Northern Ireland Court Service. The targets and target dates for the Court Service Agency and the Public Trust Office can be found annually in the Next Steps Report, and for the Legal Aid Board in the annual Executive Non-Departmental Public Bodies Report.

DEFENCE

Equal Opportunities

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if an action plan for increasing the representation of women in public life has been (a) prepared by his Department and (b) published since November 1998. [94853]

Mr. Kilfoyle: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to her by the Minister for the Cabinet Office on 25 October 1999, Official Report, column 682.

UK BVRAAM Competition

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the expected date on which the Equipment Approval Committee will make its final recommendation for the UK BVRAAM competition. [95347]

Mr. Kilfoyle: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence hopes to reach a decision on the outcome of the competition in the new year.

Fleet Management

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what estimates he has made of the savings in each of the next five years through the RAF private finance initiative for the non-combat vehicle fleet management project; [95755]

(2) what estimate he has made of the economies of scale which could result from a tri-services private finance initiative for non-combat vehicle fleet management; and if he will make a statement. [95795]

Mr. Kilfoyle: A five year PFI contract for the RAF non-combat vehicle fleet was placed in 1996. It is expected to deliver total savings of almost £6 million in Net Present Value terms against conventional procurement methods. Five further non-combat vehicle PFI projects, covering national tri-Service requirements on a regional basis, are under way. It is not possible at this stage to quantify the savings which are expected from the five tri-Service contracts and the re-let of the RAF contract.

Departmental Contracts

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Tayside North of 19 February 1998, Official Report, columns 842–43, on departmental employees, if he will provide figures for research contracts by region for the most recent financial year. [95366]

Mr. Kilfoyle [holding answer 26 October 1999]: The information requested is not available in precisely the form requested. The number and total value of extant research contracts in Financial Year 1998–99 in the following locations is as listed:

Location	Number of contracts	Value of contracts (£)
(a) London	82	11,695,303
(b) the rest of the South East of England	250	274,714,231
(c) England (including (a) and(b))	908	393,879,546
(d) Scotland	21	1,692,493
(e) Wales	1	26,019
(f) Northern Ireland	0	—

The information cannot be provided by the Regions requested as such information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Ministry of Defence Police

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when his Department's police are next due for inspection by Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary. [96542]

Mr. Spellar: The next inspection of the MOD Police by Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary is due in the year 2001.

Health and Safety (Young Persons) Regulations 1997

Mr. Stinchcombe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps have been taken to ensure that his Department complies with S.I. 1997 No. 135, the Health and Safety (Young Persons) Regulations 1997. [96464]

Mr. Kilfoyle: S.I. 1997 No. 135, the Health and Safety (Young Persons) Regulations 1997 have been implemented as MOD policy. The instruction was incorporated into the MOD Health and Safety Handbook, Joint Service Publication 375 Volume 2 Chapter 10 in April 1997. A copy of the Joint Service Publication is available in the Library of the House.

Homosexuals

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment has been made of the possible cost to his Department of retrospective claims for compensation following the ECHR ruling in the cases of Mr. Prean, Mr. Beckett, Miss Smith and Mr. Grady regarding discrimination in the armed forces; and if he will make a statement. [96889]

Mr. Spellar: In light of the ECHR's judgment on 27 September 1999, the Secretary of State for Defence has authorised that settlement negotiations be entered into with those individuals discharged as a result of their homosexuality who have submitted Employment Tribunal applications.

As these negotiations are currently underway, I am withholding disclosure of my Department's financial provision for settling these claims under Exemption 7 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information (Effective Management and Operations of the Public Service) as this information could compromise the negotiations and delay settlement.

Army Establishment

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish the net inflow/outflow figures for the Army for each month since January 1998 to date. [96121]

Mr. Spellar: A breakdown of UK Trained Army Personnel inflow and outflow, in the period January 1998 to September/August 1999 (the latest date for which information is presently available), is detailed in the table:

[2] Inflow to trained strength from basic training of Regular Army Personnel.

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on Army recruitment and retention. [96065]

Mr. Spellar: The Government inherited a shortfall on Army manning and are committed to achieving full manning by around 2005. We recognise fully that improved recruiting and retention will be key to realising this goal.

In 1998–99, the Army recruited some 610 officers and 15,609 soldiers, which represents 98 per cent. of the overall recruiting target for the year. It was the best recruiting year for the Army since the beginning of the decade and there are encouraging signs that the momentum is being maintained this year. A broad range of national and regional recruiting initiatives are in hand to encourage young people to view the Army as a career of first choice.

The rate at which we lose our people has been too high for too many years, and it is one of this Government's highest priorities to rectify the situation. There has been some improvement in retention in the Army in the last two years, but achieving further improvements remains a challenge. The Army has in hand a series of initiatives as part of its Human Resources Strategy. This includes a six month strategic review being undertaken by external consultants to examine the effectiveness of present Army retention policies, which includes field research and making recommendations for improvements, the results of which will inform the Army's personnel management policies. Other measures to improve retention, which have been welcomed by Army personnel, include an improved operational welfare package, life long learning, and the efforts of the Service Families Task Force.

Depleted Uranium (Iraq)

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the amount of uranium dust released in Iraq during the Gulf War from depleted uranium rounds; and what action he proposed to take to manage the risk to public health. [96667]

Mr. Spellar: It is assessed that over 860,000 depleted uranium-based ammunition rounds, of varying calibre, were used by Coalition Forces during the Gulf conflict. Evaluation of the environmental effects of depleted uranium is ongoing.

As part of this work, we would, of course, consider any reliable medical or scientific data which may emerge from any source of risk to public health posed by depleted uranium.

Army Retention Study

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list and summarize the specific areas of research being undertaken as part of the Army's Retention Study. [96837]

Mr. Spellar: The Army Retention Study, which is being undertaken under contract by the Hay Management Group, will draw on and initiate structured quantitative and qualitative market research into retention in the Army. In addition to analysis of existing research and retention initiatives, a programme of field research will be conducted to establish a cross section of views from all ranks, and their families, to determine why people leave the Service and to identify trends. Further consultation will take place with Unit Retention Officers, Policy Staffs, and individuals who have recently joined and left the Army, among others. The Study will consider the extent to which current retention policies and initiatives are effective, and identify areas where they can be improved.

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the remit of the Army's Retention Study currently being undertaken by the Hay Management Group. [96834]

Mr. Spellar: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 25 October 1999, Official Report, column 705.

Service Families Task Force

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will specify the (i) particular responsibilities, (ii) manner of operation and (iii) decision-making processes of the Ministerial Group, Families Forum and Working Group that make up the Service Families Task Force. [96836]

Mr. Spellar: The Families Forum enables the three Service families associations to raise issues of concern to me and, in turn, allows me to inform them of the progress the Task Force is making. The Ministerial Group identifies the desired outcome to these issues and directs the Working Group of officials to progress them.

Forensic Experts

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many forensic teams are investigating (a) war graves and (b) sites of war crimes; and which countries they represent. [96097]

Mr. Hain: I have been asked to reply.

Thirteen states have provided investigative teams including forensic experts to assist the International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia (ICTY) in Kosovo, although forensic investigations have now been scaled down with the onset of winter. They are: the UK, Austria, Belgium, Canada, Denmark, France, Germany, Iceland, Luxembourg, The Netherlands, Sweden, Switzerland and the United States. The UK was the first to send such a team. ICTY also has its own team of investigators including forensic experts working in Bosnia.

Kosovo

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what organisation is responsible for reporting on numbers of bodies found in graves in Kosovo and on evidence of war crimes committed; when it will report and to whom. [96098]

Mr. Hain: I have been asked to reply.

There is no one organisation responsible for reporting on atrocities in Kosovo. However, the UN Commission for Human Rights has asked the UN High Commissioner to report on atrocities. She has produced two reports in May and September of this year.

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many bodies were exhumed from the Trepca mine in Kosovo; and what forensic evidence was found that could prove claims that the Trepca mine had been a mass grave. [96096]

Mr. Hain: I have been asked to reply.

The International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia has conducted extensive investigations at Trepca mine. No bodies have been found there to date. There is no forensic evidence to date to confirm that it was a mass grave site.

Ascension Island

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what efforts he has made to attract civilian airlines to use Wideawake Airfield on Ascension Island; and if he will make a statement. [96035]

Mr. Battle: I have been asked to reply.

Civil aircraft may use Wideawake Airfield only with the agreement of both the UK and US authorities.

In December 1998, the UK passed to the United States authorities for consideration, a draft treaty to allow certain types of civil flights into Ascension.

During the visit of my noble Friend the Under-Secretary of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office, to the United States on 4–5 October 1999, the United States Government agreed in principle that the airfield should be opened to certain types of civil flights on a limited basis.

We are encouraging the United States authorities to complete their internal discussions and to secure a mandate for formal negotiations to begin. British Embassy officials in Washington will soon meet State Department officials to take this issue forward.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Archaeology (Funding)

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will make a statement on his policy towards funding of archaeology; what (a) national and (b) EC grants are available; and if he will make a statement. [95299]

Mr. Alan Howarth: Funding for archaeological projects is provided through English Heritage's (EH) archaeology budget (£9.7 million for 1999–2000), of which £4.975 million is provided in grants to outside bodies; archaeology will also feature in other EH funded projects. Developers' contribution to archaeological costs is estimated at £30 million per annum. Although the Local Government Finance Settlement is the best one for seven years, the provision of conservation services in local authorities is kept under review, and, where necessary, EH will continue to fund a number of archaeological posts (costing £150,000 in 1999–2000). Financial assistance has been available from the EU's Raphael fund, which is due to be replaced by the Culture 2000 Framework Programme, under which archaeological projects will be eligible; projects may also qualify for funding under a range of other EU programmes.

HMG is also funding a two-year project of pilot schemes in six areas of England for the voluntary recording of all archaeological finds, which started in September 1997. The Heritage Lottery Fund is funding a further six pilot schemes from early 1999, extending coverage to more than half the country. An Annual Report and website were launched on 24 March.

Television News

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will instruct the ITC to obtain from ITV the latest figures showing (a) the change in the numbers watching news on Channel 3 since the abolition of News at Ten and (b) the change in the viewing numbers for the 10 to 10.30 p.m. weekday slot on Channel 3 since the abolition of News at Ten. [95751]

Janet Anderson: The Independent Television Commission is monitoring the performance of ITV following changes to its news provision. ITV began their new evening schedule on 8 March, replacing the bulletin at 5.40–6.00 and News at Ten with a half hour news bulletin from 6.30–7.00 and an update from 11.00–11.15. For the four weeks beginning 14 September, the latest figures available to the ITC, the average audiences who were watching news on Channel 3 and the figures for the equivalent weeks in 1999 are as follows:

	Million
5.40–6.00	4.1
10.00–10.30	5.6
Total	9.7
6.30–7.00	5.5
11.00–11.15	3.5
Total	9.0

During this period in 1998, 5.6 million were watching Channel 3 in the 10.00 to 10.30 pm slot and during the same period in 1999, since the rescheduling of News at Ten, this has changed to 6.8 million.

Tourism

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) what was the change in the total number of jobs in tourism-related industries in the year to December 1998 in (a) England, (b) Scotland, (c) Wales and (d) Northern Ireland; [95435]

(2) what was the change in the total number of jobs in tourism-related industries in the year to December 1998 in (a) London and (b) the north-west of England. [95926]

Janet Anderson: The changes in the number of self-employment and employee jobs in the tourism related industries in the year to December 1998 in (a) England, (b) Scotland, (c) Wales, (d) Northern Ireland, (e) London and (f) north-west England are shown in the table.

Region	December 1997	December 1998	Change over the year (%)
England	1,510,000	1,481,000	−2
Scotland	170,000	171,000	+0.06
Wales	79,000	82,000	+4
Northern Ireland	43,000	44,000	+2
London	276,000	275,000	−0.4
North West	186,000	183,000	−2

Source:

GB: Employee jobs from Annual Employment Survey and Short Term Employment Survey and self employment jobs from Labour Force Survey (ONS)

NI: Employee jobs from Northern Ireland Quarterly Employment Survey and self employment jobs from the NI Labour Force Survey (Northern Ireland Office)

Due to the level of detail required, the self-employment figures are for the winter period of December to February, and therefore do not directly match the reference period for employee jobs (of December).

Analogue Radio Frequencies

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions he has had with (a) commercial radio broadcasters, (b) the BBC and (c) consumer groups regarding the future of analogue radio frequencies. [95126]

Janet Anderson [holding answer 25 October 1999]: With the collaboration of the DTI's Radiocommunications Agency, my officials are considering the current use of analogue radio frequencies and the scope for new services. Representatives of the commercial radio broadcasters, the Radio Authority, the BBC and the Community Media Association have been invited to participate. One of the key requirements of the licensing process is for applicants to demonstrate consumer need within the licence area and consumer interests will be an important part of our policy consideration. We shall ensure that consumer needs are properly addressed in this review.

Performance Targets

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will list all performance targets set for his Department, agencies and non-departmental public bodies since May 1997, other than those listed in Public Service Agreements 1999–2002 [Cm 4181], stating in each case (a) the target to be reached and (b) the date by which it was to be reached. [94978]

Mr. Chris Smith: The Department has set out the key performance targets on which it will be judged in its PSA, and the measures of success it will use in the Output and Performance Analyses (OPA) published in March this year. Performance targets, where appropriate, have also been set for the Department's NDPBs and its agency through the production of annual funding agreements. These agreements have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses of Parliament. Information on targets and their delivery can also be found in the annual reports and accounts of the agency and non-departmental public bodies. The high level targets which appear in funding agreements, the PSA and the OPA are supported at operational level by numerous targets to ensure delivery by individual units. Listing these operational targets would be inappropriate and disproportionate in terms of resources.

Broadcasting Standards

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will make a statement on his policy on standards in radio broadcasting. [96605]

Janet Anderson: Responsibility for the content of radio services rests with the BBC and the independent broadcasters. The BBC operates within the terms of its Charter and Agreement and undertakes to provide services which are of high general standards in all respects. Independent radio services are licensed and regulated by the Radio Authority under the Broadcasting Acts 1990 and 1996. The Authority is under a general duty to facilitate the provision of licensed services which (taken as a whole) are of high quality and offer a wide range of programmes calculated to appeal to a variety of tastes and interests.

The Broadcasting Standards Commission is responsible under the Broadcasting Act 1996 for producing codes of practice relating to standards and fairness in programmes, considering and adjudicating on complaints and monitoring, researching and reporting on standards and fairness in broadcasting. The BBC and Radio Authority are required, when drawing up or revising their own codes relating to principles and practice, to reflect the general effect of the Broadcasting Standards Commission's codes.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Equal Opportunities

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if an action plan for increasing the representation of women in public life has been (a) prepared by her Department and (b) published since November 1998. [94848]

Clare Short: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given by the Minister for the Cabinet Office on 25 October 1999, Official Report, column 682.

China

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what progress has been made by the World Bank in implementing the China western poverty reduction scheme. [95291]

Clare Short: An Inspection Panel has just returned from China after conducting an investigation into whether the World Bank violated policies and procedures with regard to the design and appraisal of the Western Poverty Reduction Project. It will now prepare a detailed report for submission to World Bank management. It is anticipated that the report, and the management response to it, will be presented to the Executive Board of the World Bank in February 2000. No disbursement of funding on the Qinghai component of the project will take place until this has happened.

Departmental Twinning

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many requests there have been to her Department for placement of officials from Central, East European and CIS states as twins of his officials; how many such officials have been accepted as twins; and from which countries (a) those who were accepted and (b) those who were not accepted came. [94005]

Clare Short: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given on 25 October 1999, Official Report, column 739, by the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office, my hon. Friend the Member for Leicester, East (Mr. Vaz).

Health Projects

Ms McCafferty: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what representations she has received on the reduction in the percentage of Government contributions to sexual and reproductive health projects under the new Civil Society Challenge Fund rules. [96515]

Clare Short: We have received a number of representations about the funding arrangements for reproductive health activities under the new Civil Society Challenge Fund (CSCF).

In the spirit of a Challenge Fund, it is important that all our partners demonstrate their commitment and the quality of their projects by raising funds within their own support based or from other donors. However, in recognition of the initial problems likely to be faced by organisations which had access to 100 per cent. funding from the JFS, I have agreed a transitional arrangement under which reproductive health activities will be eligible for 85 per cent. funding in year one of the new Fund, 70 per cent. in year two, and 50 per cent. in year three.

Ms McCafferty: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list the non-Governmental organisations which are receiving 100 per cent. funding for population and reproductive health projects in 1999–2000 through the joint funding scheme. [96514]

Clare Short: Eleven NGOs are in receipt of 100 per cent. funding for population, reproductive and sexual health projects from the Joint Funding Scheme in the current financial year:

Alternative for India Development
AMREF (Africa Medical and Research Foundation)
CARE International (UK)
ICR (International Care and Relief)
International Family Health
Marie Stopes International
The Naz Foundation
Plan International Population Concern
Population Services International Urban Aid

Democratic Republic of Congo

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what the level of UK aid is to the Democratic Republic of Congo in the current financial year; and if she will make a statement. [96708]

Clare Short: We hope that the Lusaka Ceasefire Agreement, which came into effect on 1 September, will bring an end to a war that has caused untold suffering and damage to the region. We continue to urge all parties to implement the agreement in full, but the onus of implementation lies with the parties themselves.

We and our EU partners have made clear our readiness to help with rebuilding the country, providing there is tangible progress towards respect for human rights, democracy, economic reform and the rule of law. Britain was the first bilateral donor to pledge support to a World Bank managed Trust Fund intended to focus on immediate reconstruction and rehabilitation following the fall of President Mobutu. The conflict has diverted attention away from the key task of establishing the essential economic and governance reforms necessary for utilisation of the Trust Fund. It is vital that the Government of the Democratic Republic of the Congo use the opportunity of the Lusaka Agreement to focus on these issues.

In the meantime, the UK is responding to demonstrable humanitarian needs where access and security allow. So far this financial year, we have committed over £1.1 million to help both the most vulnerable groups within the Democratic Republic of the Congo, as well as the refugee populations in the surrounding countries.

Bermuda

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what the level of UK aid to Bermuda is in the current financial year; and if she will make a statement. [96707]

Clare Short: There are no plans for bilateral development assistance expenditure by my Department to Bermuda in the current financial year or thereafter.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Consumer White Paper

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to his answer of 27 July 1999, Official Report, column 315, if The Times industrial correspondent was briefed prior to the general press briefing at 12 noon on 22 July 1999. [94302]

Dr. Howells: Neither I nor my colleagues spoke to The Times industrial correspondent prior to the general press briefing on 22 July.

Philippines

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if offsetting arrangements were associated with UK defence sales to the Philippines in the mid-1990s. [94802]

Mr. Kilfoyle: I have been asked to reply.

Offset arrangements have been associated with UK defence exports to the Philippines. Such arrangements are a matter between the contractor(s) and the Philippine Government.

European State Aid

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions United Kingdom representatives have held with Commission officials over whether to categorise French Government assistance to the Société Marseillaise de Crédit as state aid; and if he will make a statement. [95297]

Mrs. Liddell: The Commission has exclusive competence to determine whether an aid is compatible with the Treaty. The Commission is currently investigating the aid granted to Société Marseillaise de Crédit. If, at the end of its investigation, the Commission reaches a negative decision and finds that the aid is not compatible with the Treaty, it may order the French authorities to recover the aid paid with interest. UK representatives have not held any discussions with Commission officials regarding this case.

Brussels Convention

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what his policy is regarding the proposed revision of the Brussels Convention regarding cross-border consumer contract law; and if he will make a statement. [95923]

Dr. Howells: The Department is consulting business, consumer and other organisations about the approach the Government should take towards the draft proposal put forward by the European Commission to convert the Convention into a Community Regulation. The DTI hosted a conference for this purpose on 15 October. We are extremely keen to see e-commerce flourish in the EU and our aims are to give consumers confidence and to minimise costs to business.

Alcohol (Advertising)

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what his policy is regarding the advertising of alcoholic drinks; and if he will make a statement. [95925]

Dr. Howells: Alcohol advertising is subject to general legislation and other rules relating, for example, to accuracy, truthfulness and decency. In addition, there are specific rules relating to alcohol in the Codes of Practice of the principal bodies controlling advertising in the UK: the Independent Television Commission; the Radio Authority; and the Advertising Standards Authority. These rules are designed to ensure that alcohol advertising is socially responsible. Advertisements should not appeal to young people, should not show alcohol in association with dangerous activities such as driving, sports or operating machinery, and should not give the impression that alcohol improves performance.

In addition, television advertising is also subject to a European Union Directive. Article 15 of the Television Without Frontiers Directive requires that television advertising for alcoholic drinks must not be aimed specifically at minors or depict minors consuming them. The regulators have reflected this in their Codes of Practice by specifically prohibiting advertisers from directing promotions for drinks containing alcohol at people under eighteen years of age.

I understand that compliance with the Codes in this area is very high. Relatively few complaints are received about alcohol advertising and we have no reason to believe the system is not working well across the media. My colleagues in the Department of Health are examining the role of advertising in the context of the development of the new alcohol misuse strategy for England.

Scientific Researchers

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he will publish the results of the Office of Science and Technology studies into the careers, conditions and salaries of young scientific researchers. [95796]

Ms Hewitt: The Office of Science and Technology has not commissioned such studies. It supports the Research Careers Initiative, chaired by Sir Gareth Roberts, Vice-Chancellor of the University of Sheffield, which expects to publish a second report in the new year, surveying progress in improving the career management and development of research staff on fixed-term contracts in universities.

The first report, from October 1998, is available on the CVCP website at: www.cvcp.ac.uk.

Working Time Regulations

Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment has been made of the level of compliance by employers with the new Working Time Regulations. [95696]

Mr. Alan Johnson [holding answer 25 October 1999]: The level of compliance with the Working Time Regulations is difficult to assess at this early stage. When the autumn Labour Force Survey is available (early in 2000) it will provide information for some assessment of the Regulations to be made. The enforcing authorities are also collecting data, which may be indicative of compliance.

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has to amend the Working Time Regulations in respect of (a) record-keeping by those who opt out of the 48-hour week and (b) extending the scope of the unmeasured working time exemption; and if he will make a statement. [96700]

Mr. Alan Johnson: Draft regulations to amend the Working Time Regulations, in respect of the requirement to keep records for workers who have opted out of the working time limit and extending the scope of the unmeasured working time exemption, were laid before Parliament on 19 October. They will be debated in both Houses before being made.

The extension of the 'unmeasured working time' derogation provides greater flexibility for workers who can determine their own hours of work, but have an element of their working time predetermined. The second amendment replaces the requirement to keep records for those who opt-out of the working time limit, with a single requirement to keep a list of those who have signed an opt-out.

Electrical Installations

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the impact of installing residual current devices on the incidence of fires in domestic dwellings with an electrical cause. [95265]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 26 October 1999]: The DTI has made no formal assessment of the impact of installing residual current devices (RCDs) on the incidence of fires in domestic dwellings with an electrical cause.

However, the Department has undertaken research into the role and added value of RCDs in the home, including an examination of their potential for preventing fires. The report was published in October 1997 and the contractor was ERA Technology Ltd. A copy of the report "Residual Current Devices—added value for home safety" is available in the Library.

Defence Trade

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the amount (a) in total and (b) by country of the five nations with the highest amount of such trade, of UK (i) imports and (ii) exports of defence goods and services for the past two years for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [95932]

Mr. Caborn [holding answer 26 October 1999]: Information on exports of military equipment during 1997 was included in the Government's Annual Report on Strategic Export Controls published by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office on 25 March 1999. Information for 1998 will be included in the Government's next Annual Report which is currently being prepared.

Figures for exports of goods prior to 1997, imports of goods and trade in services could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Millennium Trade Round

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what are Her Majesty's Government's priorities at the Millennium Round of the World Trade Organisation; and if he will make a statement. [95729]

Mr. Caborn [holding answer 26 October 1999]: The Government's priorities are unchanged from those outlined in the reply given by my predecessor on 21 January 1999, Official Report, columns 548–49.

Trade Schemes Regulations

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which EU legislation required the introduction of the Trading Schemes (Exclusion) (Amendment) Regulations 1997/1887. [96204]

Dr. Howells: There is no such EU legislation.

Business Links

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the future of Business Links. [96203]

Ms Hewitt: The Small Business Service will develop a network of local Business Link franchises. Key stakeholders involved in existing Business Link local partnerships will be invited to submit proposals to deliver high quality coherent services under the new franchise arrangements. The number of local Business Link areas will be reduced from 81 to 45.

Mr. Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what criteria will be used in determining Business Link boundaries. [96324]

Ms Hewitt: On 30 June, a public consultation on the Small Business Service was launched. The Small Business Service will be given responsibility for taking forward the Business Link network.

In a letter to RDA Chairs in June, RDAs were asked to consult local partners and make recommendations on the boundaries for local delivery of SBS services. The letter also set out the criteria for determining these boundaries. The underlying principle for determining SBS boundaries was the desire to have no more than 40–50. This would maximise administrative savings and provide a more effective local network for planning, funding, managing and driving up quality, while still ensuring that businesses would have good access locally to business support services.

Specifically, RDAs were asked to ensure that boundaries:

fit with local travel-to-work and travel-to-study patterns and with the pattern of business and commercial activities;

be co-terminous with the Learning and Skills Council areas and other key local economic or social units and partnerships—especially with local authorities, the sub-regional partnerships set up locally to tackle economic and social issues, and be within RDA/GO boundaries; and be large enough to assure economies of scale and cost effectiveness—a resident population of 0.5 million is considered to be the minimum—although it is expected to be much greater in conurbations.

Ministers subsequently made it clear to RDAs that they wished LSC/SBS boundaries not to cut across LEA boundaries.

Ministers considered RDA recommendations in detail, alongside the criteria set in the letter to RDA Chairs and with advice from the relevant Government Offices. They also considered a number of direct representations from interested parties. The decisions were announced to the House on 28 July 1999, Official Report, columns 936–38.

Robert Maxwell

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he will be in a position to publish the results of the inquiry into Robert Maxwell. [96254]

Dr. Howells: The independent inspectors appointed to investigate the affairs and membership of Mirror Group Newspapers plc (there is no inquiry into the late Robert Maxwell) are still carrying out their work. Consequently they have yet to report to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry.

Dismissal of Workers

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will introduce measures in his proposed employment relations legislation to prevent the dismissal of employees involved in a lawful strike. [96173]

Mr. Alan Johnson: We intend to bring section 16 and Schedule 5 of the Employment Relations Act 1999 into force by Easter next year. These provisions will extend the right of protection for those dismissed for taking lawfully organised industrial action to complain to a tribunal of unfair dismissal. They will make it automatically unfair to dismiss workers for the first eight weeks of the action and give employees a right to claim unfair dismissal, if dismissed after the eight week period, where the employer has failed to follow all reasonable procedural steps to try to resolve the dispute. These provisions are designed to stop precipitate dismissals and to place an onus on both employers and unions to settle disputes by negotiation.

Nuclear Fusion

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what reports he has received on progress towards nuclear fusion at the USA National Ignition Facility at Lawrence Livermore Laboratories in California. [96435]

Mrs. Liddell: My Department's contribution on nuclear fusion is managed and undertaken by the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority (UKAEA).

UKAEA has received no reports on progress towards nuclear fusion at the USA National Ignition Facility at Lawrence Livermore Laboratories, California, other than those presented at international fusion conferences and meetings, and reports in the scientific press.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what contributions his Department is making to nuclear fusion projects in the USA and Europe; and where they are taking place. [96434]

Mrs. Liddell: My Department's contribution on nuclear fusion is managed and undertaken by the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority (UKAEA). UK contribution for fusion projects in Europe (including UK) is split into two parts:

the UKAEA expenditure of £14.6 million per year, including their contribution of 8 Million Euro per year as host to the Joint European Torus (JET), an EU Joint Undertaking based at Culham, Oxfordshire; the UK's contribution to the European Union R&D Framework Programme supporting the European fusion collaboration.

No contribution is made by my Department to fusion projects in the USA.

Export Credit Guarantees

Mr. Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which countries currently qualify for ECGD cover. [96323]

Mr. Caborn: This information is in the public domain, published in the Autumn 1999 issue of 'ECGD News'. I have arranged for a copy to be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry in each of the last five years, how much the Treasury has had to make available to ECGD to cover losses incurred by the ECGD. [96562]

Mr. Caborn: Over the last five years, cash-flow on ECGD's trading operations has been positive:

£ million

Financial year	Cash-flow
1996–97	444.9
1998–99	353.5

As a result, over this period, ECGD has not been a charge on the Exchequer and has contributed £1.5 billion to it.

Radio Frequencies

Mr. Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much revenue Her Majesty's Government have raised in selling radio wave frequencies since May 1997. [96402]

Ms Hewitt: The Wireless Telegraphy Acts 1949 and 1998 provide for licences to be issued to establish or use stations for wireless telegraphy and to install or use wireless telegraphy apparatus. Fee income from such licences, other than for television reception, totalled £92.571m over the two financial years 1997–98 and 1998–99.

Letter Stamps (Europe)

Mr. Fallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what was the percentage increase in the cost of a letter stamp for Europe in (a) 1998 and (b) 1999; what were his reasons for authorising the increases; and if he will make a statement. [96486]

Mr. Alan Johnson [holding answer 28 October 1999]: The cost of a stamp for a letter up to 20g to European destinations rose by an average of 4.8 per cent. on 6 April 1998 and by a further 13.33 per cent. on 25 October 1999. It is still one of the cheapest rates in Europe.

The increase was prompted by increasing handling costs and is in line with the agreement, set out in the European Postal Services Directive, that prices should be geared to costs. The increases were introduced by the Post Office following consultation with the Post Office Users' National Council (POUNC).

Mobile Telephones

Mr. Borrow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on progress towards issuing licences for third generation mobile spectrum under the Wireless Telegraphy Acts 1949 and 1998. [96905]

Ms Hewitt: I am delighted to announce that the Information Memorandum for the auction of licences for Third Generation mobile spectrum is being published today.

The Memorandum sets out the detailed arrangements for the auction. Applications to take part in the auction are scheduled to be due on 12 January 2000. The auction itself is expected to start in March 2000. The Government expect that this will be the first auction for Third Generation licences in Europe, giving UK consumers early access to this exciting new technology, and keeping the UK at the forefront of international developments in mobile communications.

I am pleased that Vodafone's and BT Cellnet's Telecommunications Act Licences were modified by consent on 22 October to provide for the negotiation of roaming agreements with any new entrants. This will help to encourage market entry and competition, so benefiting consumers.

A copy of the Information Memorandum is being placed in the Library of the House and on the auction website at www.spectrumauctions.gov.uk.

Inward Investment

Mr. Alan Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what was the total value of inward investment into (a) the UK and (b) the area covered by the Government Office for the North East in each year since 1995. [96732]

Mr. Caborn: The following table shows the total value of the stock of inward investment into the UK for the years 1995 to 1997, the latest year for which information is available. Figures are not available for foreign investment by region.

Total stock of UK inward

1995	128,885
1996	134,654

Electronic Communication Costs

Mr. Efford: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the comparative costs to SME's of 2 megabite electronic communications between central London and (a) outer London and (b) areas around London. [96657]

Ms Hewitt: Several companies compete in the provision of high capacity telecommunications links in the central London area.

The price which SMEs will pay for high capacity links will vary according to their length and the choice of supplier.

The Government are committed to extending competition in high bandwidth communications as the best means of increasing choice to business and residential consumers.

Combined Heat and Power Stations

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many consents to build combined heat and power stations since (a) May 1997 and (b) June 1998 have been received; and how many have been refused consent. [96890]

Mrs. Liddell: This Government have always recognised the environmental and other benefits of combined heat and power. Since May 1997, 17 proposals for combined heat and power schemes have been considered by this Government and all have received clearance.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Oral Statements

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list (a) the reports published by his Department and its associated bodies, (b) the reports received from bodies set up by his Department, (c) the decisions his Department has taken and (d) events in the UK and elsewhere, since 27 July, which satisfied the criteria he uses for deciding whether to apply to make oral statements to the House when the House is sitting. [93967]

Mr. Hain: I refer to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the President of the Council on 19 October 1999, Official Report, columns 429–30.

Treaty of Rome

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list those occasions when the Treaty of Rome has been (a) renegotiated and (b) amended. [95500]

Mr. Vaz: Renegotiation is necessary before any treaty amendment can be made. The Treaty of Rome has been amended on the following occasions:

Merger Treaty 1967
Treaty amending Certain Budgetary Provisions 1971
Treaty amending Certain Financial Provisions 1977
Greenland Treaty 1985
Single European Act 1986
Treaty on European Union 1992
Treaty of Amsterdam 1997

The Treaty has also been amended as a result of the accession of new member states. This happened in 1973, 1981, 1986 and 1995.

"Becoming Europeans" Conference

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the (a) nature and (b) cost of Government support to the Becoming Europeans Conference at Castel Gandolfo; and if he will place the papers presented by representatives of the Government there, in the Library. [95406]

Mr. Vaz: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office contributed £10,000 to support the Becoming Europeans Conference held in Castel Gandolfo near Rome, 14–17 October 1999, to cover transport costs, conference organisation and documentation. The British Council provided organisational support. There was also commercial sponsorship. The conference took the form of informal discussions rather than set piece speeches; the aim was an exchange of ideas. There are no records of individual contributions. A copy of the conference report will be placed in the Library as soon as it is published.

Echelon System

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what assessment he has made of the impact on civil liberties of the Echelon system; [96547]

(2) if he will make a statement on the purpose of the Echelon system. [96548]

Mr. Robin Cook: As the hon. Gentleman is aware, it is long-standing practice not to respond to speculation on alleged intelligence operations.

Chinese State Visit

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what contact representatives from his Department had with police responsible for policing the visit by the Chinese President; on how many occasions; when; if the treatment of protesters was discussed; and if he will make a statement. [96502]

Mr. Battle: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to my hon. Friend the hon. Member for Cynon Valley (Ann Clwyd) on 28 October 1999, Official Report, column 993.

Departmental Asset Sales

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish a list of assets sold by his Department and their value, item by item, in each year from 1991–92 to 1998–99 and an estimate of the value of asset sales planned for 1999–2000 and 2000–01. [96298]

Mr. Hain [holding answer 28 October 1999]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by the late Derek Fatchett to the hon. Member for Gordon (Mr. Bruce), on 16 February 1999, Official Report, column 741, in which sales of FCO property from 1 April 1997 to date are listed. The remainder of the information requested is not readily available. I will write to the hon. Member with further information in due course.

Montenegro

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the policy of Her Majesty's Government are towards Montenegrin aspirations for more independence from Serbia. [96495]

Mr. Vaz: We hope that an acceptable compromise can be reached between Montenegro and Serbia which addresses Montenegro's legitimate aspirations. Clearly it is more likely that negotiations will succeed when President Milosevic's regime has been replaced by democratic government in Serbia.

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if Her Majesty's Government are making contingency plans for intervention in Montenegro if steps towards independence are violently opposed by Serbia. [96494]

Mr. Vaz: We conduct contingency planning on a worldwide basis. It is not our policy to discuss individual contingency plans.

Performance Targets

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list all performance targets set for his Department, agencies and non-departmental public bodies since May 1997, other than those listed in Public Service Agreements 1999–2002 [Cm 4181], stating in each case (a) the target to be reached and (b) the date by which it was to be reached. [94980]

Mr. Hain: The Department has set out the key performance targets on which it will be judged in its PSA, and the measures of success it will use in the Output and Performance Analysis (OPA) published in March this year. The Department's PSA targets also refer to the British Council and the BBC World Service. The Department has adopted the Service First initiative and provides regular performance reports on the Modernising Government Action Plan, published in July 1999. The Department publishes information on its progress towards meeting its objectives in its annual Departmental Report. Reflecting our commitment to an increasing use of new technologies, the report can be found on our award-winning internet site.

These high-level targets are supported at operational level by numerous targets to ensure delivery by individual units. Listing these targets would be disproportionate in terms of resources.

Bermuda

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assistance the United Kingdom gives the Island of Bermuda to help them with air sea rescue, drugs enforcement and shipping control; and if he will make a statement. [96706]

Mr. Battle: The UK stands ready to provide technical advice and assistance to Bermuda when necessary. The British Maritime and Coastguard Agency provides air/sea rescue training to Bermuda. Bermuda has access to a British Drugs Liaison Officer (DLO) based in New York and is included in regional drug operations. The Maritime and Coastguard Agency also provides advice and training where required to the Bermudian administration to assist it in fulfilling its obligations under relevant international maritime conventions.

Duma Elections

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans there are to provide monitors from the United Kingdom of the Russian Federation's Duma elections on 19 December. [96331]

Mr. Vaz: We are currently making plans to send a delegation of 35 short-term observers and three long-term observers to monitor the Duma elections. This delegation makes up roughly 10 per cent. of the monitoring mission organised by the Organisation for Security and Co-operation in Europe.

Ukraine Elections

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs who will monitor the elections in the Ukraine on 31 October from the United Kingdom. [96330]

Mr. Vaz: At the invitation of the Ukrainian Government, an official election monitoring mission is being carried out by the Office for Democratic Institutions and Human Rights of the Organisation for Security and Cooperation in Europe. We have funded the Head and Deputy Head of the OSCE/ODIHR Mission. In addition, we have funded the participation of two long-term and 20 short-term monitors for the first round of voting on 31 October. The United Kingdom will fund the continued participation of 11 monitors in the event of a second round of voting. Around 10 members of the British Embassy in Kiev, as well as visiting staff from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, are also accredited as official election monitors and will coordinate their activities with the OSCE/ODIHR Mission. My hon. Friend the Member for Wolverhampton, South-West (Ms Jones) will participate in monitoring as a member of the delegation of the Parliamentary Assembly of the Council of Europe.

Genetically Modified Food

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action he is taking to ensure that companies involved in the production of genetically modified foods do not disadvantage farmers in the world's poorest countries; and if he will make a statement. [96604]

Mr. Hain: We wish to see the benefits available from genetic modification spread equitably, in ways that support sustainable development, help to eliminate poverty, and do not pose unacceptable risks to health or the environment. We are working to develop appropriate international frameworks: in particular to agree a Biosafety Protocol regulating movements of living modified organisms; and to promote an internationally agreed Code of Responsible Behaviour in the development, testing and release of GMOs. The Department for International Development has published a briefing document setting out how it reflects these aims in the support it provides for sustainable agriculture in developing countries.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what reports he has received about threats made to a woman and her husband that forced them to leave the Antrim area on 23 May; what conclusions have been reached so far as to the perpetrators of these threats; what is the present stage of the police investigation. [94490]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 19 October 1999]: I am advised that there is insufficient detail in this question for the police to accurately check their records. Perhaps my hon. Friend can provide me with more precise information.

RUC (Equal Opportunities Unit)

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when was the last inspection of the RUC Equal Opportunities Unit by HM Inspector of Constabulary; what were its findings; and if he will place a copy in the Library. [94660]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 19 October 1999]: The Equal Opportunities Unit was last inspected by HM Inspectorate of Constabulary as part of the 1998–99 inspection of the Royal Ulster Constabulary. Sections 3.73 to 3.81 of the Report refer. A copy was placed in the Library on 23 July 1999.

RUC (Portadown)

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the role of the Independent Commission for Police Complaints in relation to the investigation by the Royal Ulster Constabulary into whether officers present when Robert Hamill and Gregory Girvan were assaulted in Portadown town centre on 27 April 1997 will be subject to disciplinary charges. [95359]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 26 October 1999]: The role of the ICPC is as laid down in Part II of the Police (Northern Ireland) Order 1987. In the particular cases of the assaults on Robert Hamill and Gregory Girvan, the ICPC is currently supervising the police investigation of disciplinary matters arising from a complaint relating to the conduct of police in Portadown on 27 April 1997. When the disciplinary investigation report is submitted the Commission will issue a statement as to whether or not the investigation was conducted to its satisfaction. Following this, the Chief Constable will inform the Commission of his opinion in relation to the preferring of charges. At that juncture, the Commission will review all the evidential documentation and decide whether or not the bringing of disciplinary charges is warranted.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will identify (a) by rank and (b) by perceived religious/community origin, the officers employed within Portadown sub-division of the Royal Ulster Constabulary. [95361]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 26 October 1999]: The RUC have advised that officers of the following ranks served in Portadown Sub-Division at 1 July 1999:

Rank	Number
Superintendent and above	12
Chief Inspector	7
Inspector	21
Sergeant	55
Constable	263
Total	358

The perceived religious/community origin is 319 perceived Protestant, 28 perceived Roman Catholic and 11 undetermined.

Macpherson Report

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, pursuant to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Eltham (Mr. Efford), on 19 April 1999, Official Report, column 468, what has been the outcome of the examination of the recommendations in the Lawrence report and what measures have been adopted to promote racial, religious, sex and disability equality. [95350]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 26 October 1999]: As I said in an earlier reply, the terms of reference of the Review of Criminal Justice and the Patten Report cover areas highlighted by the report into the murder of Stephen Lawrence. The Criminal Justice Review team is due to report shortly and the Government are currently consulting on the recommendations of the independent Commission on Policing as required by the Good Friday Agreement. The Government will be making a statement on the outcome of consultation on the Patten report, "A New Beginning: Policing in Northern Ireland", after that consultation is complete.

The Government remain committed to the principles of equality of treatment, respect for human rights and different cultures as fundamental elements of policing in Northern Ireland. Since April the Government have announced a number of significant measures. For example, the new Equality Commission for Northern Ireland was established on 1 October and the appointment of Mrs. O'Loan as Police Ombudsman Designate was announced on 11 October.

The report of the working group considering the treatment of vulnerable or intimidated witnesses in the criminal justice system was published in July. The group endorsed the recommendations made by a similar working group in England and Wales. In particular they recommended, and I agreed, that the provisions in the Youth Justice and Criminal Evidence Act 1999, which relate to such witnesses, should be extended to Northern Ireland by means of Order in Council. This has now been done. The group is continuing to meet to oversee implementation of its recommendations.

Following the Report the Deputy Chief Constable of the RUC has taken responsibility for co-ordinating activities and action plans are being introduced. A Positive Action Team has been set up to progress ethnic minority recruitment. All probationers complete a Police Community Relations module dealing with equality and race relations legislation, human rights and harassment. Officers receive local training on how to respond effectively and sensitively to racial incidents. Family Liaison Officers have been established force-wide.

Local Community Affairs officers monitor racially motivated incidents as defined in the Lawrence Report. Community Affairs Branch in partnership with the Police Authority for Northern Ireland and the Northern Ireland Council for Ethnic Minorities supported by the Commission for Racial Equality have set up a Community and Police Liaison Committee with ethnic minority organisations. Contact has been established with the Chinese Welfare Association and a crime desk set up at the Indian Community Centre.

RUC (Guidelines)

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what guidance is issued to Royal Ulster Constabulary officers on the circumstances in which the assistance of Army units should be sought in dealing with public order problems; and whether a copy of such guidance will be placed in the Library. [95364]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 26 October 1999]: Guidance is reviewed and issued annually in a Force Policy document. This is a confidential operational policing manual and it would therefore be inappropriate to place a copy in the Library.

Paramilitary Violence

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many families have left their homes due to paramilitary intimidation in Northern Ireland (a) since the signing of the Good Friday Agreement and (b) during 1999; and if he will make a statement. [95716]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 26 October 1999]: The figures listed in the table are for people (owner-occupiers and tenants from both the private and social housing sectors) who have approached the Northern Ireland Housing Executive and have been awarded A1 status for reasons of sectarianism, terrorist intimidation or threat of intimidation. These cases would arise from a variety of sources, for example paramilitary feuds and alleged anti-social behaviour.

"Forced Upon Us"

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland on what date the Northern Ireland Arts Council decided to withdraw funding from the Dubbeljoint/Just Us production of their play, "Forced Upon Us"; what reasons were given for this decision; on what date the theatre company was informed; if he will list the correspondence received by the Arts Council from the RUC, the Police Authority, and any other public authority in connection with this play; and if he will make a statement on freedom of expression and political vetting in the Arts. [95368]

Mr. McFall [holding answer 27 October 1999]: I am advised by the Chief Executive of the Arts Council that the Artistic Director of Dubbeljoint Productions was informed in a letter of 28 June 1999 that Arts Council revenue funding for the production of "Forced Upon Us" was conditional upon receipt of a completed script which the Council could assess artistically. Two unfinished scripts which were received by the Arts Council on 24 June and 15 July 1999 fell well below the threshold of artistic acceptability in the opinion of the Council and its external assessors. The Council informed Dubbeljoint Productions and Just Us Community Theatre on 22 July 1999 that their script of "Forced Upon Us" fell well below the artistic standard which the Council expected from its clients and that no Council funding could be directed towards it production.

I am advised that no correspondence was received by the Arts Council from the RUC, the Police Authority or any other public authority in connection with "Forced Upon Us". The Arts Council of Northern Ireland operates at arm's length from Government and has complete independence in exercising its artistic judgment within available resources.

From the information available to me, I am satisfied that the Arts Council's decision to withhold funding from Dubbeljoint Productions for its production of "Forced Upon Us" was taken solely on artistic grounds and was not motivated by any political considerations. The Arts Council and Dubbeljoint Productions issued a joint statement on 1 October 1999 indicating that the matter had been resolved to their mutual satisfaction.

Drug Tariff

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the total expenditure by the NHS on items in part IXB of the Drug Tariff in each year from 1988–89 to 1998–99, with such breakdown of the figures for each year to types of item as is available. [96080]

Mr. George Howarth: The information available is shown in the table. No information is available prior to 1992.

Total expenditure by the NHS on incontinence appliances is not available. The table shows the net ingredient cost of items that were dispensed in the community in Northern Ireland.

The net ingredient cost is the basic cost of an appliance and does not take account of discounts, dispensing costs, fees or prescription charges income.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Appeals

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security under what circumstances claimants who submit an appeal against the loss of benefit may have their Income Support reduced because they have submitted such an appeal; and if he will make a statement. [94797]

Angela Eagle: There are no circumstances in which submitting an appeal leads directly to a reduction in Income Support.

However, where someone who is claiming benefit on grounds of incapacity for work fails the "all work test" and appeals this decision, then Income Support can be paid at a reduced rate until a final decision on the appeal is made. The reduction is equal to 20 per cent. of the appropriate personal allowance for a single person of their age. The reduction is made good in full if the appeal succeeds. Full benefit can be paid if the person concerned makes themselves available for work and claims Jobseeker's Allowance instead.

Income Support

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what measures he proposes to encourage the take-up of Income Support unclaimed by those already in receipt of Incapacity Benefit but entitled to additional benefit. [95164]

Mr. Bayley: We want all of those entitled but not receiving their benefits to claim. Our current focus is on the most vulnerable group—those pensioners who live on incomes below the Minimum Income Guarantee. Research shows that this group is particularly resistant to claiming their entitlement and our priority is to overcome barriers and establish the most effective way of encouraging them to claim.

The new ONE service, which is currently being piloted, will improve the take-up of Income Support in appropriate cases by those claiming Incapacity Benefit. One of the major advantages of this new system is that, for the first time, there will be an holistic approach to the benefit requirements of working-age people. ONE will ensure that claimants receive appropriate advice at the first point of contact with the benefit system.

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many individuals are claiming Incapacity Benefit who have (a) an individual income and (b) a household income which is in excess of £400 a week before taking into account any benefits due to their disability. [95530]

Mr. Bayley: Data for 1997–98 suggest that there are 140,000 individuals in receipt of Incapacity Benefit with a household income over £400 a week, not including Incapacity Benefit, Disability Living Allowance or any other benefit awarded for incapacity or disability. The number with an individual income over £400 a week cannot be estimated reliably from the available data. Data also suggest that there are around 300,000 Incapacity Benefit households with a total income of more than £400 a week.

Notes:

1. Weekly household income in the unequivalised income, net of tax and other deductions of the household that the benefit recipient lives in less any benefits awarded on the grounds of incapacity or disability.

2. Weekly individual income is the income of the individual in receipt of Incapacity Benefit, less benefits awarded on the grounds of incapacity or disability.

3. All amounts are in April 1999 prices.

4. Figures are estimates taken from the Households Below Average Income (HBAI) data set that is based on the Family Resources Survey (FRS). The FRS does not include Northern Ireland. 1997–98 is the latest year for which information is available.

Pensions

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will provide the basis of his Department's calculation that restoring the basic state pension link with earnings would cost £8 billion by 2010. [96105]

Mr. Rooker: The gross cost of increasing the basic State pension in line with earnings is calculated by the Government Actuary's Department to be £7.6 billion in 2010–11. An explanation of the method for calculating gross costs of the basic State pension is given in Appendix D (paragraphs 14.21 to 14.35), of the Government Actuary's Department publication "National Insurance Fund: Long Term Financial Estimates", (Cm 4406: July 1999), which is available in the Library. For the purposes of this costing, it is assumed that annual real earnings growth is 1.5 per cent. above price inflation.

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will consider funding a one-off payment to pensioners of £50 in addition to the basic state pension on the occasion of the millennium. [96748]

Mr. Rooker: We have already increased the Winter Fuel Payment to £100 this year to ensure that today's pensioners do not have to worry about turning their heating up when it is cold because of the cost of their winter fuel bills.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 25 October 1999, Official Report, column 722, concerning SERPS if he will update the figures with net cost (a) using the pensions model and (b) using the assumptions made in the answer to the hon. Member for Northavon (Mr. Webb) of 16 December 1998, Official Report, column 611. [96677]

Mr. Rooker: Precise estimates of net costs using the pensions model are not available. For a delay in changes to inherited SERPS until 2010, income-related benefit savings are estimated to be in the range 0–5 per cent. of gross costs between 2000 and 2010, and 5–10 per cent. of gross costs between 2010 and 2020. A delay in changes until 2005 leads to estimated income-related benefit savings of the order of 0–5 per cent. of gross costs between 2000 and 2010, and between 5–15 per cent. of gross costs between 2010 and 2020.

Income-related benefit offsets based on the Family Resources Survey are not applicable as the latest model applies to the current year only.

Note:

Income-related benefit offsets are estimated using PENSIM, a dynamic simulation model that projects pensioners' incomes into the next century. PENSIM estimates are based on a number of economic and behavioral assumptions and show the broad order of magnitude of future changes—as such offset ratios should be viewed as indicative rather than definitive.

Minimum Income Guarantee

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what the estimated cost would be of (a) uprating the minimum income guarantee for pensioners in line with earnings, (b) uprating the minimum income guarantee in line with prices for pensioners under 85 years, and in line with earnings for those over 85 years, in (i) 2000–01, (ii) 2010–11, (iii) 2020–21 and (iv) 2030–31. [95535]

Mr. Rooker: No projections have been made of long-term expenditure on the Minimum Income Guarantee. The projected expenditure for 2000–01, as published in the Social security Departmental Report (Cm 4214) in March 1999, is based on an assumed uprating for all cases in line with average earnings, at an estimated cost of £155 million.

PENSIM, the Department's dynamic microsimulation model of pensioners' incomes, does project pensioners' income distribution under different policy scenarios up to 2025. However, it is not considered sufficiently accurate to be used as a forecasting model of absolute amounts of expenditure on the income-related benefits. Instead it is best used as a comparative model to assess the broad impact of different policy options on the distribution of pensioner's incomes over time.

Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what measures his Department is taking to raise public awareness about the minimum income guarantee for pensioners. [96684]

Mr. Rooker: We are particularly concerned about pensioners entitled to but not claiming the guarantee and we will make an announcement shortly on our plans to increase awareness and to tackle barriers to claiming.

Therapeutic Work

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what representations he has received on the employed classification as that of people suffering from a severe disability who undertake limited work on medical advice, with the permission of the Benefits Agency. [96263]

Mr. Bayley: No such representations have been received.

Social Security regulations limit the circumstances in which people can work while maintaining entitlement to incapacity benefits but otherwise the status of that work is not a relevant consideration for benefit purposes.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the application of the minimum wage in respect of work used as therapy for people with severe disability. [96248]

Mr. Bayley: Entitlement to incapacity benefits is based on the fundamental principle that they are for people who are incapable of work because of sickness or disability. It is recognised that in some cases a limited amount of work can benefit a person's medical condition and may increase their prospects of a return to the labour market. A longstanding provision, known as the therapeutic work rule, allows benefit recipients to do some paid work on the advice of a doctor without it affecting their underlying entitlement. The work is subject to a weekly earnings limit. An hours limit of 16 hours a week also applies unless the work is done under medical supervision, as part of a hospital treatment programme, or in a sheltered workshop.

The application of the national minimum wage to this work is not a relevant consideration for benefit purposes. However, last April the earnings limit was increased from £48 to £58 to ensure that the hours limit was consistent with 16 hours work paid at the national minimum wage rate of £3.60 an hour (16 x £3.60 = £57.60).

Social Security Expenditure

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate of the all-items RPI to September 1999 underlay his projections of social security expenditure for 2000–01; and by how much expenditure would be reduced if benefits were uprated by the actual inflation rate to September 1999. [96299]

Mr. Darling [holding answer 29 October 1999]: The inflation assumptions underlying the Department's expenditure forecasts were set out on Page 89 of the Social Security Departmental Report (Cm 4214). The Report also makes clear that the forecast depended on a number of other assumptions. These include economic assumptions such as the rate of unemployment and the growth in earnings which underpins forecast spending on the Minimum Income Guarantee. It also takes account of Government policies already announced, such as above inflation rises in Child Benefit. The effect of a 1 per cent. variation for all benefits is around 830 million. This assumes that both the RPI and the Rossi index vary by the same amount.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Common Fisheries Policy (European Commission Questionnaire)

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will deposit in the Library (a) a copy of the questionnaire distributed at the June 1998 Lisbon seminar at Expo 98 by the Director General of DG XIV, as indicated in OJ C182(/51) of 28 June, and (b) the Commission's scrutiny report on the same; and when the consultation procedure is to finish. [92856]

Mr. Morley: I am arranging for a copy of the European Commission questionnaire on the Common Fisheries Policy after 2002 to be placed in the Library, together with a copy of the Commission's analysis of replies to the questionnaire. The Commission's extensive programme of consultations with fishing and other interests ended in June this year.

Organic Farming

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assistance he will give to organic farmers who have already made the conversion from conventional to organic farming; what assessment he has made of the take-up of financial aid among organic farmers; what he is doing to ensure organic farmers know what aid is available to them; what assessment he has made of the length of time it takes for financial aid to be given to organic farmers after application under the Organic Aid Scheme; and if he will make a statement. [96267]

Mr. Morley: Prior to the introduction of the Organic Farming Scheme (OFS), the Government considered carefully the question of whether those already farming organically should receive aid. We decided to target available resources on the conversion period when yields drop and premia for organic produce are not available. I have no plans to extend aid beyond the five year period provided by the OFS.

I expect the review of the OFS to consider the take-up of organic aid by farmers since April 1999 and to make recommendations for the future design of the conversion aid schemes.

Advice to prospective organic farmers on how to obtain free advisory visits is provided by a dedicated Helpline telephone number and advice on conversion aid payments is available from MAFF Regional Service Centres. The scheme literature sent to each prospective applicant points out that organic farmers can still benefit from a range of aid measures which are available to farmers generally.

The timing of payments to farmers under the Organic Aid Scheme formed part of the 1998 review of support for the organic sector. The review recommended moving from payments made in arrears to payments made annually in advance, at the end of the first quarter. We implemented the recommendation and have retained the same pattern of payments in the OFS.

We want to see organic farming succeed. We inherited a situation in which total payment for organic conversion averaged about £1 million annually. Over the last six months we have allocated about £16 million to more than 750 farmers. In the debate on agriculture on 28 October 1999, Official Report, column 1131, my right hon. Friend the Minister announced that further money would be made available. This will allow another 250 or so farmers to benefit from the OFS. And it will allow us to pay aid to all the farmers already in the OFS much sooner than would otherwise have been possible.

TREASURY

Offshore Betting

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the situation regarding offshore betting following the judgment of Mr. Justice Lightman in July; and if he will make a statement. [94812]

Mr. Timms: The Government are concerned about the potential growth of offshore betting and are currently considering how best to ensure that bookmakers in the United Kingdom pay their fair share of taxes and are protected from unfair competition. Customs and Excise have appealed Mr. Justice Lightman's decision and I have asked them whether early changes to the law are required to maintain its effectiveness.

Equal Opportunities

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he (a) has established and (b) published a baseline for policy appraisal against which to measure progress on equal treatment. [94858]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Government are committed to ensuring their policies are fair and inclusive, and focus on public service users, not providers. This aim is contained in guidance (published in 1998) which helps Departments consider the impact of their policies on gender, ethnicity and disability. In addition to considering impact the guidance encourages consultation with women's groups and others where appropriate and action to deal with any differential impact if this appears appropriate. The Treasury applies the principles contained in the guidance when developing its policies. For example a full gender analysis of the Budget's impact was undertaken last year and will be again this year.

National Statistics

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will place in the Library a copy of the options paper on access to registration records which was submitted to him by the Director of the Office of National Statistics. [94914]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The essence of the Registrar General's advice was included in the consultation document "Registration: Modernising a Vital Service" published on 8 September, a copy of which is available in the Library.

Contributions Agency

Mr. Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the grades of posts which have been transferred from the Contributions Agency to the Treasury in the year prior to the passing of the Social Security Contributions (Transfer of Functions, etc) Act 1999; how many members of staff will be transferred in the coming year; and what is the nature of the posts of the staff who have been or are to be transferred. [95509]

Dawn Primarolo: All the staff of the Contributions Agency were transferred to the Inland Revenue on 1 April 1999, their grades being as follows:

CA grade	IR grade	Civil service grade
A1	E2	AA
A2	E1	AO
B1	E1	AO
B2	D	EO
B3	D	EO
B3	D	EO
C2	C2	HEO
C3	C1	HEO
D1	B	UG7
D2	B	UG7
D3	B	UG6
SCS	SCS	SCS

All posts concerned were related to the collection of NICs and the recording and supply of NICs information.

Civil Procurement

Mr. Todd: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what progress has been made in implementing the recommendations of the Review of Civil Procurement in Central Government; and if she will make a statement. [95452]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Work is progressing to ensure that the Office of Government Commerce will be operational by 1 April 2000. A Chief Executive will be appointed in November and I hope to be able to announce shortly the composition of the Supervisory Board and the transfer of its constituent agencies.

Trade Missions

Mr. Fallon: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many trade missions he has led since taking office; and to which countries. [94973]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 25 October 1999]: None. Trade missions are usually carried out by the Department of Trade and Industry.

Resource Accounting

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to include (i) central Government grants paid to and (ii) the budgets of (a) local authorities in England, (b) the Scottish Parliament and Executive, (c) the National Assembly for Wales and (d) the Northern Ireland Assembly in resource accounting procedures for the 1999–2000 and subsequent financial years. [96459]

Mr. Andrew Smith [holding answer 29 October 1999]: Central government grants paid to local authorities will be recorded in the resource accounts of the relevant Government departments making these grants. Expenditure covered by the budgets of local authorities in England falls outside the resource accounting boundary, and therefore will not be included in resource accounts.

Grants to the National Assembly for Wales, the Scottish Executive, and, if devolution takes place, the Northern Ireland Assembly will represent the allocation of funds to those bodies, and will be shown in the resource accounts of respectively the Wales Office, Scotland Office, and Northern Ireland Office.

Expenditure by the National Assembly for Wales will appear in its resource accounts.

Accounting policies for expenditure by the Scottish Executive and the Northern Ireland Assembly are a matter for those bodies. I understand, however, that legislation currently before the Scottish Parliament envisages control by the Scottish Parliament of resources, and hence resource accounting.

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what amendments, additions and deletions will be made to the Resource Accounting Manual, as published in August 1999, that will apply to the 1999–2000 financial year. [96460]

Mr. Andrew Smith [holding answer 29 October 1999]: The Resource Accounting Manual is updated as necessary to take into account the impact on resource accounting of new accounting standards issued by the Accounting Standards Board (ASB) and other accounting developments including, for example, refinements arising from the implementation of resource accounting by departments.

The amendments to the version of the Manual published in August 1999, to apply to the 1999–2000 resource accounts, will take into account the amendment to Financial Reporting Standard (FRS) 5 "Reporting the Substance of Transactions—Private Finance Initiative and Similar Contracts", and FRS 15 "Tangible Fixed Assets"—both issued by the ASB.

These and future amendments, following consultation with the Financial Reporting Advisory Board, will be included in periodic updates to the Manual, which I understand the House of Commons Library has arranged to receive.

Climate Change Levy

Mr. Brady: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to exempt energy use for all types of industrial electrolysis from the Climate Change Levy. [96709]

Mr. Timms: As indicated in the consultation document published by Customs and Excise on Budget day, coal and gas used in chemical reactions will not be subject to the levy. In the light of the representations received on the treatment of electrolysis, my hon. Friend the then Economic Secretary announced on 27 July 1999, Official Report, column 390, that we proposed to extend this exemption to electricity used in certain processes.

Following that announcement we have received further representations, all of which are receiving careful consideration.

Departmental Accounts

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if liabilities incurred by Departments of State as a result of (a) private finance initiatives and (b) public private partnerships will be accounted for under the principles outlined in Chapter 4 of the Resource Accounting Manual published in August. [96848]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Any liabilities incurred as a result of such transactions will be accounted for in line with the requirements of Chapter 9 of the Resource Accounting Manual. This states that for all complex transactions, the overriding principles of Financial Reporting Standards (FRS) 5 "Reporting the Substance of Transactions" should be followed.

In particular, an amendment to the version of the Manual published in August 1999, which has been agreed with the Financial Reporting Advisory Board, will make clear that Private Finance Initiative (PFI) transactions should be accounted for in accordance with the Treasury Taskforce's Technical Note No. 1 (revised) "How to account for PFI transactions".

The Technical Note sets out additional practical guidance on how the Accounting Standards Board's Application Note (AN) "Amendment to FRS 5—Private Finance Initiative and Similar Contracts" is to be followed in the public sector and should be read in conjunction with the AN.

In addition, Chapter 4 of the Manual sets out the disclosure requirements in respect of commitments under contracts for which departments have not made provision in their resource accounts.

HEALTH

Accident and Emergency Units

Mr. Lilley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is (a) his Department's and (b) the Royal College of Medicine's recommended minimum population which should be served by an accident and emergency unit in England. [92572]

Ms Stuart: The configuration of local accident and emergency services should be determined in accordance with local needs. Neither the Department of Health nor the Royal Colleges set minimum population requirements.

Mr. Lilley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will give a substantive reply to the Question tabled by the right hon. Member for Hitchin and Harpenden for answer on 26 July. [96851]

Ms Stuart: I replied to the right hon. Member today.

Correspondence

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he intends to reply to the letter sent by the hon. Member for Rochford and Southend, East to him on 14 June about representations on the Health Bill [Lords] and Pro-Life legislation. [96484]

Yvette Cooper: I am sorry the hon. Member has not received a reply to his letter. The correspondence appears to have been misplaced. I have now received a copy of the original papers and will ensure that a reply is sent to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Continence Services

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) when he will publish the NHS guidance on continence services; [96073]

(2) what measures he intends to take to ensure that local health authorities and primary care groups implement the forthcoming guidance on continence services; [96075]

(3) what is the earliest practical date from which local health authorities and social services will have to incorporate the NHS guidance on continence services into their budgets; [96074]

(4) what meetings he and his officials have had with GP representatives to ensure that GPs are proactive in identifying patients who need continence care. [96076]

Mr. Hutton: We have recently received the report from the working group which was set up to advise the Department on guidance for continence services. We are now considering the report. The working group included a general practitioner representative. We hope to publish the guidance in the near future.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information is provided by NHS Direct to callers who call with inquiries about continence; and what is the source of that information. [96077]

Ms Stuart: The way in which NHS Direct deals with calls about continence will depend very much on the nature of the caller's symptoms and needs. Calls from members of the public generally fall into two broad categories. If the continence problem is a new symptom for the caller, the nurse adviser would assess the call using the relevant protocol and would refer the caller to the most appropriate health professional, for example the general practitioner. Otherwise, if the call was a general inquiry about continence, the caller would be referred to the most relevant source for further information.

Acupuncture

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what courses exist for training in acupuncture; how these are funded; what financial support students can claim while studying; what plans he has to review the arrangements; and if he will make a statement. [96850]

Ms Stuart: The identification and accreditation of suitable training courses for any complementary therapy is primarily the responsibility of the professional body or bodies which regulate it. An increasing number of higher education courses in complementary and alternative medicine are being offered in publicly-funded institutions and are meeting the requirements set by the Education Student Support Regulations 1999 for automatic designation for student support. While the Department for Education and Employment does not routinely collect details of such courses, any which are either wholly run by a private institution or are jointly provided by a privately and publicly funded institution must apply to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Employment for special designation.

Any student on a designated course receives the same package of financial student support as any student in higher education. Tuition fees are means-tested and, depending on individual circumstances, a student may pay all, part, or none of the cost himself. Student loans are available. And supplementary grants may be made in particular circumstances, for example to disabled students or those with dependants. Students on non-designated courses do not qualify for student support.

Optical Services

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to increase the value of the vouchers given to pensioners for the purchase of spectacles; and if he will make a statement. [96600]

Mr. Hutton: Children and adults of all ages on low incomes are eligible for optical vouchers which vary in value depending upon the power of the prescription. From last April we increased the voucher values from between 2.5 per cent. and 18 per cent. to target help towards patients with the highest refractory errors. As a result the highest value voucher increased from £125 to £147.50. We will shortly be announcing the increase to take effect from April 2000.

CABINET OFFICE

Departmental Publications

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office if she will list her Department's spending on official publications since May 1997. [93689]

Marjorie Mowlam: The spending on official publications by the Cabinet Office and its Executive Agencies between 1 May 1997 and 31 July 1999, which includes identifiable costs incurred by the Department in publishing, production and purchase of copies for official use, is listed in a table, a copy of which has been placed in the Library. This excludes publications produced solely for internal purposes. Where the Department makes use of a private sector publisher, the publishing, printing and design costs are normally met by the publisher, as part of their acceptance of the risks of publication.

Performance Targets

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office if she will list all performance targets set for her Department, agencies and non-departmental public bodies since May 1997, other than those listed in Public Service Agreements 1999–2002 [Cm 4181], stating in each case (a) the target to be reached and (b) the date by which it was to be reached. [94989]

Marjorie Mowlam: The Cabinet Office has no performance targets other than those listed in Public Service Agreements 1999–2001 (Cm 4181).

The targets for each of my Department's agencies are shown in the table.

Details of performance targets for COI can be found in COI's annual reports. The last report was published in July 1999 by the Stationery Office (ISBN: 0–10–273199–3).

None of the non-departmental public bodies are executive and are therefore included within the rest of my Department's targets.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Police Efficiency

16. Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent measures he has taken to improve efficiency in police forces. [95005]

Mr. Straw: Studies by both Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary and the Audit Commission have shown that there is considerable scope for improving the efficiency of police forces thus releasing more officers for key operational duties.

The Comprehensive Spending Review set the police an annual target of two per cent. efficiency gains which must be reinvested in frontline policing. The new duty of Best Value will be placed upon Police Authorities from 1 April 2000, and will require them to deliver efficient and high quality services and demonstrate year on year improvements.

Police Establishment

17. Mr. Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures he is taking to increase the total number of police officers in England and Wales. [95006]

19. Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement regarding plans to increase police numbers. [95008]

Mr. Straw: I made a full statement of the position on police numbers to the Home Affairs Committee and to this House on 26 October 1999, Official Report, columns 821–34.

Under legislation passed by the previous government, the powers of the Home Secretary to set overall police numbers were removed. The Government have allocated money for a Crime Fighting Fund which among other things will provide the funding for 5,000 more recruits over and above the number forces would otherwise have recruited over the next three years, commencing in April 2000. £35 million of new money will be available to support this next year, and there will be further funding in the two following years. All of this is additional to the Comprehensive Spending Review settlement for policing.

29. Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he last met the Police Federation to discuss police numbers. [95018]

Mr. Straw: I have regular formal and informal meetings with all three Police Staff Associations to discuss a range of issues, including police numbers.

30. Miss Kirkbride: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers retired from forces in England and Wales in the three years to 31 March; and if he will make a statement. [95019]

Mr. Straw: The numbers of police officers who have retired over the last three years are as follows:

Year	Number
1998–99	4,204

These figures show the total of ordinary and medical retirements in each year and have been obtained from Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary. They do not include losses to the service through death nor do they include the figures for those officers who resigned or were dismissed in each of the above years. For these latter details I would refer the hon. Lady to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Southwark, North and Bermondsey (Mr. Hughes) on 21 October 1999, Official Report, column 625.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers were recruited to police forces in England and Wales in the last three years. [95009]

Mr. Straw: Including transfers between forces, 18,384 police officers were recruited by forces in England and Wales between 1996–97 and 1998–99.

Licensing Hours

18. Ms Christine Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he intends to make changes to the pub licensing regime. [95007]

34. Jane Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he intends to make changes to the pub licensing regime. [95023]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: We hope to publish a White Paper early in the New Year setting out our proposals for modernising the liquor and public entertainment licensing laws, and to bring forward a Bill when Parliamentary time permits.

Confiscation of Criminals' Assets

21. Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to re-examine the rules under which the assets of convicted criminals are confiscated; and what steps he is planning to take to ensure that full disclosure of assets takes place. [95010]

Mr. Charles Clarke: While the courts already have extensive powers to require disclosure of assets following a conviction, and to order confiscation, the Government are preparing a package of measures to strengthen further the investigation, tracing and confiscation of criminal proceeds. The proposals will take account of the Home Office Working Group on Confiscation, whose report was published in November and is available in the Library, and of a recently initiated study by the Cabinet Office's Performance and Innovation Unit, which will be completed early next year.

Neighbourhood Watch

22. Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what support his Department gives to neighbourhood watch schemes. [95011]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Home Office officials work closely with the Neighbourhood Watch movement, which we support enthusiastically. We have funded national initiatives such as publicity campaigns and training packs which have played a considerable part in the continued growth of the movement over the years.

Drug Misuse

23. Caroline Flint: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent discussions he has had with the education and youth services about combating drug abuse. [95012]

Mr. Boateng: I take the opportunity in local visits to speak with teachers, youth workers and others engaged in delivering the Government's anti drugs strategy. My Department is fully engaged with the Department for Education and Employment about the role of education and youth services in combating drug abuse.

Anti-social Behaviour Orders

24. Mr. Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to encourage greater use of anti-social behaviour orders. [95013]

Mr. Charles Clarke: I wrote to all Chief Executives of local authorities and Chief Officers of police on 13 October to remind them of the uses to which anti-social behaviour orders might be put. My officials are also working closely with the Local Government Association to develop good practice on the use of these orders which we will circulate widely.

I am encouraged that more authorities are considering the use of anti-social behaviour orders—anecdotal evidence suggests that the simple threat of an order can lead to significant improvements in behaviour.

Cremation

25. Mr. Bradshaw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to change the regulations governing the cremation of body parts. [95014]

Mr. Boateng: Provided the body itself has been cremated and the necessary documentation is available, there appears to be no reason why the cremation of body parts removed in the course of a post mortem should not take place. Where the body was buried, separate cremation of the organs is not possible, but I am prepared to propose an amendment to the Cremation Regulations to facilitate their disposal in accordance with the family's wishes.

Police (Staffordshire)

26. Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he last met the chief constable of Staffordshire to discuss police numbers. [95015]

Mr. Straw: The Under-Secretary, my hon. Friend the Member for North Warwickshire (Mr. O'Brien), met the Chief Constable of Staffordshire in September to discuss a range of policing issues, including resources.

Under legislation passed by the previous government, the number of police officers in each force is determined by chief constables on the basis of the resources made available to them.

Asylum Applications

27. Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to reduce the backlog of asylum applications. [95016]

Mrs. Roche: We are developing new procedures to speed up the consideration of cases in the current backlog. In addition we are recruiting around 250 new staff to deal purely with asylum applications, and training more of our existing staff in asylum skills. The Immigration and Asylum Bill sets out our proposals to deliver a more effective asylum system. This will protect those in genuine need of protection while dealing swiftly and firmly with unfounded applications. The Bill will deliver key elements of our strategy to reform the asylum system, including new support arrangements for asylum seekers.

Young Offenders

28. Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to speed up the process for bringing young offenders to trial. [95017]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Measures in the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 to reduce criminal justice delays have now been successfully piloted and start operating across England and Wales today. We are also starting pilots for statutory time limits in selected youth courts.

36. Ms Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent measures he has taken to deal with persistent young offenders. [95025]

Mr. Charles Clarke: We are working with the youth justice services to halve the time from arrest to sentence for persistent young offenders. This should cut offending on bail and enable quicker action to tackle offending behaviour. The Youth Justice Board has recently issued new practical guidance, and is helping local areas to produce joint improvement plans to ensure that the target will be achieved.

Scottish Legislation

31. Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent discussions he has held with the First Secretary, Scottish Parliament, and the Secretary of State for Scotland concerning the proposed amendments to the Social Work (Scotland) Act 1968, the Mental Health (Scotland) Act 1984 and the Children (Scotland) Act 1995 as contained in the Immigration and Asylum Bill. [95020]

Mr. Straw: My officials and those of the Scottish Executive have been in regular contact over this and other matters throughout the passage of the Bill. The amendment brings Scottish social services legislation in line with provisions applying elsewhere in the United Kingdom.

HM Prison Preston

32. Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what actions he proposes to take on the recently published report on HM Prison Preston. [95021]

Mr. Boateng: In accordance with the protocol for handling inspection reports, the Prison Service will produce an action plan within 30 working days of publication of the report, addressing all the recommendations made by Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Prisons.

Telephone Harassment

33. Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from chief constables on the working of the law in relation to telephone harassment in the light of information which has been supplied to him. [95022]

Mr. Charles Clarke: I have no plans to do so at present.

Wormwood Scrubs

35. Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had with the Prison Officers Association about morale at Wormwood Scrubs prison. [95024]

Mr. Boateng: My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary visited Wormwood Scrubs on 6 September and met representatives of staff associations, including the Prison Officers Association. This meeting covered a range of issues including concerns about the effect of the current investigations on their members. I visited Wormwood Scrubs on 13 October and met members of staff associations including the Prison Officers Association in private, when they were given the opportunity to raise any matters which affected their members.

Closed Circuit Television

37. Mr. Rapson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much money the Government are investing in CCTV systems in the current financial year. [95026]

Mr. Straw: Under the first round of the Crime Reduction Programme CCTV initiative, crime reduction partnerships in England and Wales have been invited to prepare final proposals on 376 bids for new and extended CCTV schemes mainly directed at tackling vehicle crime and crime problems in housing areas at a potential capital cost of £68 million, a proportion of which will be expended in the current financial year. Final decisions will be announced later in the year.

Mandatory Drug Testing

38. Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the impact on relations between the police and ethnic minorities of his proposals for mandatory drug testing. [95027]

Mr. Boateng: The police service needs to secure the trust and confidence of all sections of the community and to ensure that there is no unfair discrimination against any racial group. The police service is committed to a programme of action in response to the recommendations of the report of the Inquiry into the death of Stephen Lawrence published in February, to ensure that this aim is achieved.

We would expect these principles to be reflected in any arrangements to be introduced for drug testing of arrestees.

Electoral Reform

39. Barbara Follett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures his Department is considering to reform election procedure. [95028]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary published the final report of the Working Party on Electoral Procedures on 19 October. He has welcomed the report and will be seeking the earliest practical opportunity for a Bill to carry forward the body of its recommendations.

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions took place on the issue of commercial use of the electoral register between the Home Office Working Party on Electoral Procedures and (a) direct marketing organisations, (b) credit agency organisations, (c) other business organisations, (d) consumer organisations and (e) the Data Protection Registrar; if any of those organisations or individuals were invited to present their views in person to the Home Office Working Party on Electoral Procedures; and if he will consult further with these organisations before final decisions are taken on those aspects of the proposed Bill on reforming electoral procedures which would affect the use of the electoral register for commercial purposes. [96846]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: During the lifetime of the Working Party, members of its Secretariat held meetings as follows: with representatives of direct marketing organisations on two occasions; representatives of credit agency organisations on four occasions; and representatives of other business associations on three occasions. The Data Protection Registrar, by virtue of her statutory advisory role, was invited to make a personal presentation at one meeting of the Working Party. Further consultation is taking place on the Working Party's recommendations for restrictions on the sale of the electoral register for non-electoral purposes.

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if it is his Department's intention to publish the submissions made by businesses and individuals in response to the consultation document on electoral procedures, with the exception of those who have asked for their submissions to remain private. [96847]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: No. But any businesses or individuals can, of course, publish their own submissions if they wish to do so.

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to introduce trials of early voting at elections other than the Greater London Authority elections. [96685]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Working Party on Electoral Procedures, which published its final report on 19 October, recommended that early voting should be among the electoral innovations included in pilot schemes.

The Government have welcomed the Working Party's recommendations. We intend to legislate to give effect to them as soon as Parliamentary time permits.

Criminal Records Bureau

40. Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received concerning the Criminal Records Bureau; and if he will make a statement. [95029]

Mr. Charles Clarke: There has been widespread support for the establishment of the Criminal Records Bureau. The Government have considered very carefully the many representations that we have received arguing for charges to be waived for checks carried out by the Bureau in the case of volunteers who work with children. The concerns which have been expressed have increased our determination that the cost of certificates from the Bureau should be kept as low as possible. The cost of certificates has been previously estimated at between £5 and £10 depending on type of certificate .

Freedom of Information

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on progress with freedom of information legislation. [95001]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Consultation document on Freedom of Information, published on 24 May 1999, invited comments on the draft legislation. We received a total of 2,248 submissions, all but 400 of which were part of an organised petition about scientific experimentation on animals. Copies of the submission have been placed in the Library.

My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary announced on 22 October the changes we propose to make to the draft Bill following the consultation period. We will now seek to introduce a Freedom of Information Bill as soon as the legislative timetable allows.

Crime Reduction Partnerships

Mr. Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on progress with the formation of crime reduction partnerships. [95004]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The crime and disorder reduction partnerships brought into being by the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 have published their strategies. They are currently implementing them. This is a vital part of the attack upon crime, based on local priorities and needs.

Suspended Sentences

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimates he has made of the consequent reduction in prison numbers if suspended sentences of imprisonment were more widely available to the judiciary. [95475]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Estimates of the likely effect on the prison population vary between a few hundred and a few thousand depending upon the exact nature of the new arrangements introduced, whether the sentences they replaced were custodial or non-custodial, the length of any such custodial sentences and the rate of activation of the new suspended sentences. The current restriction, which limits suspension of a custodial sentence to cases where exceptional circumstances exist, was introduced by the Criminal Justice Act 1991. Criminal Statistics for England and Wales 1997 show that the number of offenders sentenced for indictable offences to a fully suspended sentence fell from 25,800 in 1987 to 2,700 in 1993.

Remembrance Sunday

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to invite German, Italian and Japanese veterans to join the Remembrance Sunday parade in Whitehall. [96029]

Mr. Straw: There are no plans to widen the attendance at the Cenotaph ceremony on Remembrance Sunday to include German, Japanese and Italian veterans.

The Royal British Legion, which organises the march past the Cenotaph which follows the official ceremony on Remembrance Sunday, has however made proposals which will allow greater participation in future years by non-ex-Service groups and individuals. I have welcomed the proposals for expansion of the march past put forward by the Royal British Legion, and my officials are discussing the details with them.

National Attack Warning System

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had with (a) local authorities, (b) civil protection organisations and (c) others about the content of messages to be delivered by the National Attack Warning System. [96538]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The National Attack Warning System is designed to be used in war. It is inappropriate at this stage to discuss with local authorities or other civil protection organisations the precise content of the messages to be carried.

Discussions about the system are continuing with the British Broadcasting Corporation.

Paddington Train Crash

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if interim recommendations relevant to civil protection matters will be published about the Paddington crash in advance of the full report being published. [96541]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions has commissioned inquiries into the crash. I shall be looking very carefully at any lessons for the wider civil protection response which may be identified in those inquiries.

WPC Yvonne Fletcher

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on progress in the investigation by the Metropolitan Police into the case of WPC Yvonne Fletcher. [95457]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The continuing investigation into WPC Fletcher's murder is an operational matter for the Metropolitan Police. They have made clear, however, that they intend to pursue this investigation vigorously and expect full co-operation from the Libyan authorities.

Cyber Crime

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to the letter of 1 July from the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Small Firms, what action he has taken to promote international co-operation in the field of cyber crime detection and pursuit. [94975]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Government have been playing an active role in promoting international co-operation in this new and important area of criminality. The conference of G8 Justice and Interior Ministers held in Washington in December 1997, in which my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary participated, agreed a set of principles and an action plan to combat high-tech crime. The principles in the Washington communiqué, a copy of which is in the Library, were subsequently endorsed by the European Union's Justice and Home Affairs Council under my right hon. Friend's chairmanship during the United Kingdom's European Union Presidency.

G8 experts, including a Home Office led delegation from the United Kingdom, have since established a network of law enforcement contacts available around the clock to provide urgent assistance to authorities in partner countries investigating computer and internet crimes. The network is now expanding with United Kingdom encouragement, and a number of non-G8 countries including additional European Union Member States have joined.

Further progress was made at the meeting of G8 Justice and Interior Ministers in Moscow on 18–20 October. I was present on behalf of my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary. The Moscow communiqué, of which I am placing a copy in the Library, includes agreement on new principles for providing law enforcement authorities with transborder access to stored data needed for criminal investigations. The Ministerial conference has instructed G8 experts to develop options within one year for co-operation in tracing computer communications taking place for illegal purposes, both while they occur and afterwards, as part of a continuing wide-ranging programme of work.

The United Kingdom is also participating in work in the Council of Europe to draft a Cybercrime Convention. Information about this was given by the Minister of State for the Home Department, my right hon. Friend the Member for Brent, South (Mr. Boateng) to the hon. Member for Aylesbury (Mr. Lidington), on 21 October 1999, Official Report, column 621.

Performance Targets

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list all performance targets set for his Department, agencies and non-departmental public bodies since May 1997, other than those listed in Public Service Agreements 1999–2002 [Cm 4181], stating in each case (a) the target to be reached and (b) the date by which it was to be reached. [94983]

Mr. Straw: A large number of performance targets are set within the Home Office and its executive agencies and associated non-departmental public bodies, and the information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost. However, a wide range of information on performance targets is contained in the various Home Office and agencies' business plans. Copies of available publications have been placed in the Library and, in some instances, on the internet at http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/index.htm.

Official Secrets Act

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will introduce legislation to allow someone charged under the provisions of the Official Secrets Acts to advance a defence based upon overriding public interest; and if he will make a statement. [96071]

Mr. Straw: The Government believe that the Official Secrets Act 1989 provides a sound basis for protecting sensitive official information. We have no current plans to replace or amend it.

Commission for Racial Equality

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many charges of racial discrimination have been made by staff of the Commission for Racial Equality against the Commission itself in each of the last five years. [96701]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The number of complaints made by the Commission for Racial Equality (CRE) staff to the Employment Tribunal alleging racial discrimination for each of the last five years is as follows:

1996—5
1997—4
1999—3

Of these 20 cases, three are ongoing, five were settled and the Tribunal dismissed 12. No finding of racial discrimination has ever been made against the CRE by the Tribunal.

Chinese State Visit

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had with the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis following the visit of the President of China to London; what further discussions he plans; and if he will make a statement. [96697]

Mr. Charles Clarke: My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary meets regularly with the Metropolitan Police Commissioner to discuss policing issues in London, and there are regular contacts with the Metropolitan Police at both Ministerial and official level. There were no specific discussions of the issues specified at my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary's meetings prior to the Chinese State Visit nor at other meetings between Ministers and officials and the Metropolitan Police. At a regular meeting between my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary and the Commissioner on 27 October 1999, the Commissioner told my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary that the Metropolitan Police were conducting an internal review into the policing of the visit of the President of China.

Channel Islands

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department under what legislative powers he has advised the authorities in Guernsey that they cannot alter Section 201 of their income tax law; and if he will make a statement on the powers of HM Government in relation to taxes levied in the Channel Islands. [96849]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: There are regular discussions between United Kingdom officials and the authorities in the Crown Dependencies on matters of mutual interest. I understand that the Guernsey authorities do not now propose to amend Section 201 of the Income Tax (Guernsey) Law 1975. All primary legislation passed by the Channel Island legislatures requires the Assent of the Queen in Council.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Class Sizes

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) how many of the 4,500 extra teachers provided for under the Class Size Initiative had been recruited as at 30 September; of those recruited, how many came from existing jobs in (a) infant classes and (b) junior classes; and how many were newly-qualified teachers; [96833]

(2) how many teachers were in post in infant classes as at 30 September 1998 and 30 September 1999. [96832]

Ms Estelle Morris: We have provided funding for 4,500 extra teachers from September 1999 to implement our infant class size pledge. Of this number, 3,000 are additional to the 1,500 we funded from September 1998. LEAs have informed us that they have employed the extra teachers for which they received funding. Full statistical returns of the number of teachers in post are collected each January. We do not hold information on where individual teachers are recruited from, but we are providing Local Education Authorities with the resources to take on additional teachers to enable them to reduce infant classes to 30 or below.

Parental Leave

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what advice he has circulated to schools about compliance with the Parental Leave Regulations. [96410]

Ms Estelle Morris: My right hon. Friend has not circulated any advice to schools. The regulations have not yet been laid before Parliament. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry will issue guidance on parental leave.

Mental Health (Children)

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment he has made of the evidence published by the Mental Health Foundation about the emotional development of the nation's children. [95217]

Jacqui Smith: We welcome the Mental Health Foundation's Report "Bright Futures". An official from my Department had observer status on the steering group which guided Bright Future's preparation and will tomorrow attend a seminar the Mental Health Foundation is holding to review its impact.

My officials are working with their Department of Health counterparts to ensure that policy on child and adolescent mental health services takes account of educational considerations. We shall further consider Bright Futures in the context of the forthcoming review of the guidance we issue to schools and local education authorities on the education of children with emotional and behavioural difficulties.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Coleman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many children of asylum seekers are currently not receiving an education because local education authorities have not offered them a school place. [96195]

Jacqui Smith: Children of asylum seekers are entitled to education in the same way as other children, irrespective of their immigration status or right to residence in a particular location. It is the legal duty of the Local Education Authorities to ensure that education is available for all children of compulsory school age in their area appropriate to age, abilities and aptitudes and any special educational needs they may have. Local Education Authorities receive funding from this Department for the education of children of asylum seekers in the same way as they do for other children.

Teacher Retirements

Mr. Cranusby: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many teachers have retired as a result of ill-health in the three years to 31 March. [96430]

Ms Estelle Morris: The number of teachers who have retired as a result of ill health from the maintained nursery, primary, secondary and special sector, England, in financial years 1996–97 to 1998–99 are as follows:

	Number
1996–97	4,980
1997–98	3,290
1998–99[1]	2,220

[1] 1998–99 data are provisional

Special Educational Needs

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what his policy is on the inclusion in mainstream schools of children with special educational needs; and if he will make a statement. [96463]

Jacqui Smith: Promoting inclusion within mainstream schools, where parents want it and appropriate support can be provided, is a cornerstone of the Government's special educational needs strategy. The education of children with special needs is a key challenge for the nation, and critical to the creation of a fully inclusive society. There are strong educational, as well as social and moral, grounds for educating pupils with special needs or disabilities with their peers.

Where parents want a mainstream setting for their child our policy is to try to provide it. We are providing, this year, £8 million through the Standards Fund and £20 million through the Schools Access Initiative to promote inclusion. Equally, when parents want a specialist setting for their child it is important that their wishes are respected. Our approach has been practical, not dogmatic. We are advocating inclusion by choice and have underlined that there remains a continuing and vital role for special schools. The key objective must be to safeguard the interests of all children and to ensure that they achieve to their full potential.

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list for each local education authority (a) the number of pupils with moderate learning difficulties and (b) the proportion who were taught in special schools in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available. [96498]

Jacqui Smith: Central statistics giving details of the number of pupils by type of special educational need are not collected.

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment he has made of the research by Professor Alan Dyson of Newcastle-upon-Tyne University on the benefits to children with moderate learning difficulties of attending mainstream schools. [96507]

Jacqui Smith: The report highlighted the wide variations which exist in the access to, and the quality of, provision for pupils with special educational needs. Working together to better meet special educational needs is a key message within the SEN programme of action. Spearheading action under this theme is the expansion of the SEN regional co-ordination projects to cover the whole of England by April 2000. The projects are encouraging local authorities to work with each other, the voluntary and private sectors and other partners to better plan and meet the needs of pupils with special educational needs and to standardise provision.

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what additional support he plans to give to (a) mainstream schools and (b) special schools for children with special educational needs. [96478]

Jacqui Smith: Our Programme of Action on Special Educational Needs, published in November 1998, is an integral part of our strategy for improving all schools. Measures in it will develop the existing statutory framework and procedures, building on experience and best practice. They aim to shift the emphasis from procedures to practical support. It is a measure of the priority we are giving to children with SEN that we have virtually doubled—to £35 million—the targeted support for SEN under the Standards Fund in 1999–2000. We have also increased five-fold the capital support under the Schools Access Initiative, from the £4 million we inherited in 1997–98, to £20 million in 1999–2000. We are planning further big increases to the SEN Standards Fund and the Schools Access Initiative for the following two years. This specific funding for SEN is in addition to the very substantial increases in the overall resources available to schools.

School Funding (Leeds)

Mr. Hilary Benn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the average funding allocation per child attending (a) junior and (b) secondary schools in each of the last 20 years, in real terms, in Leeds Local Education Authority. [96189]

Ms Estelle Morris: The table shows the primary and secondary education Standard Spending Assessment (SSA) per pupil in real terms, for Leeds Education Authority, for each of the last ten years, at 1990–2000 prices. The information is not available for the years prior to the introduction of SSAs, which occurred in 1990–91.

	Unit SSA allocations in real terms (£'s per pupil)		Change on previous year (Percentage)
Year	Primary	Secondary	Primary	Secondary
1990–91	1,916	2,793	–	–

1992–93	2,113	3,168	2.1	2.9
1993–94	2,095	3,118	–0.9	–1.6
1994–95	2,091	2,998	–0.2	–3.8
1995–96	2,027	2,765	–3.0	–7.8
1996–97	2,052	2,805	1.2	1.5
1997–98	2,093	2,817	2.0	0.4
1998–99	2,156	2,876	3.0	2.1
1999–2000	2,227	2,922	3.3	1.6

Dyslexia

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what progress his Department is making in ensuring that schools recognise dyslexia and respond with appropriate teaching methods. [95311]

Jacqui Smith: Under the Education Act'1966, schools and local education authorities (LEAs) have a duty to identify and make suitable provision for all children with special educational needs, including children with dyslexia. The Code of Practice on the Identification and Assessment of Special Educational Needs gives guidance to schools and LEAs on how to meet this duty. Paragraphs 3.60 to 3.63 provide guidance on specific learning difficulties and have particular reference to dyslexia.

To assist schools in recognising dyslexia we have produced simple guidance which provides hints to primary school teachers to help them identify children who may be dyslexic. In addition the Department has recently provided a grant to help the British Dyslexia Association produce a schools resource pack entitled "Achieving dyslexia friendly schools".

A recent seminar bringing together the main government departments and agencies, and external partners for an exchange of views on the key educational issues in the areas of dyslexia, was well received. Ways in which individual expertise and resources can be pooled were identified, and a consensus reached over a shared agenda for tackling issues in the areas of early identification, teacher training, and the use of ICT. An informal working group has been set up to take matters forward.

Changes to Initial Teacher Training introduced in September 1998 require all trainees to demonstrate that they are able to identify pupils who have special educational needs including specific learning difficulties and know where to get help in order to give positive and targeted support.

Anaphylaxis

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what action his Department has taken and what plans he has to ensure children from atopic families avoid early sensitisation to nut products and that parents and carers are aware of the risk of sensitisation; [96530]

(2) what information his Department issues concerning anaphylaxis and contact between young children and nut products; [96440]

(3) what recent representations he has received from groups concerned about anaphylaxis and the difficulties faced by sufferers in everyday life; [96438]

(4) what representations he has received from leisure providers concerning the use of their facilities, and participation in activities, by sufferers from anaphylaxis. [96654]

Jacqui Smith: The Department has not received any recent representations from anaphylaxis groups or from leisure providers. We have issued guidance for schools on "Supporting Pupils with Medical Needs" which contains advice on anaphylaxis. Advice is also available on the joint DfEE and Department of Health Wired for Health website. We will be consulting shortly on draft regulations on new nutritional standards for school lunches. The new standards will allow caterers flexibility to respond to the requirements of children who have allergies to particular foods. I will send a copy of the draft regulations to the hon. Member when they are published. The question about early sensitisation is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health.

Performance Targets

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list all performance targets set for his Department, agencies and non-departmental public bodies since May 1997, other than those listed in Public Service Agreements 1999–2002 [Cm 4181], stating in each case (a) the target to be reached and (b) the date by which it was to be reached. [94987]

Mr. Blunkett: My Department has set out the key performance targets on which it will be judged in its PSA, and the measures of success it will use in the Output and Performance Analysis (OPA) published in March this year. A full list of the targets and target dates for Agencies and Executive NDPBs can be found annually in the Next Steps Report and Executive and Non-Departmental Public Bodies Report on the Stationery Office website. In addition, my Department has published a Strategic Framework to 2002: Learning and Working Together for the Future, setting out our aim, objectives, targets and supporting policies for that period; and has published the Government's National Learning Targets to 2002 in the leaflet "National Learning Targets for England for 2002—now including the new Learning Participation Target" and in its publication "National Learning Targets—action plan".

These high-level targets are supported at operational level by numerous targets to ensure delivery by individual units. Listing these operational targets would be inappropriate and disproportionate in terms of resources. However, the DfEE annual Departmental Report and Annual Report of the Employment Service also include performance related information.

Student Complaints

Mr. Lepper: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when he expects the Quality Assurance Agency for Higher Education to publish its draft proposals for student complaints systems in higher education. [96590]

Mr. Wicks: I understand that the Quality Assurance Agency intends to issue its draft Code of Practice on Student Complaints and Appeals to higher education institutions and other interested parties for consultation during the week commencing 1 November.

Adult Education

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on progress in the development of national programmes to deliver information and advice on education and training for adults. [96409]

Mr. Wicks: As set out in the White Paper, "Learning to Succeed" (Cm 4392), we want adults to have the help they need to make informed choices about learning and work. That help will be available through Learning Direct, the national learning helpline; through Lifelong Learning Partnerships, who are developing a free information and advice service for adults at local level; and, for unemployed people, through the comprehensive advice and support service associated with the Employment Service's New Deal programmes for young people, the unemployed and people with disabilities.

Since it was launched last year, Learning Direct has helped more than 860,000 callers. Following consultation earlier in the year, my Department is now agreeing plans with Lifelong Learning Partnerships for the development of information and advice services that are tailored to local needs. To date, more than 348,000 young people aged 18–24 and 144,000 adults aged 25 and over have received specialised advice and support through the New Deal.

AS Levels

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment he has made of (a) the policy of university admission authorities towards AS levels and (b) if they will make offers based on AS levels. [95867]

Mr. Wicks: It is for universities to decide on their admissions policies. Early indications are that they are considering using AS qualifications rather than GCSEs as predictors of likely A level performance. Universities such as Cambridge have also indicated that they are considering using the new Advanced Extension Award as an alternative to its STEP exam. Universities will normally make final offers on the basis of final A level and GNVQ scores, but may also include AS qualification and AE achievement as evidence of breadth and depth.

Access Funds

Mr. Hilary Benn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many students attending higher education institutions have received financial help from access funds in each of the last 10 academic years. [96186]

Mr. Wicks: The following table shows the number of successful applications in 1995–96, 1996–97 and 1997–98. Comparable figures for 1998–99 will not be available until the New Year. The figures for earlier years are not immediately available, but I shall write to my hon. Friend with them shortly.

These figures are based on returns from higher education institutions to the Higher Education Funding Council for England. Some institutions have not returned information for the relevant years. The returns show only approved applications, and some students have applied successfully more than once.

Year	Number of successful applications
1995–96	55,453

The Government have more than tripled spending on HE Access Funds, to £75 million, since 1997.

Mr. Hilary Benn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the funding available for access funds for each further education college in England in the (a) 1996–97, (b) 1997–98, (c) 1998–99 and (d) 1999–2000 academic years. [96188]

Mr. Wicks: Total access funds provision for further education colleges has been £6.0 million in 1996–97. £6.0 million in 1997–98, £10.3 million in 1998–99 and £37.4 million in 1999–2000. Grants to individual colleges are published in an annual Further Education Council Circular. The references for the Circulars for the years in question are:

97/32 for 1997–98
98/29 for 1998–99
99/27 for 1999–2000

Copies of the circulars have been placed in the Library.

Play Schemes (Exclusions)

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many children were excluded from (a) local council and (b) other leisure and play schemes on the grounds of medical conditions which are not classed as disabilities. [96528]

Ms Hodge: The information required is not collected centrally.

Written Answers to Questions

Tuesday 2 November 1999

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

In-vehicle Technology

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what research and developments have been made on in-vehicle technology to prevent law breaking. [94508]

Mr. Hill: There is a considerable quantity of research being undertaken both in Industry and Government to investigate the benefits that can be obtained from developments in in-vehicle technology to prevent law breaking. Advances in electronics and telematics promise to make measures for vehicle control (e.g. separation distance), identification and location both feasible and cost effective. One particular project sponsored by the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions is looking into a system of Intelligent Speed Adaptation which would be able to control the speed of vehicles automatically to prevent them exceeding speed limits.

Sellafield MOX Plant

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) when he will be in a position to decide on the future of the Sellafield MOX plant; [95918]

(2) if he will publish the outcome of the latest consultation on the Sellafield MOX plant. [95919]

Mr. Mullin: The consultation on the economic case for the Sellafield MOX plant ended on 23 July 1999. An announcement of the Ministers' decisions will be made following careful consideration of all the responses.

Rail Safety

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what reports he has received on signals passed at danger since taking office; when they were received; and what action followed from them. [95935]

Mr. Prescott [holding answer 26 October 1999]: Since taking office I have received a great deal of information on signals passed at danger. This information led me to approve the regulations recommended by the Health and Safety Commission to require the fitting of train protection systems.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) how the remit of the new railway safety body proposed to replace Railtrack's Safety remit will differ from Railtrack's safety remit; [95936]

(2) what plans he has to re-employ Railtrack safety regulatory staff at the new railway safety body. [95934]

Mr. Prescott [holding answer 26 October 1999]: We have not proposed a new railway safety body. We are considering all options for how the work of Railtrack's safety and standards directorate might best be carried out.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he first asked for a report on signals passed at danger. [95937]

Mr. Prescott [holding answer 26 October 1999]: Immediately after the last election I asked for advice on all aspects of rail safety. This was received in June 1997 and included information on measures to stop signals being passed at danger. After discussions with the Health and Safety Commission I made it clear that they should bring forward any formal proposals on (inter alia) automatic train protection that they considered necessary. I signed the resulting regulations in July. In September the HSE announced the result of their audit of the increase in signals passed at danger and 22 specific actions that they required the industry to progress.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he was first informed that the number of red railway signals passed at danger was increasing. [95938]

Mr. Prescott [holding answer 26 October 1999]: On 9 August the Chief Inspector of Railways informed Ministers of the provisional rail safety statistics for 1998–99, which included the 8 per cent. rise in signals passed at danger. HSE published the statistics on 12 August.

Mr. John Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make it his policy to require maximum capacity limits to be set for passenger train coaches on safety grounds. [96104]

Mr. Hill: Research after the Cannon Street accident in 1991 and more recent research by the Health and Safety Executive (HSE) confirms that train overcrowding is not primarily a safety issue but one of passenger discomfort. There is no evidence to suggest that train overcrowding is in itself dangerous, or actually causes accidents. HSE is determined to ensure that, safety is not compromised, as part of improving the railways for passengers. HSE gives high priority to minimising safety concerns in the design of trains arising from congestion at stations.

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions on which dates signals passed at danger statistics were received by Ministers since September 1998; and what response was given to each notification. [95985]

Mr. Hill [holding answer 27 October 1999]: Responsibility for providing railway safety statistics (including SPADs) rests with the Health and Safety Executive (HSE).

The Chief Inspector of Railways at the HSE informed Ministers of the annual statistics for 1997–98 (which showed a fall in SPADs) on 7 December 1998. A departmental press notice was published on 9 December 1998 which stressed the need for the railway industry to improve the safety culture operating in the industry and looked to HSE to use their enforcement powers against companies which skimped on their safety obligations.

On 9 August 1999 the Chief Inspector of Railways informed Ministers of the provisional rail safety statistics for 1998–99, which included an 8 per cent. rise in SPADs. The HSE statistics were published on 12 August. On 30 July the Deputy Prime Minister had signed regulations requiring the fitting of the train protection and warning system to cut the incidence of SPADs. The regulations were laid in the House on 10 August.

Mr. Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what reports he has received of safety issues concerning the 20.42 Connex train to Dartford via Greenwich on 21 October; and if he will make a statement. [96852]

Mr. Hill: The HSE is aware of the incident on 21 October where the driver of the 20.42 Connex train from Charing Cross to Dartford accepted the route set by the signaller which directed his train onto the line through New Cross instead of going to Greenwich. All the signals were clear and there was therefore no risk to passengers' safety. Implications for the competencies of safety critical staff are being examined.

Mr. Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what reports he has received that the lunar lights on the North Kent line at Charlton are obscured by foliage; and if he will make a statement; [96854]

(2) what reports he has received regarding recent incidents where Connex trains from Dartford to Cannon Street have taken the wrong route; and if he will make a statement. [96853]

Mr. Hill: Although no report has been made to HSE, I understand that on 7 October a Connex train took the wrong route at Charlton because the white route indication lights on the signal were reportedly obscured by foliage. On passing the junction, the driver realised the route had been wrongly set, and under instruction from the signaller, set the train back behind the signal to allow the route to be reset correctly. HSE will now take this matter up with the train operating company.

National Air Traffic Services

Mr. Hilary Benn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what arrangements he proposes to put in place in relation to his proposals for National Air Traffic Services to ensure that staff will be able to speak freely about issues relating to safety. [96187]

Mr. Mullin: Staff of National Air Traffic Services Ltd. (NATS) are already given protection under the Public Interest Disclosure Act 1998. Pursuant to the Public Interest Disclosure (Prescribed Persons) Order (SI 1999–1549) the CAA is prescribed as a body to which a worker may make a protected disclosure in respect of aviation safety. The CAA has nominated its Secretary and Legal Adviser to be its point of contact. He will protect the complainer's anonymity, while ensuring that the complaint is passed to the relevant regulator. A trade union official who raised safety issues as part of his duties would also enjoy additional protection through the Employment Rights Act 1996.

Two other avenues will continue to be available to NATS staff post partnership who may wish to make a disclosure in respect to aviation safety. First, the Mandatory Occurrence Reporting (MOR) scheme, where an individual is required to report any occurrence which has, or if not corrected would have, endangered an aircraft, its occupants or any other person. The scheme includes an option for the reportee to submit an MOR direct to the safety regulatory authority, without involving local line management. Second is the UK Confidential Human Factors Incident Reporting Programme (CHIRP), which is an independent confidential reporting programme for people employed in the aviation industry to report safety-related incidents and events. In this scheme, the reportees' identities are kept confidential, personal details are not retained and are returned to the reportee.

I have also held a meeting with the NATS unions and the Safety Regulator to discuss safety matters and further meetings are planned with interested parties on this important subject and on other issues related to the PPP.

Habitats Directive

Mr. Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to increase the number of special areas of conservation designated under the Habitats Directive; and if he will make a statement. [96106]

Mr. Mullin: None at this time. The UK is currently participating with eight other countries in Atlantic biogeographic region moderation meetings to consider the lists of sites put forward. Following this moderation process the Commission will indicate to member states where modifications to lists are required.

National Walking Strategy

Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for the [illegible]nment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to implement the National Walking Strategy. [96194]

Mr. Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he proposes to implement the National Walking Strategy; and if he will make a statement. [96555]

Mr. Hill: The Government are keen to make it safer and easier for people who choose to walk. A strategy will be published in due course.

"Rights of Way"

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will review the recommendations contained in the Royal National Institute for the Blind's report, "Rights of Way". [96201]

Mr. Hill: This Report provides a useful overview of the transport needs of visually impaired people. My Department has been working with blind and partially sighted people over many years to improve their independent mobility. It is clear that we are already tackling many of the issues which the Report highlights.

For example, the regulations we are introducing under the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 requiring access for disabled people to buses, trains and taxis, will include features to meet the needs of visually impaired people. The regulations covering access to trains were introduced from the beginning of this year and in the last few days we concluded the consultation on the draft accessibility regulations for buses and coaches.

We will continue to work with visually impaired people and their organisations to ensure that these improvements, together with greater emphasis on driver training and information, enable blind and partially sighted people to travel with confidence.

Concessionary Fares

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to extend the proposed National Minimum Concessionary Fares Scheme for pensioners to blind and partially sighted people. [96199]

Mr. Hill: We have no plans at present to extend the scope of the proposed national minimum standard scheme for people of pensionable age. Local authorities already have powers to provide concessionary travel for people who are blind and partially sighted and many do so. The decision on whether to allow concessionary travel for that group of people will remain a matter for individual local authorities.

Railtrack (Safety)

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what (a) evidence he assessed and (b) advice he received which underlay his statement that he was minded to relieve Railtrack of its Safety and Standards Directorate. [95939]

Mr. Hill [holding answer 27 October 1999]: The report from the Health & Safety Commission reviewing SSD, dated 30 September 1999, a copy of which is now in the House Library. Unanimous advice was received from the Transport Select Committee.

Flight Safety

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what central records are kept by (i) his Department and (ii) the CAA of (a) Air Accident Investigation Bureau recommendations and (b) the resultant actions; and if he will make a statement; [96322]

(2) who is responsible for ensuring that the follow-up action recommended in the CAA flight safety report CAA Occurrence Number 98/04954, (Operator Brintel, AAIB report Bulletin 5/99, CAA factor number F18/99), is implemented. [96321]

Mr. Mullin: Under the Civil Aviation (Investigation of Air Accidents and Incidents) Regulations any undertaking or authority to which a safety recommendation is addressed is required to take the recommendation into consideration without delay and, where appropriate, act upon it. They are also required to provide the Secretary of State with full details of how they intend to implement the recommendation or a full explanation of why they do not intend to implement it. The recommendations referred to were addressed to the US Federal Aviation Administration as the State of Design for the aircraft type in question and we await their response.

Both the Civil Aviation Authority and the Air Accident Investigation Branch keep a record of all recommendations. The AAIB also keeps details of all responses to safety recommendations. In addition, the CAA publishes an annual progress report on recommendations addressed to both the CAA and the Department. It has now been agreed that this progress report will be expanded to include action on all AAIB recommendations.

London Underground

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he expects the public-private partnership for London Underground to be signed for each of the separate groupings of underground lines; and if he will make a statement. [96315]

Mr. Hill: The PPP contracts for London Underground will be signed when they are ready. We have learned the lessons of rail privatisation and will not impose a politically driven timetable at the expense of ensuring that the resulting deal is right.

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what immediate action is planned to combat congestion on London Underground trains and in station corridors. [96686]

Mr. Hill [holding answer 1 November 1999]: This is an operational matter for London Underground. However, London Underground carefully considers customer safety and discomfort from overcrowding in its assessment of investment priorities. Much investment and management effort is focused on reducing delays and improving reliability of the service, which helps reduce congestion both on trains and through stations and provides a safer, more comfortable environment. Examples of investment projects that will combat congestion are: the Jubilee Line Extension; increasing services on the Central and Northern lines; projects at Knightsbridge, Leicester Square, Brixton and Russell Square. In addition, London Underground is focusing on reducing station congestion through better signing and passenger flow management at the busiest stations.

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions who is responsible for enforcing London Underground safety rules to combat congestion in trains and corridors. [96688]

Mr. Hill [holding answer 1 November 1999]: Responsibility for managing congestion on London Underground rests with London Underground Ltd. Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Railways is informed of any breakdown of congestion management, investigates incidents of serious congestion and monitors general performance in this area.

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what safety rules are in operation to prevent overcrowding of (a) trains on the London Underground and (b) London Underground station corridors. [96687]

Mr. Hill [holding answer 1 November 1999]: This is an operational matter for London Underground. However, I understand that as part of London Underground's safety management system, comprehensive crowd control plans and measures to implement them are regularly used by London Underground staff when the level of passengers using the system exceeds the system's capacity to deal with them. These safety risk controls are exercised by line controllers and station supervisors. They work in co-operation with each other to ensure that levels of crowding do not exceed safe levels. Staff involved in the implementation of these controls are fully trained. Safety plans are updated annually and regular emergency exercises are held to test the effectiveness of the arrangements.

National Forest

Mr. Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) by how much the area covered by the National Forest has expanded since 1 May 1997; [96559]

(2) what area was covered by the National Forest on 30 September. [96560]

Mr. Mullin: There has been no change to the designated area of the National Forest since it was established in 1995; 777 hectares of trees have been planted since 1 May 1997. As at 30 September total tree cover in the National Forest amounted to some 5,128 hectares.

Supermarket Developments

Mr. Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many refusals to grant planning consent for large out of town supermarkets during the past 18 months which were the subject of an appeal have had the refusal upheld. [96314]

Ms Beverley Hughes: The provision of information on planning appeals is the responsibility of the Planning Inspectorate. I have asked the Inspectorate's Chief Executive, Mr. Chris Shepley, to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from C. J. Shepley to Mr. John Greenway, dated 2 November 1999:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your Question about planning appeals for out of town supermarkets where the local planning authority's refusal was upheld over the past 18 months.

In the 18 months to 1 October, one local authority refusal was upheld.

Bus Services (Millennium)

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what representations he has received about the availability of bus services over the Millennium period; [96539]

(2) what discussions he has had with transport providers about the availability of bus services over the Millennium period. [96540]

Mr. Hill: I have received very few representations about the availability of bus services. My officials are in touch with the Confederation of Passenger Transport about provision of services, and I understand that their members will be announcing their intended levels of Millennium services outside London in the middle of November. It would be for local authorities to decide whether they wish to supplement commercial provision of services with subsidised services.

The provision of bus services in London is the responsibility of London Transport Buses (LTB). I understand that LTB have formulated a strategy for the Millennium period, which they are discussing with bus operators. It is proposed that on both New Millennium Eve and New Millennium day bus services will broadly operate to Sunday service pattern across London.

PPG17

Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he expects to publish a revised PPG17 on Sports and Recreation. [96878]

Mr. Raynsford: I hope to publish a consultation draft before the end of the year.

Greater Manchester Unitary Development Plans

Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions on what date each local authority in Greater Manchester completed its unitary development plans; and when he finally confirmed each plan. [96874]

Mr. Raynsford: Local planning authorities are responsible for the preparation and adoption of unitary development plans. In Greater Manchester the local planning authorities adopted their unitary development plans on the dates listed in the table:

Local authority	Date of adoption
Bolton	December 1995
Bury	August 1997
Manchester	July 1995
Oldham	April 1996
Rochdale	March 1999
Salford	November 1995
Stockport	June 1997
Tameside	September 1996
Trafford	May 1996
Wigan	January 1996

Negative Housing Subsidy

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what estimate his Department has made of the annual financial impact on West Oxfordshire District Council of his changes to the negative housing subsidy regime. [96619]

Mr. Mullin: My Department will be consulting later this Autumn on the detail of the proposals for changes in the Housing Revenue Account subsidy regime. Consideration of the outcome of that exercise will be required before any decisions are taken. It is too early to say what the financial impact of any changes will be. The financial implications for any authority will depend upon both the results of the consultation exercise and conditions pertaining nearer the time that any changes are made.

Campaign for a Northern Assembly

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what public funding the Campaign for a Northern Assembly has received. [96618]

Ms Beverley Hughes: The Campaign for a Northern Assembly has received no public funding.

Regional Government

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many representations he has received, broken down by region, supporting the introduction of elected regional Government in England. [96008]

Ms Armstrong [holding answer 29 October 1999]: Ministers receive representations in a wide variety of ways—including questions in Parliament, at conferences and during visits and meetings, as well as in writing—and no comprehensive record is kept of all these.

Departmental Accounts

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what methods of depreciation his Department will apply in the current financial year to fixed assets in the preparation of departmental resource accounting balance sheets. [97047]

Ms Armstrong: The Department will apply, in the current financial year, the same method of depreciation as that applied in the 1998–99 financial year dry run resource accounts which is the straight line method. The method applied is commonly used in the private sector.

Greater London Authority

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he will publish detailed proposals for early voting at Greater London Authority elections. [96690]

Mr. Hill [holding answer 1 November 1999]: The Government Office for London wrote to the London Boroughs and the Common Council in August seeking initial comments on outline proposals for a system of early voting at the GLA elections. I have placed a copy of the letter in the House Library. We are considering the responses received, and I hope to write with further detailed proposals shortly.

Thamesmead Town Ltd.

Mr. Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what requests he has received from Thamesmead Town Ltd. for its rented housing stock to be transferred to a registered social landlord or landlords; and if he will make a statement. [96856]

Mr. Mullin: I understand that Thamesmead Town have now applied to the Housing Corporation for registration of the housing association to be established as part of their restructuring proposals as a Registered Social Landlord. The Secretary of State has no plans to make a statement.

Mr. Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what requests he has received for changes to the structure of Thamesmead Town Ltd.; and if he will make a statement [96855]

Mr. Mullin: The Secretary of State has just received a formal request to consent to changes to the structure of Thamesmead Town Ltd. which he will be considering in the coming weeks. He has no plans to make a statement.

Whale Products

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what action he intends to take to ensure that the ban on the international trade in whale products is not lifted at the next meeting of the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species in Nairobi in April 2000; and if he will make a statement. [96335]

Mr. Mullin: The Government have been consulted recently on two draft downlisting proposals under the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species (CITES), from Norway and Japan, relating respectively to the Northeast Atlantic and North Atlantic Central Stocks, and to the Southern Hemisphere Stocks of Minke Whale (Balaenoptera acutorostrata). We have replied to both countries making clear our objections and underscoring our opposition to any CITES downlisting proposals which might undermine the moratorium on commercial whaling under the International Convention for the Regulation of Whaling.

Prestwick Airport

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what the United Kingdom has gained from the agreement made this summer to allow Fedex fifth freedom rights at Prestwick Airport. [97082]

Mr. Mullin: The decision to grant fifth freedom rights at Prestwick to US air cargo carriers will deliver a range of economic benefits to the airport and to the region. In granting these rights at a single UK airport we have made it clear to the US government that the granting of similar rights at other UK airports is contingent upon the adoption by the US of policies which would afford UK air cargo carriers new opportunities in the US.

Cycles

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) how he proposes to ensure better provision of general customer information at cycle facilities provided by Railtrack and rail operators; [97075]

(2) what measures he proposes to ensure that cycles can be carried on trains; [97074]

(3) what plans he has to ensure that secure and weatherproof cycle lockers are introduced at railway stations. [97073]

Mr. Hill: The provision of cycling facilities on trains and at stations is a matter for individual operators. Paragraph 31 of the Instructions and Guidance which we issued to the Franchising Director on 29 September requires him to promote the use of bicycles by seeking the provision of reasonable facilities on board new rolling stock and at stations. A copy is available in the House Library.

Civil Aviation Agreements

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what representations he has made to the European Commission on his plans to retain UK responsibility for bilateral negotiations with third countries on civil aviation agreements; and if he will make a statement; [97079]

(2) what increase in the EU responsibility for bilateral negotiations with third countries on civil aviation agreements the Government have agreed since 1 May 1997; [97081]

(3) if it is the Government's policy to retain responsibility for bilateral negotiations with third countries on civil aviation agreements indefinitely; [97080]

(4) what representations he has received from the European Commission concerning his Department's present responsibility for bilateral negotiations with third countries on civil aviation agreements; and if he will make a statement. [97078]

Mr. Mullin: The European Commission presented a proposal to open aviation negotiations with the US at Community level in 1997, but to date the Transport Council has not agreed to the proposal. The Commission has brought infraction proceedings in the European Court of Justice against the UK, alleging that the ownership and control clause contained in the UK's bilateral aviation agreement with the US (Bermuda II) breaches the EC Treaty. Similar proceedings have been brought against seven other member states. In common with these other member states, the UK is contesting the case.

The Government believe that the benefits of a Community-wide approach to negotiating air service agreements with third countries need to be considered on a case by case basis and that any decision to grant the Commission a mandate should be justified by reference to the added value of a collective approach.

To date, the Commission has obtained mandates from the Council for three sets of aviation negotiations with third countries: with Norway and Sweden (which were subsequently subsumed by the agreement establishing the European Economic Area and, in the case of Sweden, its accession to the Community); with Switzerland; and with ten Central and Eastern European countries (Bulgaria, the Czech Republic, Estonia, Hungary, Latvia, Lithuania, Poland, Romania, Slovenia and Slovakia). Each of these mandates was granted before 1 May 1997. The Commission has recently made a proposal for a Council decision authorising it to open negotiations with Cyprus.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what recent discussions his Department has held with its US counterparts concerning the future of US/UK civil aviation agreements; who was present at such meetings; what were the agendas and the conclusions of the meetings; and if he will make a statement. [97076]

Mr. Mullin: My officials held exploratory talks on 18 and 19 October with a delegation from the US State Department, the Department of Transportation, the US Embassy and the FAA. The Director of International Aviation Negotiations led the team of DETR and FCO officials. The primary focus of the meeting was the possible liberalisation of air cargo arrangements, although the delegations also renewed their dialogue on the overall liberalisation of the bilateral aviation relationship. In addition, the US delegation raised the subject of direct air links between Pittsburgh and London. The two sides agreed to consider how further progress may be made.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received from United Kingdom airlines concerning the future of UK/US civil aviation agreements. [97077]

Mr. Mullin: I have received representations from a number of airlines and from other bodies concerning UK/US civil aviation agreements. These representations do not reveal a consensus as to the most appropriate way forward for our bilateral discussions, with the Government being pressed by different parties to adopt mutually inconsistent policies.

Local Transport Plans

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the bids made by each local authority in their Provisional Local Transport Plan for the years 2000–01 and 2001–02 for projected local transport capital expenditure on (a) maintenance of principal highways, (b) maintenance, assessment and strengthening of bridges, (c) individual schemes costing more than £5 million and (d) individual schemes and groups of related schemes costing less than £5 million. [97087]

Mr. Hill: I have placed a copy of the information requested in the House of Commons Library.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list for each local authority the submissions given in their Provisional Local Transport Plans for 2000–01 with regard to the targets required under the Road Traffic Reduction Act 1997. [97088]

Mr. Hill: We received 85 provisional Local Transport Plans covering 116 English local traffic authorities and 33 interim transport plans from London Boroughs. Authorities were required to include interim non-statutory road traffic reduction reports in their plans. Local authorities have made these plans publicly available.

The reports took a variety of positions on the question of whether, and at what level, to set targets for reducing the level of traffic, or its rate of growth, on local roads. A review of the content of these reports has been carried out as part of the work currently in progress for the Government's first report under the Road Traffic Reduction (National Targets) Act 1998 at the end of this year. The results of that review will be made publicly available in due course.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list for each local authority the proposals for bypasses and other major road schemes made in their provisional local transport plan. [97071]

Mr. Hill: We have received 85 provisional local transport plans covering 116 local highway authorities in England, excluding London. Specific proposals for major road schemes costing more than £5 million with potential start dates within the five year local transport plan period (2000–1 to 2004–5) are as follows:

Quality Contracts

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if it is Government policy to make quality contracts subject to ministerial consent; and if he will make a statement. [97072]

Mr. Hill: Government procurement policy is to award contracts on the basis of best value for money, which is the optimum combination of whole life cost and quality. The vast majority of contracting decisions are taken by DETR officials without reference to Ministers.

Land Disposal

Mr. Dobbin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what his policy is towards disposal of land held by local authorities under the Green Belts (London and Home Counties) Act 1938 and towards the treatment of any proceeds. [97206]

Mr. Raynsford: I will approve the disposal of land only where it will continue to fulfil the purposes of including land in Green Belts as set out in Planning Policy Guidance note 2 (PPG2). Any capital receipt arising from a disposal should be treated according to the local government capital finance system.

Local Authorities (Reorganisation)

Mr. Sawford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what resources he will make available to authorities that have been reorganised on 1 April 1997 and 1998 for reorganisation costs incurred by them in 1999–2000; and if he will make a statement. [97208]

Ms Armstrong: On 16 July I invited authorities that reorganised on 1 April 1997 and 1 April 1998 to submit estimates of the amount of expenditure they expect to incur on transitional costs of reorganisation in 1999–2000. On the basis of the information provided by authorities, I have decided the revised maximum amounts that it would be appropriate to allocate towards such costs in 1999–2000.

DEFENCE

Equipment (Detection)

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what equipment is currently available that would detect from a low-flying aircraft the likely presence of (a) a shallow grave containing human remains, (b) buried arms or munitions and (c) an underground tunnel of less than 15 foot depth; how many such devices and at what cost have been purchased by HM forces; and how these devices have been deployed in the past 12 months. [94627]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 19 October 1999]: The MOD has a number of surveillance sensors that can be mounted on low-flying aircraft. These are designated to provide intelligence information on surface features and activities. They would, in some circumstances, be capable of detecting recently disturbed earth but they could not directly detect the likely presence of buried remains, arms of munitions. There is, however, ongoing research both in the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency and in the private sector into the development of ground penetrating radar for airborne applications.

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the expected in-service date is for the Type 42 replacement ships; and if he will make a statement. [94781]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 20 October 1999]: The requirement to replace the Royal Navy's Type 42 Destroyers will now be met by the Type 45 destroyer programme. On current plans, the first of the Type 45 destroyers will enter service in 2007.

Anti-Air Missile System

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment has been made of the practicability of the Principal Anti-Air Missile system to surplus Batch 2 Type 22 frigates pending the introduction of the Type 45 destroyer; and if he will make a statement. [96034]

Mr. Spellar: No assessment has been conducted into the practicality of integrating the Principal Anti-Air Missile System (PAAMS) into Type 22 Batch 2 frigates. The timescale of the PAAMS procurement programme means that it could not be ready for service on a type 22 (or any other vessel) before the Type 45's entry into service.

Vertical Launcher

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment has been made of the practicability of incorporating the US Mk 41 vertical launcher in the Type 45 destroyer; and if he will make a statement. [96033]

Mr. Spellar: An assessment was made of both the French SYLVER Vertical Launch System (VLS) and the Lockheed Martin Mk41 (Tactical length) VLS for the Principal Anti-Air Missile System (PAAMS) requirement. The French SYLVER was competitively selected, in preference to the Lockheed Martin Mk41. While the assessment concluded that both options would meet the PAAMS requirement and technically could be incorporated into the Type 45, the PAAMS package which offered the SYLVER launcher was chosen on the grounds of overall affordability and value for money.

Forces Personnel (Divorce)

Maria Eagle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence under what circumstances his Department will pay the legal costs of armed forces personnel in divorce proceedings; and for what ranks. [96431]

Mr. Spellar: Divorce is considered to be a personal and private issue between the individuals concerned. It is not considered appropriate, therefore, that such costs should be borne by the public purse. However, Armed Forces personnel serving in Northern Ireland or overseas can obtain free legal advice on procedure from the Army Legal Service. Similarly, their spouses can receive free advice from the RAF Legal Service.

Missiles (Turkey)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the value of the missiles being loaned to Turkey; and how long the missiles are being loaned for. [96472]

Mr. Spellar: The value of the missiles that the MOD plans to loan to Turkey is approximately £1.2 million; the missiles are being loaned for a period of approximately three years.

Nuclear Weapons (Millennium Compliance)

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he has had with Governments of countries which possess nuclear weapons about management of weapons systems in relation to millennium compliance. [96549]

Mr. Hoon: We have been assured by all the other Nuclear Weapon States (US, Russia, France and China) that their nuclear weapons will be unaffected by the Year 2000 problem, and that robust command and control arrangements are in place. We have provided similar assurances in respect of our own nuclear deterrent.

Atomic Weapons Establishment

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will institute a full public inquiry into the health and safety, environmental and pollution aspects of the Atomic Weapons Establishment at Aldermaston and Burghfield; [96671]

(2) what action in the past year he has caused to be taken to reduce the risk of a nuclear accident at Aldermaston. [96670]

Mr. Hoon [holding answer 1 November 1999]: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Kosovo

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the amount of uranium dust in Kosovo from depleted uranium rounds; and what action he proposes to take to manage the risk to public health. [96668]

Mr. Hoon [holding answer 1 November 1999]: Depleted uranium based munitions have not been used by British forces in Kosovo and the Government have not commissioned any assessment of the amount of uranium dust in Kosovo. I am, however, very much aware of the concerns that have been expressed about the use of depleted uranium in ammunition and have commissioned advice from officials within the MOD on how we might improve our knowledge of how depleted uranium in ammunition behaves in the natural environment. I have also asked for a review of any health effects of depleted uranium.

The joint UN Environment Programme/UN Commission on Human Settlements issued its report "The Kosovo Conflict: Consequences for the Environment" on 5 October 1999. A copy of the report will be placed in the Library of the House.

Homosexuals

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if legislation would be required in order to lift the ban on homosexuals serving in the armed forces. [96891]

Mr. Spellar: No.

Serviceability Targets

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the percentage serviceability target in 1999 for equipment being required to be available within 12 hours for (a) RAF aircraft, (b) army tanks and (c) other battle vehicles. [95965]

Mr. Spellar: The Army do not set serviceability targets for equipment being required to be available within 12 hours. The percentage serviceability target in 1999 for equipment being required to be available within 24 hours is 90 per cent. for main battle tanks and an average of 80 per cent. across the range of other armoured vehicles.

The information requested on RAF aircraft is not held centrally but is being collated. I will write to the right hon. and learned Member when it is available and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Establishment Strength

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the establishment strength of (a) Tornado GR1/4, (b) Tornado F3, (c) Harrier, (d) Jaguar, (e) Nimrod, (f) Sentry, (g) Tristar, (h) Puma, (i) Sea King and (j) Chinook; how many were (i) allocated to front-line units, (ii) fully serviceable, (iii) unserviceable 1 line, (iv) unserviceable 2 line, (v) unserviceable 3 line, (vi) unserviceable 4 line and (vii) held in reserve use on 1 October; and what percentage of the establishment strength this represents for each category. [95967]

Mr. Spellar: I will write to the right hon. and learned Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the establishment strength of (a) Warrior variants, (b) Challenger 1, (c) Challenger 2, (d) Saxon variants, (e) AVF 430 variants, (f) Sabre, (g) Striker, (h) Scimitar, (i) Spartan, (j) Sultan, (k) Samaritan and (l) Samson; how many were (i) allocated to front-line units, (ii) fully operational, (iii) unserviceable-fully operational in 24 hours, (iv) unserviceable-fully operational in seven days and (v) unserviceable-fully operational in more than seven days on 1 October; and what percentage of the establishment strength this represents for each category. [95966]

Mr. Spellar: Information on the availability state of armoured vehicles in the form requested, specifically the numbers of vehicles held by frontline units together with the numbers that are operational, is classified. I am therefore withholding this information under Exemption 1 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information (Defence, Security and International Relations). Information on availability of armoured vehicles allocated to frontline Army units by percentage of establishment strength is however, unclassified. The following table shows availability in this form on 30 September 1999, the most recent date for which figures are available.

Warrior variants	64	70
Challenger 1 Main Battle Tank	39	46
Challenger 2 Main Battle Tank	65	70
Saxon variants	61	69
Fighting Vehicle 430 variants	62	73
Combat Vehicle Reconnaissance (Tracked) Sabre	80	83
Combat Vehicle Reconnaissance (Tracked) Striker	55	60
Combat Vehicle Reconnaissance (Tracked) Scimitar	69	74

Vehicle type	Percentage of establishment fully operational	Percentage of establishment fully operational in 24 hours
Combat Vehicle Reconnaissance (Tracked) Spartan	76	88
Combat Vehicle Reconnaissance (Tracked) Sultan	74	88
Combat Vehicle Reconnaissance (Tracked) Samaritan	68	73
Combat Vehicle Reconnaissance (Tracked) Samson	65	67

Notes:

1. AVF 430 has been taken to include 430 variants;
2. All six Warrior variants have been included under the term "Warrior",
3. All five Saxon variants have been included under the term "Saxon",
4. Frontline Army units have been taken to mean those of 1(UK) Armoured Division, 3(UK) Division (under Operational Command), and Regular Units of the Reconnaissance Brigade.

We do not collect availability data on the number of vehicles which are either "unserviceable-fully operational in seven days" or "unserviceable-fully operational in more than seven days" and this information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

ILO Convention

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the impact of Article 3 (d) of the new ILO convention on child labour on his Department's employment and deployment practices; and if he will make a statement. [96014]

Mr. Spellar: The new ILO Convention 182 explicitly mentions the "forced or compulsory recruitment of children for use in armed conflict" at Article 3(a). Article 3(d) therefore has no application to military service in the UK. The recruitment practices referred to in ILO Convention 182 are an unacceptable form of child labour. The recruitment of genuine volunteers, as for example undertaken in the UK, is entirely different from the abusive, exploitative, forced or coercive involvement of children in armed conflict as members of militia or para-military forces around the world.

Military Personnel

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of serving military personnel in (a) the Army, (b) the Navy and (c) the RAF are (i) single, (ii) married without children, (iii) married with children, (iv) divorced without children and (v) divorced with children. [95959]

Mr. Spellar: Due to differences in the data held by the services, the answer has been split by office and servicemen/women.

As at 1 October, the latest date for which figures are available, the percentages are:

Percentage

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will list the number of military personnel stationed at each base, both in the United Kingdom and abroad, of (a) the Army, (b) the Navy and (c) the RAF; which of these bases have an officer in charge of families; and what recreational, social, medical and educational facilities are available at each base for forces families; [95960]

(2) if he will list the organisations dedicated to service family welfare and support for (a) the Army, (b) the Navy and (c) the RAF; which of the organisations received MOD funding in each year between and including 1989 and the current financial year, indicating the amounts received; and what proportion of the organisations' budget this represented. [95962]

Mr. Spellar: I will write to the right hon. and learned Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the number of military personnel leaving (a) the Army, (b) the Navy and (c) the RAF for reasons of (i) premature voluntary release, (ii) redundancy, (iii) retirement and (iv) other, for each year between and including 1989 and the current financial year indicating what percentage of each category were (1) single, (2) married without children, (3) married with children, (4) divorced without children and (5) divorced with children. [95961]

Depleted Uranium

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what studies or tests are currently being undertaken by or on behalf of the MOD into non-radioactive or contaminating substitutes for depleted uranium weapons and armour; and if he will make a statement. [95964]

Mr. Spellar: MOD has for many years conducted research into a range of weapon and armour materials and designs. Depleted uranium provides a significant margin of operational effectiveness over other materials when employed in certain weapon systems. Research continues to include the search for potential alternatives to depleted uranium and to identify and characterise their performance and environmental impact.

Army

Mr. Derek Twigg: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to improve retention in the Army; and if he will make a statement. [97207]

Mr. Spellar: The Government inherited a shortfall in Army manpower, and recognise that improved retention is key to realising the goal to full manning. In line with the targets set in the SDR, they are committed to achieving that improvement and a number of initiatives are underway.

In recognition of the increasingly expeditionary nature of our tasks the operational welfare package has been improved and the Service Families Task Force is addressing a variety of issues which create domestic difficulties for our personnel. The Army's Human Resources Strategy includes a six-month review of the effectiveness of present Army retention policies. This work, which is being conducted by external consultants will listen to a wide range of opinions and make recommendations for improvements in the Army's personnel management policies.

We are also keeping operational commitments under close review. Our determination to ease the burden on the Army is demonstrated by the significant reduction in force levels in Bosnia announced by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence on 26 October 1999, Official Report, column 768.

In addition we have considered whether the minimum commitment for soldiers of only three years provides the best return for the Army and the best opportunities for the individual. We have concluded that it should be raised to four years. This will make a significant contribution to the Army's ability to fulfil its obligations and liabilities as set out in the SDR manning target. It will also allow more time for the individual to benefit from the excellent training and development opportunities in the Army, including the acquisition of new skills and recognised civilian and professional qualifications.

Iraq (No-fly Zones)

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what has been the total cost to his Department of maintaining and prosecuting the defence of the northern and southern no-fly zones in Iraq each year since 1992, including projected figures for 1999; and if he will make a statement. [95970]

Mr. Hoon: Our records do not separately identify expenditure incurred in maintaining the no-fly zones. However, the table sets out the overall additional expenditure incurred by my Department as a direct result of operations in the Gulf from 1992–93 onwards.

1992–93	551
1993–94	179
1994–95	58
1996–97	6
1997–98	16
1999–2000 (estimate)	28

Coalition patrols of the no-fly zones remain an essential humanitarian task in support of UN Security Council Resolution 688 as they prevent Saddam Hussein from using his airforce against the Iraqi people in the north and south. Since the end of Operation Desert Fox last December, Saddam has waged a systematic campaign against coalition aircraft carrying out these patrols. Some 215 Iraqi aircraft have violated the No-fly Zones, and there have been over 500 other direct threats against our aircrew, including missile attacks and heavy anti-aircraft fire. Coalition responses are limited strictly to proportionate action in self-defence against Iraqi weapons and facilities, which pose a direct threat to our forces.

Tomahawk Missiles

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the (a) planned order and (b) date of completion for each adaptation of Astute and Trafalgar class submarines to fire Tomahawk missiles; and if he will make a statement. [95968]

Mr. Hoon: The adaptation of HMS Triumph to fire Tomahawk missiles was completed earlier this year. Work on HMS Trafalgar is in hand. It is currently planned that the adaptation of the remaining Trafalgar Class submarines will be completed by about 2006.

HMS Astute and all subsequent submarines in this class are planned to be built Tomahawk-capable. The first three boats of the Astute Class are due to enter service between 2005 and 2008.

The precise order and date of adaptation of Trafalgar Class submarines would assist in deducing the availability of TLAM-capable boats for operational deployment, given the limited number of submarines involved. I am therefore withholding this information in accordance with Exemption 1 (Defence, Security and International Relations) of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the United Kingdom total requirement for Block III Tomahawk missiles; how many have been (a) delivered and (b) used; and when he expects the Royal Navy to have the full complement of missiles required. [95969]

Mr. Hoon: The UK originally contracted to buy 65 Tomahawk missiles. Knowledge of the delivery schedule and the number used would assist a potential adversary to assess our stock level and operational capability. I am therefore withholding this information in accordance with Exemption 1 (Defence, Security and International Relations) of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 27 July 1999, Official Report, columns 199–200, when the contract was signed with the United States Department of Defense for the replenishment on RN Tomahawk missiles; what are the delivery terms of the contract; how many replacement missiles will be purchased; at what cost to his Department; and if he will make a statement. [95974]

Mr. Hoon: A contract for 20 Tomahawk Land Attack Missiles was signed on 1 August 1999. The cost will be met from the Reserve. Knowledge of the delivery schedule would assist a potential adversary to assess our stock level and operational capability. I am therefore withholding this information in accordance with Exemption 1 (Defence, Security and International Relations) of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

HEALTH

Thermal Insulation Standards

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the recommended thermal insulation standard for pipework and ducting in his Department's PFI programmes; and in what proportion of contracts this standard is met. [94887]

Mr. Denham: National Health Service Estates "Model Engineering Specification CO2: Thermal Insulation" specifies recommended insulation standards. The guidance is not mandatory and it is for NHS trusts to determine what is required for each scheme.

The Department does not hold information on what proportion of contracts meet this standard.

Correspondence

Mr. Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when his Department will reply to the letters of the hon. Member for Ashford of 22 April, 26 May, 12 July and 2 September concerning the case of Dr. A. Singh. [96107]

Mr. Denham: I regret that due to an administrative error, the hon. Member's letter of 22 April was misfiled. I replied today.

Uniform Business Rate

Mr. Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the aggregate increase in uniform business rates payable by all NHS trusts and health authorities in England and Wales from 1 April 2000 as a result of the 2000 rating revaluation. [96256]

Mr. Denham: The draft rating list will be published in December. The cost of unified business rates for the National Health Service in England will be dependent on the rate poundage and the extent of transitional relief. Decisions on these will be taken in January.

Disclosure of any provisional assessment of the impact of the rating revaluation is considered to be commercially sensitive and so premature disclosure would be inappropriate.

Information relating to Wales is the responsibility of my right hon. Friend, the First Secretary to the National Assembly for Wales.

Elderly Patients

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which general medical practice has the highest proportion of patients aged 85 years and over. [96325]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested is not available centrally.

At 1 October 1998, in England as a whole, 7.3 per cent. of patients were aged 75 and over. A total of 34 practices had more than 20 per cent. of patients aged 75 and over. The distribution of these practices by health authority is shown in the table.

Elderly (Long-term Care)

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what provision the Government are making for residential and nursing care for the elderly in each of the next three years. [96754]

Mr. Hutton: We do not set a specific amount aside for residential and nursing care for the elderly. This is for health authorities and local authorities to decide upon, from within their overall budgets. My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer announced the total amount available to the National Health Service and to local authorities for 1999–2000 to 2001–02 in July 1998 when he published the outcome of the Comprehensive Spending Review. Copies are available in the Library.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to allow local authority social services to relocate elderly people in care without consulting next of kin; and if he will make a statement. [96751]

Mr. Hutton: None.

When relocation is being considered, we expect local authorities to consult with and take into account the views of the older people concerned, as well as their relatives or carers.

NHS Direct

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received about the possibility of advertising NHS Direct on radio; and if he will make a statement. [96535]

Ms Stuart: We have recently received a letter from the Radio Advertising Bureau about NHS Direct advertising on radio.

It is important that the public has clear information about all NHS services. Radio advertising has been used in the past to widen public access to NHS Direct in particular.

Officials are talking to the Radio Authority to ensure radio advertising remains an option for providing information about NHS Direct in the future.

NHS Pay Review Body

Mr. Dobbin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to include (a) professional health groups and (b) pharmacists, radiographers and medical laboratory scientists on the NHS Pay Review Body. [96275]

Mr. Denham: On 15 February 1999, the Health Departments published proposals for modernising the National Health Service pay system in "Agenda for Change." This included the possibility of moving some highly qualified health professionals into the remit of the Nurses, Midwives, Health Visitors and Professions Allied to Medicine Review Body (NPRB).

Initial discussions with NHS trade unions on pay modernisation were completed successfully on 5 October and resulted in a Joint Framework of Principles and Agreed Statement on the Way Forward which was published on 8 October, copies of which are available in the Library. Paragraph 7.2 of the Joint Framework identifies, as a starting point for more detailed discussions with trade unions, the qualifying criteria for groups of staff to come within the scope of the NPRB.

The criteria are

"Professions with a minimum entry requirement of three years' educational study (or equivalent) to diploma level or higher, in a health specific area (other than medicine or dentistry) and which are state registered and have a substantial majority of members employed in healthcare."

Exceptions might be agreed for staff groups which meet the majority but not all of these conditions.

Staff groups which support professions added to the NPRB remit, and who have a direct connection with the transferred groups similar to that between nursing auxiliaries and registered nurses would also need to be considered for transfer.

No change will take place until all aspects of the new pay system are agreed. The joint target for agreement is summer 2000.

Radiographers are already covered by the NPRB.

Euthanasia

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the differences between his policies in relation to the removal of assisted nutrition and hydration from (a) patients in persistent vegetative state and (b) other mentally incapacitated patients; what plans he has for changes to the law or practice in relation to such matters; and if he will make a statement. [96518]

Mr. Hutton: The removal of artificial nutrition and hydration is in all cases a matter of clinical judgment which is undertaken in accordance with professional advice provided by a responsible and recognised body of medical opinion and the general law. There are no plans to change the law in this respect.

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate the numbers of mentally incapable adults in (a) Scotland and (b) the rest of the United Kingdom in each of the last three years whose death could have been brought about by the removal of artificial nutrition and hydration if such removal were legally sanctioned (i) without recourse to the courts for such patients not in persistent vegetative state and (ii) through recourse to the courts for such patients in persistent vegetative state; and if he will estimate how many and what percentage of those patients in each year would (1) have issued an advance directive requesting such a recourse of action and (2) have such nutrition and hydration removed without their own express request. [96521]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested is not available centrally.

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the basis is for the distinction he makes between advance directives and advance refusals in respect of patients in persistent vegetative state or otherwise mentally incapacitated. [96522]

Mr. Hutton: Advance Statements are anticipatory decisions made while a person is capable, which are intended to give effect to that person's wishes as to how he or she shall be treated or cared for after the loss of capacity. An advance statement can be concerned with the refusal of medical treatment and are then sometimes known as advance directives.

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to introduce legislation defining assisted food and fluid as treatment which may be withdrawn from patients with mental incapacities other than persistent vegetative state; and if he will make a statement. [96519]

Mr. Hutton: We have indicated that we intend to introduce a provision on Continuing Powers of Attorney (CPA) when parliamentary time allows such legislative changes.

It is a general principle of law and medical practice that all adults have the right to consent to or refuse medical treatment. The CPA is a method by which adults can continue to ensure that their views are respected in decisions concerning their welfare when they can no longer take, or communicate, those decisions themselves. A CPA therefore would allow an attorney to make decisions on behalf of the person without capacity about the withdrawal of artificial nutrition and hydration but only if the person has specifically given authority to do this in the CPA. Where decisions need to be taken in such cases, the healthcare team and attorney should do so in the best interests of the individual concerned.

Mentally Incapacitated Patients

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what definition he uses of the phrase, a patient's best interests, in relation to patients in persistent vegetative state and other mentally incapacitated patients. [96632]

Mr. Hutton: A patient's best interests includes his physical and psychological health, well being, quality of life, relationship with family and other carers, spiritual and religious welfare.

Mr. Tony Bland

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to enshrine in statute law the judgment in Airdale NHS Trust v. Bland [1993] in relation to the definition of assisted food and fluid as treatment and the removal of tubal feeding from Mr. Tony Bland. [96631]

Mr. Hutton: We have no plans to enshrine this judgment in statute law.

NHS (50th Anniversary)

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the total cost of commemorative (a) coins and (b) events to mark the 50th anniversary of the National Health Service. [96571]

Mr. Denham: Events to mark the 50th anniversary of the National Health Service were organised in accordance with the principles that activities should promote the core aims of the service and that money should not be diverted from patient care.

Commemorative coins marking the anniversary were produced by the Royal Mint and involved no cost on the part of the Department.

Central support for the NHS' special activities during its anniversary year were met within the Department's publicity and communications budget. The total for activity was £1,673,000, spread across the financial years 1997–98 and 1998–99. This was offset by sponsorship support to the value of around £1 million.

Eastbourne Hospitals NHS Trusts

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the termination payment awarded to Clive Uren by Eastbourne Hospitals NHS Trusts. [96333]

Ms Stuart: On 13 October 1999, Mr. Uren resigned as Chief Executive of Eastbourne Hospitals National Health Service Trust following the publication of the Review of Nursing at Eastbourne Hospitals NHS Trust.

The leaving arrangements for Mr. Uren, including his termination payment, were given independent approval by the District Auditor whose role is to ensure absolute propriety in such matters. The sum negotiated by the trust represented the lowest possible cost to the National Health Service within the terms of Mr. Uren's contract.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Refugees

Mr. Stephen Twigg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what arrangements he is making to assist those refugees recognised by the United Kingdom as in need of international protection to settle successfully in this country; and if he will make a statement [97214]

Mrs. Roche: The Government recognise the immense contribution that refugees have made to our culture and society. We believe that once a decision is made to grant permission to stay, either permanently or on a long term basis, refugees need assistance to build their lives in the United Kingdom to develop their own and their families potential to the full and to contribute to their new host society. I have issued today a Consultation Paper which sets out our proposals to help achieve these aims through partnerships between central and local government, the voluntary sector, local communities, including ethnic minority and refugee community organisations and the refugee communities themselves. Views are invited from interested parties on how best to take forward this important work. The Consultation Paper is available in the Library and will also be sent to the main asylum and refugee interest groups and is available on the Home Office internet site: www.homeoffice.gov.uk/ind/assd/assd.htm.

Responses to the Consultation Paper should be forwarded to the Home Office, Immigration and Nationality Directorate, Asylum Support Project Team, Quest House, 11 Cross Road, Croydon CR0 6ER by 6 December 1999.

Police Force Staff

Mr. Hilary Benn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) police officers and (b) civilian staff were employed by police forces in England and Wales for each year since 1970. [96180]

Prison Sentences

Mr. Hilary Benn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the average length of time served in prison by persons who were convicted in each year since 1970 who have completed their sentences for (a) murder, (b) attempted murder, (c) rape and (d) grievous bodily harm. [96179]

Mr. Boateng: The available information given in the table relates to those persons discharged from Prison Service establishments in England and Wales since 1978 in respect of those convicted of murder, and since 1992 for other serious offences.

Immigration

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in each of the last five years, how many applications for admission by overseas marriage partners of British men and women have been (a) approved and (b) refused. [96041]

Mrs. Roche: Entry clearance data to this degree of detail are collected only for posts in the Indian sub-continent, for applications made by the spouses of persons settled in the United Kingdom. This information is published in Table 2.3 of "Control of Immigration: Statistics, United Kingdom 1998", a copy of which is in the Library.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what criteria are being used to refuse admissions to overseas brides and grooms of British men and women. [96032]

Mrs. Roche: An overseas national who wishes to join their spouse for settlement in the United Kingdom must obtain prior entry clearance from a British Diplomatic Post abroad. The United Kingdom-based sponsor may be either a British citizen or a person who is settled here in his or her own right.

An entry clearance as a spouse will not be issued unless the entry clearance officer is satisfied that:

(i) the applicant is married to a person present and settled in the United Kingdom or who is on the same occasion being admitted for settlement;

(ii) the parties to the marriage have met;

(iii) each of the parties intends to live permanently with the other as his or her spouse and the marriage is subsisting;

(iv) there will be adequate accommodation for the parties and any dependants without recourse to public funds in accommodation which they own or occupy exclusively; and

(v) the parties will be able to maintain themselves and any dependants adequately without recourse to public funds.

Where an entry clearance officer is not satisfied that each of these requirements is met, the entry clearance application will be refused.

A spouse may also be refused an entry clearance under the general provisions of the Immigration Rules (for example, on the grounds that he or she does not have a valid travel document, that they are the subject of a deportation order, that they have been convicted of an imprisonable offence, that it is undesirable to admit them for medical reasons, or that their exclusion from the United Kingdom is deemed to be conducive to the public good).

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Coleman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of asylum applications processed from 30 June until 1 October have met the targets set down in the Asylum and Immigration Bill (a) of being processed with an initial decision within eight weeks and (b) of being completed within six months; and if he will make a statement. [96258]

Mrs. Roche: The available information is that 15 per cent. of the asylum decisions that were recorded in the period 1 July to 30 September 1999 were taken within eight weeks. The information relates to the length of time between the date an asylum application was lodged and the date of the initial decision.

Mr. Coleman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what support mechanisms in terms of (a) legal advice, (b) interpretation services and (c) other specialist support will be put in place to assist those asylum seekers held at the new reception facility at Oakington. [96197]

Mrs. Roche: Detailed arrangements have not yet been finalised. We will be discussing with all the relevant agencies, including refugee groups, what support mechanisms of this kind will be needed, bearing in mind that applicants will remain at the reception facility for short periods of about seven days.

Mr. Coleman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) single, (b) shared and (c) family rooms will be available at the new asylum seeker reception facility at Oakington. [96196]

Mrs. Roche: The detailed design work is still to be finalised. Separate accommodation in physically separated buildings will be provided for males, for females, and for family groups. Some accommodation units for males will be shared accommodation.

Mr. Coleman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions his Department has had with the local education authorities in Cambridgeshire to ensure that all children of asylum seekers held at the reception facility at Oakington will be offered full-time education. [96198]

Mrs. Roche: Applicants will reside at Oakington for short periods of about seven days. We will be discussing with all the relevant agencies what facilities need to be provided on site in those circumstances, but we do not envisage that full education facilities will be required.

Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what is the average length of time that (a) single asylum seekers and (b) asylum seekers with child dependants who applied in each quarter of (i) 1997, (ii) 1998 and (iii) 1999 have waited for the Home Office decision on their case; [96092]

(2) how long on average (a) single asylum seekers and (b) asylum seekers with child dependants whose applications were decided in (i) September, (ii) August, (iii) July, (iv) June, (v) May, (vi) April, (vii) March, (viii) February and (ix) January waited for the decision on their case from his Department. [96091]

Mrs. Roche: The available information in given in the tables. Separate figures for single persons and for asylum seekers with dependant children are not at present available.

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the number of persons whose immigration and asylum appeals are pending and with whom the authorities have lost contact. [95944]

Mrs. Roche: We would only know that we had lost contact with an appellant if he or she failed to respond to official communications or failed to attend an appeal hearing. Figures are not collected centrally and it is therefore not possible to give any realistic estimate of the numbers involved.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to meet his target of processing asylum applications within six months. [96937]

Mrs. Roche: The White Paper "Fairer, Faster and Firmer—a modern approach to immigration and asylum" set out our proposals to deliver a more effective asylum system, including deciding asylum applications within an average of two months and determining asylum appeals within an average of four months. We are committed to meeting the White Paper target of achieving this by April 2001.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his provisional timetable for offering to competitive tender the administration of the asylum voucher scheme and for awarding a contract. [96935]

Mrs. Roche: Invitations to negotiate were issued on 22 October. The contract will be awarded via the European Community negotiated procedures route. It is expected that contracts will be awarded at the end of the year.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his planned timetable for the establishment of a Next Steps agency for asylum seeker support; and if he will make a statement. [96939]

Mrs. Roche: The support arrangements in Part VI of the Immigration and Asylum Bill will be administered from within the Immigration and Nationality Directorate of the Home Office. It is not intended that this work will be overseen by a Next Steps agency in the first instance. However, the position will be kept under review.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on how he proposes to phase-in the transfer to the planned new arrangements for asylum support of people who will already be asylum seekers on 31 March 2000. [96938]

Mrs. Roche: When the new support arrangements take effect in April 2000, the first priority will be to deal with those claiming asylum and support after 1 April 2000. It is likely that those who are in receipt of social security benefits will remain on those benefits until they get a first negative decision. In the event that this is a refusal and the asylum seekers go on to appeal, they would need to transfer to the new support arrangements.

We are separately holding discussions with local authorities, through the Local Government Association, about appropriate arrangements for the transfer of asylum seekers who are being supported by local authority social services departments.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his provisional timetable for offering to competitive tender the provision of accommodation for asylum seekers and for awarding a contract. [96936]

Mrs. Roche: Invitations to tender were issued on 25 October. It is expected that contracts for the supply of accommodation will be awarded at the end of January. It is possible that further competitive tenders will be required. In addition, we are separately negotiating with local authorities about the accommodation that they can make available for supporting asylum seekers.

CCTV

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what is (a) the largest town or city without a publicly funded CCTV system and (b) the smallest town or village with a publicly funded CCTV system; [96306]

(2) what circumstances agencies under his control match images derived from CCTV camera recordings against digitised (a) passport photographs, (b) driver licence photographs and (c) police photograph databases; and what controls he operates to prevent misuse of CCTV camera recordings; [96310]

(3) what recent evidence he has to establish the effect of CCTV on displacement of crime from CCTV surveillance areas to areas without CCTV; [96304]

(4) how much departmental money has been spent on CCTV for each of the last three years; and how much matched funding this has attracted in each of these years; [96308]

(5) if he will estimate the number of times per day a person in London will on average be caught on publicly funded CCTV; [96303]

(6) what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of CCTV systems in (a) reducing crime levels and (b) increasing detection rates, with particular reference to the report funded by the Scottish Office into the effectiveness of CCTV in Glasgow; [96307]

(7) if he will estimate (a) the number of (i) police, (ii) other public sector and (iii) private operators of CCTV systems and (b) the number of active CCTV cameras in England; [96305]

(8) what powers he has to regulate the visibility of (a) public and (b) private CCTV systems. [96309]

Mr. Charles Clarke: £34 million of Home Office funding has been invested in Closed Circuit Television (CCTV) in England and Wales over the last three years under the CCTV Challenge competition of the previous Administration. This Government plan to invest a further £153 million over the next three years under the Crime Reduction Programme CCTV Initiative.

Almost 750 applications for England and Wales were received under the first round of the Initiative, and crime reduction partnerships have been invited to prepare final proposals on 376 bids for new and extended CCTV schemes, mainly directed at tackling vehicle crime and crime problems in housing areas, at a potential capital cost of £68 million. Partnerships and the private sector are contributing a further £15 million. The earlier CCTV Challenge competition attracted £51 million in funding from other sources.

Over 580 CCTV systems have been established with assistance from Home Office funds, involving the installation of 5,802 cameras. The shortlisted schemes in the first round of the current initiative provide for a further 3,879 cameras, including the upgrade and replacement of existing systems. Information on the number of police, public sector and private operators of CCTV systems currently in operation, and the number of cameras in use, is not held centrally.

We are concerned to ensure that CCTV is used effectively to achieve the maximum impact on crime and the fear of crime. Police operational experience and a number of research studies show that CCTV has considerable crime reduction and detection potential, particularly when used as part of a wider strategy. As with any crime reduction measure, there is a possibility of some displacement, but this is by no means inevitable. Schemes funded under the current initiative will be evaluated to build up the knowledge base of what works best in what context, as recommended in the Scottish Office report, "The Effect of CCTV on Recorded Crime Rates and Public Concern about Crime in Glasgow".

To retain public confidence, CCTV must be used fairly and lawfully. All schemes funded by the Home Office are required to comply with codes of practice governing their control and operation. The requirements include the need to ensure that cameras are visible to the public and that attention is drawn to them by appropriate signage; and that the recorded material is properly safeguarded and controlled. CCTV systems are also required to meet the requirements of data protection legislation, and the Data Protection Act 1998 provides for the first time a framework for the statutory regulation of schemes. Controllers will be required to notify details of their processing of personal data to the Data Protection Commissioner and comply with a set of enforceable principles of good data handling practice. Our aim is to bring the Act into force on 1 March 2000.

Proposals in our recent White Paper on the regulation of the private security industry, currently under consideration, would require operatives and employees involved in installing and monitoring CCTV systems, and managers and directors of companies, to be licensed.

Images derived from CCTV systems are not routinely matched against digitised images used on passports and driving licences. I understand that in one London Borough CCTV images are scanned against digitised police photographs in order to help trace the movement of known offenders.

No information is available on the largest town or city not to receive funding for CCTV or the smallest village to have been given an award. Nor is it possible to say how often someone in London would be within the view of publicly funded CCTV cameras, as this will depend entirely on individual circumstances.

Immigration and Nationality Directorate

Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many decisions caseworkers at the Immigration and Nationality Directorate dealing with (a) asylum and (b) immigration casework made on average per week in each quarter of 1998 and 1999 to the latest convenient date. [96026]

Mrs. Roche: The information is given in the table.

Average output per week [1] based on quarterly data [2]: 1998–99

1998
First Quarter	3,670	710
Second Quarter	3,510	580
Third Quarter	3,930	620
Fourth Quarter	3,720	530
1999
First Quarter	2,660	320
Second Quarter	3,760	920
Third Quarter	4,404	670

[1] Figures rounded to the nearest 10
[2] Assumed to be 13 weeks in each quarter
[3] Including some non-decision output (e.g. transfers of conditions, withdrawn applications) and right of abode decisions.
[4] Initial decisions made on applications received

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his current estimate of the gross expenditure, income and net expenditure of the Immigration and Nationality Directorate (a) to date during the current financial year and (b) for the whole financial year 1999–2000. [96940]

Mrs. Roche: The information about expenditure in the Immigration and Nationality Directorate (excluding payments to asylum seekers) is as follows:

	Expenditure to 29 October 1999	Estimated expenditure for 1999–2000
Gross expenditure	132,964,000	284,385,000
Receipts	9,577,000	17,928,000
Net expenditure	123,387,000	266,457,000

Since 1 April 1999, the Home Office has been responsible for funding support costs to asylum seekers. From 1 April 1999 to 29 October 1999, £222 million has been paid to the Department of Social Security in respect of social security payments made by the Benefits Agency to asylum seekers. The estimate of expenditure for the whole of 1999–2000, including payments to the Department of Social Security and local authorities, is estimated to be in the range of £450 million—£490 million.

Tampere Conclusions

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the (i) judicial and (ii) legal harmonisation called for in paragraph 33 of the Tampere Presidency Conclusions. [96509]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The European Council at Tampere concluded that the principle of mutual recognition, which the United Kingdom put forward, should become the cornerstone of judicial co-operation in both civil and criminal matters within the Union. The European Council conclusions in particular highlighted mutual recognition in relation to extradition, pre-trial orders and evidence, and asked the Council and the Commission to adopt, by December 2000, a programme to implement the principle of mutual recognition, including common minimum standards of procedural law which respect the fundamental legal principles of Member States.

United Kingdom proposals in this area were described in reply to a question from the right hon. Member for Penrith and The Border (Mr. Maclean) on 13 April 1999, Official Report, columns 12–13, given by the former Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department, my hon. Friend the Member for Vauxhall (Kate Hoey).

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to paragraph 19 of the Tampere Presidency Conclusions, what national programmes he plans to establish to fight against discrimination. [96512]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: We are still awaiting publication by the European Commission of the package of proposals referred to in paragraph 19 of the Tampere Presidency Conclusions. Without sight of the package, it is difficult to say what national programmes we plan to establish pursuant to it.

My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary has, however, committed this Government to bring forward legislation at the earliest opportunity in order to extend the Race Relations Act 1976 to all public services, including the police. In addition, the Home Office Race Equality Unit expects to launch a new Race Equality Grant early next year. Both these developments could include any relevant proposals covered in the package.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the (a) role and (b) teaching matter, of the European Police College as agreed at Tampere. [96575]

Mr. Charles Clarke: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 25 October 1999, Official Report, column 716.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to paragraph 29 of the Tampere Presidency Conclusions, if he will make a statement on the planned information campaign, with special reference to the (a) cost, (b) target audience and (c) maintenance of political neutrality. [96508]

Mr. Lock: I have been asked to reply.

The campaign is intended to provide published information about judicial co-operation and legal procedures in the member states for the benefit of those, particular consumers and other small claimants, who may need to litigate from other member states. Making such information available is an important first st in improving access to justice across European borders. The Commission has not yet proposed how they intend to publish such information so it is not possible at this early stage to estimate the cost. Since this is factual information political neutrality should not be an issue.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to paragraphs 38–9 of the Tampere Presidency Conclusions, if he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government's policy on the (a) method, (b) nature and (c) extent of convergence in civil law. [96510]

Mr. Lock: I have been asked to reply.

The Government support, in principle, the elimination of obstacles to the good functioning of civil proceedings in cross border cases where this is necessary for the proper functioning of the internal market, including by promoting the compatibility of applicable civil procedure where there is a real and demonstrable need for such measures. However, the Government do not support blanket harmonisation of civil law and procedure, which would be unnecessary and impracticable, nor has any such proposal been made.

Jill Dando

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much the Jill Dando murder investigation has cost to date broken down into (a) salary and (b) other costs. [96270]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Metropolitan Police Commissioner tells me that, as of 26 October, the salary costs of the Central Crime Operational Unit investigative team were approximately £777,000; their other costs were approximately £477,000.

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) full-time police officers, (b) part-time police officers and (c) civilian police staff are currently working on the Jill Dando murder investigation. [96268]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Metropolitan Police Commissioner tells me that, as of 26 October, the investigative team comprised 44 full-time police officers and seven full-time civilian staff; no part-time officers are on the team.

Correspondence

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the hon. Member for Greenock and Inverclyde will receive a reply to his letter of 27 September concerning the Immigration and Asylum Bill. [96857]

Mr. Straw: I wrote to my hon. Friend on 28 October in response to his letter of 27 September concerning the Immigration and Asylum Bill. I am sorry that I was unable to do so sooner.

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to reply to the letter from the hon. Member for Torbay of 1 June regarding Mr. Abie Greyvenstein's application for British citizenship. [95764]

Mrs. Roche: I wrote to the hon. Member on 1 November 1999.

Entry Clearance (Spouse)

Mr. Wood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons have been refused entry clearance to join spouses in the United Kingdom for settlement purposes on the grounds that the entry clearance officer was not satisfied that the couple intended to live together permanently and that the marriage was subsisting, for each of the years 1997, 1998 and 1999 and for (a) India, (b) Pakistan and (c) Bangladesh. [95946]

Mrs. Roche: The available information relates to decisions taken at the entry clearance issuing posts in India and Bangladesh in 1998 and the first half of 1999 and is given in the table. There is no comprehensive data for Pakistan.

Persons refused entry clearance to join spouses on the grounds that the entry clearance officer was not satisfied that the couple intended to live together permanently.

Police Complaints

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what subjects are covered in Home Office guidance to chief police officers; when the guidance on police complaints and discipline procedures was (a) last placed in the Library and (b) last revised; and if he will make each updated version available on the web. [96466]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Home Office guidance to chief officers covers a wide range of subjects. There is no single list of all the guidance which has been given, although the Home Office library does maintain a list of Home Office Circulars to chief officers. The list covers a good deal of the guidance which has been issued since 1969. The Home Office "Guidance to Chief Officers on Police Complaints and Discipline Procedures" was last amended in 1990 and placed in the Library in 1991. This guidance has now been largely replaced by the "Guidance on Police Unsatisfactory Performance, Complaints and Misconduct Procedures", which relates to the new procedures relating to police conduct introduced on 1 April 1999. This new guidance has also been placed in the Library. It is due to be revised shortly by the addition of a section dealing with senior officer conduct. The revised version will be placed in the Library, and published on the internet, along with any subsequent revisions.

Millennium (Emergency Procedures)

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had with voluntary organisations delivering emergency services about their ability to provide cover over the millennium period; and what encouragement he has given to such organisations to provide such cover. [96536]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: There have been no direct discussions because the use of voluntary organisations in emergencies is a matter for local agencies. Local authorities are aware of the need to examine their arrangements over the millennium period.

Parking (Disabled People)

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prosecutions were undertaken in 1998 against able-bodied motorists misusing spaces reserved for disabled people. [96429]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The information requested is not available.

Prosecutions for disabled parking space infringements cannot be separately identified in the statistics of other waiting and parking offences held centrally, nor is it likely that the police or the courts would be able to identify them separately.

Trespassers and Campers

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the extent to which the police make use of their powers under (a) section 61 and (b) section 77 of the Criminal Justice Act 1994 in respect of trespassers and unauthorised campers. [96666]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The use of police powers under section 61 of the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 is kept under review and meetings have been held between Ministers, officials and representatives of the Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO) about this issue. Revised operational guidance on the use of police powers was issued by ACPO in April this year. Powers under section 77 of the 1994 Act are exercised by local authorities.

Police Statistics

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers there were in each police authority area in Wales in each of the past three years. [96552]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The information requested is set out in the table.

	31 March 1997	31 March 1998	31 March 1999
Dyfed Powys	1,005	1,002	1,026
Gwent	1,243	1,233	1,247
North Wales	1,369	1,396	1,391
South Wales	2,976	2,986	2,981

Cleveland Police

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 23 March 1999, Official Report, column 173, on the Lancet inquiry, what is the name of the base from which the inquiry is being carried out; what is the breakdown of the costs of using these premises and if these costs were included in the costs given in his answer; and if he will make a statement. [96393]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Lancet inquiry is being run from rented premises acquired for the purpose. The cost of these premises is £2,623 per month. These costs were included in the costs of the inquiry given in a reply to my hon. Friend by my right hon. Friend the Member for Brent, South (Mr. Boateng), 23 March 1999, Official Report, column 173. For operational reasons, it would not be appropriate to state the location of the premises.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 20 April 1999, Official Report 1999, column 484, on Cleveland Police, what proportion of serving CID officers in Cleveland Police Force are under investigation in the Lancet inquiry in the boroughs of (a) Middlesbrough, (b) Stockton, (c) Langbaurgh and (d) Hartlepool; and if he will make a statement. [96394]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Operation Lancet is currently investigating 30 Criminal Investigation Department (CID) officers. Eight of these are suspended from duty. The remaining 22 officers are currently serving as follows:

(a) 11 at Middlesbrough out of a total strength of 39 CID officers;

(b) one at Stockton out of a total strength of 29 CID officers;

(c) seven at Langbaurgh out of a total strength of 17 CID officers;

(d) zero at Hartlepool; and

(e) three at Headquarters out of a total strength of 111 CID officers.

In a reply given to a question by my hon. Friend, by my right hon. Friend the Member for Brent, South (Mr. Boateng) on 20 April 1999, Official Report, column 484, he should have referred to six officers subject to investigation out of a total of 24 CID officers at Langbaurgh, rather than out of a total of 32 as stated. I am sorry that this mistake was not noticed earlier.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers are working on the (a) Lancet and (b) Redwood inquiries into Cleveland Police; and if he will make a statement. [96272]

Mr. Charles Clarke: There are 17 officers from Cleveland and six officers from Northamptonshire currently working on Operation Lancet. For operational reasons, it would be inappropriate to comment on Operation Redwood.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 20 April 1999, Official Report, column 484, if he will make a statement on the progress of the Redwood inquiry into the Cleveland Police Force. [96395]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Redwood inquiry is an on-going investigation and, for operational reasons, it would be inappropriate at this stage to make any further comment.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers in Cleveland have been served with a regulation 7 disciplinary notice in connection with Operation Lancet. [96678]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Sixty officers in Cleveland Police have been served with a regulation 7 notice arising from Operation Lancet.

Police Services

Sir Peter Emery: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he is taking to deal with the impact of population sparsity on the provision of police services. [96593]

Mr. Straw: The needs of police forces with sparsely populated areas are already taken into account in the current police funding formula. The findings of a research study on policing areas of rural sparsity were considered by a Home Office chaired working group, which included representatives of police forces and police authorities. There was no single view within the working group on the conclusions of the research report. There was general agreement that a sparsity factor had been detected, but less agreement about how to include it appropriately in the police funding formula.

I understand the wishes of rural police forces to see the research findings implemented. Before doing so the Government will need to be satisfied that the research has provided a final answer to this question, which is beyond dispute or challenge.

For 2000–01, we propose to set considerable store by stability in the grant system to help police authorities plan ahead. In the July 1998 White Paper, "Modern Local Government—In Touch with the People", my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister said we would not expect to make fresh changes to the method of calculation of Standard Spending Assessments (SSAs). This includes police SSAs, as a common formula is used for distribution of police grant and SSA.

Our present intention is that, subject to consultation and to approval by the House, we shall not make any changes to the method of police grant distribution, or revenue support grant distribution, generally for 2000–01. There will, therefore, be no substantive changes to the operation of the police funding formula for next year.

We shall need to make some limited adjustments to accommodate changes arising from the alterations to the boundary of the Metropolitan Police area and the Essex, Hertfordshire and Surrey Police areas.

Wheel Clamping

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to regulate the operation of wheel clamping companies. [R] [96320]

Mr. Charles Clarke: In the White Paper "The Government's Proposals for Regulating the Private Security Industry in England and Wales", issued earlier this year, we announced proposals to regulate private wheel clampers as part of a package of statutory measures to regulate the private security industry as a whole. We will introduce legislation to Parliament as soon as Parliamentary time allows.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty

17. Mr. Savidge: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the impact of the US Senate's rejection of the comprehensive test ban treaty. [95048]

22. Dr. Palmer: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the prospects for controls on the testing of nuclear weapons, following the rejection of the treaty by the United States Senate. [95054]

26. Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the US Administration on the US Senate's failure to ratify the nuclear test ban treaty. [95060]

Mr. Hain: We have made clear our deep disappointment with the US Senate's vote against US ratification of the Comprehensive Nuclear Test Ban Treaty. But we will continue to work with the US Administration, and with other key countries, to bring the Treaty into force as soon as possible.

Indonesia

18. Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has made to the Government of Indonesia concerning human rights. [95049]

Mr. Battle: I visited Indonesia from 6–9 September and raised human rights issues with the then President and Foreign Minister. We remain concerned about the overall human rights situation in Indonesia. But we are greatly encouraged by the inauguration of Indonesia's first ever democratically elected President on 20 October and the decision to drop Indonesia's claim on East Timor. We stand ready to offer support to President Wahid's new Government during Indonesia's transition to democracy and full respect for human rights.

Pakistan

19. Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with representatives of the present Government of Pakistan. [95050]

Mr. Robin Cook: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave earlier today to the hon. Member for Ruislip-Northwood (Mr. Wilkinson), Official Report, column 81.

31. Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of when Pakistan will be readmitted as a full member of the Commonwealth. [R] [95065]

Mr. Hain: The Commonwealth Ministerial Action Group, which met in London on 18 October, confirmed Pakistan's suspension from the councils of the Commonwealth. A Commonwealth Mission, led by the Foreign Minister of Canada, Lloyd Axworthy, visited Pakistan from 28–29 October in order to assess the situation there. It will report to the Commonwealth Heads of Government meeting in Durban, South Africa, on 12–15 November.

Departmental Recruitment

20. Mr. Linton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what efforts he is making to ensure that his Department attracts candidates for employment from all sections of British society. [95051]

Mr. Hain: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave earlier to my hon. Friend the Member for Warrington, North (Helen Jones), Official Report, column 89.

Pakistani-Indian Relations

21. Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the Government's policy on Pakistani-Indian bilateral relations. [95053]

Mr. Robin Cook: It is essential for regional stability that India and Pakistan enjoy good relations. We continue to encourage dialogue between them to resolve their outstanding differences, including Kashmir.

Kosovo

23. Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if when he last met his colleagues from other member-states of the European Union they discussed matters relating to the policing of communities in Kosovo. [95056]

Mr. Vaz: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary discussed the security situation in Kosovo with his EU counterparts at the General Affairs Council meeting on 11 October. Partners welcomed a proposal by my right hon. Friend for an EU initiative to tackle the threat of organised crime in Kosovo, and commissioned further work to take this forward. The council also condemned the continuation of ethically based violence in Kosovo and called on leaders of various ethnic groups to put an end to it.

28. Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the reconstruction programme required in Kosovo; and if he will make a statement. [95062]

Dr. Desmond Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the reconstruction programme in Kosovo; and if he will make a statement. [95035]

Mr. Vaz: Assessments on the needs for reconstruction assistance have been carried out by the World Bank and the European Commission who are leading the international effort on the reconstruction of Kosovo. These will be presented to a donors conference on 17 November. We fully support the efforts of the UN, the EU and the Stability Pact for South-East Europe in their reconstruction efforts.

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the security situation in the Kosovo towns of (a) Mitrovica and (b) Orahovac. [96945]

Mr. Vaz: There are continuing stand-offs between Albanians and Serbs at Mitrovica over freedom of movement and access to homes, Mitrovica University and the local hospital. The Kosovo Force (KFOR) and UN Mission in Kosovo (UNMIK) are working with both communities to encourage the process of reconciliation and to allow freedom of movement within the city. In Orahovac, there is a continuing stand-off with the local Albanian inhabitants over the deployment of a Russian KFOR contingent. We support KFOR and UNMIK efforts to resolve the problem.

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the extent to which the borders between (a) Kosovo and Albania and (b) Kosovo and Macedonia are adequately secured; and who controls them. [97063]

Mr. Vaz: United Nations Security Council Resolution 1244, which established the international presences in Kosovo, gives the NATO-led international military presence in Kosovo, KFOR, responsibility for conducting border monitoring duties as required. Assuring the security of Kosovo's border with Albania and Macedonia is also a task for the United Nations interim administration in Kosovo (UNMIK), which has general responsibility for maintaining civil law and order.

Both KFOR and UNMIK recognise the importance of ensuring adequate control of Kosovo's borders. KFOR will continue to give border monitoring a high priority while the UN mission builds up the international police force in Kosovo, part of whose functions include border duties. UNMIK has also set up a customs service operating at border crossings. Negotiations are under way with the Macedonian Government to improve the efficiency of the major crossing point on the Kosovo/Macedonia border.

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the number of Kosovo Albanians killed by the Yugoslav Army, Serbian security forces and paramilitaries in Kosovo during the Operation Allied Force. [96949]

Mr. Vaz: Our current estimate remains that at least 10,000 civilians were killed in Kosovo as a result of war crimes by the Serbs between June 1998 and June 1999. We do not have disaggregated figures for those killed during Operation Allied Force.

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many of the planned 3,000 police officers for Kosovo have been deployed since 10 June. [96947]

Mr. Vaz: Currently around 1,750 international police officers from 25 countries are deployed to Kosovo. The full contingent of officers originally required should be in place by the end of November. Following his report of 16 September, the United Nations Secretary-General has approved proposals for the deployment of 1,600 extra officers. The United Nations is expected to issue a request to donor nations for further officers soon.

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the ethnic composition is of the Kosovo Transitional Council; how many times the Council has met since 10 June; and if it is still operational. [97066]

Mr. Vaz: The Kosovo Transitional Council (KTC) was established by the UN Secretary-General's Special Representative in Kosovo as an inclusive, consultative body bringing together all major political parties and ethnic groups in Kosovo. Its members include two each from the three major Kosovo Albanian political groupings, two Kosovo Albanian independents, two Kosovo Serbs and two members representing Kosovo's other ethnic minorities.

The Council has met sporadically since its inaugural meeting on 16 July. We are aware of six further meetings. Attendance has varied, depending on reactions by the various groupings to the situation on the ground or political developments at the time.

The Transitional Council is still operational, and has an important role to play in allowing representatives of different ethnic groups to have their say in the running of Kosovo and in preparing the transition from UN administration to local self-government.

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assistance the Government have provided to the international effort to identify and investigate mass graves in Kosovo. [97064]

Mr. Hain: A UK Scenes of Crime Team consisting of police and forensic personnel carried out investigations in Kosovo on behalf of the International Criminal Tribunal for former Yugoslavia from 18 June to 24 October. The Team was responsible for exhuming bodies, establishing the cause of death and collecting other evidence at the sites of some of the worst atrocities.

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of whether the Kosovo Liberation Army's demilitarisation has been conducted in accordance with the terms of UN Security Council Resolution 1244 and a consequent Demilitarisation Agreement. [97083]

Mr. Vaz: UN Security Council Resolution 1244 gave the NATO-led international military force in Kosovo (KFOR) responsibility for demilitarising the Kosovo Liberation Army (KLA). On 20 September, KFOR reported that the KLA had complied with the undertaking to demilitarise which it had given to NATO on 21 June.

The then commander of KFOR, General Sir Mike Jackson, said on 13 October that over 10,000 weapons and 5 million rounds of ammunition had been handed in by the KLA. Any weapons now found on ex-KLA members are unlawfully held and are subject to seizure and destruction.

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which international organisation has the mandate to function as the primary investigative and prosecutional agency for criminal acts committed on the territory of Kosovo between March 1998 and 10 June 1999. [96948]

Mr. Vaz: UN Security Council Resolution 1244, which established the UN Mission in Kosovo (UNMIK) and the NATO-led Kosovo force (KFOR), gives UNMIK responsibility for maintaining civil law and order in Kosovo. This includes investigations and prosecutions for alleged criminal acts committed on the territory of Kosovo before the deployment of UNMIK and KFOR in June 1999. In the case of possible war crimes, decisions would be made in consultation with the International Criminal Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia (ICTY).

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the Government's policy is on the Kosovo Serbs' proposal regarding establishment of (a) Serb enclaves within Kosovo and (b) Serb defence forces. [97065]

Mr. Vaz: We support, and are contributing to, the efforts of the international presences in Kosovo, the UN Mission (UNMIK) and the NATO-led international force (KFOR). UNMIK and KFOR are committed to promoting a secure environment in Kosovo for all ethnic groups. They are making special efforts to protect members of minority groups judged to be at risk, including Kosovo Serbs.

We want Kosovo Serbs to participate in institutions established by the international presences in Kosovo, such as the police, the Kosovo Protection Corps and the civil administration. We would not support proposals for separate enclaves or protection forces.

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the latest position in Kosovo. [95052]

Mr. Vaz: The security situation has stabilised, due to the work of the NATO-led international force in Kosovo—KFOR, and the United Nations international police presence. Ethnic violence is still a problem, but KFOR and the United Nations Mission in Kosovo (UNMIK) are putting as many resources as possible into tackling this issue. The number of Serbs and other ethnic minorities leaving the province has fallen. Some are returning.

Efforts are underway to control the borders more effectively for the purposes of security and revenue collection. A new customs service has been established and police are now posted at border crossings. Life is slowly getting back to normal with rubbish collections; post offices, businesses, factories, schools and universities opening; rail services being restored and a police emergency service line. Water and power supplies are being rehabilitated—two out of the four electricity generating stations are now operational and health care facilities are vastly improved. To prepare for winter over 78,500 house rehabilitation or prefabrication kits are being distributed which will help almost half a million people. Over a million square metres have been cleared of land mines and unexploded ordnance.

Work is also underway on restoring human rights and self governance to the province. This includes assistance to the media, political parties, judiciary, and prisons. Plans for voter registration and preparations for local elections are also being made. The work of the International Criminal Tribunal for Former Yugoslavia (ICTY) is well underway. We continue to strongly support their work.

There is still much to be done, but the international community and its agencies are committed to the goal of a peaceful, democratic and prosperous Kosovo.

China

24. Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he is taking to promote democracy and human rights in China. [95058]

Mr. Battle: We have regular dialogue with the Chinese authorities on human rights including the situation in Tibet and raise the issue at every appropriate opportunity. My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister discussed human rights with the Chinese President Jiang Zemin during his recent State Visit. My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary did the same during his talks with the Chinese Foreign Minister on 20 October, in which he handed over further names of individuals about whom we are concerned. The most recent round of the official-level bilateral human rights dialogue was held in London in September.

Spain and Gibraltar

25. Miss Kirkbride: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the European Commission concerning the obstruction of movement between Spain and Gibraltar. [R] [95059]

Mr. Vaz: We have raised the continuing problems at the border between Gibraltar and Spain with the European Commission on several occasions in recent months. Following the inauguration of the new Commission this Autumn, both my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Home Affairs and my predecessor as Minister for Europe have discussed the issue with EU Commissioner Vitorino. We will continue to press the Commission to take effective action in this matter.

Commonwealth Membership

27. Mr. Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next expects to meet the Secretary-General of the Commonwealth to discuss the criteria for Commonwealth membership. [95061]

Mr. Hain: I have no plans to discuss the criteria for Commonwealth membership with the Commonwealth Secretary-General. They were agreed by Heads of Government at the 1997 CHOGM in Edinburgh. Decisions on membership are taken by the whole Commonwealth on the basis of consensus, against the background of these agreed criteria.

East Timor

29. Mr. Rammell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the Government's current assessment of the situation in East Timor. [95063]

Mr. Battle: We welcome the adoption of the UN Security Council Resolution 1272 on 25 October. We shall continue to support the UN efforts to create the independent East Timor for which the East Timorese people so overwhelmingly voted on 30 August.

Nigeria

30. Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made in the development of consular relationships with Nigeria since its readmission to the Commonwealth. [95064]

Mr. Hain: Since Nigeria's readmission to the Commonwealth we have rebuilt a friendly and constructive relationship with the new government, covering all aspects of mutual interest. Britain fully supports President Obasanjo's reform programme.

Tampere Conference

32. Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next plans to meet senior members of the judiciary, the legal professions and the police to discuss the consequences of the Tampere conference of 15 and 16 October. [95066]

Mr. Vaz: I have no current plans to do so. My right hon. Friends the Home Secretary and the Lord Chancellor will, however, be taking forward work on justice and home affairs issues raised at Tampere.

Mission Statement

33. Mr. Trend: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the ethical dimension to his foreign policy as outlined in his Department's mission statement. [95068]

Mr. Hain: We have placed human rights at the heart of Foreign Policy. We believe in the rights enshrined in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and the core United Nations human rights instruments. We are committed to protecting and promoting these rights, working through our bilateral relationships and with our European Union and other International partners. In implementing this policy we take account of the individual characteristics of each situation, and seek to use the combination of approaches—of dialogue and pressure—that is most likely to secure real human rights improvements on the ground.

European Enlargement

34. Mr. Peter Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next plans to meet the German Chancellor to discuss European enlargement; and if he will make a statement. [95069]

Mr. Vaz: European Union enlargement is a major priority of the Government. My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary will discuss enlargement with the German Foreign Minister when they meet at the General Affairs council on 15–16 November. My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister and the German Chancellor discussed enlargement at the European council in Tampere on 15 October and will return to the subject at the Helsinki European council on 9 December.

Economic and Social Affairs Council

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he will next nominate persons to serve on the EU Economic and Social Affairs Council. [94574]

Mr. Vaz: We will nominate 24 permanent and 24 reserve members to serve on the next Economic and Social Committee in 2002, when the current committee's mandate expires.

EC Handbook

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the Government have compiled for use by Government Departments a handbook on the procedures and functions of (a) the European Communities and (b) European Communities working groups, with particular reference to UK Civil Service input. [95544]

Mr. Vaz: We prepared guidance handbooks on the institutions of the European Union and on the procedures in the Council for the use of civil servants and Ministers during the UK's Presidency of the Council in 1998. Guidance on procedures for handling EU business is updated from time to time.

Western Sahara

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Government of Morocco concerning the conduct and timing of the referendum on the future of Western Sahara. [96838]

Mr. Hain [holding answer 1 November 1999]: We raise the situation in the Western Sahara regularly in our bilateral dealings with the Moroccan Government. The Secretary of State met his Moroccan counterpart in April and I expect to make contact with them soon.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the UN Secretary-General concerning the conduct and timing of the referendum on the future of Western Sahara. [96839]

Mr. Hain [holding answer 1 November 1999]: We are in regular contact with the UN Secretary-General on the Western Sahara through our Mission in New York and through our Ambassador in Rabat. We fully support both the content of the UN referendum process and the Secretary-General's planned timetable.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the United Kingdom's contribution to the UN's work in Western Sahara. [96840]

Mr. Hain [holding answer 1 November 1999]: From September 1991 until September 1993, the UK contributed 15 military observers including the Chief of Staff to MINURSO, the United Nations' Mission for the Referendum in the Western Sahara.

Since the establishment of the mission, the UK has been liable for its share of UN assessed contributions. In the last financial year, the UK paid £2,359,371 in assessed contributions to MINURSO.

We continue to support UN efforts to bring about a lasting peace to the Western Sahara and believe that a free and fair referendum represents the best way forward unless the parties can agree an alternative political solution.

Bilateral Treaties

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many of the bilateral treaties between the UK and the US (a) are still in effect and (b) were ratified in the last 30 years. [96301]

Mr. Battle: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him on 20 July 1999, Official Report, column 501. That answer refers to the number of US-UK bilateral treaties which, having entered into force, were sent to the Public Record Office for permanent preservation. However, some of these bilateral treaties may no longer be in effect, having been overtaken by new treaties. Officials are now conducting a search to establish precisely how many treaties are still in effect, and which of those treaties were ratified in the last 30 years. I will inform the hon. Member as soon as I have the necessary information.

Arms Exports

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many people are employed in his Department in examining arms export licence applications. [97061]

Mr. Hain: Lead responsibility for formulating the Foreign and Commonwealth Office's advice to the Department of Trade and Industry on individual export licence applications generally rests with the relevant geographical departments, in consultation with the Non-Proliferation Department and other functional departments as appropriate, in particular the Human Rights Policy Department and the United Nations Department. In some cases geographical departments may also consult overseas posts, for example to seek more information on proposed end-uses or end-users.

Against this background, it is not possible to give a precise figure for the number of officials involved. But a significant proportion of officials in geographical departments and in the relevant sections of the above-named functional departments have some degree of involvement in examining export licence applications. Nearly all such officials have other responsibilities which they fulfil alongside their role in export licence processing.

Iraq (Sanctions)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what response he has made to the report of the Bishop of Coventry and his ecclesiastical colleagues on their recent visit to Baghdad and their assessment of the policy of UN sanctions against Iraq. [95458]

Mr. Hain: Officials from the Foreign Office have a regular dialogue about Iraq with the Church of England through the Board for Social Responsibility's International and Development Affairs Committee. This has included discussion of the recent visit to Iraq by the Bishop of Coventry and his colleagues. We are aware of the Bishops' views on the sanctions regime on Iraq and have briefed them on the Government's position. We share the Bishops' concern for the humanitarian situation in Iraq and have undertaken to keep them informed of our continuing efforts to improve it.

OSCE Progress Report

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the South Eastern Europe Regional Table periodic report to the OSCE has been produced; and if he will place a copy in the Library. [96946]

Mr. Vaz: The Stability Pact document tasks the Special Coordinator to provide, on behalf of the Stability Pact Regional Table, periodic progress reports to the OSCE. The OSCE Summit to be held in Istanbul on 18–19 November is the next opportunity for a progress report. When the report becomes available a copy will be placed in the Library.

Montenegro

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what security undertaking has been made by NATO to Montenegro since the end of operation Allied Force. [96944]

Mr. Vaz: No security undertakings have been made by NATO to Montenegro.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Oral Statements

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list (a) the reports published by his Department and its associated bodies, (b) the reports received from bodies set up by his Department, (c) the decisions his Department has taken and (d) events in the UK and elsewhere, since 27 July, which satisfied the criteria he uses for deciding whether to apply to make oral statements to the House when the House is sitting. [93982]

Mr. Ingram: I would refer my hon. Friend to the reply given by the President of the Council on 19 October 1999, Official Report, Column 429.

Pre-school Education

Mr. Hesford: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the Government's policy on pre-school education in Northern Ireland [93492]

Mr. McFall [holding answer 20 October 1999]: This Government are committed to the development of pre-school education in Northern Ireland and are taking forward a four year expansion programme, through partnership between the statutory, voluntary and private sectors, to provide over 9,000 additional pre-school places. By 2001–02, £38 million will have been spent in almost doubling pre-school education provision in Northern Ireland.

Departmental Twinning

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many requests there have been to his Department for placement of officials from Central, East European and CIS states as twins of his officials; how many such officials have been accepted as twins; and from which countries (a) those who were accepted and (b) those who were not accepted came. [94004]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 25 October 1999]: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to him by the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office, my hon. Friend the Member for Leicester, East (Mr. Vaz) on 25 October 1999, Official Report, columns, 739–40.

Human Rights Commission

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what moneys were allocated by his Department to the Northern Ireland Human Rights Commission for each of its first three years; and what requests for greater funding were received by his Department. [95502]

Mr. George Howarth: The Commission is defined as a Non Departmental Public Body and is funded by means of a grant in aid. Its grant in aid for each of its first three years will be £750,000. The Government are determined to ensure that the Commission is properly funded to carry out its various duties and functions, and believe that the current level of funding is adequate. The Commission informed the Secretary of State of its intention to seek additional funding in a letter dated 22 October. Any formal request for an increase in funding will be considered alongside the other financial demands that the Northern Ireland Office has to meet in its annual budget.

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland on what basis post-graduate interns have been selected to work for the Human Rights Commission; and how many of them are of (a) British, (b) Irish and (c) other nationality. [95504]

Mr. George Howarth: Two post-graduate interns have worked at the Commission for a three month period this year. The basis of their selection and questions relating to their nationality are the responsibility of the Commission, and I have asked the Chief Commissioner to write to the right hon. Gentleman.

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the decision of the Northern Ireland Human Rights Commission to intervene in the matter of UK-wide legislation which is without a specific Northern Ireland aspect. [95508]

Mr. George Howarth: I am not certain to which specific intervention the right hon. Gentleman refers; however, section 69(1) of the Northern Ireland Act 1998 states that:

> "The Commission shall keep under review the adequacy and effectiveness in Northern Ireland of law and practice relating to the protection of human rights".

This duty is not confined to instances where there is a specific Northern Ireland aspect to UK-wide legislation.

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland which political parties were invited to consult over the proposals that appear in the Northern Ireland Human Rights Commission's draft strategic plan; which were consulted; and which declined or failed to respond. [95496]

Mr. George Howarth: The Commission is an independent body and as such its proposals and activities are a matter for the Commission itself. I have therefore asked the Chief Commissioner to write to the right hon. Gentleman to inform him of the consultation process on the Commission's draft strategic plan.

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what interests have been registered by the members of the Northern Ireland Human Rights Commission. [95506]

Mr. George Howarth: The Commission maintains a Register of Interests for both Commissioners and staff. It can be seen by any member of the public at the Commission's office in Belfast.

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when his Department made a formal request to the Northern Ireland Human Rights Commission asking it to consult and advise on the possibility of a Northern Ireland Bill of Rights; and in what terms was this request. [95505]

Mr. George Howarth: My right hon. Friend the Member for Redcar (Marjorie Mowlam), the then Secretary of State, wrote to the Chief Commissioner on 24 March 1999, as she was required to do under Section 69(7) of the Northern Ireland Act 1998. She invited the Commission to provide advice of the kind referred to in paragraph 4 of the relevant section of the Belfast Agreement, namely:

> "to consult and to advise on the scope for defining, in Westminster legislation, rights supplementary to those in the European Convention on Human Rights, to reflect the particular circumstances of Northern Ireland, drawing as appropriate on international instruments and experience. These additional rights to reflect the principles of mutual respect for the identity and ethos of both communities and parity of esteem, and—taken together with the ECHR—to constitute a Bill of Rights for Northern Ireland."

The Act does not set a time limit for receipt of these proposals and the Secretary of State did not ask for the Commission's proposals within a set time.

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if the Committee on the Administration of Justice made application to the Council of Europe for funding for the Northern Ireland Human Rights Commission before the Commission's members were appointed; and if he will make a statement. [95497]

Mr. George Howarth: The Commission, although funded by Government, is free to seek additional funding from outside sources. Other bodies are also free to seek funding on its behalf. This is not a matter for the Government.

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many staff work for the Northern Ireland Human Rights Commission; and on what grades and salaries. [95503]

Mr. George Howarth: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has a statutory duty to approve the Northern Ireland Human Rights Commission's employment of staff as to numbers and as to remuneration and other terms and conditions of employment.

The Commission has to date appointed eight members of staff. The staff are not civil servants and the Commission has not adopted formal grades, however they have used the Northern Ireland Civil Service (NIC) Pay Scales as a guide to salaries.

There are three Administrative Officers employed on the equivalent of the Clerical and Secretarial Pay Scale. There are four staff appointed on the equivalent of Scale 119; these are a Research Worker; Case Worker; Education Worker and Development Worker. The Commission's Chief Executive is appointed on the equivalent of the Principal Officer Scale of the NICS.

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland on which occasions meetings of the Northern Ireland Human Rights Commission have been held outside its own headquarters; if any such meetings have been in the private offices of Commissioners; and if he will make a statement about this practice. [95579]

Mr. George Howarth: The Northern Ireland Act 1998 leaves the Commission free to determine its own procedures. I have asked the Chief Commissioner to write to the right hon. Gentleman on the point that he raises.

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish the report drawn up by the Northern Ireland Human Rights Commission on whether paramilitary violations of human rights are appropriate for campaigning action by the Commission; and if he will make a statement. [95507]

Mr. George Howarth: It is not for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State to decide to publish any material that the Northern Ireland Human Rights Commission produces. Section 69(9) of the Northern Ireland Act 1998 states that:

> "The Commission may decide to publish its advice and the outcome of its research and investigations".

I have asked the Chief Commissioner, Professor Brice Dickson, to write to the right hon. Gentleman on the issue that he raises.

Portadown Attack

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assistance was provided by (a) the Specialist Fingerprint Unit and (b) the Biology Section of the Northern Ireland Forensic Service to the Royal Ulster Constabulary investigation into the murder of Robert Hamill. [95363]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 26 October 1999]: The RUC have advised that no items seized by the police were suitable for examination by the Specialist Fingerprint Unit. Items of hair, blood and fibres were sent to the Biology Section for examination.

Paramilitary Violence

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) deaths, (b) shootings and (c) bombings have been attributed to (i) Loyalist and (ii) Republican paramilitary groups (A) since the signing of the Good Friday Agreement and (B) during 1999. [95715]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 26 October 1999]: The table shows the deaths, shootings and bombings attributed to Loyalist and Republican groups:

	10 April 1998–21 October 1999		1 January 1999–21 October 1999
	Loyalist	Republican	Loyalist	Republican
Deaths	11	36	3	4
Shooting incidents	127	76	53	42
Bombing incidents	136	22	65	Nil

Human Rights Act

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list those organisations and institutions identified as public bodies under the Human Rights Act 1998; if he will describe departmental preparations for implementation of the Act and if the Department has (a) created a timetable and action plan,

(b) set up structural arrangements and performance management to oversee the preparation process, (c) undertaken a study of compatibility in primary legislation, (d) drawn up a risk management strategy, (e) developed a communication strategy to prepare subsidiary public authorities for changed responsibilities and (f) established steering groups on training that will identify and meet needs of particular sectors. [95369]

Mr. George Howarth [holding answer 27 October 1999]: There can be no definitive list of organisations and institutions which are public authorities under the Human Rights Act. It will be for the courts to decide in individual cases whether an organisation is a public authority for the purposes of the Act.

The Northern Ireland Office and the Northern Ireland Departments are taking forward work in preparation for the implementation of the Act in October 2000. Public authorities for which the Northern Ireland Office is responsible have been alerted to the requirements of the Act. An inter-departmental working group (comprising the Northern Ireland Office, the Royal Ulster Constabulary, the Director for Public Prosecutions Northern Ireland, the Northern Ireland Court Service, the Probation Board for Northern Ireland, the Police Authority for Northern Ireland and the Army) has been meeting regularly to monitor progress being made by individual bodies in preparing for the Act and to identify any issues on which a joint approach would be most effective.

In June a major human rights seminar was held by the Northern Ireland Office. It involved the main criminal justice organisations and players in Northern Ireland, including non-statutory bodies. Its aim was to generate a heightened awareness of issues surrounding the Human Rights Act, contribute to a common understanding of the issues and provide an opportunity to discuss new concerns and to discern where a common approach is required.

The training of staff on the requirements of the Act has begun, and managers are continuing to assess their staff training requirements to determine what further training will be required.

Guidance on the Human Rights Act has been issued to all Northern Ireland Departments. Northern Ireland Departments are continuing to refine their Action Plans which outline the work which will be carried out in preparation for the implementation of the Act. Scrutiny exercises are under way in each Department to examine legislation and procedures to ensure that they are compatible with the Act. Northern Ireland Departments are also in close contact with their counterparts in Great Britain to ascertain what their scrutiny of similar legislation has revealed.

Departments have been in contact with the public bodies which they sponsor and are taking steps to ensure that these public bodies are aware of their duties under the Act.

Training for the staff of Northern Ireland Departments has been undertaken and is continuing. Training needs are being kept under review.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list those non-governmental organisations that have been consulted on preparations for implementation of the Human Rights Act 1998 and outline his plans to involve NGOs in the future. [95370]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 27 October 1999]: The Northern Ireland Office receives advice on preparation for implementation of the Human Rights Act from the Human Rights Task Force.

The Human Rights Task Force was created by the Home Secretary and exists to bring together Government and human rights organisations in order to help public authorities prepare for the Human Rights Act. The Task Force maintains a dialogue between the Government and non-governmental organisations on the readiness of public authorities and the legal profession for implementation.

Professor Brice Dickson, Chief Commissioner of the Northern Ireland Human Rights Commission, attends Task Force meetings. We are discussing with the Commission the provision of training on the implementation of the Human Rights Act.

The Northern Ireland Office has engaged the services of Queens University Belfast (QUB) to deliver half-day awareness sessions to members of the Senior Civil Service. The Northern Ireland Civil Service Departmental Solicitors' Group are also working with QUB to provide more in-depth seminars to legal staff across the Northern Ireland Court Service. This includes legal staff in the Office of the Director of Public Prosecutions for Northern Ireland and the Crown Solicitor's Office.

There are no plans to involve other non-governmental organisations directly in the preparations for implementation in Northern Ireland of the Human Rights Act, but the Government will continue to follow the advice provided by the Human Rights Task Force.

Prisoner Releases

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many prisoners released under the accelerated prisoner release scheme in Northern Ireland have re-offended; what was the nature of those offences; if any have broken the terms of their licences; and if he will make a statement. [96607]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 1 November 1999]: Of the 299 prisoners who have been released to date under the terms of the Northern Ireland (Sentences) Act 1998, six have been prosecuted for offences committed since the date of their release. The nature of the charges against three are of Assault on police officers and breach of the peace; Theft; Grievous bodily harm with intent; Assault Occasioning Actual Bodily harm; and Affray. A fourth was charged with handling stolen goods, the fifth with armed robbery and the sixth with possession with intent to supply controlled drugs. None of the six were charged with terrorist related offences and were not deemed to have broken their licence conditions.

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many prisoners released under the accelerated prisoner release scheme are awaiting trials for offences committed since the date of their release. [96606]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 1 November 1999]: Of the 299 prisoners who have been released to date under the terms of the Northern Ireland (Sentences) Act 1998 five are currently awaiting trials for offences committed since the date of their release. None of the five have been charged with terrorist related offences.

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will set out the terms of the licence conditions of prisoners released under the accelerated release scheme in Northern Ireland who have subsequently re-offended. [96612]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 1 November 1999]: Of the six persons prosecuted for offences committed since the date of their release, five were determinate sentence prisoners and as such the terms of their release on licence under the Northern Ireland (Sentences) Act 1998 were conditional upon the following:

that they do not support a specified organisation (within the meaning of section 3 of the Act);

that they do not become concerned in the commission, preparation or instigation of acts of terrorism connected with the affairs of Northern Ireland.

The remaining one was previously a life sentence prisoner and as such their release on licence under the Northern Ireland (Sentences) Act 1998 was conditional upon the following:

that they do not support a specified organisation (within the meaning of section 3 of the Act);

that they do not become concerned in the commission, preparation or instigation of acts of terrorism connected with the affairs of Northern Ireland; and that they do not become a danger to the public.

None of the six were prosecuted for offences which were terrorist related and were not deemed to have broken their licence conditions.

RUC Training

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what training Royal Ulster Constabulary uniformed personnel receive in administering first aid to injured persons. [94429]

Mr. Ingram: New recruits attend a three day First Aid course equivalent to those run by the St. John's Ambulance and Red Cross. Officers are expected to maintain a tri-annual revalidation by attending a one day Emergency Aid course. Specialist units e.g. Traffic Branch and Community Affairs attend two day scenario-based courses specific to their needs. In addition, police and civilian support staff may volunteer for a four day 'First Aid at Work' course made available under Health and Safety legislation.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Emotional Development (Children)

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what representations he has received from (a) the National Association for Therapeutic Education and (b) others about the needs of emotionally undeveloped children. [95219]

Jacqui Smith: Ministers and officials in my Department have in recent years considered a range of representations from the National Association for Therapeutic Education (NATE). NATE were invited by the National Advisory Group on Special Educational Needs to contribute evidence during the consultation which informed our Green Paper "Excellence For All Children: Meeting Educational Needs".

My officials have an extensive network of contacts and keep in close touch with a range of bodies concerned with addressing children's emotional under-development.

School Playing Fields

Mr. Godsiff: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many requests he has received from local education authorities to (a) dispose of and (b) change the use of, school playing fields since 1 May 1997; and if he will list those playing field sites for which approval has been granted for (i) disposal and (ii) change of use. [95743]

Jacqui Smith: Until the implementation on 1 October 1998 of Section 77 of the School Standards and Framework Act 1998, local authorities in England did not need the consent of the Secretary of State for Education and Employment to dispose, or change the use, of school playing fields.

Since 1 October 1998 there have been 147 applications from local authorities to dispose of part or, at some closed schools, the whole of a school's playing field. There have been no applications by local education authorities to change the use of playing fields that have not involved a disposal. All applications are assessed against criteria which have been published by the Department in its circular: "The Protection of School Playing Fields".

Approval has been granted in 86 cases. Of those, 33 were at closed or closing schools and a further 23 led to improved sports facilities. The remainder were for improvements to educational facilities and were approved only when it was clear that they did not affect the access of pupils to suitable playing fields.

European Social Fund

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will take steps to transfer from next year the (a) responsibility and (b) budget for European Social Fund activities in Wales to the National Assembly for Wales. [95750]

Ms Jowell: Discussions are currently taking place between my officials and those of the National Assembly for Wales about the future arrangements for ESF activities in Wales.

New Deal

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the publications issued since 1 May 1997 relating to the New Deal, the total cost per publication and the numbers of each publication which have been produced. [96302]

Ms Jowell: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by the then Minister for Employment, Welfare to Work and Equal Opportunities on 3 March 1999, Official

SCOTLAND

Government Expenditure and Revenue

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland in which section of Government Expenditure and Revenue Scotland 1996–97 provision is made for receipts from the Crown Estate Commissioners. [95272]

Dr. Reid [holding answer 26 October 1999]: The Crown Estate Commissioners pay a dividend to the Consolidated Fund, which is included in UK general government interest and dividends in the public finances. The Government Expenditure and Revenue in Scotland 1996–97 report allocated a share of UK general government interest and dividends to Scottish receipts on the basis of Scotland's share of Gross Domestic Product (excluding the Continental Shelf).

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the categories contained in the paper, Government Expenditure and Revenue Scotland 1996–97, which include appropriations in aid for the Scottish Office and other departments. [95269]

Dr. Reid [holding answer 26 October 1999]: All the categories contained in Government Expenditure and Revenue in Scotland 1996–97 include appropriations in aid. Details of the appropriations in aid which were applied by the Scottish Office for 1996–97 were published in the Appropriation Accounts for that year by The Stationery Office on 13 February 1998 (HC251-XIII).

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will state his Department's role in the preparation and publication of the next paper on Government Revenue and Expenditure Scotland; and when the next such paper will be published. [95273]

Dr. Reid [holding answer 26 October 1999]: The next report on Government Expenditure and Revenue in Scotland, in common with previous reports, is being prepared by members of the Government Economic Service and Government Statistical Service. No firm date has been set for publication but it is expected to be before the end of this year. My Department will assess the report's contents and implications.

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list and state the amounts for each of the miscellaneous receipts referred to in the Other Receipts section of Appendix B of Government Expenditure and Revenue Scotland 1996–97. [95270]

Dr. Reid [holding answer 26 October 1999]: The research underlying the report on Government Expenditure and Revenue in Scotland 1996–97 apportioned aggregate UK other receipts on the basis of Scotland's share of UK gross domestic products (excluding Continental Shelf). The analysis does not identify all the individual components of the other receipts category and allocate a share of them to Scotland on an individual and separate basis.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Departmental Assets

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Solicitor-General if he will list the assets sold by the Attorney-General's Department and its agencies and their value in each year from 1991–92 to 1998–99; and if he will estimate the value of asset sales planned to be made in the years 1999–2000 and 2000–01. [96405]

The Solicitor-General: Details for the Law Officers' Departments are as follows. The Serious Fraud Office disposed of no assets of material value in the years from 1991–92 to 1998–99 and currently do not estimate any material sales for 1999–2000 and 2000–01. The Legal Secretariat to the Law Officers' disposed of no assets of material value in the years from 1991–92 to 1998–99 and currently do not estimate any material sales for 1999–2000 and 2000–01. The Crown Prosecution Service has sold three assets during the period 1991–92 to 1998–99, and has no plans to sell any assets in the years 1999–2000 and 2000–01. The asset sales, together with their value, are listed in the following table:

Year	Asset	Value (£)
1998–99	None	0
1997–98	3 buildings	415,070
1996–97	None	0
1995–96	None	0
1994–95	None	0
1991–92	None	0

The Treasury Solicitor's Department, including the Government Property Lawyers' Agency, has made the following asset sales:

Year	Asset	Value (£)
1998–99	Surplus IT equipment	2,505
	Furniture/Office equipment	549
1997–98	Surplus IT equipment	4,100
	Surplus library books	750

Disposals of the same type, but probably of a lower magnitude, are expected to continue in 1999–2000 and 2000–01.

In 1999–2000, sales of office furniture and office equipment to the value of £20,000 have taken place following the closure of the Government Property Lawyers' Agency. No further sales resulting from this closure are planned. No major sales of assets took place prior to 1997–98. Details of minor and routine sales over the period 1991–92 to 1997–97 are not readily available and could only be obtained at disproportionate costs.

Performance Targets

Dr. George Turner: To ask the Solicitor-General what key performance targets he has set for the Treasury Solicitor's Department in 1999–2000. [97205]

The Solicitor-General: In 1999–2000 the performance of the Treasury Solicitor's Department will be measured against the following targets:

Performance	Target
Annual efficiency savings in real terms	3%
To recover the full operating cost for chargeable services of the Agency	100%
To achieve an improvement of 20% on 1998–99 level of income recovery from clients within 30 days of their receipt of a validated invoice from 75% to:	90%
To increase the proportion of undisputed supplier invoices paid in accordance with terms or 30 days from 95% to:	100%
To maintain a level of client satisfaction of—(Advisory)	95%-100%
Reduction in average unit cost per chargeable hour in real terms—(Litigation)	2.5%
Minimum average number of chargeable hours per caseholder per year—(Litigation)	1,150
Reduction in average unit cost per case in real terms—(Bona Vacantia)	2.5%

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Equal Opportunities

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he (a) has established and (b) published a baseline for policy appraisal against which to measure progress on equal treatment. [94859]

Mr. Byers: The Government are committed to ensuring that their policies are fair and inclusive, and focus on public service users, not providers. This aim is contained in guidance (published in 1998) which helps Departments consider the impact of their policies by gender, ethnicity and disability. In addition to considering impact, the guidance encourages consultation with women's groups and others where appropriate and action to deal with any differential impact if this appears appropriate. My Department applies the principles set out in the guidance in developing its policies. For example, a gender impact assessment was included in the Regulatory Impact Assessment for the Employment Relations Bill. We are also making increasing use of consultation, research projects and disaggregated statistics to identify the likely impact of policy.

Human Tissue Banks

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has to fund human tissue banks in respect of humane research; and if he will make a statement. [95662]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 26 October 1999]: In the Comprehensive Spending Review the Medical Research Council was allocated £12 million to develop collections of donated human tissue and biological samples for use in research. The approach is designed to take account of anticipated rapid developments in genetic technologies and the benefits that might ensue from the completion of the human genome project in 2003. The MRC is currently working with the Wellcome Trust, other charities, and industry to consider all the implications of these developments.

Indebted Countries

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the (a) total debt owed, (b) debt written off, (c) balance outstanding, (d) interest accrued and (e) additional advances made, standing to the ECGD by each of the highly indebted poor countries for each of the financial years 1989–90 to 1998–99. [96059]

Mr. Caborn [holding answer 28 October 1999]: The table shows the latest available position in 1999 for debt owed, principal forgiven, interest accrued and overdue and the residual balance of amounts guaranteed for the current agreed list of highly indebted poor countries.

To answer the question for each of the years requested would incur disproportionate cost. However, the vast majority of the debt owing has been in existence prior to 1989, with movements occurring on amounts forgiven and interest.

Government Office for the North East

Mr. Alan Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many people are currently employed at the Government Office for the North East; and what are its current annual administration costs. [96870]

Mr. Caborn: The Government Office for the North East (GO-NE) has a complement of 257 staff in the current year. As at 4 October 1999 there are 248.6 staff in post employed by GO-NE.

The Running Cost Budget for 1999–2000 is £8.2 million.

Mr. Alan Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what was the total number of jobs (a) created and (b) safeguarded by inward investment projects into (a) the UK and (b) the area covered by the Government Office for the North East in each year since 1995. [96734]

Mr. Caborn: The figures issued are based on information provided by companies at the time of the announcement of the decision to invest in the UK. They are based on the companies' best estimate, at that time, of the number of jobs to be created/safeguarded by the investment in its first three years.

There is no requirement to notify the Department and so the figures include only those projects where the Department's Invest in Britain Bureau and its regional partners were involved or which have come to their notice.

Minimum Wage

Mr. Patrick Hall: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on enforcement of the national minimum wage. [96916]

Mr. Alan Johnson: The national minimum wage is in force and it must be paid by all employers. There is no hiding place for employers who act unlawfully and fail to pay it. I particularly welcome the recent employment tribunal decision, where a worker in a Bognor Regis sports shop became the first person to benefit from the enforcement officers' powers; that is, to take an employer to an employment tribunal and force them to pay the underpaid worker all the money that is owed them.

This power is over and above the powers of officers to issue enforcement and penalty notices against employers. Ten enforcement notices were issued in September, and £67,000 of back pay obtained for workers.

Horizon Project

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) how many sub-post offices he expects to close (a) in Eastbourne and (b) nationally as a result of the cancellation of the Horizon Project; [96964]

(2) what analysis he has made of the likely effect on the Post Office of the cancellation of the Horizon Project. [96966]

Mr. Alan Johnson: The Horizon Project has not been cancelled, but has been put back on track by the Government to ensure that every Post Office throughout the network will be equipped with this modern, on-line computer platform by the spring of 2001.

Climate Change Levy

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the cost to industry of the climate change levy. [96696]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 1 November 1999]: Any estimate of the impact of the levy will depend on the final rates of tax which will be set by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer.

However, the Government have promised that there will be significantly lower rates of the levy for those energy intensive sectors, covered by the EU Integrated Pollution Prevention and Control Directive, which are prepared to enter negotiated agreements with the Government to deliver energy efficiency improvement and/or emissions reductions targets. To this end, the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions is leading discussions with a number of energy intensive sectors.

Mr. Robert[illegible]: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent discussions he has had with industrialists about the likely costs of the climate change levy to their businesses. [96602]

Ms Hewitt: The Government have been holding discussions with a wide range of business on the implementation of the climate change levy. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry met representatives of business on 20 October to hear at first hand their views on the levy.

Any estimate of the impact of the levy will depend on the final rates of tax which will be set by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer.

EU Structural Funds

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the impact of (a) EU Objective 1 and (b) EU Objective 2 programmes on UK economic development; and if he will make a statement. [95057]

Dr. Whitehead: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the impact of EU Objective 1 and Objective 2 programmes on UK economic development. [95037]

Mr. Russell Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the impact of (a) EU Objective 1 and (b) EU Objective 2 programmes on UK economic development; and if he will make a statement. [95067]

Mr. Caborn: In accordance with the requirements of the regulations governing the Structural Funds, all UK Objective 1 and Objective 2 programmes have been independently evaluated both at mid-term and at the end of the programmes to assess their impact on economic development. These evaluations are available from the programme secretariats.

Overall the Structural Funds make a valuable contribution to economic development in the United Kingdom.

Consumer Protection

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has to improve consumer protection legislation. [96312]

Dr. Howells: The White Paper "Modern Markets: Confident Consumers" published in July set out in detail the various proposals to improve consumer protection legislation on which the Department is currently working.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Belize

Mr. Peter Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development which Ministers in her Department visited Belize in each year from 1990 to 1997. [96174]

Clare Short: No Ministers from my Department or from the Overseas Development Administration visited Belize between 1990 and 1997.

Departmental Publications

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list the titles of official departmental reports being prepared with a view to publication in (a) 1999 and (b) 2000, stating in each case the planned date for publication. [95511]

Clare Short: The titles of official departmental reports being prepared with a view to publication in (a) 1999 and (b) 2000, with planned dates (where applicable), are shown in the tables.

Departmental Accounting

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list the methods of depreciation her Department will apply in the current financial year to fixed assets in the preparation of departmental resource accounting balance sheets. [96926]

Clare Short: The Department for International Development (DFID) will be applying the straight line method of depreciation to fixed assets in preparing the balance sheet for the current financial year.

San Bushmen

Ms Atherton: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what percentage of her Department's funding to the Sasi it has spent on (a) health projects and (b) education for the San Bushmen of South Africa. [96400]

Clare Short: The South African San Institute (SASI) programme supported by DFID will help build the capacity of San communities to secure access to public health and education services. Funds have not been earmarked for health and education projects, but there will be health and education components to SASI supported activities in livelihood and cultural development, and to tackle substance abuse and violence against women and children.

Ms Atherton: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what work her Department has undertaken in South Africa in tackling alcohol abuse among the San Bushmen. [96401]

Clare Short: My Department is supporting the South African San Institute (SASI), which plans to develop rehabilitation and counselling services to deal with substance abuse.

Ms Atherton: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what plans she has to support the San Bushmen of South Africa. [96399]

Clare Short: My Department has assisted San communities in South Africa through the South African Government's Land Reform programme, which included advice on formulation of the successful land claim by the Southern Kalahari San, an indigenous San group located throughout the Mier area of South Africa near the Kalahari Gemsbok National Park.

Building on this support, my Department has made available £0.5 million to the South African San Institute (SASI) to help San communities create sustainable livelihoods and secure their constitutional rights to development and use of traditional language.

Arms Exports

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many people are employed in her Department in examining arms exports licence applications. [97060]

Clare Short: There is one person employed in my Department on a full-time basis and three people who spend part of their time examining arms export licence applications. They draw on advice from DFID's regional, economic, and conflict and humanitarian affairs departments where necessary.

South Africa

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment she has made of the impact on South Africa of the drop in the value of gold; and if she will make a statement. [96544]

Clare Short: Gold remains important for employment and export earnings but its relative contribution to the South African economy has been in decline for decades. Our development co-operation supports South Africa's efforts at economic diversification.

Serbia

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps her Department is taking to assist in the restoration of Serbia's (a) water, (b) electricity and (c) gas utilities. [95971]

Clare Short: We do not support the rehabilitation of utilities until there is a democratic government in place in the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia (FRY) who pursue internationally acceptable standards of conduct and meets their international obligations.

We are prepared to provide humanitarian assistance to help meet the basic needs of the most vulnerable on the basis of verified assessments and full accountability.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Departmental Publications

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will list his Department's spending on official publications since May 1997. [93685]

Mr. Chris Smith: The spending on official publications since May 1997; which includes the costs incurred by the Department in publishing, preparation, production and purchase of copies for official use was £841,812.12. This excludes the cost of publications produced for internal use. Where the department makes use of a private sector publisher the publishing, printing and design costs are generally met by the publisher as part of their acceptance of the risks of publication.

	Spend £
May 1997-March 1998	338,760.90
April 1998-March 1999	288,099.82
April 1999–8 October 1999	214,951.40

The equivalent figure for April 1996-March 1997 was £501,366.85.

Wembley Stadium

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment he has made of proposals to increase the capacity of the new Wembley stadium to meet the criteria of the International Olympic Committee. [95433]

Kate Hoey: The current International Olympic Committee requirements for staging an Olympic Games are for 75,000 seats for the opening and closing ceremonies. The British Olympic Association (BOA) has indicated that a capacity of 80,000 should be provided for an Olympic bid to be credible. The design of the national stadium chosen by Wembley National Stadium Limited (WNSL) envisages special conversion of the stadium for staging athletics events and can provide 80,000 seats in athletics mode. WNSL have recently refined their detailed proposals for the stadium in athletics mode and I have asked Sport England and UK Sport to commission further detailed technical assessments of these latest proposals.

Works of Art

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions his Department has held with the Foreign and Commonwealth Office on policy relating to the display of works of art during visits by foreign heads of state. [96342]

Mr. Alan Howarth: The Department for Culture, Media and Sport has held no such discussions with the Foreign and Commonwealth Office.

British Museum

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions he held with the British Museum authorities on arrangements for the visit to the Museum by President Jiang Zemin. [96341]

Mr. Alan Howarth: Neither my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State nor any DCMS Minister or official had any such discussions with the British Museum.

BBC Licence Fee

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will make a statement on the proposal for a £24 licence supplement for BBC digital television. [96311]

Janet Anderson: In its report published on 5 August, the independent review panel on the future funding of the BBC has recommended that the Government should introduce, from next April, a digital licence supplement at the level of £1.99 a month (falling to 99p a month in 2006). A period of public consultation on the panel's recommendations has just concluded. The Government will consider all those recommendations in the light of the responses received and hopes to reach final decisions around the end of this year.

Tourism (Cornwall)

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans he has to make official visits to tourist resorts in Cornwall in the next 12 months. [95898]

Janet Anderson: My hon. Friend the Minister for the Arts and I have already made a number of official visits to Cornwall this year. These have included official visits to Falmouth, Newquay, Penzance, Newlyn and St. Ives. Ministers' diaries for the next 12 months have yet to be finalised. Invitations to make further visits to Cornwall will, of course, be given proper consideration. We are ever mindful of the importance of the tourist industry to the county of Cornwall, and will make supportive visits whenever we are able to do so.

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment he has made of the state of the tourist industry in Cornwall in the current year, with particular reference to the effects of the eclipse. [95902]

Janet Anderson: I understand from the West Country Tourist Board, which has contributed to a report, produced for the West Cornwall Leader Project, into the economic impact of the eclipse on Cornwall, that an additional 400,000 visitors were in Cornwall for the eclipse on 11 August. In addition, the event generated an extra £51 million of visitor expenditure within the county.

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will make a statement about the funding and marketing of the Cornish tourism industry. [95903]

Janet Anderson: The West Country Tourist Board, which covers Cornwall, is receiving £497,000 from the English Tourism Council this year for projects which contribute to the national tourism strategy. Cornwall, in common with parts of England, also benefits from the work of the British Tourist Authority (BTA) which promotes Britain as a visitor destination in overseas markets. The BTA is receiving £36 million from my Department this year.

The Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy estimates that local authority expenditure on tourism promotion in Cornwall in 1997–98 was £1.954 million. In addition, the European Regional Development Fund and local partners have funded the West Cornwall Leader Project, which aims to assist sectors of the West Cornwall economy, including tourism and Prosper, the Training and Enterprise Council for Devon and Cornwall which provides information, advice and training services to small businesses in the region.

In addition, tourism in Cornwall has also benefited, both directly and indirectly, from the National Lottery (projects in the county have received awards totalling £84.1 million according to DCMS's National Lottery Awards Database) and from other funding from the European Regional Development Fund. Tourism in Cornwall will benefit further from January next year, having been granted European Union Objective 1 status.

Tourism

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions he has had with the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food regarding the development of tourism in rural areas. [95901]

Janet Anderson: The Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (MAFF) was one of several other Government departments we consulted when drawing up the tourism strategy document, "Tomorrow's Tourism", in view of that Department's strong interest in the economic vitality, conservation and public enjoyment of the countryside. We have maintained dialogue with MAFF regarding the future development of rural tourism policy, particularly with regard to farm diversification and the implementation of the European Commission's proposed Rural Development Regulation. We are also liaising with MAFF and others regarding the preparations for the Tourism Summit in March 2000, and the forthcoming Rural White Paper.

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment he has made of the relationship of the value of tourism to the holding of major sporting events. [96013]

Janet Anderson: A 1997 study by the UK, English and Scottish Sports Councils examined the economic impact of six major sporting events throughout the UK. It concluded that much of the additional expenditure earned by these events was contributed by tourists, in addition to the expenditure by competitors and officials themselves.

The Government's tourism strategy, "Tomorrow's Tourism", pointed to the boost given by Euro '96 to UK tourism and underlined our commitment to bringing major international sporting events to this country. That is why I have agreed with my hon. Friend the Minister for Sport that the British Tourist Authority will produce a sports tourism strategy by the end of this year to complement the Government's forthcoming sports strategy and to help to maximise the tourism benefits accruing from major sporting events in the UK.

Accommodation Rating System

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans he has to encourage the extension of the new accommodation rating system to the whole of the UK. [95905]

Janet Anderson: My immediate priority is to ensure that the new system in England is successful in raising quality standards and meeting consumer expectations. However, we are approaching the Scottish and Welsh Administrations following the report of the Scottish Affairs Committee to look again together at our respective schemes, the differences between them and the scope for arriving at common standards.

Drugs and Sport

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions has he had with the National Drugs Co-ordinator about drugs and sport. [95906]

Kate Hoey: I have had useful discussion on the issue of drugs in sport with the National Drugs Co-ordinator and will continue to work closely with him and others on this important matter.

The Permanent Secretary of the DCMS met recently with Keith Hellawell and General Barry McCaffrey, the Director of the White House National Drug Control Policy, and had fruitful discussions on the issue of doping in sport. Officials from this Department will be meeting with officials from the Anti Drug Co-ordination Unit and Sport England in the near future to discuss further how we can promote the role of sport in this area.

Trafalgar Square

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when he expects to make an announcement about what will stand on the vacant plinth in Trafalgar square. [95907]

Mr. Alan Howarth: An advisory group has been set up under the chairmanship of Sir John Mortimer to advise my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State on the future of the vacant plinth in Trafalgar square. The group is expected to make its recommendations during the spring of next year.

Internet

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what evaluation the Creative Task Force has made of the impact of the internet; and if he will make a statement. [95908]

Janet Anderson: The Creative Industries Task Force has set up an inquiry to examine the impact of the internet on the following creative industry sectors: radio, design, advertising, newspaper and magazine publishing, and the cultural industries (literature, performing arts, fine art). This work is in addition to initiatives taken by other Government Departments with other parts of the creative industries.

The aims of the inquiry are:

to identify the opportunities, threats and barriers to growth which the internet brings for creative SMEs in these sectors;

to consider the future environment and developments in technology and infrastructure to gauge how SMEs in these sectors can move to anticipate and exploit the opportunities that arise; and to ensure that use of the internet in these sectors (by consumers, businesses and organisations) can be measured and tracked effectively.

The inquiry is chaired by Robert Devereux, a Creative Industries Task Force member.

It will, subject to Creative Industries Task Force approval, be published by Spring 2000 and will include recommendations to Government and others on actions to be pursued.

Hotel Charges Group

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when he expects the Hotel Charges Group to present its findings; and if its report will be made public. [95899]

Janet Anderson: The Tourism Consumer Group has been asked to concentrate initially on five issues: the clarity of information on hotel charges and prices in general; the clarity of charges for telephones in hotel bedrooms; the imposition of single person supplements, and the quality of accommodation for single occupants; how the industry handles customer complaints; and whether the Tourism (Sleeping Accommodation Price Display) Order 1977 now requires updating.

I expect the Group to make recommendations on these subjects in good time for the inaugural Tourism Summit next year. Its recommendations will be made public.

UK European Capital of Culture

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport who will determine the criteria for choosing the UK's European Capital of Culture; and by whom the decision will be made. [95904]

Mr. Alan Howarth: The selection criteria for the UK's European Capital of Culture will be determined by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State, in consultation with ministerial colleagues. An announcement will be made in due course. The UK's nomination for the European Capital of Culture will be formally approved by the Council of Ministers and the European Parliament.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Disability Living Allowance

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many people in the West Midlands area are currently on the waiting list for the processing of their disability living allowance claims; [96040]

(2) what is the current length of time taken to process disability living allowance claims; and if he will make a statement. [96039]

Mr. Bayley: The administration of Disability Living Allowance is a matter for Peter Mathison, Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Ms Joan Walley, dated 1 November 1999:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions. You asked how many people in the West Midlands area are currently on the waiting list for the processing of their Disability Living Allowance (DLA) claims and what is the current length of time taken to process DLA claims.

The Benefits Agency (BA) do not keep data in the requested format. However, we do have data relating to the Disability Benefits Centre (DBC) which includes the West Midlands.

At 22 October 1999, the number of new DLA claims awaiting processing by Midlands DBC is 9,433.

At 30 September 1999, the current national average time taken to process DLA claims is 38.72 days for new claims against the BA target for clearing new claims of 85% in 53 days. For claims made under the special rules, that is, for those people who have a life expectancy of six months or less, the average clearance time is 7.43 days against BA target of 80% in 10 days.

I hope this is helpful.

Equal Opportunities

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he (a) has established and (b) published a baseline for policy appraisal against which to measure progress on Equal Treatment. [94860]

Angela Eagle: We are committed to ensuring that its policies are fair and inclusive, and focus on public service users, not providers. This aim is contained in guidance (published in 1998) which helps Departments consider the impact of their policies on gender, ethnicity and disability. In addition to considering impact, the guidance encourages consultation with women's groups and others where appropriate and action to deal with any differential impact if this appears necessary.

In July 1998 this Department published our policy appraisal "Women and Social Security" which analysed how women's roles have changed since the inception of the Social Security system and what we have done and need to do to meet those changed needs. We also apply the principles described in the Equal Treatment guidance in developing our policies.

Jobseeker's Allowance

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what representations he has received (a) on the 48 hour rule for claimants of Jobseeker's Allowance and (b) on the treatment of expenses payments to claimants who are doing voluntary work; and if he will make a statement. [96095]

Angela Eagle: We have received a number of representations, generally, and in connection with the Social Exclusion Unit's Policy Action Team on Community Self-Help, on both the 48 hour rule and the treatment of volunteers' expenses in Jobseeker's Allowance.

We recognise that voluntary work can play a significant role in preparing individuals to enter work, particularly those who have been out of the labour market for some time. Officials from this Department meet regularly with officials from the Department for Education and Employment and the voluntary sector to see what practical steps can be taken to encourage volunteering. Examples of changes that have been made as a result of these discussions are revised guidance to operational staff and an information poster promoting volunteering for public display in all jobcentres.

Any changes to the benefits system must be in line with our wider welfare to work initiative which has work at its centre and envisages full participation in the labour market for those who are able to do so.

Child Support Agency

Miss Kirkbride: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many parents with care will receive less money than their present maintenance assessment under the Government's new formula for the CSA. [96564]

Angela Eagle: I refer the hon. Member to the written answer I gave to the hon. Member for Altrincham and Sale, West (Mr. Brady) on 28 October 1999, Official Report, columns 957–58.

Redundancy Payments

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to review the treatment of redundancy payments which have been promised but not yet been received when assessing entitlement for means-tested benefits. [96591]

Angela Eagle: I announced in the House on 25 October 1999, Official Report, column 698, that we intend to bring forward regulations at the earliest opportunity to ensure that, in future, Jobseeker's Allowance and Income Support will not be refused because of earnings owed to people when their job ends. This will apply whether or not the employer is insolvent.

Housing Benefit, Council Tax Benefit and Working Families Tax Credit are not affected by unpaid redundancy payments.

Departmental Asset Sales

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the assets sold by his Department and their value, item by item, in each year from 1991–92 to 1998–99; and if he will estimate the value of asset sales planned to be made in 1999–2000 and 2000–01. [96276]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 29 October 1999]: I refer the hon. Member to the written answer the then Minister of State gave the hon. Member for Gordon (Mr. Bruce) on 16 February 1999, Official Report, column 672. During the period 1 April 1991 and 30 November 1997 there were no major asset sales. Details of minor asset sales during this period have not been collected on the grounds of disproportionate cost. There have been no major asset sales since January 1999 and none are planned for the remainder of 1999–2000 or during 2000–01.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what provision his Department has made for the payment of social security benefits to asylum seekers during the financial year 2000–01; [96943]

(2) how much was paid in social security benefits to asylum seekers in each financial year since 31 March 1992; [96941]

(3) what is his estimate of the amount paid in social security benefits to asylum seekers so far during 1999–2000 and his estimate of the likely total of such expenditure for the entire financial year 1999–2000. [96942]

Mr. Bayley: The full details of the transitional arrangements for those asylum seekers who are receiving Social Security benefits when the new support arrangements are introduced in April 2000 have yet to be finalised. However, an asylum seeker receiving benefit will continue to receive benefit until a relevant change of circumstances, such as a negative decision on their asylum application. If an asylum seeker is refused either asylum or exceptional leave prior to April 2000 he will be able to apply to a Local Authority for support under the interim arrangements provided for in the Bill. An asylum seeker refused asylum or exceptional leave after 1 April 2000 will be able to apply for support to the Home Office's Asylum Support Directorate.

We will bring forward our detailed proposals for the transitional arrangements shortly.

Estimates for 1992–93 expenditure are not available. Such information as is available is in the table.

Asylum seekers—estimated annual expenditure, Great Britain

£ million

Year	Total estimated annual expenditure	Income Support and Jobseeker's Allowance (IB)	Housing Benefit	Council Tax Benefit
1993–94	340	160	175	5
1994–95	360	180	175	5
1995–96	420	205	205	10
1996–97	400	195	195	10
1997–98	305	150	145	10
1998–99	285	150	125	10

Notes:

1. Estimated annual expenditure figures are rounded to the nearest five million pounds. Figures may not sum due to rounding.
2. Estimates for Income Support February 1997 onwards will include a number of non-asylum seekers which receive Urgent Case Payments for other reasons.
3. Annual expenditure figures for Income Support have been based on an average of four quarters for the relevant financial year, using number of cases and average weekly amounts.
4. Expenditure figures for Housing Benefit are estimates and have been calculated using the Housing Benefit Management Information System 1 per cent. sample and Departmental Reports. Estimates are based only on cases recorded on the Income Support Quarterly Statistical Enquiry as being asylum seekers. They therefore exclude other claimants in receipt of Urgent Case Payments who may in fact be asylum seekers, but are not identified as such and they exclude any asylum seekers in receipt of Housing Benefit who are not in receipt of Income Support, although the number of these cases is thought to be very small.
5. Figures for Housing Benefit and Council Tax Benefit 1993–94 to 1997–98 are actual out-turns and 1998–99 figures are estimated out-turns.

Source:

1. Income Support Statistics Quarterly Enquiries, May 1993 to February 1999.
2. Jobseeker's Allowance Statistics Quarterly Enquiries, May 1997 to February 1999.
3. Housing Benefit Management Information System, annual 1 per cent. sample of claimants in receipt of Income Support, at the end of May in each year given.
4. Departmental Report.

The amount paid in Social Security benefits to asylum seekers is dependent on various factors including asylum applications intake, asylum decisions, and the size of the asylum backlog of outstanding cases. It is estimated that the cost of benefits for asylum seekers between April 1999 and September 1999 inclusive is in the range of £120 million to £150 million.

We estimate that the total cost of benefits for asylum seekers in 1999–2000 will be in the range of £215-£295 million.

Departmental Accounts

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what methods of depreciation his Department will apply in the current financial year to fixed assets in the preparation of departmental resource accounting balance sheets. [96910]

Mr. Rooker: The Department depreciates fixed assets in accordance with Statement of Standard Accounting Practise (SSAP) 12 and HM Treasury's Resource Accounting Manual. Depreciation is provided on all tangible fixed assets, using the straight line method, at rates calculated to write off, in equal instalments, the current replacement cost (less any estimated residual value) of each asset over the expected useful life. Fixed assets are depreciated from the month following acquisition. No depreciation is charged in the month of disposal.

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his oral answer of 25 October 1999, Official Report, column 693, if he will give the sources underlying his statement regarding the proportion of incapacity benefit recipients with occupational pensions who are in the top income brackets; and if he is referring to individual or household income. [96841]

Mr. Bayley [holding answer 1 November 1999]: The information referred to was based on equivalised household income data from the Department's Households Below Average Income (HBAI) series, the source for which was the Family Resources Survey 1996–97.

Stakeholder Pensions

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement regarding his proposals to abolish carry-forward and carry-back in respect of the stakeholder pension. [96895]

Miss Melanie Johnson: I have been asked to reply.

The proposal to remove the carry-forward and carry-back facility forms part of the current public consultations on stakeholder pensions. We will announce our intentions when we have considered the responses to the consultation.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Departmental Asset Sales

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list the assets sold by the Lord Chancellor's Department and its agencies, and their value, in each year from 1991–92 to 1998–99; and if he will estimate the value of asset sales planned to be made in the years 1999–2000 and 2000–01. [96406]

Jane Kennedy: Details of the proceeds from major asset sales (which are all property) during the periods 1991–92 to 1998–99 in respect of the Department and its agencies are listed in the table together with forecast sales for 1999–2001. The table does not include the sale of magistrates court buildings as these are the responsibility of the local authority as owners, nor does it include the Department's Executive Non Departmental Public Body. Minor and routine other sales are also excluded because they are relatively insignificant.

County Courts

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what representations he has received concerning the proposed closure of Chepstow and Monmouth county courts. [96534]

Jane Kennedy: To date, 31 representations have been received on the proposal to close Monmouth county court, of which 29 objected to the proposal. There have been 22 representations received on the proposal to close Chepstow county court, of which 20 objected to the proposal.

Public Record Office

Mr. John M. Taylor: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what statutory duties the Keeper of Public Records has in respect of facilities for inspecting and obtaining copies of records in the Public Record Office; how many applications the Keeper has received since May 1997 from members of the public to inspect and copy the decennial census returns for England and Wales for (a) 1901 and (b) 1911; and how she responded to those applications. [96457]

Mr. Lock: The statutory duties of the Keeper of Public Records in respect of facilities for inspecting and obtaining copies of records in the Public Record Office are laid down in section 5 of the Public Records Act, 1958, as amended. Subsection 3 of that section provides that, subject to certain exceptions,

> "it shall be the duty of the Keeper of Public Records to arrange that reasonable facilities are available to the public for inspecting and obtaining copies of public records in the Public Record Office."

The Public Record Office does not keep a record of applications from members of the public to inspect and copy the decennial census returns for England and Wales for 1901 and 1911. Such applications are referred to the Office for National Statistics, which has custody of the 1901 and 1911 census returns.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

EU Environmental Impact Assessment Directive

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what is the planned time-scale for implementation of the EU Environmental Impact Assessment Directive on uncultivated land and semi-natural areas in England; [93735]

(2) what measures he plans to prevent pre-emptive ploughing of uncultivated and semi-natural land prior to the implementation of the EU Environmental Impact Assessment Directive; and if he will make a statement. [93734]

Mr. Morley: The Government are fully aware of the need to meet EU obligations arising from the EIA Directive. However, important questions which seek to clarify the exact nature of those obligations are currently being addressed by the European Court of Justice. These may well affect the preparatory work already carried out in close consultation with the statutory environmental agencies and other Agriculture Departments.

I share concern about the risk that some pre-emptive action might be taken during the necessary public consultation period. However, there can be no question of introducing an implementation regime without consulting representatives of those who will be directly affected by it, as well as conservation and other important public interests.

Beef (School Menus)

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what measures he is taking to encourage local education authorities to provide British beef on school menus; and if he will make a statement. [93716]

Ms Quin: Ultimately it is for Local Authorities themselves to decide whether or not to have beef, or indeed any other food products, on school menus. Nevertheless, my right hon. Friend the Minister has recently written to all Local Education Authorities setting out the case for British beef. A copy of this letter has been placed in the Library of the House.

Oral Statements

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list (a) the reports published by his Department and its associated bodies, (b) the reports received from bodies set up by his Department, (c) the decisions his Department has taken and (d) events in the UK and elsewhere, since 27 July, which satisfied the criteria he uses for deciding whether to apply to make oral statements to the House when the House is sitting. [93977]

Mr. Nick Brown: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the President of the Council on 19 October 1999, Official Report, column 429.

On 20 September I announced a support package for farmers. The full text of my announcement was made available by MAFF news release.

Glyphosate

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what data he has collated on the effects of glyphosate used as a herbicide; what assessment he has made of recent research studies carried out by EU advisors; and if he will make a statement. [94830]

Ms Quin: All pesticides, including those herbicides with glyphosate as their active substance, used here must be approved for the purpose by Ministers in the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions, the Department of Health and the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food. We only approve a pesticide after rigorous evaluation of scientific data to show that it is both efficacious and can be used safely with regard to human health and the environment.

Glyphosate is currently being reviewed by the EU Commission as part of a programme to ensure that all agricultural pesticides currently on the market in the EU meet current standards. An initial assessment of the human and environmental safety of glyphosate undertaken by the German authorities on behalf of the Commission is currently being peer-reviewed by experts from a number of other Member States.

Animal Exports

Mr. Loughton: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he expects to report progress on regulations dealing with the treatment of live animals on the Continent after export from the United Kingdom. [93257]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 21 October 1999]: The rules governing conditions for animals in transit within the EU are set out in Directive 91/628, as amended in 1995.

We have carried out a public consultation on our proposals to review the Welfare of Animals (Transport) Order 1997, which implements the Directive on our territory. The deadline for comment was 8 October, and we are carefully considering the responses made before deciding how to proceed.

Any amendment to the fundamental requirements about the conditions to be provided for animals in transit within the EU will require an amendment to the Directive itself. The Directive contains a requirement for the European Commission to initiate a review during 1999 and, if necessary, to bring forward proposals to revise the Directive. We attach importance to this review, and look to the Commission to bring it forward.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to revise the regulations for animal exports relating to conditions in transit during overland transport in Europe. [96527]

Mr. Morley: The rules governing conditions for animals in transit within the EU are set out in Directive 91/628, as amended in 1995.

We have carried out a public consultation on our proposals to review the Welfare of Animals (Transport) Order 1997, which implements the Directive on our territory. The deadline for comment was 8 October, and we are carefully considering the responses made before deciding how to proceed.

Any amendment of the fundamental requirements about the conditions to be provided for animals in transit within the EU will require an amendment to the Directive itself. The Directive contains a requirement for the European Commission to initiate a review during 1999 and, if necessary, to bring forward proposals to revise the Directive. We attach importance to this review, and look to the Commission to bring it forward.

Milk Marque

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will permit Milk Marque to continue to sell surplus produce to (a) Northern Ireland and (b) the Netherlands. [95788]

Ms Quin: Following publication of the Monopolies and Mergers Commission report on the supply in Great Britain of raw cows' milk, this is a matter for the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry and the competition authorities. I have no locus in this matter. Trade within the EU is allowed subject to compliance with competition and other rules.

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of the impact of his proposals regarding Milk Marque on the price paid to farmers for the milk they produce; and if he will make a statement. [96603]

Ms Quin [holding answer 1 November 1999]: My right hon. Friend the Minister has made no proposals regarding Milk Marque. There should not be an adverse effect on prices of Milk Marque's own action taken in response to the report of the Monopolies and Mergers Commission and the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry's response to it.

Sheep

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will estimate the size of the sheep flock in Cumbria (a) at present and (b) in each of the last five years. [95749]

Ms Quin: The figures for the sheep breeding flock and all sheep and lambs in Cumbria are given for the period from June 1993 to June 1998.

	Sheep breeding flock	Total sheep and lambs
June 1993	1,271,741	2,695,724
June 1994	1,267,248	2,677,013
June 1995	1,253,766	2,663,066
June 1996	1,237,833	2,621,297
June 1997	1,262,823	2,692,223
June 1998	1,301,724	2,807,546

Notes:

The figures are taken from the June Agricultural and Horticultural Census. The data relate to main holdings only.

County level figures for June 1999 are not yet available. They will be published on the MAFF website and can be found by selecting 'Statistics'. 'Publications', 'June 1999 Census analyses' and then 'Regions and Counties—Livestock: Sheep'.

BSE Inquiry

Dan Norris: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the total cost to date of the BSE inquiry. [95529]

Ms Quin: The total cost to date of the BSE Inquiry, including the costs of liaison units and legal support for witnesses from the main departments involved, is approaching £20 million.

British Beef

Miss Geraldine Smith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps the Government plan to take to improve the export market for British beef. [95757]

Ms Quin: We have set up a Beef Export Liaison Group with those involved in beef exports in order to monitor the progress of the Date Based Export Scheme and identify and exploit key export markets. We are also in contact with a number of third countries to obtain export clearance.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish the monthly figures for the export of British beef, by country of destination, since the formal lifting of the ban on exports. [96294]

Ms Quin [holding answer 29 October 1999]: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Minister to my hon. Friend for Clwyd, South (Mr. Jones) on 21 October 1999, Official Report, columns 570–71.

Dairy Farmers

Miss Geraldine Smith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the Government help available for dairy farmers. [95761]

Ms Quin: Dairy farmers receive help from the CAP dairy regime. They will also benefit from the Government's package of support measures, which includes the suspension of the £7 charge for cattle passports which will be met by Government until 2002–03 at the earliest.

Meat Exports

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what percentage of the meat produced in the UK has been exported during each of the last five years. [96252]

Ms Quin: The information requested is shown in the table.

	Home production of meat [1] (th. tonnes)	Carcase meat exports [2] (th. tonnes)	Live exports [3] (th. tonnes)	Total exports as a % of production
1994	3,756.2	613.2	112.3	19.3
1995	3,840.9	778.5	104.8	23.0
1996	3,596.0	534.5	80.3	17.1
1997	3,682.2	564.7	56.1	16.9
1998[4]	3,784.6	585.3	53.6	16.9

[1] Carcase meat, bacon, ham and poultry meat. Includes the meat equivalent of live exports. Excludes offal.
[2] Expressed in carcase weight equivalent. Excludes exports of preserved or manufactured meat products. May include some re-exports of meat previously imported into the UK.
[3] Meat equivalent of live exports other than pure-bred. Adjusted as necessary for unrecorded trade.
[4] Provisional.

Meat Imports

Miss Geraldine Smith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what measures the Government are taking to ensure that imports of meat are produced under the same food safety and animal welfare standards as British produced meat. [95760]

Ms Quin: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Minister to the hon. Member for Macclesfield (Mr. Winterton) on 21 October 1999, Official Report, column 558.

Fishing Industry

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list those United Kingdom organisations that will be consulted in consequence of Com (99) 382, on closer co-operation with the fishing industry; what Her Majesty's Government's policy was on such closer co-operation; and if he will make a statement. [96501]

Mr. Morley: The proposal in Com (99) 382 on closer dialogue with the fishing industry concerns financial matters arising from the European Commission's reorganisation of its Advisory Committee on Fisheries (ACF) so as to focus on communication and consultation with EC-level rather than national organisations. It will be for the European organisations represented on the ACF to consult as they consider necessary with national organisations in individual member states. Representations on the ACF cover fishermen, fish farmers, processors and wholesalers, trade unions, and consumer, environment and development non-governmental organisations. Representatives of the National Federation of Fishermen's Organisations and the Scottish Fishermen's Federation have been included as Europeche nominees in the plenary committee and working groups of the ACF.

The Government welcome ways of strengthening the dialogue with the industry and broadening the range of activity. Thus I have made clear that consultation at the regional level must be strengthened in parallel with consultation through the ACF.

Decommissioning

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list those countries which are held by the European Commission not to have upheld MAGP IV limits; and if he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government's policy thereon. [96585]

Mr. Morley: The latest available information published by the Commission was in its Annual Report to the Council and to the European Parliament on the results of the multi annual guidance programmes for the fishing fleet at the end of 1997. A copy is in the Library (ref. COM 175/1999). This showed that two countries (France and Netherlands) had failed to meet the objectives of the MAGP III by the end of 1997 and were not on target to meet their objectives for MAGP IV. The report also noted that the status for Italy could not be determined because of a major revision of their fleet register.

Set-aside Payments

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many annual payments to individual farms for set-aside land exceeded (a) £25,000, (b) £100,000, (c) £250,000 and (d) £1,000,000 per annum in each of the past four years. [95817]

Ms Quin [holding answer 28 October 1999]: Set-aside payments under the Arable Area Payments Scheme are made in respect of claims which may include one or more individual farms. Records therefore relate to claims paid rather than numbers of farms. The following is the information requested in respect of the set-aside element of each claim paid by MAFF in 1995–98 (with figures given on a cumulative basis—ie lines (b) to (d) are included in (a) etc.):

Number of payments exceeding	1995	1996	1997	1998
(a) £25,000	673	401	139	111
(b) £100,000	11	12	3	2
(c) £250,000	2	0	0	0
(d) £1,000,000	0	0	0	0

Animal Feed

Miss Geraldine Smith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to introduce legislation to require animal feed containing GM ingredients or derivatives to be labelled. [96209]

Ms Quin [holding answer 28 October 1999]: Legislation on animal feed is harmonised in the EU and the Government cannot therefore take unilateral action on compulsory labelling. This is expected to be covered in a forthcoming Novel Feeds Regulation, which the Minister has been pressing the Commission to bring forward as soon as possible. In the meantime, the Government are exploring the possibility of voluntary national labelling arrangements with the feed trade, farmers and retailers.

Fox Hunting

Mr. Drew: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will examine whether future farm support can be tied to a policy of not allowing hunting on recipients' land. [96293]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 29 October 1999]: The Government's position on hunting was set out in the reply by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister to my hon. Friend the Member for Thurrock (Mr. Mackinlay) on 25 October 1999, Official Report, column 715. For so long as hunting remains legal, there would be no grounds for withholding agricultural support payments from those who allow hunting on their land.

Forest Land

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food further to his answer of 25 October 1999, Official Report, column 714, on forest land, what assessment he has made of the consultation process relating to the sale of Chepstow Park Wood; and if the sale constituted an open sale. [96516]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 29 October 1999]: The subject of this question relates to a matter for the National Assembly of Wales.

Coastal Whaling (Ireland)

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if the Government oppose proposals put forward by the Government of Ireland that would permit coastal whaling; and if he will make a statement; [96336]

(2) if it is Her Majesty's Government's policy to oppose the Irish Government's compromise proposals to allow the resumption of coastal whaling, put to this year's International Whaling Commission; and if he will make a statement. [96334]

Mr. Morley: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to my hon. Friend for Harrow, East (Mr. McNulty) on 9 June 1999, Official Report, columns 348–50.

Fisheries

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) with which EU member states he has discussed the prospect of zonal/regional fisheries management; and what interpretation of this management he has used in these discussions; [96879]

(2) when he last met his opposite numbers in other EU member states to discuss the prospect of zonal or regional management of fisheries waters. [96880]

Mr. Morley: I regularly discuss regional aspects of Common Fisheries Policy management with my opposite numbers in other EU member states. In all those contacts I have made clear the need to enhance the regional dimension of the CFP through increased involvement of the stake holders in the management process; greater focus on management problems on a regional specific fishery basis; closer links between fishermen and scientists; and the ability to act rapidly when confronted with conservation emergencies affecting a particular fishery.

BSE

Mr. Drew: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish the latest scientific evidence on the presence of the BSE prion within (a) the dorsal root ganglia and (b) marrow of cattle. [96297]

Ms Quin [holding answer 29 October 1999]: The results of the BSE pathogenesis study which described the detection of infectivity in dorsal root ganglia and bone marrow of orally infected cattle were reported in the following two articles:

"Preliminary observations on the pathogenesis of experimental bovine spongiform encephalopathy (BSE)": by G.A.H. Wells and others. (The Veterinary Record, 1998/Vol. 142/31/1/1998, pp. 103–106).

"Limited detection of sternal bone marrow infectivity in the clinical phase of experimental bovine spongiform encephalopathy (BSE)": by G.A.H. Wells and others. (The Veterinary Record, 1999/Vol. 144/13/3/1999, pp. 292–294).

There are no new results to report.

Agricultural Competitiveness

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what initiatives his Department is providing to boost the competitiveness of the UK's agriculture industry in Europe. [96259]

Ms Quin: The Government are seeking to assist UK agriculture to be more competitive in Europe on several fronts.

The foundation of a competitive industry must be the macro-economic stability which the Government have achieved and which brings low levels of inflation and interest rates. We have built on this foundation by investing in research and development, pursuing the Government's policy of training, education and lifelong learning, establishing the Food Chain Group earlier this year whose aim is to bring the food chain close together, launching a joint campaign (with the National Farmers' Union (NFU)) to encourage more collaborative marketing, and launching a further joint initiative with the NFU to review regulatory burdens on the industry.

Furthermore, my right hon. Friend announced a substantial package of aid on 20 September which included £150 million of new money for the industry. This included the waiving of specified risk material charges and cattle passport charges until at least 2001/02, and £1 million aimed directly at support for marketing. Most recently, my right hon. Friend announced on 28 October 1999, Official Report, column 1128, that we have secured a further £5 million in marketing aid.

Complementary Veterinary Services

Mr. Drew: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will amend the Veterinary Surgeons Act 1966 in order to allow non-vets to carry out acupuncture and homeopathy on animals. [91992]

Ms Quin [holding answer 21 July 1999]: The authorisation of practitioners of alternative medicine under the Act is limited to the provision of physiotherapy to animals which are under the care of a veterinary surgeon. Such treatment can be authorised only if it is prescribed by that veterinary surgeon. At present, there are no plans to implement further regulatory arrangements recognising or authorising practitioners of alternative medicine to carry out acts of veterinary surgery.

Fishing Safety Grants

Mr. Nicholls: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to the oral answer of 21 October 1999, Official Report, column 564, when he plans to reinstate the fishing safety grants; and if he will make a statement. [95768]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 26 October 1999]: The Government are currently considering the issue of reinstating a scheme of grants for safety equipment for vessels, in particular in the context of any funding available for the programme of structural measures currently under negotiation in the Fisheries Council. As this would be a new scheme, all options are under consideration.

CABINET OFFICE

Millennium Compliance

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what assessment she has made of the warning by the Chief Executive of the National Housing Federation relating to Year 2000 compliance of local authorities' housing benefit systems. [95216]

Mrs. Beckett: I am replying as the responsible Minister. The compliance of local authority systems has been independently assessed by the Audit Commission, with Government Offices in the Regions acting as responsible bodies. This took place as part of Action 2000's National Infrastructure Forum programme of independent assessment, reported on 21 October, when all but a very few UK infrastructure organisations were rated "blue", which means there is no identified risk of material disruption. All sectors are expected to be "blue" by mid November.

I have placed a copy of the report of the Forum, which contains a full account of the assessment process for all these sectors, in the Libraries of the House. Local authorities in England were rated "blue" in this report, which means that as well as having completed their compliance programme, they also have business continuity plans to deal with any unexpected events. Under this assessment, payment of housing benefit should not be at risk.

Government Consultation Document

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what steps she is taking to improve the despatch of Government consultation documents to organisations and individuals requesting them. [96533]

Marjorie Mowlam: Last year we published a guide on the conduct of written consultation exercises setting out best practice for departments and agencies, and we are now evaluating it. In carrying out the evaluation, we will ensure that improving the despatch of consultation documents receives attention. The results of the evaluation will be made public in due course.

TREASURY

Working Families Tax Credit

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the total number of employees who will be eligible for a working families tax credit in 2000–01. [95812]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 26 October 1999]: Excluding families just with self employed workers, about 1.2 million families will be in receipt of the Working Families Tax Credit in 2000–01, the first full year of the credit.

European Investment Bank

Mr. John M. Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if the European Investment Bank is subject to the scrutiny of the European Union's Court of Auditors; and if he will make a statement. [96036]

Miss Melanie Johnson: As an autonomous institution, the EIB is not accountable to the Court of Auditors in respect of its own resources. Under its Statute the Bank is accountable to its own governing bodies, including an independent Audit Committee which reports directly to the Board of Governors (comprised of Finance Ministers of the member states). The Bank's accounts are submitted to internal and external auditors.

In respect of activities which the EIB carries out using Community Budgetary resources, the Bank is subject to the Court of Auditors in accordance with Article 248 of the EC Treaty.

EU Finance Ministers

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if the withholding tax was discussed at the meeting of EU Finance Ministers on 13 and 14 October; what views Her Majesty's Government expressed thereon; when the withholding tax will next be discussed by EU Finance Ministers; and what support there has been for his proposal to exempt the eurobond market from the tax; [96503]

(2) what matters were discussed at the meeting of EU Finance Ministers on 13 and 14 October; if he will make a statement thereon; when tax matters will next be discussed by EU Finance Ministers; and if he will list the tax matters concerned. [96477]

Dawn Primarolo: There was no meeting of EU Finance Ministers on 13 and 14 October.

Demography

Mr. Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the numbers of people of working age as a percentage of those over the state retirement age for each of the last 20 years. [96764]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Frank Field, dated 2 November 1999:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your recent parliamentary question on the numbers and percentage of workers in firms employed in different size bands.

The information requested is available from the Annual Employment Survey (AES) at September 1997 (latest available date) for the size bands shown.

Employee Jobs[1] at September 1997, Great Britain

	Thousand	Percentage
Size band 1–10	4,528	20
Size band 11–49	5,787	26
Size band 50–99	2,695	12
Size band 100 and over	9,523	42

[1] Figures exclude Agriculture as the way that information is supplied would distort the size band analysis

Business Taxation

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the work of the EU Working Group on the Code of Conduct for Business Taxation since July; and if he will list the measures currently under consideration to tackle harmful tax competition. [96506]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the right hon. Member for Horsham (Mr. Maude) on 13 July 1999, Official Report, column 182.

Valuation Office Agency

Mr. Caplin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the five-yearly review of the Valuation Office Agency will commence. [97132]

Dawn Primarolo: The review of the Agency status of the Valuation Office will commence on 2 November 1999. The performance of the Valuation Office will be evaluated and its activities will be subjected to the normal prior option tests set out in the 1993 "Next Steps Review" (Cm 2430). The review will also take account of the recommendations made by the Treasury Sub-Committee in their report published on 28 October 1999.

The review team would welcome comments and contributions from those with an interest in the Valuation Office and its work. People should send their review by 31 January 2000 to:

VAT (Italy)

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what action he has taken to ensure that Italy meets its obligations under the VAT Directive requiring each EU member state to refund VAT to businesses in other EU countries; and if he will make a statement. [96702]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 1 November 1999]: It is for the European Commission to ensure that member states meet their obligations under EU Directives. However, the UK Permanent Representation to the EU has made representations to the Commission on behalf of five UK businesses about delays in obtaining refunds from Italy. The Embassy in Rome has also made inquiries of the Italian authorities on behalf of UK businesses.

EU Budget

Mr. Gill: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate for each member state of the EU (a) net and gross contributions to the EU Budget for the last year for which figures are available, including net receipts and (b) the break down of net and gross contributions by household and population. [97091]

Miss Melanie Johnson: 1997 is the latest year for which information about member states' contributions and receipts is available. The information requested, in respect of that year, is set out in the table. The amounts shown are in European Currency Units, the unit of account for the EC Budget.

Notes:

1. The Court of Auditors uses ecu figures, the unit of account for the EC Budget.
2. Gross contribution figures are after account has been taken of the UK's abatement (including corrections in respect of earlier years) and for adjustments to VAT and GNP-based contributions in respect of earlier years.
3. Receipts figures include European Commission payments made direct to the member state's private sector.
4. The Court of Auditors Report does not allocate all Community spending to the member states so that the receipts figures in the table may not represent the full amount of expenditure by the Commission in each member state. Consequently the figures for net contributions/net benefits in the table are likely only to be indicative of the amount of member states' net positions. For example, if all administrative expenditure were allocated to the country in which it is paid, the net position of Belgium and Luxembourg would be substantially improved.

Street Children

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will extend the Millennium Gift Aid scheme to all donations towards street children projects in whatever country those children live. [96842]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 1 November 1999]: The Millennium Gift Aid scheme was introduced in 1998 specifically to provide tax relief for donations to UK charities for educational and anti-poverty projects in the world's poorest countries. In April 1999, the scheme was extended to help refugees from Kosovo, but the Government has no plans to extend the scheme further. Some of the street children will be in countries eligible for MGA relief. UK charities working in other countries can benefit from other tax reliefs available for charitable giving, such as the Gift Aid scheme.

National Insurance Fund

Mr. Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will add an additional entry to Table 5.5 of the Government Actuary's report National Insurance Fund Long Term Financial Estimates (Cm 4446) giving the surplus to the National Insurance Fund for each of the years there listed if Class 1 and all other contribution rates are held constant. [96243]

Dawn Primarolo: Reliable estimates could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Russia

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much money (a) the UK and (b) the international community have provided overall to Russia for economic assistance over the past five years; what assessment he has made of the proportion misappropriated or not used for the purpose for which it was intended; and if he will make a statement. [94806]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Since the beginning of 1995, the international community has provided the following loan finance (net of repayments over the period) through the International Financial Institutions (IFIs): £8.8 billion through the IMF, £4.0 billion through the World Bank, and £728 million through the EBRD; the IFIs have also provided technical assistance. In August, the Paris Club rescheduled $8.1 billion of Russia's Soviet-era debts. The EU has also provided technical assistance to Russia through its TACIS programme, and food aid.

The UK has made no direct loans to Russia. Since the beginning of 1995, the UK has made £592 million of export credit guarantees available to British firms doing business with Russia, on which Russia is current with repayments. The UK has made technical assistance and humanitarian aid available to Russia. Other countries have also provided bilateral assistance.

There is no evidence that any IMF or World Bank funds have been misappropriated. An investigation by PricewaterhouseCoopers discovered that an overseas subsidiary of the Central Bank of Russia (CBR) had used some of its foreign reserves to guarantee loans to commercial banks and buy Russian Government debt in breach of IMF rules and without the IMF's knowledge. Given this misuse of IMF resources, and the seriousness of the allegations of misappropriation of IMF and World Bank funds, G7 Finance Ministers' Statement of 25 September said:

"... we emphasised the critical need for intensified efforts to combat corruption in Russia and money laundering and the importance of adequate safeguards to ensure that funds provided by the international financial institutions are used for their intended purpose ... IMF financing will be disbursed into an SDR account for the purpose of repaying Russia's obligations to the Fund. Furthermore, we agreed that the CBR, prior to disbursement of the next tranche of the SBA, should take steps identified by the IMF to improve internal controls and to initiate quarterly audits of CBR reserve management ... In the case of the World Bank, we welcomed the new safeguards, involving greater control and auditing of World Bank funds, introduced in June, and called on the World Bank to work with Russia on additional safeguards ..."

There is no evidence the EBRD funds were used for a purpose other than that intended at the time of disbursement. A portfolio review conducted by the EBRD, and further investigations carried out by its External Auditor, have satisfied the Bank that disbursements were applied as intended. One case of contract failure involving UK export credit guarantees is being investigated, on which I cannot comment at this stage.

As regards EU assistance, on 16 September, Neil Kinnock made a Commission statement on Russia:

"... Community assistance is, as this House will know, primarily delivered through the TACIS programme which is centraliy managed from Brussels. The funds concerned are predominantly used to pay EU firms to provide technical expertise and advice for Russia. Only a very small proportion of the funds therefore goes to Russia ... the Community food supply programme for Russia, that was launched earlier this year, is subject to very close monitoring which involves, amongst other things, checks on the use of the funds generated from the sale of relevant food products on local markets. Moreover, Russia does not currently receive Community loans, and the lending mandate of the European Investment Bank for countries outside the EU does not extend to Russia ..."

IR35

Ms Ward: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what progress is being made on the implementation of IR35; and what recent meetings he has had with business on the issue. [94883]

Dawn Primarolo: As the Minister in the lead on this measure, I have spoken with a number of people during the course of the consultation period and have received many written representations. Most representative bodies agreed that the Government was right to tackle the problem of avoidance of tax and National Insurance Contributions (NICs) by using personal service companies.

In the light of feedback received, we have modified some of the details of the mechanism set out in the Inland Revenue's original information pack. Revised proposals were published on 23 September in the Inland Revenue Press Release, "Personal Services Provided through Intermediaries—Preventing Avoidance, Preserving Flexibility".

Tax

Mr. Hilary Benn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the cost of sending every income tax-payer a statement of what the Government takes in tax and what it spends with their annual notice of coding. [96181]

Dawn Primarolo: The cost would depend on the nature of the statement and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Financial Services Authority

Mr. Colman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will require the Financial Services Authority as the new competent authority for listing to ensure that questions of environmental risk are in future contained in all listing particulars as recommended by the Advisory Committee on Business and the Environment. [96896]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The London Stock Exchange, as Competent Authority, has in the last two years reviewed the statutory requirements to report provisions and disclose contingent liabilities and the accounting rules for disclosure of environmental risks. These do require companies to address, among other things, their environmental liabilities. But, in the absence of clear, recognised disclosure standards, it has not been considered appropriate to introduce a listing rule specifically covering environmental risks. The Financial Services Authority may wish to consider the position afresh when it becomes the Competent Authority, but this will be for the Financial Services Authority to decide.

Construction Workers

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the impact of the tax changes which relate to the status of self-employed workers in the construction industry; and if he will make a statement. [96316]

Dawn Primarolo: The tax changes brought in by the new Construction Industry Scheme do not affect whether a person is employed or self-employed within the industry. Both the old and the new scheme work in a broadly similar way. Where a contractor makes payments relating to construction operations to a self-employed worker, they must operate the scheme. This means that they must make deductions on account of tax and NICs when making payments to subcontractors who do not qualify under the rules to be paid gross. The changes to the scheme are to control tax evasion.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Railways

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the level of public investment in each of the past five years in new rolling stock for the railway systems; and if he will make a statement on the future of the Northern Ireland Railway Network. [94837]

Mr. George Howarth: The level of investment in new rolling stock in each of the past five years is detailed in the table (the information is provided on a financial year basis).

Year	£
1994–95	5,279,774.36
1996–96	4,468,495.88
1996–97	5,700,559.34
1997–98	1,529,794.75
1998–99	173,394.36

Seventy-five per cent. of the investment was met from European Structural Funds.

Government are conscious of the need to invest in public transport infrastructure and rail rolling stock. The Northern Ireland Transport Policy Statement, 'Moving Forward', confirmed the need for further investment in the railways and highlighted that the possible use of Public Private Partnerships (PPPs) to secure investment in provision of public transport services would be explored. To that end, and given the capital costs involved, the Government are currently considering the possible use of PPPs for the replacement of rolling stock and rail infrastructure.

Equal Opportunities

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if an action plan for increasing the representation of women in public life has been (a) prepared by his Department and (b) published since November 1998. [94841]

Mr. Ingram: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to her by my right hon. Friend the Minister for the Cabinet Office on 25 October 1999, Official Report, column 682.

Housing

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans his Department has to renovate the Housing Executive dwellings at Braeside Gardens, Killybagh, County Down. [94836]

Mr. George Howarth: This is a matter for the Northern Ireland Housing Executive but I am advised by its Chief Executive that Braeside Gardens forms part of a scheme for multi element improvements, currently planned to commence in May 2000.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list for each of the last 10 years the number of dwellings erected in each council area in Northern Ireland by (a) the private sector, (b) the Housing Executive and (c) housing associations. [94832]

Mr. George Howarth [holding answer 21 October 1999]: The information requested is as follows. Annexes A-C list, for each of the years 1989–1998, the number of new dwellings started in each district council area in Northern Ireland by the private sector (Annex A), the Northern Ireland Housing Executive (Annex B) and housing associations (Annex C). In addition, Annex D lists, for the same period, the total number of new dwellings started in each district area.

Pig Industry

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what new measures of support for the pig industry were introduced during the past six months; what assessment he has made of the (i) current situation and (ii) situation one year ago in the pig industry; and if he will make a statement. [94824]

Mr. George Howarth: No new measures of support for the pig industry have been introduced during the past six months.

Government are unable to directly aid the sector as such assistance would be in breach of European Union State Aid rules.

Government are very aware of the crisis in the pig industry. Although returns to pig producers have increased over the past year they still do not cover production costs.

Government will continue to liaise closely with the industry and the EU Commission to seek solutions, compatible with EU State Aid rules, to the current difficulties. In the interim every effort will be made to ensure that United Kingdom retailers and consumers fully appreciate the excellent quality and high welfare standards of British produced pigs.

BSE

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the incidence of BSE in cattle in each of the past five years; how many cases of BSE have been identified in 1999 to date; and if he will make a statement on the impact of Northern Ireland beef products into the European Union. [94838]

Mr. George Howarth: The information requested in relation to the incidence of BSE in Northern Ireland is provided in the table.

Apart from a relatively small amount of beef exported under the Export Certified Herds Scheme in the second half of 1998 and the first half of 1999 there have been no exports of Northern Ireland beef since the export ban on UK beef was imposed in March 1996.

EU Agriculture Council

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the Minister responsible for Northern Ireland agriculture last attended a meeting of the European Union Council of Ministers in Brussels; and if he will make a statement on the contribution of his Department to European Union agriculture policy decisions. [95075]

Mr. George Howarth: My hon. Friend Lord Dubs, the Minister responsible for agriculture in Northern Ireland, last attended the EU Council of Agriculture Ministers on 5 March 1999 during the final stages of the negotiations on the Agenda 2000 reform of the Common Agricultural Policy (CAP). He also attended the Fisheries Council meeting on 17–18 December 1998.

The Department of Agriculture for Northern Ireland plays a full and active role in the establishment of the UK's position on relevant EU agricultural policy issues. Decisions on EU agricultural policy are, of course, beyond the remit of a single member state and reflect the collective position of all fifteen members of the European Union. Nevertheless, recent examples of the successful representation of Northern Ireland interests in the EU Council of Ministers include the introduction of the Export Certified Herd Scheme in June 1998 and the special allocation of additional milk quota to Northern Ireland as part of the Agenda 2000 agreement on CAP reform, neither of which was replicated in other parts of the UK.

The issues arising at each Agriculture Council meeting are discussed in advance by senior officials of the four UK Agriculture Departments. My right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food also meets his agriculture Ministerial colleagues before each Council meeting.

Gay Men

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much of the money ring-fenced by the Northern Ireland health boards to provide services for gay men has been spent on such services since the institution of such ring-fencing; what the figures are for each health board; and if he will make a statement. [96616]

Mr. George Howarth: Health and Social Services Boards' allocations are not ring-fenced for the provision of services for gay men. It is for individual boards to use their funds to respond to the health needs of their local populations, including gay men.

PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

Millennium Compliance

Miss McIntosh: To ask the President of the Council what representations she has received about the safety of air travel on 1 January 2000. [96319]

Mrs. Beckett: I have received no representations about the safety of air travel on 1 January 2000.

As part of Action 2000's work on key sectors of the national infrastructure, the latest independent assessments show that there is no risk of material disruption to national air traffic control systems, airports and airlines as a result of the Millennium Bug.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Corporate Manslaughter

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to review the law of corporate manslaughter as it affects incidents in the transport sector. [95983]

Mr. Charles Clarke [holding answer 27 October 1999]: I have been asked to reply.

We are considering what action to take in the light of the Law Commission's report on Involuntary Manslaughter which includes proposals in relation to corporate manslaughter. We will make our proposals known shortly.

Parish Councils

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on his plans for the system of parish councils. [96465]

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has for (a) reducing and (b) increasing the powers, responsibilities or statutory roles of parish councils; and if he will make a statement. [96417]

Ms Beverley Hughes: I refer the hon. Members to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Banbury (Mr. Baldry) on 25 October 1999, Official Report, column 677.

Rail Safety

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received on rail safety following the Paddington rail disaster; and if he will make a statement on the safety measures to be taken and who will be responsible for implementing them. [96545]

Mr. Hill: Ministers have received a large number of representations from many quarters. My right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister announced measures being taken to the House on 19 October 1999, Official Report, columns 266–69. Further recommendations will no doubt emerge from the Public Inquiry into this disaster.

In addition, on 25 October my right hon. Friend agreed an immediate plan with rail industry leaders covering further measures to improve safety, namely: consistent standards of driver training; a nationwide independent confidential reporting system; accelerating implementation of the Train Protection Warning System (TPWS) and development of Automatic Train Protection (ATP); immediate investigation of all signals passed at danger (SPADs) to a common standard; urgent action on the 22 Actions required by the HSE for reducing SPADs; and establishing a consistent approach to safety management.

Millennium Compliance

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on progress towards preparing airlines for millennium compliance by 1 January 2000. [96317]

Mr. Mullin: UK airlines are well advanced in their preparations for millennium compliance. All necessary remedial work has been carried out, underpinned by robust contingency plans for the continued safe operation of services over the millennium period. The Civil Aviation Authority has completed assessments of both safety and business continuity systems and has stated that the UK industry is ready for the millennium.

As regards foreign airlines, work is continuing to gather comprehensive information. The emerging global view from the major international aviation organisations is that the aviation industry is on track for compliance. Foreign aircraft are granted a permit to operate in this country only if they comply with international safety standards, which, over the millennium, includes assurance that they carry no Y2k safety related risks.

Water Industry

Mr. Forsythe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions which organisations applied to be designated to recognise persons as approved contractors under clause 1(2)(b) of the Water Supply (Water Fittings) Regulations 1999, what are the criteria for the award and removal of such designation and recognition; and when and with whom he will be consulting on the matter. [96752]

Mr. Mullin: The Water Supply (Water Fittings) Regulations 1999 created, for the first time, the legal concept of an approved contractor in relation to installing water fittings. My officials have discussed the terms of approved contractor schemes with a number of professional and training bodies. The Water Regulations Advisory Committee advise Ministers on these issues. Schemes should be compatible with those to be introduced by the water undertakers under Regulation 1(2)(a). The Water Regulations Advisory Scheme will be consulted accordingly. The Institute of Plumbing have applied to be designated to recognise persons as approved contractors, and officials have held an exploratory discussion with them.

Aarhus Convention

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the procedural changes introduced by his Department and its agencies following the Government's signing of the Aarhus Convention on Access to Environmental Information. [96719]

Mr. Mullin: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to him on 21 July 1999, Official Report, columns 519–20.

The Government continue to take account of the Convention. For example, all Environmental Impact Assessment Regulations and the forthcoming Pollution Prevention Control Regulations are being drafted to implement parts of the Convention.

Air Traffic

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what estimate he has made of the annual growth in air traffic to 2010. [97249]

Mr. Mullin: The Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions 1997 Air Traffic Forecasts forecast international terminal passengers under three growth scenarios; low growth, mid-point growth and high growth. The full results are in the table. New forecasts are expected to be complete by early 2000.

Greater London Authority Bill

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he will provide explanatory notes for the new Clauses and new Schedules added to the Greater London Authority Bill since 5 May. [97111]

Mr. Hill: I am today placing explanatory notes in the Library of the House.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Television Licensing

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans he has to require the TV licensing authorities to run television licences from the precise date when bought rather than the end of the previous month; and if he will make a statement. [96985]

Janet Anderson [holding answer 2 November 1999]: None. As explained in my reply of 27 October 1999, Official Report, columns 861–62, the BBC has statutory responsibility for the administration of the television licensing system and TV Licensing carries out the day to day administration as agent for the Corporation.

BBC

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will ensure that his Department makes every effort to hear representations from employees of the companies and other interested parties about the proposed sale of BBC Resources and BBC Worldwide; and if he will make a statement. [97037]

Janet Anderson: We have received a number of representations from individuals and organisations on the independent review panel's recommendations about BBC Resources and BBC Worldwide. The recommendations are contained in the panel's report on the future funding of the BBC, published for public consultation on 5 August. The closing date for the public consultation was 1 November. We will consider all the panel's recommendations in the light of responses received and hope to reach final decisions around the end of the year.

Millennium Dome

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what measures are being taken to ensure that under-16s do not enter the Dome alone. [95191]

Janet Anderson [holding answer 25 October 1999]: The New Millennium Experience Company (NMEC) aims to ensure that all visitors to the Dome enjoy a safe and exemplary day. The company does not wish to encourage unaccompanied children to travel alone to visit the Dome. The company is also concerned about the general safety of young children on the site. Consequently NMEC will not knowingly sell tickets to, nor generally admit, children under 16 years of age who are not accompanied by an adult. All Millennium Experience ticketing material makes it clear that NMEC reserves the right to refuse entry in these circumstances. NMEC's policy in this respect is similar to that adopted by most major visitor attractions in the UK.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions he has had with the Anti-Terrorist Squad of the Metropolitan Police in relation to security at the Millennium Dome. [95122]

Janet Anderson [holding answer 25 October 1999]: The New Millennium Experience Company has regular discussions with the Metropolitan Police about all aspects of security. By definition, it would not be helpful to reveal the detail of those discussions or the security arrangements implemented as a result. I am satisfied that those arrangements are robust and comprehensive

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many book titles will be sold in the Dome; and how many of these have been (a) commissioned and (b) sponsored by the NMEC. [94691]

Janet Anderson: NMEC is not commissioning or sponsoring books. About 200 general titles will be available at the Dome which relate to the Millennium Experience and Dome content. The company is publishing one book—a guide to the Dome which will be a keepsake of the day for visitors and which will be only available at the Dome. The company has licensed a number of publishers (Booth Clibborn Editions, Dennis Publishing Limited, Dorling Kindersley Limited, including Funfax, Harper Collins Publishers, and Manning Partnership Limited) to produce a portfolio of books and is working with the publishers to develop them. Thirty one books are covered by these licence arrangements and the portfolio caters for all ages and interests. All thirty one will be available at the Dome and on the high street.

Millennium (Sponsorship)

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport which sponsors of the Millennium Experience have signed sponsorship contracts with the New Millennium Experience Company. [95147]

Janet Anderson [holding answer 25 October 1999]: Contractual arrangements have been completed with British Aerospace, British Airports Authority, BT, Camelot, Corporation of London, Ford, GEC, Kodak, Marks and Spencer, McDonald's, Tesco, Wall's and Woolwich. The remaining contractual arrangements are all close to completion. All announced sponsors are irrevocably committed at Board level.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Departmental Publications

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list his Department's spending on official publications since May 1997. [93693]

Mr. Hain: The spending on official publications produced by the publications Section of Information Department from May 1997 was:

Year	£
May 1997 to March 1998	2,062,363.30
April 1998 to March 1999	1,487,125.70
April 1999 to September 1999	641,007.01

The answer totals the cost of Publications for use overseas (£4,190,495) and the two departmental reports produced since May 1997 (£28,871).

Death Penalty (United States)

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many times Ministers and officials of his Department have held meetings with members and officials of the United States Government to discuss the death penalty since 1 November 1998; and if he will list the (a) dates, (b) locations and (c) names of the US members and officials, and their respective departments, at each meeting. [93958]

Mr. Robin Cook: Foreign Office Ministers and officials discuss frequently the death penalty with their US counterparts. At Ministerial level, Baroness Symons most recently raised HMG's opposition to the use of the death penalty in the United States with Harold Koh, Assistant Secretary for Democracy, Human Rights and Labour, US State Department, during her visit to Washington on 25 March.

Parliamentary Questions

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 27 July 1999, Official Report, column 375, concerning KFOR investigations and Hashim Thaci, when he will reply to the hon. Member for Halifax. [96022]

Mr. Vaz: A letter in answer to my hon. Friend's original question was sent on 26 October and placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

UN Security Council Resolution 1,244, which established the UN Mission in Kosovo (UNMIK) and the NATO-led Kosovo force (KFOR), gives UNMIK responsibility for maintaining civil law and order in Kosovo. This includes investigations into alleged crimes.

including inquiries into crimes alleged to have taken place in Kosovo before UNMIK and KFOR's deployment in June 1999.

Questions about specific allegations are therefore for the UNMIK authorities. Anyone seeking to obtain or provide information about alleged crimes should contact UNMIK directly. In the case of possible war crimes, decisions would be made in consultation with the International Criminal Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia (ICTY).

Von Weizsäcker-Dehaene-Simon Group

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what consultations took place with Her Majesty's Government on behalf of the Von Weizsäcker-Dehaene-Simon Group concerning the topics they covered in their recently published documents on Enlargement and Institutional Affairs of the European Union. [96505]

Mr. Vaz: Members of the Group were briefed on the UK's approach to institutional reform. However they sat on the Group in a personal capacity. Consequently the report represents their own views, not those of any national Government.

Burma

Miss Geraldine Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs further to his answer of 21 October 1999, Official Report, column 633, what consular services have been provided to James Mawdsley and his family. [96499]

Mr. Hain: Embassy staff have visited James twice since his arrest and taken him soap, vitamins, food, letters, books and other items. The Embassy and our Consular Division in London have been in close contact with James's family. The Embassy has made numerous requests for permission for his mother to visit him. The Burmese have now agreed to this.

Caucasus

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make it his policy to support proposals for a special conference on security in the Caucasus region under the auspices of the OSCE. [96428]

Mr. Vaz: We are committed to supporting existing efforts to promote security in the Caucasus, including the involvement of the OSCE in helping to resolve the conflicts over Nagorno-Karabakh and South Ossetia and, in support of the UN, over Abkhazia. We expect these issues to be discussed at the OSCE Summit in Istanbul, as well as the situation in the North Caucasus, including Chechnya. We believe there may be a role for the OSCE in seeking a resolution to the conflict in Chechnya. But we are not aware of proposals for a special OSCE conference on security in the Caucasus more broadly.

Chechnya

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the security situation in Chechnya and the Caucasus will be discussed at the OSCE meeting of Heads of State at Istanbul, on 18 to 19 November. [96427]

Mr. Vaz: We remain deeply concerned about the situation in Chechnya, and reported civilian casualties. We expect the conflicts in Chechnya and the South Caucasus to be discussed at the OSCE Summit in Istanbul, and hope that the discussion will contribute to security in the region.

Entry Clearance (Subcontinent)

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how long a person applying for entry clearance for settlement in June, July and August can be expected to have to wait for an interview in each queue at each post in the Indian subcontinent. [96617]

Mr. Vaz: The statistics requested are as follows:

Waiting times in weeks on last day of month

Post	Queue	June	July	August
India
	Q2	6	5	4
	Q3	6	5	5
	[1]Q4	6	5	5
Calcutta	[2]—	0.4	1	0
Sri Lanka
Colombo	[2]—	12	11	9

[1] Re-applicants
[2] Calcutta, Colombo, Karachi and Madras do not operate separate queues

The extended queues in Islamabad and Dhaka in particular are a consequence of seasonal pressures. We have deployed additional staff to Islamabad to deal with increased applications for short term visits.

United Nations

Mr. Jim Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what has been the UK Government's financial contribution to the United Nations' (a) staffing and (b) volunteer programmes for each of the past 10 years. [96652]

Mr. Hain: Staffing costs account for approximately 70 per cent. of UN Regular Budget expenditure. The UK's mandatory contributions for 1990–99 to the Regular Budget are listed in the table. UK contributions to other UN funds and programmes, specialised agencies and peacekeeping and humanitarian operations also cover staffing costs.

The UN Volunteers Programme (UNV) is administered by the UN Development Programme (UNDP) and will account for around 5 per cent. of UNDP's budget for the period 2000–01. The UK's voluntary contributions to the UNDP core budget for 1990–99 are also listed in the table. Since 1991 the UK has also provided £315,848 directly to UNV.

UK Mandatory Contribution to UN Regular Budget

Ibiza

Mr. Jim Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many British citizens were arrested in Ibiza for (a) possession of and (b) dealing in drugs in each of the last five years. [96626]

Mr. Hain: We do not record separately details of British nationals arrested in Ibiza for possession of drugs and those arrested for dealing in drugs.

The numbers of British nationals detained in Ibiza over the past five years for drugs related offences are:

	Number
1996	18
1997	57
1999	46

Mr. Jim Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many British citizens were arrested and for what categories of offences during 1999 in Ibiza. [96625]

Mr. Hain: On 28 October 1999, our records showed that 162 British nationals had been detained in Ibiza this year. The offences range from violence to drink driving, drugs, damages, fraud and theft.

Mr. Jim Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many British citizens were involved in drug-related medical emergencies in Ibiza during each of the past five years. [96624]

Mr. Hain: We do not record details of British nationals involved in drug-related medical emergencies in Ibiza. Spanish hospitals are not required to inform consulates when British Citizens are admitted for treatment.

Mr. Jim Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many British citizens travelled to Ibiza during 1999. [96623]

Mr. Vaz: As at 30 September 1999 approximately 651,834 British nationals are believed to have visited Ibiza during the year.

Nuclear Disarmament

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the Government will be supporting the resolution at the UN General Assembly's First Committee on Disarmament and International Security entitled, "Towards a Nuclear Weapon Free World: the Need for a New Agenda"; and if he will make a statement. [96433]

Mr. Vaz: As at last year, the New Agenda resolution contains many proposals we strongly support, but also a number we do not, including measures we examined in detail in the Strategic Defence Review, and concluded were incompatible with the maintenance of our minimum nuclear deterrent. We will therefore vote against the resolution as a whole.

Conventional Forces in Europe Treaty

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to his Russian counterpart about that country's level of compliance with its obligations under the Conventional Forces in Europe Treaty; and if he will make a statement. [96925]

Mr. Vaz: We attach great importance to compliance with the Conventional Armed Forces in Europe Treaty by all States party to it. Russian implementation of the Treaty is of major concern, and we have been pressing and will continue to press the Russians for action in areas where they are non-compliant. We have been taking this action both bilaterally and in multilateral forums, including in contacts in Vienna.

Iran

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) when Her Majesty's Government last made representations on behalf of the human rights of the Baha'is faith people of Iran; and if he will make a statement; [96980]

(2) when the Permanent Representative of the United Nations last spoke on behalf of the human rights of the Baha'is faith people of Iran; and if he will make a statement; [96983]

(3) when the Permanent Representative of the European Union last spoke on behalf of the human rights of the Baha'is people of Iran; and if he will make a statement. [96982]

Mr. Hain: Iran is aware of our serious concern about the Baha'is. Persecution of individuals on religious grounds is totally unacceptable. We and our EU partners regularly press the Iranian authorities on this issue. I personally raised our concerns during a call by the Iranian Ambassador on 4 August. The EU regularly press the Iranian authorities over the plight of the Baha'is, most recently the Germany Presidency did so at the latest EU/Iran talks in May. I assured Barnabas Leith, Secretary General of the UK Baha'is Community of our continue support when we met on 18 October.

The 1998 report on Human Rights in Iran by UN Special Representative Maurice Copithorne was particularly critical of Iranian treatment of the Baha'is. We expect his 1999 report to contain similarly critical language. We and our EU partners sponsored a Resolution on Human Rights in Iran at the 1999 UN Commission on Human Rights; this was adopted on 23 April and reaffirmed international concern about the Baha'is plight. We expect that a further resolution, also sponsored by the EU and containing equally firm language on the Baha'is, will be adopted at the current session of the United Nations General Assembly.

Departmental Accounts

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what methods of depreciation his Department will apply in the current financial year to fixed assets in the preparation of departmental resource accounting balance sheets. [97046]

Mr. Hain: Depreciations will be provided at rates calculated to write off the valuation of fixed assets by equal instalments over their estimated useful lives. Freehold land is not depreciated. This method is in accordance with HM Treasury's Resource Accounting Manual. The requirements in the Manual regarding methods of depreciation will be underpinned by Financial Reporting Standard 15 "Tangible Fixed Assets", issued by the Accounting Standards Board.

Strategic Export Control

Mr. Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the Government intend to publish the second Annual Report on strategic export control. [97215]

Mr. Hain: We have issued the second Annual Report today. I have arranged for copies to be placed in the Libraries of both Houses. It has now been entered on the FCO website (www.fco.gov.uk).

Angola

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made in inhibiting the use of diamond sales for funding the war in Angola. [96084]

Mr. Hain: UN Security Council resolution 1173 of 12 June 1998 imposed a ban on the direct or indirect import from Angola of all diamonds not controlled through the Angolan Government's Certificate of Origin of Origin regime. The aim was to cut off diamond revenues to UNITA, and so reduce their ability to fund continued fighting. The UK implements the resolution through the Angola (United Nations Sanctions) Order 1998.

UN Security Council resolution 1237 of 7 May 1999 established a panel of experts to investigate alleged violations of the sanctions against UNITA, in support of the work of the UN Angola Sanctions Committee. Panel members are paying a series of visits to the region, and will report on how sanctions in relation to UNITA diamonds can be implemented and enforced more effectively.

We welcomed the announcement by De Beers on 5 October that they will no longer purchase any Angolan diamonds, and will urge their clients to adopt a similar policy.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the UN Sanctions Committee for Angola has identified (a) the source of illegal arms importation in Angola and (b) those countries and corporations which have broken trade embargoes with Angola; and if he will make a statement. [96085]

Mr. Hain: The UN Angola Sanctions Committee has been looking at ways to tighten implementation of UN sanctions against UNITA, but has not yet commented publicly on these matters. UN Security Council resolution 1237 of 7 May 1999 established, in support of the work of the Committee, a panel of experts with a mandate to investigate alleged violations of the sanctions against UNITA, including the arms embargo and restrictions on trade. Panel members will be paying a number of visits to the region. Based on their findings, they will issue conclusions and recommendations on how to improve implementation of the sanctions regime. The UK Government fully support the work of the UN Angola Sanctions Committee.

International Criminal Court Statute

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress is being made by him in seeking ratification by the UK of the International Criminal Court Statute. [96086]

Mr. Hain: Detailed work to prepare legislation enabling the UK to ratify the International Criminal Court Statute is going forward and will be introduced as soon as the Parliamentary timetable permits. We remain strongly committed to the Court and intend to be among the first sixty states to ratify.

Chinese President (State Visit)

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if, in any of the bilateral meetings which took place between representatives of his Department and of the Metropolitan police prior to the visit of President Jiang Zemin, the police were made aware that demonstrations in support of Tibet would cause embarrassment to the Government. [97117]

Mr. Battle: We discussed demonstrations in the terms set out in my answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Cynon Valley (Ann Clwyd) on 28 October 1999, Official Report, column 993. At no time did we say that demonstrations in support of Tibet would cause embarrassment to the Government.

EU Legislation

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the time limit for the Quality of Legislation EC Working Group; and what progress it has made. [95304]

Marjorie Mowlam: I have been asked to reply.

The Group met for the last time on 3 December 1998. After adoption by the three Institutions involved, (European Parliament, Commission and Council), the Inter-Institutional Agreement on the quality of drafting of Community legislation was published in the Official Journal of the European Communities on 17 March 1999. The IIA requires the Institutions to follow guidelines setting out the general principles of good quality drafting and to implement some practical measures.

The UK Government have circulated the Agreement to all Departments and published it in full in the "Guide to Better European Regulation", copies of which have been widely disseminated, including to all MPs.

I understand that good progress is being made in the Institutions on the implementation measures including:

An Inter-Institutional Group to implement the Guidelines has been established.

A practical guide is due to be published in March 2000; in the Commission each Directorate General has appointed a legislative co-ordinator who will ensure that drafting rules and technical rules are complied with when texts are drafted; in the Commission and Council officials responsible for legal drafting will, after training, form specialist drafting units to train officials who draft legal texts; improvements have been made to the IT tools available to assist legal drafting in both the Council and the Commission, for example "LegisWrite", which provides models for all types of Community texts, has been recently introduced in the Commission.

HOME DEPARTMENT

IT Projects

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the network information technology projects which are being undertaken by his Department, including the date each project started, the planned date for completion, the current expected date of completion, the planned cost of the project and the current estimate of total cost; and if he will make a statement. [94770]

Mr. Straw [holding answer 21 October 1999]: A list of those significant Information Technology (IT) projects currently being undertaken by the Home Office, where the IT value of the project is in excess of £5 million or the project is critical to the business of the Home Office has been placed in the Library.

A wide interpretation has been taken as to what is meant by network information technology projects. I have included those projects which have a significant element of business change or voice technology as well as the more traditional computing projects.

The information presented on costs and timetables reflects differences between the nature and current stage of the projects.

Prisoner Licences

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners have been let out on licence each year since the scheme's inception; how many have broken their licence conditions in each year; and what monitoring he is putting in place to gauge the impact of the scheme. [95536]

Mr. Boateng: The Home Detention Curfew scheme began operation on 28 January 1999. Between that time and 27 October, 12,280 offenders have been made subject to the scheme. In the same period, 567 curfewees have had their licence revoked by the Secretary of State. Breaches of non-curfew related conditions by curfewees whose original offences were committed prior to 1 January 1999 are dealt with by the courts. Information on these cases is not held centrally.

The Home Detention Curfew scheme is being monitored and evaluated by the Home Office Research, Development and Statistics Directorate, who will be producing a report on the first year of the scheme's operation during the course of the year 2000.

Immigration and Nationality Directorate

Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many staff at the Immigration and Nationality Directorate in (a) January 1998, (b) July 1998, (c) January 1999 and (d) July 1999 were engaged (i) wholly and (ii) partly in making (x) asylum and (y) immigration decisions. [96027]

Mrs. Roche: Information is not available in the form requested. Prior to the formation of the Integrated Casework Directorate (ICD) in December 1998, asylum decisions were made by staff working in the Asylum Directorate, and immigration casework decisions by the After Entry and Appeals Directorate (AEAD) and some staff in the Immigration Service Enforcement Directorate (ISED). The total number of staff in the Asylum Directorate in January 1998 was 659 and in July 1998 was 530, and in the AEAD for the same months was 623 and 569 respectively. These totals include management and support grades. Over and above these figures, there were a number of caseworkers in the ISED making decision in deportation and illegal entry cases.

Since the creation of the ICD, casework is dealt with by multi-skilled teams which deal with both asylum and immigration casework. Figures on the breakdown of staff dealing with differing types of case are not kept centrally. The total number of staff in the ICD in January 1999 was 424 and in July 1999 was 1,452.

Despite the lack of detailed figures, it has become clear that the number of trained asylum caseworkers now in the ICD is significantly lower than was available in January and July 1998. This has been a function of declining staffing levels in anticipation of efficiencies from the new caseworking system which did not in fact materialise. We are therefore recruiting around 250 caseworkers specifically to process asylum cases and training a greater proportion of our existing caseworkers in asylum skills.

Judicial and Police Co-operation

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 8 June 1999, Official Report, column 264 on judicial and police co-operation, if he will list those measures in respect of the Treaty of the European Community which the Government intend (a) to adopt and (b) not to adopt; if they participate in consideration of measures which they do not intend to adopt; and in respect of each measure if he will include its official reference, where and when it was discussed, and the current stage of parliamentary scrutiny to which it is subject. [96568]

Mr. Straw: Title VI of the Treaty on European Union contains provisions on police and judicial co-operation in criminal matters in which member states participate as of right. The question of adopting or not adopting individual measures does not, therefore, arise. Each measure is subject to unanimity. All Third Pillar matters which meet the criteria for scrutiny are submitted to Parliament in the usual way. The following issues are under consideration:

Draft Convention on Mutual Assistance in Criminal Matters

Official reference 9636/99 (COPEN 11).

Last discussed by the Article 36 Committee on 22 October.

Official reference 6946/99 (JUSTPEN 16).

K4 Committee

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, further to his answer of 8 June 1999, Official Report, column 259, on the K4 Committee, if he will list the bodies involved in such consultation and publish their responses; what further consultations and discussions have (a) taken place and (b) are planned within the European Union on this matter; what measures he expects to be necessary to implement such a proposal; and on what treaty articles they would be based. [96504]

Mrs. Roche: My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary gave evidence about the United Kingdom initiative on mutual recognition of judicial decisions in criminal matters to the House of Lords' European Communities Committee before the Tampere European Council. No detailed legislative proposals concerning mutual recognition have yet been tabled in the European Union. The European Council has, however, asked the Council and the Commission to adopt, by December 2000, a programme of measures to implement the principle of mutual recognition. Any proposals for legal instruments will be submitted to Parliament in accordance with normal procedures, and I will also ensure that United Kingdom bodies concerned in implementing the proposals are consulted. It is likely that primary legislation would be needed to implement these proposals. It is expected that the proposals would be based on Article 34 of the Treaty on European Union.

Women Medical Examiners

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list, by police authority area, the number of women medical examiners available for examinations involving child victims of sex attacks; and if in all areas child victims or their families are able to choose to be examined by a female doctor. [96398]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Comprehensive information about numbers of female medical examiners is not held centrally. It is accepted as good practice that child victims of sexual assaults, or their families on their behalf, should be given the choice of being examined by a female doctor. Unfortunately, this cannot always be guaranteed as there are some police forces which do not have female medical examiners.

Crime and Disorder Act 1998

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 25 October 1999, Official Report, column 685, on the Crime and Disorder Act 1998, if he will list the areas in which (a) reparation orders, (b) parenting orders, (c) child safety orders and (d) action plan orders are being piloted; and if he will give the number of such orders which have been issued in each respective pilot area. [96473]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The information requested is set out in the table. It indicates the number of orders made in the pilot areas by 30 September 1999, the latest date for which this information is readily available.

In addition, one child safety order was made in the Sunderland pilot area.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his reply of 25 October 1999, Official Report, column 689 on asylum seekers, if asylum seekers will be deemed to be statutorily homeless. [96543]

Mrs. Roche: Asylum seekers who are destitute will be able to apply for accommodation and other essential living needs under the arrangements made under Part VI of the Immigration and Asylum Bill. Once those arrangements are in place, only those asylum seekers who are entitled to social security benefits will be entitled to assistance under the homelessness legislation.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on plans for standardisation of the appeal system for asylum seekers whose asylum request has been rejected, following Tampere. [96572]

Mrs. Roche: I am aware of no such plans, although consideration of appeal procedures may in due course feature in work on minimum standards for the qualification of nationals of third countries as refugees in accordance with article 63 of the Treaty of Amsterdam. The United Kingdom has the choice of opting into these measures.

Schengen Agreement

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list those organisations he has consulted in deciding whether to join elements of the Schengen Agreement. [96550]

Mrs. Roche: In deciding which parts of the Schengen acquis to participate in and in preparing the United Kingdom's formal application for participation, the Home Office consulted colleagues within Government with relevant policy interests. We also consulted the Governments of Gibraltar, the Channel Islands and the Isle of Man, the police service and the Data Protection Registrar. In addition, we took note of the reports of the House of Lords European Communities Committee, including comments from a range of organisations and interests.

The Government's approach to Schengen follows our established policy of full engagement in justice and home affairs matters, where compatible with the maintenance of frontier controls. As such, our application raised no fresh issues on which wider consultation might have been required.

Civil Protection (Overseas)

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assistance he has given to countries overseas towards their civil protection plans. [96537]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Indirect assistance has been given through co-operation with the European Commission and the member states of the European Union, and with the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation and its Partner countries. In addition, the Emergency Planning College has provided training to members of the civil protection services of overseas countries, on a full cost recovery basis.

Prisoners

Mr. Alan Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the number of prisoners in United Kingdom jails by category; what is the average proportion of sentence served in each category, and what is the average annual cost of keeping a prisoner in each category. [96869]

Mr. Boateng: Female prisoners, remand prisoners and recently sentenced prisoners are not allocated to a security category. The centrally available information on the numbers of prisoners in each security category and the average proportion of sentence served by category on release of prisoners released in 1998 is given in the tables. The cost per place by type of establishment is in the Prison Service Annual Report and Accounts for April 1998 to March 1999, a copy of which is available in the Library, and is given in the tables.

Information about prisons and prisoners in Scotland and Northern Ireland is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland respectively.

Staffordshire Police Authority

Charlotte Atkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the total staffing levels of the Staffordshire Police Authority were for (a) 1994–95, (b) 1995–96, (c) 1996–97, (d) 1997–98, and (e) 1998–99: what the projected levels are for (i) 1999–2000, (ii) 2000–01, (iii) 2001–02 and (iv) 2002–03; and if he will give these figures broken down by front-line and other staff. [96989]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Information on police officer and civilian support staff strength is collected at the end of March and September. The figures for the period requested are set out in the table.

	Total officer strength	Total civilian strength
31 March 1994	2,208	[1]734
31 March 1995	2,231	749
31 March 1996	2,209	754
31 March 1997	2,211	763
31 March 1998	2,292	866
31 March 1999	2,238	1,004

[1] As at 31 December 1993

The powers of my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary to set police establishment levels for each force were removed under the Police and Magistrates' Courts Act 1994. It is for the chief officer to determine staffing requirements within the overall resources available. This year, Staffordshire Police Authority has set a budget that will allow the force to spend up to £122.2 million—an increase of £3.3 million or 2.7 per cent. over 1998–99. This increase, along with the 2 per cent. efficiency improvements that have been set, should be sufficient for the force to maintain levels of service. Future staffing levels are for the Chief Constable to determine within the overall resources available. However, the Government are making available additional resources, in a new ring-fenced Crime Fighting Fund, to enable forces to recruit 5,000 more police officers, over and above those that they had otherwise planned to recruit over the next three years. Staffordshire Police will be able to apply for a share of this funding.

Charlotte Atkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what Government funding Staffordshire Police Authority received in (a) 1994–95, (b) 1995–96, (c) 1996–97, (d) 1997–98 and (e) 1998–99 and will receive in (i) 1999–2000, (ii) 2000–01, (iii) 2001–02 and (iv) 2002–03 in real terms; and from what other sources the Staffordshire Police Authority has received funding for the same years as above. [96988]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The information requested in respect of years 1994–95 to 1999–2000 is set out in the table. Information for later years is not available, but the provisional police funding settlement for 2000–01 will be announced in the next few weeks.

In addition to the Government funding set out in the table, police authorities can also use income from council tax to meet their budget requirements.

The table shows the breakdown of funding paid to Staffordshire from 1994–95 and to 1999–2000, and the Treasury Gross Domestic Product deflators used to convert the totals to the same price base (1995–96) to show the real terms increases.

Anti-social Behaviour Orders

Mr. Hilary Benn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what advice he has given local authorities and the police about responsibility for initiating anti-social behaviour order procedures in cases where the behaviour complained of emanates from a privately owned house. [97092]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Guidance on the operation of anti-social behaviour orders (ASBOs) was issued in March 1999 and applies to anti-social behaviour from wherever it emanates. My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary wrote in October to Chief Executives and Chief Officers of police to remind them of the use to which ASBOs could be put.

Wildlife Protection

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many successful wildlife protection prosecutions were launched in the last year for which figures are available, broken down by police authority area. [97118]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Available information taken from the Home Office Court Proceedings Database is given in the table.

Animal Toxicity Tests

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what assessment he has made of the number of additional animal toxicity tests likely to be required over the next 15 years as a result of the EU Biocidal Product Directive (98/8/EC); [96565]

(2) what assessment he has made of the likely overall impact of the EU Biocidal Product Directive (98/8/EC) on numbers of tests on animals over the next 15 years. [96566]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: It is not possible for the Home Office to give an estimation of the likely scale and nature of animal use under the Directive.

The consequence of regulations coming into force will be a requirement for all biocidal products and their active substances to be authorised for use. The new requirement may increase animal testing in this area.

To minimise duplicate testing, however, Article 13 of the Directive requires authorisation holders to take all reasonable steps to share data. The Article also allows for member states to oblige applicants to share data in order to avoid unnecessary and duplicate testing on animals.

The Home Office is currently working with other Government departments and agencies to agree a strategy for increasing data sharing in United Kingdom regulatory safety testing.

Electric Shock Dog Collar

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if the Prison Service still has an electric shock dog collar in its possession; and how many times such a collar has been used since November 1998. [97109]

Mr. Boateng: The Prison Service is no longer in possession of an electric shock dog collar. Records held at the National Dog Training Centre indicate that the collar was used seven times on six dogs between March 1993 and July 1995. The electric collar was to be used only when authorised by the head of the National Dog Training Centre. It was used on adult dogs as part of a training course or remedial training and only as a last resort, when other methods of correcting a dog in control-related exercises had failed. The collar has not been used since 6 July 1995. On 14 April 1999, an amendment was made to Prison Service orders. It instructed that electric collars were not to be used, under any circumstances, on Prison Service dogs during training.

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police forces have an electric shock dog collar; and how many times such a device has been used since July 1998. [97110]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Of the 43 police forces in England and Wales, 20 possess electric shock dog collars for use in training. The device has been used by eight forces on a total of 37 occasions since July 1998. I understand that the relevant committee of the Association of Chief Police Officers is to review the use of this item.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Equal Opportunities

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if an action plan for increasing the representation of women in public life has been (a) prepared by his Department and (b) published since November 1998. [94852]

Mr. Wills: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Minister for the Cabinet Office on 25 October 1999, Official Report, column 682.

School Inspections

Mr. Alan Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many requests have been made by parents for an urgent inspection of a maintained school in each year since 1996. [96858]

Ms Estelle Morris: Subject to the maximum interval between inspections, which is specified in regulations, it is for Her Majesty's Chief Inspector to determine when each school will be inspected. He frequently receives letters from parents expressing concerns about particular schools. Figures are not kept on how many of these letters ask him to conduct an early inspection.

Class Sizes

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to his letter of 27 October to the hon. Member for Hertsmere on infant class sizes, if the £620 million to which the letter refers has previously been announced. [96769]

Ms Estelle Morris: Yes. The money was announced to the House by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State in his oral statement of 15 July 1998, Official Report, columns 412–25. In his letter of 27 October, my right hon. Friend sought to remind the hon. Member that Local Education Authorities were being provided with the resources to meet the Government's pledge to reduce the size of infant classes to 30 or below.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to his letter of 27 October to the hon. Member for Hertsmere, if he will provide a breakdown of classes taught by one teacher (a) in primary school classes other than infant classes and (b) in secondary schools in each local authority on the same basis as in his letter. [96768]

Ms Estelle Morris: The requested data were not collected in September 1999. National level data for January 1999 were published in the Statistical First Release SFR 2/1999 'Class Sizes in Maintained Schools in England: January 1999 (provisional)'. New data will be collected in January 2000.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to his letter to the hon. Member for Hertsmere of 27 October on infant class sizes, if he will publish the figures for infant class sizes for each local authority so as to include the number of pupils entering in the Autumn term under staggered entry. [96767]

Ms Estelle Morris: We have estimated nationally that the staggered intake will lead to an extra 6,000 pupils in classes of over 30 pupils, over and above those already reflected in the 1999 September Class Size Count. This figure has been included in the 181,000 total which was published on 27 October.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to his letter of 27 October to the hon. Member for Hertsmere on infant class sizes, how many teachers were employed in maintained schools in each of the last five years; and how many he estimates will be employed in each of the next five years. [96770]

Ms Estelle Morris: The following shows teacher numbers (full-time equivalents) in maintained schools in England:

January 1995: 408,964
January 1996: 409,022
January 1997: 409,326
January 1998: 407,065
January 1999: 411,293.

Estimates of the number of teachers that will be employed in future years are not available. Figures to 1998 inclusive reflect the spending decisions of the previous administration.

Ms Perham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what percentage of infant-age pupils in the London Borough of Redbridge were in classes of over 30 in each of the years 1990 to 1999. [96892]

Percentage of Key Stage 1 pupils in classes of size 31 or more in Redbridge LEA

Date	Percentage of pupils
September 1999	11.0
January 1999	25.2
January 1998	28.8
January 1997	32.5
January 1996	48.5

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to his letter of 27 October to the hon. Member for Hertsmere on infant class sizes, how many pupils in Key Stage 2 in primary schools were in classes of (a) over 36 pupils and (b) over 40 pupils in (i) September 1998 and (ii) September 1999. [96915]

Classes as taught: pupils in classes taught by one teacher January each year Key Stage 2

	1999	1998
Classes of size: over 36 pupils
Number of pupils	38,960	40,440

Classes of size: over 40 pupils
Number of pupils	1,690	2,390
Percentage of pupils	0.08	0.11

Exclusions

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many pupils were excluded from UK schools (a) temporarily and (b) indefinitely, for the last year for which figures are available, broken down by age and local education authority. [96669]

Ms Estelle Morris [holding answer 1 November 1999]: The category of indefinite exclusion was abolished with effect from 1 September 1994. The latest available information on pupils permanently excluded from schools in England is shown in the following table.

Information on fixed period (temporary) exclusions was not collected for the school year 1998–99.

For information on schools in Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland, I refer my hon. Friend to the Scottish Parliament, the National Assembly for Wales and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland respectively.

Working Time Regulations (Derogations)

Mr. Stinchcombe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if derogations from EU directive 94/33/EC have been entered in relation to the Armed Forces. [96588]

Mr. Spellar: I have been asked to reply.

Articles 9 and 10 of EU Directive 94/33/EC provide for derogations for adolescents involved in work performed in the context of the Armed Forces. To the extent that Articles 9 and 10 have been implemented in UK legislation by the Working Time Regulations, these derogations have also been incorporated in the Regulations.

DEFENCE

Gulf War Veterans

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the research conducted by Professor Hari Sharma of the University of Waterloo into links between illnesses in Gulf war veterans and exposure to depleted uranium, a copy of which was provided to his Departmen*. [94150]

Mr. Spellar: On 18 March 1999, my Department received a copy of a letter from Professor Sharma to the Chairman of the National Gulf Veterans and Families Association (NGV&FA) about testing the urine of some UK Gulf veterans for uranium isotopes. The content of the letter was assessed by the Ministry of Defence's statutorily appointed radiation protection advisers who concluded that it did not contain sufficient scientific information for the Department to properly review the research nor interpret Professor Sharma's results. Despite requests to Professor Sharma and the NGV&FA, as at 15 October 1999, my Department is yet to see scientifically robust, properly validated, and preferably peer reviewed hypotheses, methodologies and full results of Professor Sharma's work. My Department remains open minded on the issue of Gulf veterans' illnesses and keeps the situation under constant review as scientific knowledge develops. In the meantime, we have offered a further test to the veterans concerned. This would be undertaken at three testing establishments including one to be nominated by the veterans.

Arms Fair (Chertsey)

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he has had with the representatives of the defence industry regarding the presence of landmine manufacturers at the arms fair in Chertsey in September. [95242]

Mr. Spellar: Prior to the opening of the exhibition, my Department was in regular contact with Defence Systems and Equipment International Ltd., the private company which working closely with the defence industry trade organisations organised the event at Chertsey. We made sure that DSEi Ltd. was fully aware of the Government's policies concerning the export of defence equipment, and we sought and obtained from them assurances that they would require exhibitors to comply with these policies and with UK legislation, including the Landmines Act 1998.

Following allegations in the British media that a Romanian company was promoting anti-personnel landmines at DSEi, we instructed the MOD Police to investigate the matter. Separately, the Romanian authorities have contacted the MOD to explain that, in error, their company had on its stand literature which mentioned an anti-personnel landmine. They have informed us that they stopped manufacturing this item in 1990, but that the company had not updated its equipment lists. We have received an apology from the Romanian authorities, but the MOD Police are still investigating the matter and will submit a file to the Crown Prosecution Service in due course.

Indonesia

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the Jakarta office of the Defence Export Services Organisation remains open. [96397]

Mr. Spellar: The First Secretary Defence Supply, who represents DESO in the British Embassy in Jakarta, has no role in the support of marketing and sales by British defence companies in Indonesia while the EU embargo is in force. The future of the post is currently under review.

Multi-role Armoured Vehicle Programme

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the Government expect to sign the contract for the provision of the new Multi-role Armoured Vehicle programme; and if he will make a statement. [96569]

Mr. Spellar: It is expected that the contract for the development of the multi-role armoured vehicle will be signed soon.

MOD Police

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what external auditing there has been of the operation of the housing allowances for MOD police. [96444]

Mr. Spellar: None. The Ministry of Defence Police Agency regularly hosts audit visits from the National Audit Office. However, the National Audit Office have not focused on Ministry of Defence Police housing allowance at least since the inception of the Agency in 1996.

Departmental Staff

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many staff employed by his Department who were in a mobile grade and who did not have limited mobility, have been offered either compulsory early severance or compulsory early retirement terms (including those who volunteered for such terms) in the last two years. [96877]

Mr. Spellar: The details of any offers of Compulsory Early Retirement (CER) and Compulsory Early Severance (CES), which may or may not eventually be accepted, are not held centrally. However, during the period 1 October 1997 to 30 September 1999, records indicate that 351 mobile staff left the Ministry of Defence on CER/CES terms.

Territorial Army

Mr. Alan Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list (a) the strengths and (b) the cost of the Territorial Army in each year since 1995. [96866]

Mr. Spellar: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

HMS Fearless

Mr. Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when HMS Fearless last put to sea. [96738]

Mr. Spellar: HMS Fearless is currently at sea, in the Mediterranean, participating in Exercise Bright Star, a multi-national amphibious exercise.

HMS Intrepid

Mr. Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the current crew level of HMS Intrepid expressed as a percentage of the total complement. [96735]

Mr. Spellar: The current crew level of HMS Intrepid is 15 which represents 100 per cent. of the total complement in her present reduced readiness state. In a fully operational state her complement would be 580.

Mr. Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when HMS Intrepid last put to sea. [96739]

Mr. Spellar: HMS Intrepid was last at sea in March 1994.

Frigates and Destroyers

Mr. Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what is the current operational availability of each of the Royal Navy's Type 22 frigates; [96740]

(2) what is the current operational availability of each of the Royal Navy's Type 42 destroyers; [96742]

(3) what is the current operational availability of each of the Royal Navy's Type 23 frigates. [96741]

Mr. Spellar: Of the Royal Navy's 32 frigates and destroyers, 27 are operationally available and the remaining five are in refit or protracted maintenance. A breakdown of their employment as at 29 October 1999 is set out in the table.

	Operational or engaged in preparing for service, trials or training	Undergoing refit
Type 22 frigates	Campbeltown, Coventry, Cumberland, Sheffield	Brave, Chatham, Cornwall

The specific operational readiness of each ship is classified for security reasons, and is being withheld under exemption 1 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Public-private Partnerships

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many proposed public-private partnership programmes his Department has; and what the value of each is; [96650]

(2) how many public-private partnership programmes have been let since 2 May 1997; and with what value. [96651]

Mr. Spellar: To date my Department has signed 27 PFI contracts, representing a capital investment in defence by the private sector of some £1 billion. 17 of these contracts, with a total capital value of some £781 million, have been let since 2 May 1997, as follows:

Note:
Capital values assessed against the estimated cost of public provision (the public sector comparator)

These projects will be pursued to completion if they can deliver best value for money for the tax payer. In a number of cases, it is premature to assign estimated capital values to them.

Additional Public Private Partnerships (PPP) and other PFI projects are likely to emerge in due course.

Phoenix UAV System

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the Phoenix UAV system was deployed in Kosovo. [95972]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 2 November 1999]: Yes. A Royal Artillery Phoenix Battery was deployed to Macedonia in June 1999 to conduct reconnaissance operations in support of operation ALLIED FORCE. Subsequently the Battery moved into Kosovo as part of the UK contribution to KFOR and assisted in verifying the Yugoslav withdrawal and compliance with the provisions of the Military Technical Agreement. The Battery was withdrawn in September.

Under-18-year-olds

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will undertake not to use members of the forces in conflict situations if they are under 18 years of age; and if he will make a statement. [96087]

Mr. Spellar: We recruit volunteers into the Armed Forces from the age of 16. Some of these personnel join their units, having completed training well into their 17th year, but prior to their 18th birthday. While the number involved is relatively small, these trained personnel who, having joined their units, contribute to the operational effectiveness of that unit. Removing these personnel from units would undermine unit cohesiveness as well as operational effectiveness. It would also be unpopular with the personnel themselves and could exacerbate the problems of retention and overstretch.

Porton Down

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to make available full details of experiments at Porton Down to the relatives of former participants in those experiments who are now deceased; and if he will make a statement. [96720]

Mr. Spellar: A dedicated 'Porton Down Volunteers Helpline' was set up in February 1998 to deal with inquiries from former service volunteers, or their relatives, wishing to obtain information about the experiments in which they participated. Following an inquiry, all the information held in the Porton Down records relating to the volunteers' attendance at Porton Down, together with an explanation of the type of tests in which they participated, is made available. The amount of information held can vary, depending on the type of test and when it took place. Former volunteers or their relatives are invited to visit Porton Down if they wish to examine the records for themselves and discuss their experiences with scientific staff.

Anyone wishing to contact the Helpline should write to Porton Down Volunteers, Room 37/Building 106, DERA Porton Down, Salisbury, Wiltshire SB4 OJQ. Alternatively, they can telephone them on 0845 603 9140.

SCOTLAND

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many Special Advisers are currently employed by his Department; and what was the ratio of Special Advisers to Ministers in each of the last eight years. [96716]

Dr. Reid: Special Advisers are appointed by and work for the Secretary of State for Scotland of the day.

Dr. Reid: I have no official residences.

Ministerial Payments

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the level of payments to Ministers who were formerly in his Department since 7 May. [96723]

Dr. Reid: From 7 May until 16 May, the Ministers of The Scottish Office were:

The right hon. Donald Dewar MP
The right hon. Helen Liddell MP
Mr. Henry McLeish MP
Mr. Sam Galbraith MP
Mr. Calum Macdonald MP
The Lord Sewel of Gilcomstoun
The Lord Macdonald of Tradeston.

Mr. Dewar was paid as Secretary of State, Mrs. Liddell and Mr. McLeish at the level of Ministers of State and the other Ministers at the level of Parliamentary Under-Secretary, except Lord Macdonald, who was unpaid.

From 17 May until 28 July, Mr. Macdonald, Lord Sewel and Lord Macdonald were Ministers in my Department at the level of Parliamentary Under-Secretary. Lord Sewel and Mr. Macdonald also received payments on leaving the Government on 28 July, in accordance with section 4 of the Ministerial and other Pensions and Salaries Act 1991.

Mr. Brian Wilson MP was appointed to my Department on 29 July and is paid at the level of Minister of State.

Correspondence

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) how many replies he has received since 1 July from (a) prisons, (b) health authorities and (c) local authorities to letters sent by him urging them to obtain products of the highest welfare and animal hygiene standards; [95775]

(2) how many letters he has written since 1 July to (a) prisons, (b) health authorities and (c) local authorities urging them to obtain products of the highest welfare and animal hygiene standards; [95776]

(3) further to his oral answer of 28 October 1999, Official Report, column 1141, answering letters about public sector meat purchases, on what date the letters he referred to were sent. [97115]

Mr. Nick Brown [holding answer 26 October 1999]: I wrote on 27 October to 150 local authorities concerning both beef and pigmeat, and additionally to 131 prisons and 401 health authorities concerning pigmeat on the same date. I have since received a number of responses.

Sheep Sales

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what the total number of (1) ewes on British farms and (2) lambs sold to market was in each of the years 1990 to 1998. [96546]

Ms Quin: The number of (1) breeding ewes on agricultural holdings in the UK at 1 June and (2) clean sheep and lambs marketed in the UK are shown below for the years 1990 to 1998.

	Breeding ewes on holdings at 1 June [1]	Clean sheep and lambs marketed [2]
1990	21,241	19,181
1991	21,090	20,726
1992	21,112	[3]19,132
1993	21,282	19,204
1994	21,273	18,330

[1] The figures come from the June Agricultural and Horticultural Census and relate to the position on main and minor holdings. Up to 1994, the figures relate to ewes kept for breeding, including draft and cast ewes and two-tooth ewes put, or to be put, to the ram. From 1995, the figures relate to ewes and shearlings that have produced lambs in the last year (whether intended for further breeding or slaughter) and female sheep (one year and over) put, or to be put, to the ram.

[2] The figures consist of home fed slaughterings and live exports, and have been adjusted to take account of unrecorded trade.

[3] For comparability with other years, the figures have been adjusted from a 53 week to a 52 week basis.

School Milk

Sir Peter Emery: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action his Department is taking in EU institutions in respect of the funding of the school milk scheme. [96881]

Ms Quin: My right hon. Friend the Minister raised the question of the future of the EU school milk scheme at the Agriculture Council in June when he received a very positive response from other member states. We continue to lobby the Commission for the scheme to remain in place.

Performance Targets

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list all performance targets set for his Department, agencies and non-departmental public bodies since May 1997, other than those listed in Public Service Agreements 1999–2002 [Cm 4181], stating in each case (a) the target to be reached and (b) the date by which it was to be reached. [94979]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 1 November 1999]: The Department has set out the key performance targets on which it will be judged in its PSA, and the measures of success it will use in the OPA published in March this year. A full list of the targets and target dates for Agencies and Executive NDPBs can be found annually in the Next Steps Report and Executive Non-Departmental Public Bodies Report.

These high level targets are supported at operational level by numerous targets to ensure delivery by individual units. Listing these operational targets would be inappropriate and disproportionate in terms of resources.

Diversification Grants

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has for the introduction of diversification grants for non-assisted areas. [96705]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 1 November 1999]: We are currently considering what measures, including aid for diversification, we should introduce under the new Rural Development Regulation, in the light of responses to our recent consultation.

Milk Marque

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what changes he intends to make to Milk Marque following the report by the Competition Commission; and if he will make a statement. [96609]

Ms Quin [holding answer 1 November 1999]: My right hon. Friend the Minister has no locus to require changes to be made to Milk Marque.

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many farmers he estimates will be affected by his proposals for Milk Marque. [96610]

Ms Quin [holding answer 1 November 1999]: My right hon. Friend the Minister has made no such proposals. All the farmers who are members of Milk Marque will be affected directly by the action proposed by Milk Marque as a result of the Monopolies and Mergers Commission report. There may be indirect effects on others.

Hens

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many prosecutions have been brought against United Kingdom egg producers for being in contravention of legislation for the welfare of laying hens; and how many prosecutions there have been in other European Union countries in each of the last three years. [96753]

Mr. Morley: The number of prosecutions of UK egg producers brought by UK Agriculture Departments for offences in breach of animal welfare legislation in each of the last three years was two in 1996, four in 1997 and nil in 1998. Records of prosecutions taken by other bodies such as local authorities and the RSPCA are not kept centrally. Requests or information concerning prosecutions in other EU countries should be addressed to the individual member states.

Beef Exports

Mr. Drew: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish the figures, by country of destination, for the export of British beef in (a) the last month prior to the introduction of the ban and for (b) the same month 12 months earlier. [96296]

Ms Quin [holding answer 29 October 1999]: The table shows UK exports of beef during March 1996, the last month prior to the beef ban, and the same month 12 months earlier, as recorded in the Official Overseas Trade Statistics. British beef is not separately identifiable from that of non-UK origin in the data.

Pesticides Safety Directorate

Helen Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to conduct a Quinquennial Review of the Pesticides Safety Directorate. [97430]

Mr. Nick Brown: The Pesticides Safety Directorate was established as an Executive Agency on 1 April 1993. I am today announcing the Quinquennial Review of this Agency, which will include an evaluation of the performance of the Agency, and reconsideration of the Prior Options relating to Agency status as well as the options required under Better Quality Services. If appropriate, the existing Framework Document will also be reviewed.

The terms of reference for the review are as follows:

to conduct an evaluation of the performance of the Agency since its inception;

to consider in the light of this evaluation, and the views of customers and other stakeholders, whether among the available options Agency status remains the most cost effective way of achieving MAFF's aims; and if the review concludes that the Pesticides Safety Directorate should continue to function as an Executive Agency, then to consider what changes, if any, are required to the Framework Document in the light of the findings of the review. If, however, the review concludes that a different delivery system would provide high quality, more effective and better value for money services, to set out the rationale and to recommend an appropriate option to Ministers.

The review will be conducted by officials from MAFF working with officials from PSD in close consultation with the Cabinet Office and Treasury and with the Scottish Executive and the National Assembly for Wales.

It will draw on and take account of other relevant work, for example the considerations feeding into the White Paper and Bill to establish the Food Standards Agency, and other relevant material.

We shall be setting out the arrangements whereby interested parties will be given an opportunity to submit their views.

I hope to publish the outcome of the review in the second quarter of 2000.

Veterinary Medicines Directorate

Helen Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, what plans he has to conduct a Quinquennial Review of the Veterinary Medicines Directorate. [97429]

Mr. Nick Brown: The Veterinary Medicines Directorate was established as an Executive Agency on 2 April 1990. I am today announcing the Quinquennial Review of this Agency, which will include an evaluation of the performance of the Agency, and reconsideration of the Prior Options relating to Agency status as well as the options required under Better Quality Services. If appropriate, the existing Framework Document will also be reviewed.

The terms of reference for the review are as follows:

to conduct an evaluation of the performance of the Agency since the date of the last review;

to consider in the light of this evaluation, and the views of customers and other stakeholders, whether among the available options Agency status remains the most cost effective way of achieving MAFF's aims; and if the review concludes that the Veterinary Medicines Directorate should continue to function as an Executive Agency, then to consider what changes, if any, are required to the Framework Document in the light of the findings of the review. If, however, the review concludes that a different delivery system would provide high quality, more effective and better value for money services, to set out the rationale and to recommend an appropriate option to Ministers.

The review will be conducted by officials from MAFF working with officials from VMD in close consultation with the Cabinet Office and Treasury. It will draw on and take account of other relevant work, for example the considerations feeding into the White Paper and Bill to establish the Food Standards Agency, and other relevant material.

We shall be setting out the arrangements whereby interested parties will be given an opportunity to submit their views.

I hope to publish the outcome of the review in the second quarter of 2000.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Fair Trade

11. Ms Ward: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what progress has been made in promoting the purchase of fair trade goods by Departments and other public bodies. [95590]

Mr. Foulkes: My Department takes every opportunity to promote fair trade products and also to support ethical trading in mainstream business. As my hon. Friend knows, fair trade tea and coffee are available in all the Department for International Development (DFID) outlets and in the House of Commons. I understand that a number of Departments have considered stocking fair trade products.

16. Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what progress there has been among UK manufacturers in adopting a fair trade approach to the purchase of agricultural commodities from developing countries; and if she will make a statement. [95595]

Clare Short: A growing number of products have obtained the FairTrade Mark from the Fairtrade Foundation. Seventy-five such products (covering coffee, tea, cocoa and honey) are now available, compared to 50 a year ago. The FairTrade Mark tends to be applied for more by alternative trading organisations than large UK manufacturers.

Companies can also trade in a way which has a positive impact on the livelihoods of the poor but does not meet the requirements for certification through the FairTrade Foundation. For example, companies can work with the Ethical Trading Initiative, which concentrates on codes of conduct for responsible business. The Ethical Trading Initiative now has fifteen members; one of the most recent is the Tea Sourcing Partnership, whose members represent 60 per cent. of tea packed in the UK.

Multinational Companies

12. Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent assessment she has made of the impact of multinational companies on developing countries. [95591]

Clare Short: The private sector and multinational companies are key to achieving the economic growth necessary to meet the international poverty reduction targets.

We have established a Business Partnership Unit to strengthen our links with the private sector. We have also established a resource centre to help business to access information, expertise and contacts to help them implement socially responsible business and examine and monitor their impact in poor countries. We have provided funding and support to the Ethical Trading Initiative which brings together business, trade unions and non-governmental organisations to examine supply chains in poorer countries against an agreed code of conduct, including key commitments on labour standards.

Zimbabwe

13. Mr. Walter: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what representations she has made to the Government of Zimbabwe regarding United Kingdom assistance to the land resettlement programme. [95592]

Clare Short: We believe that land reforms are needed, as part of a strategy to reduce poverty in Zimbabwe. We have consistently told the Government that as part of such a strategy we would be prepared to support a land reform programme that is transparent, cost-effective, properly managed and on which local people are consulted.

Fraud

14. Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on measures to combat fraud in the provision of overseas aid. [95593]

Clare Short: My Department has strong control systems designed to ensure regularity, propriety and value for money in the expenditure of our budget. These systems are reviewed by our internal auditors and they are regularly updated. Our systems are also subject to examination by the National Audit Office (NAO).

There were nine cases of fraud reported in our 1998–99 Annual Fraud Return. There were no reported cases involving the Department for International Development (DFID) staff. In all cases action has been taken to improve systems of control to avoid any recurrence. Legal action is pending for the recovery of DFID funds in three of these cases.

World Trade Organisation

15. Mr. Heppell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what discussions she has had with non-governmental organisations on the implications for developing countries of the agenda for the Seattle ministerial conference of the World Trade Organisation. [95594]

Clare Short: We are keen to promote dialogue and discussion with civil society. Ministers and officials from across Government meet regularly with non-governmental organisations and a wide range of other civil society representatives, to discuss trade-related issues. On 2 March, I made a speech entitled "Future Multilateral Trade Negotiations: A Development Round?" which has been circulated to NGOs and more widely. A copy is in the Library of the House.

This morning I made a speech to 100 civil society representatives where I set out how we can make the next trade Round work for the world's poor. I will also be speaking at a conference with NGOs and civil society at Seattle on 29 November.

20. Mr. David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps her Department is taking to ensure that developing countries will derive substantial development benefits from the next World Trade Organisation conference. [95599]

Clare Short: We are working bilaterally and with a wide range of other organisations, to help build the capacity of developing countries to participate effectively in the multilateral trading system. A full list of the work we are supporting has been placed in the Library of the House.

It is not widely appreciated that three quarters of the members of the World Trade Organisation are developing countries. This means that they are in a position to make great gains and improve their development prospects in the next trade round. It also means that agreement in the next round is dependant on developing country support. We have over the last two years provided £10 million to support training in developing countries negotiating capacity and ability to make use of trade opportunities. We are also working to encourage the EU, World Bank and other support agencies.

Debt Relief

17. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on progress in relieving the indebtedness of highly indebted poor countries. [95596]

Clare Short: International agreement on a substantial revision to the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries (HIPC) Initiative was reached at the Annual Meetings of the World Bank and the IMF at the end of September. The new HIPC framework will deliver deeper debt relief, and provide this relief more quickly and to more countries. A comprehensive financing package is still being worked out. I made an additional pledge of $50 million towards the multilateral costs of HIPC, bringing the UK's total commitment to $221 million (approx £135 million). We are pressing the European Commission to bring forward proposals to make a substantial contribution towards the revised HIPC, as they announced at the Annual Meetings.

I very much welcome the agreement in Washington to tie HIPC debt relief to national poverty reduction strategies. The strategies will be country specific and developed through an open, consultative process which is led by national governments. However each will discuss policy options and propose how all resources, not just debt service savings, are used for poverty elimination and the achievement of the international development targets.

22. Sir Sydney Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will report progress on initiatives to reduce the debt of and poverty in the heavily indebted poor countries. [95601]

Clare Short: Agreement on a substantial revision to the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries (HIPC) Initiative was reached at the Annual Meetings of the World Bank and the IMF at the end of September. The new framework will deliver deeper debt relief, and provide this relief more quickly and to more countries. The debt relief will be strongly focused on supporting poverty reduction strategies. A comprehensive financing package is still being worked out. I made an additional pledge of $50 million towards the costs, bringing the UK's total commitment to $221 million (approx £135 million). We are pressing the European Commission to firm up their proposals to a contribution of at least 1 billion euro. If this is agreed the UK contribution to the trust fund will rise to $400 million.

23. Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what her policy is on the attachment of conditions for debt relief in the case of heavily indebted poor countries. [95602]

Clare Short: I very much welcome the new international consensus that the purpose of debt relief for the heavily indebted poor countries is to allow countries to tackle poverty more effectively. We are extremely pleased that the Annual Meetings of the World Bank and the IMF in September agreed that the provision of debt relief under the revised Heavily Indebted Poor Countries (HIPC) initiative should be tied to supporting national poverty reduction strategies.

Mongolia

18. Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what development aid her Department provided to Mongolia in 1998–99; what aid it plans to provide in the current year; and if she will make a statement. [95597]

Clare Short: Most UK aid to Mongolia is channelled through multilateral agencies. For 1997, the total UK contribution to Mongolia through multilateral agencies was estimated at £5.7 million . This figure is set to rise slightly over the next two to three years. Figures for our multilateral commitments in 1998 will be available next February.

UK bilateral development assistance totalled £470,000 in 1998–99, including the Small Grants Scheme and support for UK Non Government Organisations' work through the Joint Funding Scheme. Projects include support to street children, provision of basic education services and income generation for households in the poorest provinces of Mongolia.

Kosovo

19. Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will estimate the amount spent on aid in Kosovo to date. [95598]

Clare Short: An estimated spending figure for all donors is not yet available. The World Bank is currently collating figures provided by donors in preparation for the Donors' Conference to be held on November 17 in Brussels.

Prior to the end of the air campaign, my Department spent approximately £40 million in humanitarian assistance in response to the crisis. We have committed a further £62 million since the refugees were able to return.

21. Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what humanitarian aid is committed for the current year to assist the people of Kosovo. [95600]

Clare Short: Since the end of the air campaign my Department has committed some £62 million in assistance to Kosovo. Our strategy has six strands which have been agreed in consultation with other donors. These include support for the United Nations-led international civil administration; human rights promotion including the provision of objective information and accessible justice for all Kosovars; clearing mines, unexploded ordnance and booby traps; providing relief to returnees and internally displaced people; restoring essential elements of the health system; and supporting emergency rehabilitation to restore essential community and public infrastructure, particularly power and water supplies.

24. Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on current assistance to Kosovo. [95603]

Clare Short: Our strategy for assistance to Kosovo has six strands, which have been agreed in consultation with other donors and agencies active in Kosovo. These include support for the United Nations-led international civil administration, both through the provision of personnel and payment of stipends for local public employees. We are supporting the promotion of human rights; this includes the provision of objective information, particularly through support for independent media, and accessible justice for all Kosovars, through funding legal advice centres. We have provided emergency response teams to map and clear mines and unexploded ordnance. We have funded humanitarian agencies to provide relief to returnees. We are restoring essential elements of the health system, including Pristina University Hospital and local clinics. We have established an Emergency Infrastructure Engineering Unit which is helping local authorities to re-establish basic power and water supplies; we are also beginning emergency work on Pristina airport to keep essential supplies coming into Kosovo and enable 24 hour civil air access during the winter months.

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list the non-military support given in aid to Kosovo by the UK in 1999; and if she will estimate the total UNHCR aid to Kosovo over that period. [96904]

Clare Short: My Department gave £500,000 to United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (UNHCR) in early March 1999 to enable them to respond flexibly to developments in Kosovo and the neighbouring states. In response to the refugee crisis we spent some £39 million in direct operations and in support of agency interventions in Albania, Macedonia and Montenegro.

Following NATO entry, my Department has committed some £59 million in assistance to Kosovo. Our strategy has six strands which have been agreed in consultation with other donors. These include support for the United Nations-led international civil administration; human rights promotion including the provision of objective information and accessible justice for all Kosovars; clearing mines, and unexploded ordnance; providing relief to returnees and internally displaced people; restoring essential elements of the health system; and supporting emergency rehabilitation to restore essential community and public infrastructure, particularly power and water supplies. We have recently committed £3 million for work to keep Pristina airport open for civilian air operations through the winter.

UNHCR have appealed for $332.9 million for Kosovo related work in 1999. Figures for their spending in Kosovo itself are not available. The UK has contributed some £5.8 million of in-kind assistance (seconded staff, convoys, airlifts) and $4.4 million in grants to support their activities in Kosovo.

Know-how Fund

25. Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what new proposals she has to extend the know-how fund in the Caucasus. [95604]

Clare Short: We have bilateral (Know How) programmes in all three countries of the South Caucasus and we plan to increase the level of our assistance to the region. We have no plans to develop such programmes in the North Caucasus.

St. Helena

26. Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development when she expects to make an announcement about the provision of an airfield on the island of St: Helena. [95605]

Clare Short: The results of a preliminary study into the technical and regulatory feasibility of establishing air access to St. Helena are currently under consideration. I am aware of the strong lobby for air access but the costs are considerable and obviously not feasible unless the provision of such facilities can provide an economic return.

Poverty Reduction

27. Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what discussions she has had with her colleagues in the Department of Trade and Industry on the impact of export credit guarantees on poverty reduction efforts in less-developed countries. [95606]

Clare Short: I have had various informal discussions with the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (DTI) on this issue and my Department are participating in the review of ECGD announced by DTI on 27 July. Also in July, I wrote to the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, setting out my views on how ECGD could make a greater contribution to fulfilling the Government's development objectives set out in the White Paper on 'International Development: Eliminating Poverty'.

HIV/AIDS

28. Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assistance the United Kingdom is providing to combat the spread of AIDS in southern Africa. [95607]

Clare Short: We have provided over £40 million in the last five years to countries in southern Africa to help prevent the spread of HIV/AIDS and to deal with its social and economic impacts. We are working with national and regional programmes to promote behaviour change, school and peer education for young people, social marketing of condoms and treatment for sexually transmitted diseases. We are assessing the impact of HIV/AIDS in all of our new programmes in the region and we are including measures to reduce or mitigate the impact of AIDS where possible.

We plan to support the implementation of SADC's regional HIV/AIDS strategy, working with other donors. At national level our programmes include support for the South African National AIDS Control Programme and development of the HIV/AIDS National Plan In Mozambique. In South Africa, support is being provided for a joint Government/Private Sector/Trade Union initiative with mining communities to promote safe sex practices and to deal effectively with sexually transmitted diseases. DFID has funded the production and distribution, throughout South Africa, Botswana, Lesotho, Swaziland and Namibia, of school materials targeted at 12 to 16 year olds which highlight HIV/AIDS issues. We have just approved a £35 million contribution to support Malawi's sexual and reproductive health programme over six years. My Department is considering new proposals on HIV/AIDS in Zimbabwe (up to £15 million over five years), Zambia and Mozambique.

Ghana

29. Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on UK aid policy in relation to Ghana. [95608]

Clare Short: Ghana is a major Sub-Saharan country partner for our development programme. The central objective of the Ghanaian Government's development agenda as set out in "Ghana Vision 2020" is to improve the quality of life for all Ghanaians, to generate employment and to reduce poverty. This is consistent with our White Paper commitment to help countries achieve the international development goals.

We provided £26 million in 1997–98 financial year and are providing in the region of £40 million this financial year.

We have provided assistance to help the Government of Ghana meet their development objectives in health, education, water, rural infrastructure, natural resources and forestry, through sector-wide approaches and budgetary and public service reforms.

Sierra Leone

30. Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on her Department's policy towards Sierra Leone. [95609]

Clare Short: Britain's policy towards Sierra Leone is directed at building a lasting peace and security and promoting poverty reduction and sustainable development.

For the sake of its beleaguered and war-weary people, we are doing all we can to support the implementation of the peace settlement signed at Lomé on 7 July 1999. Our first priority, in common with the rest of the international community, is to help create security and stability through the urgent implementation of the disarmament, demobilisation and reintegration programme. As well as providing humanitarian assistance directly to communities and to the refugees of war we are also providing emergency budgetary support to enable the country meet its debt servicing obligations, a pre-requisite to obtaining IMF and other financial support. My Department is also preparing a development programme which will contribute towards the establishment of effective government, at local and national levels.

Departmental Publications

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list the title of research studies, audits and surveys (a) being undertaken and (b) commissioned by her Department for completion within (i) 1999 and (ii) 2000, stating in each case whether the results are due to be published. [95510]

Clare Short: The number of research studies, audits and surveys being undertaken or commissioned by the Department in 1999 and 2000 is too large to list (at acceptable cost). Research studies are published. Audits and surveys may be for internal purposes in which case they are not normally published; or they may be carried out on behalf of an overseas government, whose permission would need to be sought for publication.

Angola

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much money the United Nations has calculated is necessary to meet current humanitarian needs in Angola; how much has been offered in response to the appeal; and how much the British Government have offered. [96081]

Clare Short: The resumption of fighting in December 1989 in Angola has led to a significant increase in the number of internally displaced and war-affected people. The original requirement of the 1999 UN Appeal for Angola, US$66,665,852, has been revised upwards to US$110,840,321 as the levels of humanitarian need became apparent. As of October 1999, total funds available amounted to US$82,127,986. The UK has committed £1.7 million through UN agencies towards the 1999 UN Appeal and we are also providing some £3.75 million for food aid through WFP. We have also committed a further £1.8 million through international Non Governmental Organisations and the International Committee for the Red Cross in 1999.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many people in Angola are calculated to be in need of humanitarian help; and how many people current humanitarian services are reaching. [96082]

Clare Short: The number of internally displaced and people affected by the conflict in Angola has increased significantly since the resumption of fighting in December 1998. According to the United Nations, there are approximately two million people in need of humanitarian relief. In addition the UN estimate that there are three million people living in areas that are inaccessible and whose condition therefore cannot be assessed.

In October, the World Food Programme distributed food aid to a total of 1.12 million people.

Macedonia and Albania

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on the progress being made in assisting Macedonia and Albania to recover from the consequences of the war in Kosovo; what specific projects are being funded; and if she will place detailed documents on these matters in the Library. [96083]

Clare Short: We are contributing towards the care and protection needs of remaining refugees in Albania and Macedonia, ensuring that outstanding pledges and promises made to refugee-hosting communities are fully honoured and taking forward pledges of longer term bilateral technical assistance.

For this calendar year, the European Union has a planned expenditure of 56.5 million for Albania and 22.1 million euro for Macedonia. The United Kingdom contributes 15.5 per cent. to the EU budget.

In Macedonia a medium term strategy is being developed. So far we have been developing support centres for small and medium enterprises in the regions of Gostivar, Tetevo and Ohrid; providing advice to the Government of Macedonia on short term budget management, financial planning and accountability issues; and working with the World Bank to develop a longer term programme of reform for public expenditure and institutional structures within the Government. We will be providing training on EU negotiating skills.

In Albania we are supporting the development of rural communities in the north of the country; providing strategic advice to the Albanian Customs Service as part of a wider European Commission programme; supporting the establishment of a network of citizen's advice and information centres; and, in co-operation with the World Bank, working to improve primary health care in the Tirana region. A mission will be undertaken this month to develop future strategy.

We commissioned a study of the post-crisis trade environment in the Balkans, which identified the trade development needs of countries in the region and proposed ways in which these might be met. This study is being placed in the Library. Country strategies will be made available as they are completed.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Marriage Support Funding

Mr. Pollard: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when he will announce his formal response to Sir Graham Hart's review of marriage support funding. [96629]

Jane Kennedy: Sir Graham Hart's report on marriage support funding will be published shortly, together with the Lord Chancellor's response.

Tobacco and Alcohol Smuggling

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what advice his Department gives to licensing magistrates on action to take against clubs, pubs and other licensed premises where smuggled or bootlegged tobacco and alcohol have been sold either by the licensee and staff or by customers. [96645]

Jane Kennedy: The Lord Chancellor's Department has given no advice to licensing magistrates on action to take in the circumstances described. Guidance provided jointly by the Magistrates Association and the Justices' Clerks Society refers generally to the fitness of the applicant for a licence but not specifically to smuggled or bootlegged tobacco and alcohol.

Motoring Offences

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what guidance determines the choice by magistrates of sentences for motoring offences. [96642]

Jane Kennedy: Within the statutory sentencing framework, the nature and severity of the sentences which magistrates impose for motoring offences, as with all offences, are matters for the independent exercise of judicial discretion. Guidance on sentencing in motoring cases exists in the form of judgments by the higher courts and guidelines issued by the Magistrates Association.

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what processes are in place to monitor the appropriateness of sentences imposed by magistrates for motoring offences. [96643]

Jane Kennedy: Sentences imposed by magistrates for motoring offences may, as with all offences, be appealed to the Crown Court.

TREASURY

Pensions

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are the annual pensions liabilities of the European Communities; and what is the projected figure for 2020. [96579]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Appropriations for pensions and severance grants for the institutions of the European Community were 466.8 million euro in 1998, and 501 million euro in 1999.

This includes Retirement pensions, Invalidity pensions, Survivors' pensions and Severance grants.

The EC budgetary authorities have not agreed estimates for 2020.

Von Weizsäcker-Dehaene-Simon Report

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the cost was (i) to the Communities budget and (ii) to the UK of producing the von Weizsäcker/Dehaene/Simon report to the Commission; who instigated it; what UK assistance was provided; and if he will make a statement. [96578]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Von Weizsäcker/Dehaene/Simon Report is an independent report, produced at the request of the President of the European Commission, Mr. Romano Prodi.

Mr. Brady: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list all shareholdings currently held by Her Majesty's Government, together with an approximate market value for each where this is available. [96403]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The information is shown in the table. This shows the nominal values of government shareholdings held at 31 March 1999, as reported to the Treasury, excluding shares held for possible distribution as bonus shares to eligible shareholders. An approximate market value, based on their closing prices on 31 March 1999, is also shown for those of the shares quoted on the London Stock Exchange. This information is not available in other cases, either because the assets held are not marketable or because a market value could not be obtained without disproportionate cost.

Tobacco and Alcohol Smuggling

Mr. Alan Campbell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the estimated loss to the Treasury through smuggled tobacco and alcohol into the United Kingdom in each year since 1997. [96774]

Miss Melanie Johnson: HM Customs and Excise assess the total amount of revenue (excise duty and VAT) losses through all forms of tobacco smuggling in 1998 at about £1.7 billion. There is no comparable assessment for total revenue losses through all forms of alcohol smuggling.

The revenue lost through cross-Channel smuggling of alcohol and tobacco in 1998 is estimated at £220 million and £1 billion respectively. Comparable figures for 1997 are £180 million for alcohol and £790 million for tobacco.

Financial Services Authority

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the Economic Secretary last met the Head of the Financial Services Authority; and what matters were discussed. [96957]

Miss Melanie Johnson: I meet the Chairman of the Financial Services Authority on a regular basis and discuss a wide range of issues.

Departmental Accounts

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what methods of depreciation his Department will apply in the current financial year to fixed assets in the preparation of departmental resource accounting balance sheets. [97048]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Treasury will be applying straight line depreciation to relevant fixed assets for the current financial year. The Treasury's depreciation methods are in accordance with the Treasury Resource Accounting Manual, which is itself underpinned by the Financial Reporting Standard 15 'Tangible Fixed Assets' issued by the Accounting Standards Board.

Blood-alcohol Limit

Mr. Walter: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the impact on Treasury revenue from excise duty, value added tax and income tax of a reduction in the blood-alcohol limit for drivers. [96903]

Mr. Timms: No such estimate is available.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Imports

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has to increase the imports of (a) food and (b) wine from New Zealand and Australia; and if he will make a statement. [96620]

Ms Quin: I have been asked to reply.

The Government have no plans to increase imports of food or wine from any particular country.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Pensions

Mr. O'Hara: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the percentage value of the basic state pension (a) as a percentage of average earnings and (b) in 1999 prices; and what it will be in (i) 2000, (ii) 2010, (iii) 2020, (iv) 2030 and (v) 2050 if it is increased only in line with prices, (1) assuming average earnings continue to grow at the same average rate as they have since 1979 and (2) assuming average earnings increase at 2 per cent. more per year than the retail prices index. [95633]

Mr. Rooker: The information requested is in the table.

Note:

Child Benefit

Mr. Alan Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many children aged (a) 0 to five years and (b) five or more receive child benefit. [96862]

Angela Eagle: It is estimated that, at May 1999 Child Benefit was in payment in respect of 3,385,860 children aged 0 to four years and 9,431,020 children aged five or more years.

Exceptional Hardship Payments

Ms Perham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much was spent on exceptional hardship payments (housing benefit) in the years 1996–97, 1997–98 and 1998–99 in (a) the London Borough of Redbridge, (b) the London Borough of Newham, (c) the London Borough of Havering, (d) the London Borough of Waltham Forest and (e) the London Borough of Barking and Dagenham; and in relation to exceptional hardship payments in the above years, what was the (i) amount of Government money provided to and (ii) permitted spending totals set for each of the above councils. [96653]

Angela Eagle: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is in the table.

Notes:

1. The Permitted Totals for the years 1996–97 and 1997–98 were based on a percentage of each local authority's expenditure on rent allowance cases in year, and was not therefore a fixed amount. However, for 1998–99 the Permitted Total was a fixed amount based on 1995–96 expenditure on deregulated tenancies referred to the rent officer.

2. The expenditure figures quoted are based on information provided by the local authorities.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate, for each of the last five years, the proportion of recipients of Housing Benefit whose gross rent is above the cap set by the rent officer. [96672]

Angela Eagle: The information is not available as no central data exist to give the base for such estimation.

Council Tax (Pensioners)

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the modelled average levels of (a) gross council tax bills and (b) net council tax bills of pensioner households, in (i) 1998–99 and (ii) 1999–2000 which are produced by his Policy Simulation Model. [96673]

Angela Eagle: The information is in the table.

Average annual council tax bills of pensioner households from the Department's policy simulation model

	Gross council tax bill	Net council tax bill
1998–99	630	470
1999–2000	670	510

Notes:

1. Figures are rounded to the nearest £10.

2. The 1998–99 figures are based on the 1995–96 Family Resources Survey uprated to 1998–99 prices, benefit levels and caseloads. Council Tax benefit caseloads and average amounts are calibrated to DSS forecasts consistent with the 1998 Comprehensive Spending Review.

3. The 1999–2000 figures are based on the 1996–97 Family Resources Survey uprated to 1999–2000 prices, benefit levels and caseloads. Council Tax benefit caseloads and average amounts are calibrated to DSS forecasts consistent with the 1999 Departmental Report.

4. A "pensioner household" is defined as a household containing a person aged 60 or over within the head benefit unit.

5. Gross Council Tax is defined as Council Tax liability for the year, net of any discounts. Net Council Tax is defined as Gross Council Tax net of any Council Tax Benefit payable.

6. Gross Council Tax estimates in the Policy Simulation Model are based on data provided by the Department of Environment, Transport and the Regions which are then uprated to the relevant policy year using DSS forecasts.

Pensioner Households (Tynemouth)

Mr. Alan Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many pensioner households there are in Tynemouth. [96867]

Mr. Rooker: The administration of Retirement Pension is a matter for Peter Mathison, the Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Alexis Cleveland to Mr. Alan Campbell, dated 2 November 1999:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked Mr Mathison to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about how many pensioner households there are in Tynemouth. As Mr Mathison is currently away on leave I am replying.

The information you require is not readily available in the requested format. The database from which the information can be extracted is currently being used in connection with the Winter Fuel Payment (WFP) exercise. To interrupt that exercise at this time could jeopardise payments to customers, which I am sure you will agree is not acceptable.

On completion of the WFP exercise in January 2000, we can obtain the information you seek should you still require it. I would be obliged if you could advise us accordingly.

In the meantime, you may be interested to note the following. The total number of benefit accounts in respect of customers over pension age in North Tyneside, including Tynemouth, is 31,000. The figure includes 6,500 accounts with Income Support interest and relates to individual customers rather than households.

I hope this is helpful.

State Pension

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what was the total expenditure on the state pension in the United Kingdom and the total expenditure on the state pension in Scotland in the last financial year; and if he will estimate expenditure on this for (a) 2001–02, (b) 2002–03 and (c) 2003–04; [96714]

(2) how many pensioners in the United Kingdom and Scotland are in receipt of the state pension; and if he will estimate the number who will be in receipt of the state pension in (a) 2001–02, (b) 2002–03 and (c) 2003–04. [96715]

Mr. Rooker: Figures for outturn and planned Retirement Pension expenditure and estimated numbers receiving Retirement Pension in respect of Great Britain from 1993–94 to 2001–02 were published in the Departmental Report 1999 (Cm 4214). No estimates are available for 2001–03 and 2003–04.

An estimate of Retirement Pension expenditure and estimated numbers in Scotland for 1998–99 is calculated from administrative data from the Pensioners Strategy Computer System. Similar data are not available for future years.

Such information as is available is in the tables.

DEFENCE

In-service Dates

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the expected in-service dates are for (a) the Eurofighter, (b) HMS Albion and Bulwark, (c) the Future Aircraft Carrier, (d) the Bowman communication system and (e) the Trigat anti-tank weapon; and if he will make a statement. [94786]

Mr. Hoon [holding answer 20 October 1999]: The in-service date of Eurofighter, which is defined as delivery of the first aircraft, is June 2002.

The in-service dates of HMS Albion and HMS Bulwark are currently planned as March 2002 and March 2003 respectively. We are, however, aware that programme congestion at the shipyard will entail some slippage to these dates. The true extent of the slippage will not be known until Marconi Naval Systems, the contractor, has agreed a revised programme with the Defence Procurement Agency. Initiatives to minimise the slippage are being pursued.

The in-service dates of the Future Aircraft Carriers are planned to be 2012 and 2015.

The in-service date of Bowman is March 2002. The date is, however, under review and I will write to the hon. Member when the review is complete.

The in-service date of Medium Range Trigat is 2005.

UN Standby Arrangement

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the Ro-Ro ferries referred to in the Memorandum of Understanding concerning the UN standby arrangement system are civilian; and what discussions he has held with civilian operators about them. [95253]

Mr. Hoon: The two Ro-Ro ferries declared as potentially available for operations in the UK's Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) with the UN are run and crewed by the Royal Fleet Auxiliary, although the vessels themselves are chartered commercially.

The MOU also reflects plans to increase the number of Ro-Ro ferries to six as a result of enhancements announced in the Strategic Defence Review. My Department is currently evaluating civilian and military options (including a combination of both) for providing this capability.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what units have been notified that they are covered by the Memorandum of Understanding concerning the UN standby arrangement system. [95251]

Mr. Hoon: Individual units have not been specifically notified. The Memorandum of Understanding with the UN under the UN Standby Arrangement System lists a range of forces and capabilities drawn from the pool of Joint Rapid Reaction Forces. The Strategic Defence Review stated that these forces would be available for operations of all kinds across the crisis spectrum and under NATO, Western European Union, UN, OSCE coalition or national auspices.

In the event of a request from the UN for UK military support and ministerial agreement to contribute to a specific peacekeeping operation, the Ministry of Defence will decide how that support can best be provided. The decision on which unit to task from the Joint Rapid Reaction Forces will be based on an assessment of factors such as the nature, duration and location of the operation, and other ongoing commitments.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if troops committed to peacekeeping in East Timor are referred to in the Memorandum of Understanding concerning the UN standby arrangement system. [95252]

Mr. Hoon: The commitment of UK troops to the Australian-led International Force in East Timor (INTERFET) reflects our willingness to support the UN but is not covered by the Memorandum of Understanding concerning the US Standby Arrangements System. This is because the Standby Arrangements are only activated in relation to UN-commanded peacekeeping operations and not for a UN-mandated international force as in the case of East Timor or Kosovo.

Deployment Days (Army)

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the average annual deployment days for Army units from 1995 to the last date for which figures are available. [95323]

Mr. Spellar: We do not hold figures for annual deployment days by Army units, and such figures could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Training (Armed Forces)

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the assessed minimum training requirement for operational effectiveness for HM Armed Forces, by trade, over one year's service. [95325]

Mr. Hoon: The Armed Forces include a wide range of trades and specialisations and the necessary amount of training in a year varies accordingly.

Operational commanders at all levels ensure that all the personnel under their command, regardless of trade, are properly trained, in a timely and cost-effective manner, to meet the operational responsibilities and demands placed upon them.

Multi-role Armoured Vehicle

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the contracts for the production of the multi-role armoured vehicle have been signed; what the size of the contract proposed is; and who the partners to the purchase are. [95864]

Mr. Spellar: We expect the contract for the development of the multi-role armoured vehicle to be signed soon. To protect third party commercial confidences, I am withholding information relating to the likely value of the contract under Exemption 13 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information until the contract is signed. Our partner in this programme is Germany and we hope that the Netherlands will join as soon as practicable after contract signature.

Landing Platform Helicopter Carrier

Mr. Burnett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans the Government have to order another Landing Platform Helicopter Carrier. [96094]

Mr. Hoon: We currently have no requirement for a further Landing Platform Helicopter Carrier.

NATO

Mr. Burnett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps he is taking to ensure that European partner countries shoulder a proportionate burden of contributions to NATO. [96093]

Mr. Hoon: The achievement of NATO's aims depends on the equitable sharing among all Allies of the roles, risks, and responsibilities, as well as the benefits, of common defence. NATO Defence Planning gives practical effect to this burden sharing. Force goals, which set challenging but realistic targets for each Ally, are designed to ensure that our collective defence arrangements continue to provide for the full range of Alliance missions.

In addition, the development of the European Security and Defence Identity (ESDI) will enable European Allies to make a more coherent and effective contribution to the missions and activities of the Alliance. This is being taken ahead in step with NATO's Defence Capabilities Initiative (DCI), which is designed to ensure that all Allies are able to contribute to NATO's effectiveness. The UK is playing a leading role in both of these initiatives.

European Joint Procurement Structures

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the efficacy of (a) European joint procurement structures and (b) domestic procurement structures. [96227]

Mr. Hoon [holding answer 28 October 1999]: The UK has procurement programmes managed by both the Organisation Conjointe de Co-operation en matier d'Armement (OCCAR) and the NATO Eurofighter and Tornado Management Agency (NETMA), the latter being a NATO agency. Both provide a valuable service in the management of co-operative programmes and we expect to see OCCAR expand its operations next year following achievement of legal status.

As for domestic procurement structures, I have every confidence that the Smart Procurement initiative, together with new Defence Procurement Agency and Defence Logistics Organisation, will match the expectations of the Strategic Defence Review.

BVRAAM Missiles

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what safeguards have been offered to ensure that Britain maintains control over the sale of Raytheon supplied BVRAAM missiles as part of the package with Eurofighter Typhoons to third countries. [96471]

Mr. Hoon: The US Secretary of Defence has given undertakings that the US Department of Defence would support the export of Raytheon supplied BVRAAM missiles as part of the package with Eurofighter to certain countries, and proposed that other sales should be reviewed by a joint US/UK group. In the event of the UK Government selecting the Raytheon proposal for BVRAAM, the details would need to be agreed and incorporated in a Memorandum of Understanding.

Aerospace Company Mergers

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the effect of the DaimlerChrysler Aerospace and Aerospatiale Matra merger on British procurement; and if he will make a statement. [96475]

Mr. Hoon: The proposed merger will be subject to regulatory approval by the European Commission and, as such, it would not be appropriate for me to comment on the issue at present. However, the effects of any restructuring by companies in which the UK has an interest are considered very carefully by the Department. Our views are given to the regulatory authorities in confidence at the appropriate time.

Indonesia

Mr. Stinchcombe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what funding the Government are providing to Defence Export Services Organisation in the current financial year in relation to Indonesia. [96587]

Mr. Kilfoyle: The provision relating to DESO representation in Indonesia for the current financial year is £80,000. Other DESO costs relating to Indonesia are not separately identified.

Disposals

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much money was received from one-off disposals in financial years 1997–98, 1998–99 and 1999–2000; and if he will estimate the amount he will raise in financial years 2000–01 and 2001–02. [96656]

Mr. Kilfoyle: The value of disposals achieved in financial years 1997–98 and 1998–99, and the amount forecast for this financial year is set out in the table. It has not been possible to differentiate between the receipts generated through large scale one-off disposals and through rolling disposals programmes for smaller value but larger volume items. Specific estimates for disposals are not available for financial years 2000–01 and 2001–02.

Horse Guards Tattoo

Mr. Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make it his policy to continue the tradition of the field gun competition in the proposed Horse Guards Tattoo. [96736]

Mr. Hoon: A Military Tattoo will continue to be held in London from 2001 onwards. Using the spectacular backdrop of Horse Guards Parade, the Tattoo will build on the traditional pageantry that has been such a popular element of the Royal Tournament over the years and a special feature of London in summer.

However we will not continue with the Royal Navy Field Gun competition. In part this is because the event cannot readily be run at Horse Guards Parade due to the surface and the special fixings that are required to meet stringent Health and Safety regulations. But also, the Field Gun competition accounted for more than half of the personnel resources used for the Tournament, some 16,000 personnel-days each year. This could not be justified in the light of operational commitments and the other demands placed on our service personnel.

The Royal Navy is now keen to look to the future and concentrate on supporting events that more accurately reflect the training and operational activities of the Service in the next millennium.

Surface Ship Fuel

Mr. Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the Royal Navy's budget for surface ship fuel in (a) the current calendar year and (b) the current financial year; and how much of that budget has been spent to date. [96737]

Mr. Spellar: In the current calendar year, the fuel budget for HM warships and RFAs is £27.314 million. Up to 30 September 1999, £20.854 million of this budget had been spent.

In the financial year beginning 1 April 1999, the fuel budget for HM warships and RFAs is £28.424 million. Up to 30 September 1999, £13.7 million of this budget had been spent.

Common Security and Defence Identity

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the WEU Situation Centre and Planning Unit, the WEU Satellite Centre in Torrejon, Spain, and the WEU Institute for Security Studies in Paris will be incorporated into the EU. [96970]

Mr. Hoon: A decision on the structures the EU will need to assume its responsibilities regarding Common Security and Defence policy is not expected until the end of the year 2000—the timeframe agreed at the European Council meeting in June this year.

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to create mechanisms to allow the involvement of WEU member states that are not members of the European Union in EU-led operations. [96972]

Mr. Hoon: At the Cologne European Council, Heads of State and Government agreed to develop arrangements to allow all non-EU European Allies to take part to the fullest possible extent in EU-led crisis management operations, building on existing consultation arrangements within the WEU. We are working to develop suitable mechanisms for this purpose.

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what he estimates the cost will be to his Department of implementing the conclusions of the Cologne summit on Common Security and Defence Identity. [96969]

Mr. Hoon: The conclusions of the Cologne European Council supported the development of more effective European military capabilities. Our Strategic Defence Review has already produced plans to this end through better targeting of resources. The nature and scale of the structures needed within the EU to support military decision-making have not yet been decided. Their costs are likely to be modest.

Departmental Accounts

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what methods of depreciation his Department will apply in the current financial year to fixed assets in the preparation of departmental resource accounting balance sheets. [97039]

Mr. Spellar: The straight-line method of depreciation will be applied to fixed assets in the preparation of 1999–2000 Departmental Resource Accounts. This method is in accordance with the Treasury's Resource Accounting Manual, which follows, as far as appropriate, private sector accounting practice and standards issued by the Accounting Standards Board.

Smart Procurement Initiative

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the 33 integrated project teams working under the Smart Procurement Initiative; what new teams are currently planned; and if he will make a statement. [95963]

Mr. Hoon [holding answer 2 November 1999]: The programme to implement the Smart Procurement initiative is now well into its transitional year. The roll-out of the Integrated Project Teams (IPTs) in both the Defence Procurement Agency and the Defence Logistics Organisation is continuing and will be complete by April 2000. Thirty-three IPTs are now in full operation; a further 39 formed up in September and 69 are planned to roll-out commencing in January. An updated list of the 141 IPTs has been placed in the Library of the House.

Army Units (Rhine)

Ms Dari Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has for the location of British Army units west of the Rhine. [97603]

Mr. Hoon: A study into accommodation for British Army units west of the Rhine has concluded that the best use of the available estate is to consolidate units on the Rheindahlen Military Complex and on RAF Brüggen. This will enable Ayrshire and Hampshire Barracks in Mönchengladbach; Bradbury Barracks, Krefeld; and Francisca Barracks, St. Tonis to be vacated by the British Army. No significant redeployment of units will take place before December 2001, and it is expected that the relocation of the units affected and the hand back of the estate to the relevant authorities will be complete by May 2002.

Trident

Mr. Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to update the Trident warheads; and if he will make a statement. [96630]

Mr. Hoon: The UK has no plans to upgrade or improve the capabilities of our Trident nuclear warheads.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Equal Opportunities Unit (RUC)

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when was the most recent tri-annual report of the RUC Equal Opportunities Unit to the Fair Employment Commission; what were its main points; and if he will place a copy in the Library. [94661]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 19 October 1999]: The most recent tri-annual report covering the period 1995–98 was forwarded to the Fair Employment Commission in May 1999.

The main points were as follows:

1. During this review period the actual strength of the RUC Regulars for all categories has remained fairly constant. The trend during the review period is one of a slight increase in CB2 representation from 8.18 per cent. to 8.3 per cent.
2. The workforce was also analysed in terms of length of service and age. Over 60 per cent. of the RUC Regulars fall within the 10–24 years service bands. This grouping had an overall CB2 representation of 7.08 per cent. in 1996, increasing to 7.3 per cent in 1998. By comparison, the 0–9 years service bands, which accounted for approximately 25 per cent. of the RUC, show an increase in CB2 representation from 9.62 per cent. to 9.91 percent. during the review period. Within that grouping, CB2 representation in the 0–4 years service band increased overall from 10.53 per cent. in 1996 to 12.64 per cent. in 1998.
3. The RUC acknowledges the composition of its members is not representative of the community that it seeks to serve. The main catchment area for applicants to the RUC is Northern Ireland. The economically active population with 'A' level qualification, or equivalent, in Northern Ireland is 60.6 per cent. Protestant (CB1) and 39.4 per cent. Roman Catholic (CB2).

The Chief Constable has consistently made it clear that he wishes to see a positive change in the representation of the Force by encouraging members of the minority community to apply for a career in the police service and he has sought the support of respected members of the community in seeking to achieve his aim of "a more representative police force for Northern Ireland".

There is no obligation under the Fair Employment (Northern Ireland) Act 1989 to make reviews under section 31 available to any person or organisation. I understand that the review prepared by the Chief Constable in fulfilment of the requirements of the Act, as an internal document, contains information which could prejudice the security of individual officers. It is not appropriate that it be made public.

Nerve Centre, Londonderry

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the Nerve Centre, Londonderry, was formed; what has been the public funding of the Nerve Centre in each of the past three years; what public funding has been committed to the CD-Rom concerning (a) the Battle of the Somme and (b) the Bogside Disturbances; and if he will make a statement. [94825]

Mr. McFall: I am advised by the Chief Executive of the Arts Council that the Nerve Centre was first opened in 1989 as an alternative educational initiative aimed at encouraging young people to explore their cultural traditions through multi-media technology.

Public funding of the Nerve Centre through the Arts Council of Northern Ireland was £23,000 in 1996–97, £11,000 in 1997–98, and £11,000 in 1998–99. Funding though the Northern Ireland Film Council was £57,000 in 1997–98 and £57,000 in 1998–99.

I understand that the project 'Symbols' is based on a CD-ROM which includes material on the Battle of the Somme and a number of other historical events including the Bogside disturbances. The project received funding of £150,000 from the EU Special Support Programme for Peace and Reconciliation and £50,000 from the Community Relations Council. As the CD-ROM covered a wide range of issues, it is not possible to disaggregate the costs relating to any individual element. The detailed content of the CD-ROM is a matter for the Nerve Centre.

Museums

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what were the 1998 visitor levels at (a) Armagh County Museum, (b) the Ulster and Transport Museum, (c) the Ulster American Folk Park, (d) the Ulster Museum and (e) the Navan Centre; for what reason these figures were not published in the 1998–99 Annual report of the Northern Ireland Museums Council; and if he will make a statement. [94815]

Mr. McFall: I am advised by the Northern Ireland Museums Council that the figures provided in the Council's 1998–99 Annual Report refer only to regional, local and independent registered museums within its membership and not to the National Museums and Galleries of Northern Ireland which is directly financed from Government. The Armagh County Museum, the Ulster American Folk Park, the Ulster Museum and the Ulster Folk and Transport Museum all form part of National Museums and Galleries of Northern Ireland which was established on 1 April 1998. The Navan Centre is not included as it is not a Museum.

The 1998 visitor figures were:

Visitor levels at Museums and Galleries in Northern Ireland

Museum	Number
Armagh County Museum	[1]14,175
Ulster Folk and Transport Museum	169,794
Ulster American Folk Park	111,221
Ulster Museum	235,694
Navan Centre	36,436

[1] The figure for the Armagh County Museum relates to 10 months of 1998 since the Museum was closed for two months in that year.

Royal Ulster Constabulary

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, pursuant to the answer of 26 July 1999, Official Report, column 17, what characteristics of the flag flown adjacent to the Royal Ulster Constabulary checkpoint at Garvaghy Road, Portadown indicate that the flag commemorated the formation of the original Ulster Volunteer Force in 1912 and not a proscribed organisation as covered by section 31 of the Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act 1978. [95348]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 26 October 1999]: The flag in question is purple and orange with the name Ulster Volunteer Force and the year 1912 emblazoned on it.

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what are the numbers in the RUC part-time reserve, broken down by district council area. [95889]

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the average length of tenure in the RUC Special Branch. [95895]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 28 October 1999]: There is no set tenure. The average period of tenure within Special Branch is not readily available and could be obtained only at a disproportionate cost.

Health and Social Services Pensions

Mrs. McKenna: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the report by the Government Actuary on his investigation of the Health and Personal Social Services Superannuation Scheme in Northern Ireland 1989 to 1994. [97600]

Mr. George Howarth: I have accepted the report and today placed copies in the Library.

The report concludes that it would be prudent to increase the rate of contribution required from employers to meet the scheme's future liabilities. The current rate is 4 per cent. of pensionable pay. The Government Actuary is content with our proposals that the rate should increase 5 per cent. from 1 April 2001, with a further increase to 7 per cent. from 1 April 2003.

The cost of index linking National Health Service pensions is currently met by the Exchequer. As the report notes, the Department of Health and Social Services and the Department of Finance and Personnel have agreed in principle that the scheme should assume its pensions increase liabilities from 1 April 1994 under a financial restructuring. Officials are discussing the basis of such changes and I will inform the House when final agreement is reached. In the meantime, the Government Actuary considers that the proposed increases in employer contribution rates are consistent with the nature of the changes likely to be required under the restructuring.

Driver and Vehicle Testing Agency

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what targets have been set for the Driver and Vehicle Testing Agency for the period 1999–2000. [97601]

Mr. Mandelson: The targets set for the Driver and Vehicle Testing agency for 1999–2000, compared with the equivalent targets for 1998–1999, are as follows:

Description	Target 1998–99	Target 1999–2000
Vehicle test average appointment waiting times	21 days	21 days
Driving test average appointment waiting times	31 days	30 days
Customer satisfaction with booking arrangements (+/-2 per cent. within sampling error range)	At least 85%	At least 90%

Probation Board Annual Report

Ms Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he will publish the Probation Board for Northern Ireland's Annual report for 1998–99. [97602]

Mr. Ingram: The Probation Board's Annual Report for 1998–99 was published today. A copy of the Report has been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Equality Commission

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if, when he last met representatives of the Equality Commission, they discussed matters relating to the extension of section 75 of the Northern Ireland Act 1998 to incorporate (a) further education colleges, (b) universities and (c) university colleges of education; and if he will make a statement. [96886]

Mr. George Howarth: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has not yet met representatives of the Equality Commission but hopes to do so shortly. No final decisions have been taken on which additional public authorities in Northern Ireland might be designated under Section 75(3)(d) of the Northern Ireland Act 1998.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Oral Statements

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list (a) the reports published by his Department and its associated bodies, (b) the reports received from bodies set up by his Department, (c) the decisions his Department has taken and (d) events in the UK and elsewhere, since 27 July, which satisfied the criteria he uses for deciding whether to apply to make oral statements to the House when the House is sitting. [93965]

Ms Beverley Hughes: When deciding whether to make an oral statement, Ministers are guided by advice in paragraph 27 of the Ministerial Code. Therefore, I would refer my hon. Friend to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the President of the Council on 19 October 1999, Official Report, column 429.

Railtrack

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what briefings (a) he and (b) his officials gave to Sunday newspapers prior to 10 October concerning the future of Railtrack's Safety and Standards Directorate. [95940]

Mr. Hill [holding answer 27 October 1999]: Following a meeting with the Prime Minister on Saturday 9 October 1999, my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister made a statement to the media in Downing Street on the Government's response to the Paddington disaster and HSC report into Railtrack's safety regulation role; a copy of the statement has been placed in the Library. Officials provided similar information to Sunday newspapers on request.

A27 (Worthing)

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how much he has allocated to the improvement and to the maintenance of the A27 in Worthing for the next three financial years. [96327]

Mr. Hill: As this is an operational matter and the responsibility of the Highways Agency, I have asked the Chief Executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Nutt to Mr. Peter Bottomley, dated 4 November 1999:

The Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions has asked me to reply to your question about funding for the maintenance and improvement of the A27 in Worthing over the next three financial years.

The attached schedule sets out our proposals for maintenance and improvement works for the A27 through the Borough of Worthing for the next three years. Progress with these proposals will depend upon the priorities assigned to each project within the Agency's detailed business planning process.

Additionally, with the Government Office for the South East, we are carrying out several studies into transport issues in the Worthing area that may identify further improvements to the A27.

A27 Worthing Programme of Works 1999 to 2003

Financial year	Description	Cost
Maintenance works
2000–2001	A27 Sompting Bypass Major Maintenance	£3.68m
Improvements
2000–2001	A27 Worthing and Lancing Lighting	£500k
2000–2001	A27 Worthing low cost safety schemes	£50k
1999–2000	A27 Puffin Crossing (Nr. Hayling Rise)	£35k

In addition, there will be on going routine maintenance work such as sign cleaning, drainage and lighting repairs together with minor carriageway and footpath repairs (if required).

Allotments

Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list all local authority allotments he has approved for closure since 1997; and how many applications for closure he has refused. [96872]

Ms Armstrong: The Secretary of State has given consent for the disposal of 172 statutory allotment sites since 1 January 1997. The information requested has been placed in the House Library. There have been two applications for disposal which have been declined since that date.

Eurostar

Mr. Stevenson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what progress he has made with the study into Regional Eurostar Services; and if he will make a statement. [96621]

Mr. Hill: The review commissioned by the Government is currently on-going. The results are expected soon, at which time I will make a statement.

Council Tax (Pensioners)

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will estimate the average increase in (a) gross council tax bills and (b) net council tax bills of pensioner households between 1998–99 and 1999–2000. [96674]

Ms Beverley Hughes: The Department does not hold administrative data on council tax bills by pensioner and non-pensioner households from which the average increase in gross and net council tax bills of pensioner households between 1998–99 and 1999–2000 could be estimated. The latest information from the Family Resources Survey on pensioner households relates to 1997–98.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will estimate, based on his Department's administrative data for each of the last 10 financial years, the average level of (a) gross council tax bills and (b) net council tax bills expressed as a percentage of household income, for the whole population, and separately for pensioner and non-pensioner households. [96675]

Ms Beverley Hughes: The Department does not hold administrative data on household incomes, nor on council tax bills by pensioner and non-pensioner households.

Rail Safety

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions on what date in August (a) he and (b) his Department's officials first saw the Signals Passed at Danger statistics for 1998–99. [96680]

Mr. Hill: Ministers were informed in a submission from the Chief Inspector of Railways dated 9 August 1999. HSE first sent officials of an early draft of these statistics on 22 June 1999.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many times each signal on routes into London mainline stations via Clapham Junction and Norwood Junction involving stops at Cheam or Sutton stations was passed at danger in each of the last five years. [96072]

Mr. Hill [holding answer 1 November 1999]: The Railways Inspectorate do not hold information in this form. I will ask the chair of the Health and Safety Executive to write to the hon. Member with what information they do hold. A copy will be placed in the House Libraries.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) if he will place the weekly reports he receives on signals passed at danger on the railway in the Library as soon as he receives them; and on what day of the week they will regularly appear; [97084]

(2) if he will produce a table of railway signals passed at danger for each week since 5 October, showing the split between each category of SPAD. [97086]

Mr. Hill [holding answer 2 November 1999]: As my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister said to the House on 19 October 1999, information on signal passes at danger will be made available to the House on a monthly basis.

A published first analysis by the Health and Safety Executive's Railways Inspectorate will be available early November in the House of Commons and House of Lords Libraries.

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) how many incidents of signals passed at danger have occurred on the main line between London Liverpool Street and Ipswich in each of the last three years; and if he will make a statement; [97090]

(2) how many incidents of signals passed at danger have occurred on the main line between London Liverpool Street and Southminster in each of the last three years; and if he will make a statement. [97089]

Mr. Hill [holding answer 2 November 1999]: This information is not available in the form requested. The Health and Safety Executive will write to the hon. Member with what information they do hold. A copy of the letter will be placed in the House Libraries.

Mr. Efford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will review the performance of train operating companies with regard to their contractual obligations of maintenance and standards of safety when considering requests to extend franchises; and if he will make a statement. [96930]

Mr. Hill: I can confirm that the Deputy Prime Minister's instruction to the franchising director require him to maintain effective liaison with other authorities, including the Rail Regulator and the Health and Safety Executive, in the conduct of his business. The franchising director will be expected to consult other authorities prior to making recommendations to Ministers concerning the extension of franchises.

Mr. Efford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the train operating companies that have requested an extension of their franchise; and if he will make a statement. [96931]

Mr. Hill: The bids received by the franchising director are commercially confidential and I am therefore unable to list them.

Airbags

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what research he has carried out in the last five years regarding the effects of airbags in reducing casualties and fatalities in car accidents; and if he will make a statement. [96933]

Mr. Hill: Between 1993 and 1996, the Transport Research Laboratory (TRL) investigated airbag effectiveness at the Department's request. This included a review of published research on airbag testing and performance in the field. By necessity, this was based mainly on the experience in the US, where airbags have been in use for a number of years. TRL also looked at a sample of accidents in the UK, but the number available for examination was small and there was insufficient evidence to reach a conclusion on the efficacy of airbags in cars in the UK.

The Department, in collaboration with the motor industry, is actively involved in the Co-operative Crash Injury Study (CCIS), which collects detailed information on many aspects of crash protection from a sample of UK road accidents. CCIS is an ongoing study managed by the TRL and involving teams from Birmingham University, Loughborough University and the Vehicle Inspectorate. A study of available CCIS data by Loughborough University published in 1998 concluded that, of all the injured drivers they looked at, those in airbag equipped vehicles had less head injuries, but more arm injuries, than those in vehicles without airbags.

The relatively low number of cases involving airbag deployment is still a constraint in assessing the effectiveness of airbags. However, we anticipate that a clearer picture will begin to emerge as the number of CCIS investigations involving airbag equipped vehicles increases.

Planning Guidance

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received from supermarket companies on PPG6. [96967]

Ms Beverley Hughes: The Secretary of State has received a number of representations from the retail sector. All have been sympathetic to the Government's objective for PPG6 which is to sustain and enhance the vitality and viability of town centres.

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to amend Planning Policy Guidance Note 6. [96974]

Ms Beverley Hughes: We have no plans to amend PPG6.

South Downs National Park

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received following the announcement of his intention to turn the South Downs into a national park. [96934]

Mr. Mullin: Since my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister announced on 29 September that he was asking the Countryside Agency to consider designation of the South Downs as a National Park, Ministers have received a small number of written representations. Those from members of the public have generally been supportive of a National Park. On 12 October I met a delegation of MPs and local authority representatives from East and West Sussex and Hampshire. I took the opportunity to reassure them that the Countryside Agency and the Government would listen to local interests and take into account all the special factors in the South Downs in considering possible models for a National Park.

Local Government (Organisation and Standards) Bill

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) when he expects to respond to the report of the Joint Committee on the draft Local Government (Organisation and Standards) Bill; [96963]

(2) when he expects to publish the latest version of the Local Government (Organisation and Standards) Bill. [96962]

Ms Beverley Hughes: The draft Local Government (Organisation and Standards) Bill was published earlier this year as part of a consultation exercise to seek the views of local authorities and interested members of the public and to provide the opportunity for pre-legislative scrutiny by a Joint Committee of Members of both Houses of Parliament. The Joint Committee published its report at the beginning of August.

We have no intention to publish a further version of the draft Bill; the next stage would be for the Government to introduce primary legislation to Parliament. A response to the Joint Committee report would accompany the introduction of the legislation. My Department hopes to bring forward the legislation at an early opportunity.

Building Safety

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if Birmingham City Council has complied with his circular 62/68 in respect of building safety. [96961]

Ms Beverley Hughes: For new building work compliance with the Building Regulations 1991 is mandatory, and any new buildings such as those addressed by Circular 62–68 would be sufficiently robust to resist disproportionate collapse. The guidance in the Circular is not mandatory, although it impressed most strongly on local authorities the need to put any necessary work in hand urgently. However, while strongly endorsing the guidance in this Circular and in Circular 71–68 which followed it, the Department does not monitor the performance of local authorities with regard to advice in Circulars.

Motorways and Trunk Roads

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list each location on the motorway and trunk road network in England where (a) there is currently a weight restriction below the normal permitted maximum and (b) where the Highways Agency is undertaking monitoring because of concerns about the strength of a structure. [97070]

Mr. Hill [holding answer 2 November 1999]: I have asked the Chief Executive of the Highways Agency, Mr. Peter Nutt, to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Nutt to Mr. Bernard Jenkin, dated 4 November 1999:

You recently asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions for information concerning weight restrictions and monitoring of structures on the motorway and trunk road network.

There are no weight restrictions currently in force on the main carriageways of motorways and major trunk roads. However, there are a small number of structures, primarily supporting slip roads and interchanges, which have some form of weight restriction pending repairs or strengthening. The numbers and restrictions can vary as repairs and strengthening takes place but I am preparing an up to date list for you.

You also ask for a list of where the Highways Agency is undertaking monitoring because of concerns about the strength of a structure. Special monitoring of structures is being undertaken for a number of reasons on a number of bridges. This can vary from week to week and the details are not held centrally. I am assembling the information you request and shall write to you shortly listing those structures subject to weight restriction as well as those where special monitoring is being undertaken because of concerns about strength.

Waste Disposal

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will instruct the inspector at the public inquiry on the future policy of waste disposal in Essex, currently being held at Chelmsford, immediately to make the written submissions to that inquiry available to the press and interested local parties. [97130]

Ms Beverley Hughes: I see no need to. Copies of written submissions made to public inquiries on Waste Local Plans are deposited with those plans as a matter of standard practice so that others may see them, both before and during an inquiry.

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on his policy towards publishing written submissions by interested parties prior to the holding of a public inquiry into local waste disposal projects. [97131]

Ms Beverley Hughes: It is standard practice for the written submissions of interested parties to be deposited with Waste Local Plans so that others may see them, during reasonable hours, both before and during a public inquiry.

Endocrine Disruption

Mr. Burgon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what provision has been made for the co-ordination of Government-funded research in the UK on endocrine disruption. [97535]

Mr. Meacher: Government-funded research in the UK on endocrine disruption is co-ordinated by an interdepartmental group comprising representatives from Government Departments, the Scottish Executive and the National Assembly for Wales, the environment agencies, Research Councils and the Health and Safety Executive. I am pleased to announce the publication of the Group's first report on its activities since its inception in 1995 and I will place copies in the House Library.

Tree Planting

Mr. Hilary Benn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the sources of funding available to (a) local authorities and (b) voluntary organisations to support the planting of trees. [97033]

Mr. Morley: I have been asked to reply.

The Forestry Commission's Woodland Grant Scheme provides grants for planting trees, for creating woods, and for managing woods. These grants are available to local authorities, voluntary organisations, individuals and other bodies. Grants and other funds to support tree planting are also provided by several other organisations such as the Countryside Agency, English Nature, the Environmental Action Fund, the Tree Council, the National Lottery, trusts, charities and private companies. Many local authorities themselves also offer grants for tree planting.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Performance Targets

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list all performance targets set for her Department, agencies and non-departmental public bodies since May 1997, other than those listed in Public Service Agreements 1999–2002 [Cm 4181], stating in each case (a) the target to be reached and (b) the date by which it was to be reached. [94988]

Clare Short: All of the performance targets set for my Department since May 1997 are listed in the Public Services Agreement.

These high-level targets are supported at operational level by numerous targets to ensure delivery by individual units. Listing these operational targets would be inappropriate and disproportionate in terms of resources.

PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

Departmental Accounts

Mr. Maclean: To ask the President of the Council (1) what methods of depreciation her Department will apply in the current financial year to fixed assets in the preparation of departmental resource accounting balance sheets; [97042]

(2) if she will list the methods of depreciation her Department will apply in the current financial year to fixed assets in the preparation of departmental resource accounting balance sheets. [96912]

Mrs. Beckett: My Department will apply the straight line method. This is in accordance with the Treasury's Resource Accounting Manual. The requirements in the Manual will be underpinned by Financial Reporting Standard 15, "Tangible Fixed Assets", issued by the Accounting Standards Board.

Office Costs Allowance

Mr. Love: To ask the President of the Council how many hon. Members (a) underspent, (b) spent and (c) overspent their office costs allowance in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [93551]

Mrs. Beckett: I regret that the information requested is not available and could be produced only at disproportionate cost.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Departmental Accounting

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what methods of depreciation the Lord Chancellor's Department will apply in the current financial year to fixed assets in the preparation of departmental resource accounting balance sheets. [97045]

Jane Kennedy: The Lord Chancellor's Department will use the Straight-Line method of depreciation in the preparation of departmental resource accounts for 1999–2000. This is in accordance with the Treasury's Resource Accounting Manual, which is in turn underpinned by Financial Reporting Standard 15 'Tangible Fixed Assets', as issued by the Accounting Standards Board.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Burma

Mr. Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the human rights situation in Myanmar. [97053]

Mr. Battle: Human rights violations in Burma are appalling and include arbitrary killings, rape, torture, forced labour, forced relocations and denial of freedoms of expression, movement, assembly and association. We take every opportunity to raise our concern about the violations of human rights, especially those of ethnic minorities. For example, our Embassy in Rangoon regularly raise particular concerns with the regime; visiting British and EU officials also raise such concerns when they visit Burma; we have co-sponsored United Nations resolutions which strongly condemn the human rights violations and call on the regime to take urgent action to improve the situation. We will continue our efforts.

Food and Drug Administration

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make it his policy to propose to the Council of Ministers the establishment of an equivalent agency to the United States Food and Drug Administration within the European Union; and if he will make a statement. [96923]

Mr. Vaz: The President of the European Commission, Mr. Prodi, has already said that he intends to bring forward options for an EU food agency in a White Paper expected in December. We are interested in pursuing ideas for such an Agency and we look forward to participating fully in discussions of Mr. Prodi's proposals.

EU Charter Working Group

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish the list of already appointed members of the EU's Charter Working Group and the names of other members on appointment. [97154]

Mr. Vaz: Heads of State and Government at the Special European Council in Tampere on 15–16 October agreed that the drafting body would be made up of 15 representatives of Heads of Government, 1 representative of the Commission, 16 Members of the EP and 30 national Parliamentarians. As of 3 November, the only appointments that have been made so far are ex-President Herzog (Germany), Paavu Nikula (Finland) and Stelios Perrakis (Greece).

Chinese President (State Visit)

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Cynon Valley (Ann Clwyd) of 28 October 1999, Official Report, column 993, how many meetings between his Department's officials and the Metropolitan Police took place; on what dates; who was present at each meeting; for what reasons no minutes were taken at any of these meetings; if, as a result of these meetings, letters or memos were sent by his Department's officials to the police or vice versa; and who represented the police at these meetings. [97259]

Mr. Battle: Meetings involving Foreign and Commonwealth Office officials and the Metropolitan Police took place on the following dates this year: 13 July, 27 and 29 July (during the first preparatory visit to the UK of the Chinese officials responsible for the Visit), 6 and 8 September (during the second preparatory visit to the UK of the Chinese officials responsible for the Visit), 23 September, 28 September and 13 October. The number of meetings reflected the programme requirements.

At each meeting, there were representatives from among the following: China Hong Kong Department, Protocol Division and Conference and Visits Group of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office; Buckingham Palace; Central Area Headquarters, Special Branch, Royalty Protection and Special Escort Group of the Metropolitan Police Service; the Chinese Embassy and visiting Chinese officials; Cambridge University; Cambridgeshire Constabulary; Guildhall; City of London Police; Royal Parks; Royal Parks Police; British Transport Police; Gatwick Airport; Gatwick Airport Police; Sussex Police; Lothian and Borders Police; Royal Air Force; Household Cavalry; Royal Logistic Corps; Ministry of Defence; Railtrack Southern; English, Welsh and Scottish Railway; E. C. Harris company.

Minutes were not taken because the purpose of these meetings was not to take operational decisions, but to go through successive drafts of the programme and discuss new programme proposals. Any outcome of the discussions was subsequently reflected in revised programmes.

No letters or memos were sent by Foreign and Commonwealth Office officials to the police as a result of these meetings, or vice versa.

Hungarian President (State Visit)

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many meetings took place between his Department's officials and the Metropolitan Police in preparation for the state visit of the President of Hungary in June; on what dates; who represented the police at these meetings; and if minutes were taken. [97254]

Mr. Vaz: Meetings involving Foreign and Commonwealth Office officials and the Metropolitan Police took place on the following dates this year: 8 April, 4 and 6 May (during the preparatory visit to the UK of the Hungarian officials responsible for the Visit), and 11 May. The number of meetings reflected the programme requirements.

At each meeting, there were representatives from among the following: the then Central European Department and the then Protocol Department of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office; the then Government Hospitality Fund; Department of Trade and Industry; Buckingham Palace; Central Area Headquarters, Special Branch, Royalty Protection and Special Escort Group of the Metropolitan Police Service; the Hungarian Embassy and visiting Hungarian officials; Windsor Castle and Windsor Great Park; Thames Valley Police; Guildhall; City of London Police; Royal Parks Police; Royal Borough of Windsor and Maidenhead; Heathrow Airport; Gatwick Airport; Department of Culture, Media and Sport; Royal Air Force; Household Cavalry; Royal Logistic Corps; Ministry of Defence; Crown Estate Office; E. C. Harris company.

Minutes were not taken because the purpose of these meetings was not to take operational decisions, but to go through successive drafts of the programme and discuss new programme proposals. Any outcome of the discussions was subsequently reflected in revised programmes.

Iran

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Iranian Government concerning the trial of the students charged with insulting the Imam; when and at what level such representations were made; what assurances were received; and if he will make a statement. [95783]

Mr. Hain: The Iranian Government are fully aware of the importance that we and our EU partners attach to freedom of expression. Our concerns about Iran's human rights record, including on freedom of expression, will again feature prominently in this month's EU sponsored UN Resolution on Human Rights in Iran.

Transfrontier Co-operation

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs why the United Kingdom has not signed the European Outline Convention on Transfrontier Co-operation between Territorial Communities or Authorities; when the Convention was opened for signature; how many nations have signed this convention; and if he will make a statement. [96474]

Ms Beverley Hughes: I have been asked to reply.

The European Outline Convention on Transfrontier Co-operation between Territorial Communities or Authorities was opened for signature on 21 May 1980 and to date has been signed by 32 member states of the Council of Europe.

United Kingdom local authorities have entered into a number of transfrontier arrangements with local and regional authorities in other states, which the Government strongly welcomes. None of these arrangements to date have needed to be underpinned by the Convention.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

E-commerce

11. Mr. St. Aubyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he is taking to ensure that future legislation on electronic commerce is able to cope with evolving technology. [95833]

Ms Hewitt: The Electronic Communications Bill, which will be introduced into Parliament in the next Session, is intended to be technology neutral. Firstly, it will start the process of ensuring that electronic transactions are given the same legal status as paper ones. Secondly it will establish a flexible legal framework which is capable of adapting to different ways of doing electronic commerce and different methods of ensuring authentication, integrity and confidentiality of information. Our policies are designed to increase our competitiveness by promoting electronic commerce, not a particular technology.

24. Dr. George Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the development of electronic commerce in the UK; and what steps he is taking to ensure that the UK is the best place in the world for such commerce. [95848]

Ms Hewitt: I refer my hon. Friend to the oral answer I gave today to my hon. Friend the Member for Hemel Hempstead (Mr. McWalter), Official Report, column 463.

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions he has had with the European Commission about the regulation of e-commerce; and if he will make a statement. [95831]

Ms Hewitt: On 12 October I had a meeting in Brussels with Erkki Liikanen, Commissioner for Enterprise and the Information Society. We discussed and agreed on the need for a market-led regulatory framework for electronic commerce; the actual and potential contribution of e-commerce to competitiveness in Europe, particularly that of SMEs; and the importance of ensuring close co-ordination of e-commerce related initiatives.

Onwa Ltd.

12. Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has to provide special assistance to employees of Onwa Ltd. in Jarrow. [95834]

Mr. Caborn: I have no such plans as it is not the responsibility of my Department to provide assistance to employees in such cases.

However, I understand from my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Employment that his Department has designated the closure as a large scale redundancy, and that all employees will be eligible for immediate entry to the Department's work-based learning for adults programme. I also understand that his Department is considering a rapid response fund assistance package of up to £153,000, which will provide further help to the Onwa workers in obtaining retraining.

Low Income Families

13. Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the effects of his Department's policies on families with low incomes in the last two years. [95835]

Mr. Byers: This Government believe that rewarding work is a key aspect of our agenda of modernisation and reform. The national minimum wage, coupled with the introduction of the working families tax credit, will make work pay for hard-working parents.

Fireworks (Safety)

15. Shona McIsaac: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has for reducing firework-related injuries. [95838]

Dr. Howells: The comprehensive measures introduced under the Fireworks (Safety) Regulations 1997 are again being supplemented by a robust, targeted firework safety campaign. This approach has been shown to work. During the 1998 firework season, 831 people were treated in A&E departments compared to 908 in 1997 and 1233 in 1996.

The theme of this year's campaign, which I launched on 15 October, is that alcohol and fireworks do not mix. As part of the campaign, 1,000 information packs to help mount local safety campaigns have been distributed to trading standards, fire brigades, environmental health officers and for the first time, police forces.

Energy Efficiency

16. Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he is taking to monitor the efficiency of the use of energy by manufacturing industry. [95839]

Mrs. Liddell: Government monitor the energy efficiency performance of manufacturing industry through the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Region's Energy Efficiency Best Practice Programme and related work. This Programme has stimulated annual energy savings of around 150 petajoules in industry, equivalent to 3 million tonnes of carbon.

Consumer Protection

18. Mr. Truswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has to increase the protection of consumers against dishonest traders. [95841]

Dr. Howells: The White Paper "Modern Markets: Confident Consumers" published in July set out our proposals to introduce much clearer targeting of dishonest traders and specific unfair trade practices by amending the Fair Trading Act 1973. In particular, we intend to provide a power for the courts to grant injunctions against specified practices carried out by specified traders, a power for the courts to ban from trading for a period traders with a history of disregarding their legal obligations, and a power to make orders by secondary legislation to specify that certain unfair practices should become criminal offences.

European Economic Area

19. Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he will next meet World Trade Organisation officials to discuss free trade within the European Economic Area. [95842]

Mr. Caborn: We have no plans to meet WTO officials to discuss free trade within the European Economic Area (EEA). This is not a matter for the WTO, but is primarily one for discussion by EEA members.

Car Prices

20. Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the prices of new cars in the UK and in the rest of the EU. [95843]

Dr. Howells: The European Commission publishes a six-monthly comparison of pre-tax car prices across the European Community. The most recent one covered prices at 1 May this year; the UK was the most expensive market for 62 of the 75 models covered.

The Competition Commission is looking into new car prices in the UK and has been asked to report by 16 December. The Secretary of State will decide what action to take in the light of any adverse findings the Commission may make. We await the Commission's report with interest.

Trade Agreement (South Africa)

21. Valerie Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on progress with the trade agreement between the EU and South Africa. [95844]

Mr. Caborn: The Trade, Development and Co-operation Agreement between the European Union and South Africa was signed in Pretoria on 11 October. The key trade provisions of the Agreement will be implemented from 1 January 2000. Reciprocal free trade will be phased in over 12 years. Of the two partners, the EU will open its import market at a generally faster pace in order to give a boost to South Africa's further integration into the global economy. The EU is South Africa's major trading partner and this agreement will strengthen that relationship and create new opportunities for British companies to do business with South Africa.

Climate Change Levy

22. Mr. Page: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent representations he has received on the proposed climate change levy. [95845]

Ms Hewitt: The Government have had many representations from business about the proposed climate change levy and accompanying reduction in employers' National Insurance contributions which were announced by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer in his last Budget. We will be taking account of the views of business in designing the details of the levy so that the environmental benefits can be achieved while safeguarding competitiveness.

23. Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the effect of the climate change levy on manufacturing competitiveness. [95847]

Ms Hewitt: The Government have said it aims to design the levy in a way which maximises its environmental effectiveness while safeguarding competitiveness. We have therefore been developing our understanding of the perspectives of different sectors of Industry to inform our decisions on the levy for the Finance Bill 2000.

World Trade Organisation

25. Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what action he will take to ensure that consideration is given to environmental protection and sustainable development at the Seattle round of the WTO. [95849]

Mr. Caborn: The UK and EU are committed to ensuring that sustainable development is a key objective for the new round and that the relationship between trade and the environment is included as a subject of negotiations.

26. Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the EU position in respect of the WTO negotiations. [95850]

Mr. Caborn: The UK's and EU's priority for the WTO Ministerial Conference in Seattle later this year is to secure the launch of an ambitious, comprehensive round of negotiations aimed at a substantial package to remove trade barriers and so promote growth and jobs in the world economy. Our particular priorities for these negotiations include agriculture, services, industrial tariffs, regulatory standards, trade facilitation, government procurement, intellectual property rights, investment, competition and the environment. Throughout the round we shall want to ensure that the interests of developing countries are taken fully into account. The EU's position for Seattle was discussed at an informal meeting of EU Trade Ministers on 1 October in Florence and at the General Affairs Council on 11 October. Formal Council Conclusions were agreed on 26 October.

Balkans

27. Ms Kelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what action he has taken to encourage British firms to take part in the regeneration of the Kosovo and other Balkan economies. [95851]

Mr. Caborn: On the initiative of the Secretary of State, a joint Government/private sector Taskforce was set up by British Trade International—the recently established joint DTI/FCO trade promotion organisation—to co-ordinate and promote the UK's response to the reconstruction opportunities arising in Kosovo. Its prime objective is to ensure that UK companies are well placed to play a role in the rebuilding of Kosovo. The Taskforce has achieved much. Arising out of its activities, a consortium of UK companies has, with financial support from British Trade International, been awarded the concession to manage the power sector over the next seven months; this will help ensure that there is sufficient power to enable the people of Kosovo to get through the forthcoming harsh winter. It was clear from my recent visit to Kosovo that the good will arising out of this contract should help UK companies compete for other business, not only in the power sector but also in other areas of activity.

British Trade International have seconded an official to the British Office in Pristina to assist UK companies seeking business in Kosovo. In order to keep the business community abreast of developments in Kosovo, the Department has also established a Kosovo website; its address is: www.brittrade.com/kosovo/. This includes information on the activities of the Taskforce and the international funding agencies working there. The well publicised activities of the Taskforce have played a major role in generating UK company interest in Kosovo; nearly 1,000 companies have registered on British Trade International's Kosovo database. British Trade International has been praised widely by the private sector for all its initiatives on Kosovo. Kosovo has been its first test; one which it has come through with flying colours.

Kosovo is seen as the springboard to the wider South East Europe region (the Balkans) which presents significantly more business opportunities. In due course, the role of the Taskforce is likely to focus on this wider region. Through promotional events such as a seminars support for trade fairs and missions, British Trade International continues to draw the attention of UK companies to commercial opportunities in the other markets of the region.

Loose from Bulk Goods

28. Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps his Department has taken to extend the derogation for loose from bulk goods in imperial measures. [95852]

Dr. Howells: On 26 July 1999, Official Report, columns 678–79, I announced the result of our reappraisal of the use of metric units of measurement in the UK and placed a copy of the report in the Library of the House. As that report made clear, we have concluded that there would be no benefit in seeking a postponement of the date (31 December 1999), agreed by the previous administration, after which loose from bulk goods should be priced and weighed in grams and kilograms. It will still be possible for retailers to indicate imperial units alongside metric and for consumers to express in imperial units the quantity they wish to buy.

Global Free Trade

29. Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the United Kingdom's policy on encouraging global free trade. [95853]

Mr. Caborn: The United Kingdom supports the launch of an ambitious, comprehensive round of negotiations aimed at a substantial package to remove trade barriers and so promote growth in the world economy and jobs for our people. This should go a long way to realising global free trade consistent with the principle of sustainable development.

Science

30. Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what action he is taking to ensure an increase in the Government's total spending on science. [95854]

Ms Hewitt: This Government have shown a clear commitment to science in their spending plans agreed following the Comprehensive Spending Review. In this three-year period, Government will invest over £20 billion in science, engineering and technology. This level of investment is higher in real terms than at any time this decade.

National Minimum Wage

31. Mr. David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on enforcement of the national minimum wage. [95855]

Mr. Alan Johnson: We are confident we have put in place one of the world's most professional and organised systems of minimum wage enforcement. I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for City of Chester (Ms Russell) below.

36. Ms Christine Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he is taking to prevent employers from ignoring the national minimum wage. [95860]

Mr. Alan Johnson: National Minimum Wage (NMW) Inspectors have dealt with over 3,000 cases of suspected underpayment of the minimum wage. Every call is followed up, including anonymous calls and third party tip-offs. In addition, Inspectors are now targeting low paying employers based on detailed risk analysis. Changes to the law mean that our Inspectors are now able to use information gathered for income tax, NI and Working Families Tax Credit purposes.

The Government recognise that it is vital that employers are aware of their obligations under the law. In January this year the Inland Revenue included information about the NMW in their employer's annual pack, which was sent to all 1.2 million tax-registered employers. In March, once the Regulations had been approved by Parliament, we made detailed guidance available, along with leaflets for employers and employees. So far over 1 million copies of the guidance and leaflets have been sent out to individuals and organisations, as well as many thousands which have been downloaded from the minimum wage website.

Around £5 million was spent on advertising the minimum wage in March and April. Independent research shows the campaign met or exceeded the targets set; awareness of the minimum wage following advertising peaked at 95 per cent. among employers.

Mr. Sarwar: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the impact of the National Minimum Wage. [97578]

Mr. Alan Johnson: The Government have asked the Low Pay Commission to monitor and evaluate the introduction and impact of the national minimum wage. The Commission have undertaken a wide-ranging consultation and fact-finding exercise and have commissioned a series of research projects.

We have submitted and published our own evidence to the Low Pay Commission.

International Postal Services

32. Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when (a) he and (b) officials in his Department last met representatives of the Post Office to discuss international postal services. [95856]

Mr. Alan Johnson: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State and I regularly meet with the Chairman and Chief Executive of the Post Office to discuss a range of issues, including international postal matters. Officials also regularly discuss international postal matters with the Post Office.

Incubator Companies

33. Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what success he has had in developing incubator companies of clusters. [95857]

Ms Hewitt: My Department supports the UK Business Incubation Centre (UKBI), which promotes and encourages the uptake of business incubation, spreads best practice and improves networking and coordination between incubators. DTI also supports some sectoral incubation activities, for example through the Biotechnology Mentoring and Incubator Challenge and the Software Business Incubator (a virtual incubator). In addition, the "Reach-Out" fund has invited proposals for enhanced interaction between Higher Education Institutions and business, including support for university-based incubator facilities. Business incubators are often but not exclusively, located within industrial clusters.

UKBI have commissioned a study, part-funded by my Department, which will help identify where and how incubator support policy has assisted specific firms, such as high-technology businesses We await the result of this study with interest.

Part-time Work Directive

34. Judy Mallaber: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he expects to publish the draft regulations and code of practice to implement the directive on part-time work. [95858]

Mr. Alan Johnson: The draft regulations and Code of Practice will be published in early November. This will launch a consultation process on the Government proposals. We intend to implement the Directive in April next year.

Energy Markets

35. Mr. Ennis: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he is taking to secure the liberalisation of energy markets in the UK. [95859]

Mrs. Liddell: The Government are currently undertaking a major programme of liberalisation in the energy markets as outlined in the White Paper on energy sources for power generation (Cm 4071) in October 1998. This has included the opening up to competition of the UK gas supply market (completed in May 1998) and the UK electricity supply market (completed in May 1999). Work is also under way in my Department and in the Office of Gas and Electricity Markets to liberalise the gas and electricity wholesale trading arrangements and transmission capacity allocation.

Regional Selective Assistance

37. Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the implementation of the changes to the regional selective assistance map and associated issues indicated in his July statement; and if the proposed changes have been ratified by the European Commission. [95861]

Mr. Caborn: No.

Intellectual Property

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what measures he is introducing to clarify the ownership of intellectual property. [95836]

Dr. Howells: In general, intellectual property legislation provides for creators, such as inventors in the case of patents and authors for copyright, to be the first owners of rights.

Intellectual property may be transferred by assignment or vested by operation of law (as on death or bankruptcy) in the same way as other personal property. It is not for government to become involved in such acquisition, disposal or transfer. However, we shall continue to work to ensure that clarity of ownership of intellectual property in the public sector encourages and simplifies exploitation of research in universities and public sector research establishments.

BVRAAM UK

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the impact on employment in the UK if the European Meteor team loses their bid in the BVRAAM UK competition. [95456]

Mr. Alan Johnson: The Beyond Visual Range Air to Air Missile (BVRAAM) competition is being run by the Ministry of Defence, with the Department of Trade and Industry being involved in the consideration of the industrial implications of the procurement. It would be inappropriate to publish material derived from information provided by companies to both MOD and DTI as part of a competitive bidding process. Our assessment considers the impact of the competing bids on the development of significant industrial and technological capabilities in the UK. The impact on employment levels in the UK is only one element of this.

Advertisements

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what his policy is regarding EU Directive 97/55/EC on comparative advertisements; and if he will make a statement. [95922]

Dr. Howells: Advertising which compares a company's product with those of a competitor has always been accepted in the UK. A system of regulatory and voluntary controls ensures that any comparison is accurate and fair so that consumers are able to judge the relative merits of products. However, it is important that there is a level playing field across Europe for those who wish to advertise by objectively comparing their products with those of a competitor. At present, this does not exist because of different regulations across the EU. The Government therefore welcome the Comparative Advertising Directive which will permit comparative advertising throughout the European Community on an equal basis.

The Directive is due to be implemented in member states by 23 April 2000. My Department has recently consulted on proposals to implement the Directive in UK law by amending the Control of Misleading Advertisements Regulations 1988.

Pressure Equipment

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if regulations required by EC Council Directive 97/23/EC (O.J. No. L181, 9.7.97, p.1) regarding the harmonisation of laws concerning pressure equipment have been published in each EU country; and if he will list these regulations together with their proposed implementation dates [96453]

Mr. Alan Johnson: The Pressure Equipment Regulations 1999, which implement the Pressure Equipment Directive (97/23/EC), were laid before Parliament on 19 July 1999. The main provisions of the Regulations come into force on 29 November 1999, the date of application of the Directive. This is followed by a transitional period until 29 May 2002, when manufacturers may choose whether to comply with the national legislation in force on 29 November 1999 or with the Pressure Equipment Regulations.

It is for the European Commission to monitor the transposition of EU Directives across the Community and take appropriate action as necessary. The Commission publishes information on which Directives have been transposed on its CELEX database. This can be accessed on the parliamentary intranet (PDVN) as part of the JUSTIS database which is available in the Libraries of the House.

Sri Lanka

Mr. Colman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what arms export licences have been issued for shipments to Sri Lanka since May 1997. [96419]

Dr. Howells: For the period 2 May 1997 to 25 February 1999, I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Brent, North (Mr. Gardiner) on 17 March 1999, Official Report, columns 683–84.

The entry in the relevant legislation under which the export of goods is controlled is known as their rating. The Export Control Organisation's computer databases have been interrogated and the following results were obtained. Between 26 February and 19 October 1999, 22 Standard Individual Export Licences (SIELs) and 3 Open Individual Export Licences (OIELs) were issued for the export to consignees or end-users in Sri Lanka of goods subject to export control by being listed in Part III of Schedule 1 to the Export of Goods (Control) Order 1994, commonly known as the Military List. Individual licences may cover a range of goods with various ratings (and OIELs may also cover a range of countries). Where this is so, the licence is included in the Table in the total for all of the relevant ratings.

Individual Licences issued between 26 February 1999 and 19 October 1999 for the export to Sri Lanka of goods on the Military List

This information does not cover any Media OIELs that may have been issued during this period. Media OIELs authorise the export to all destinations of protective clothing, mainly for the protection of aid agency workers and journalists, when working in areas of conflict.

This information should be considered in light of the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Kingswood (Mr. Berry) on 27 July 1999, Official Report, columns 307–08.

In addition, Sri Lanka is a permitted destination on certain Open General Export Licences covering the export of goods on the Military List; copies of all Open General Export Licences valid at any time during the period are in the Library of the House.

Export Licensing

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many export licence applications have been referred to a interdepartmental committee for discussion or advice in each of the last six months; how many have been (a) granted and (b) refused; and what have been the (i) average, (ii) shortest and (iii) longest times between referral and decision. [96480]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 28 October 1999]: Extracting all of the information requested would involve disproportionate cost. However, in respect of Iran over the six month period 1 April 1999 to 30 September 1999, 53 export licences have been issued and seven applications refused. All of these have been considered by the relevant interdepartmental committee.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on what dates the interdepartmental committee on export licensing will meet within the next month; what is the normal frequency of meetings; and what arrangements are in place to process urgent applications quickly. [96482]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 28 October 1999]: The next meeting of the relevant interdepartmental committee on export licence applications for Iran is scheduled for 9 November 1999. This committee meets once a month. All applications are dealt with case by case and within a time scale which allows for proper consideration.

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many people are employed in his Department in examining arms export licence applications. [97062]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 2 November 1999]: Strategic export controls, including for goods entered in Part III of Schedule 1 to the Export of Goods (Control) Order 1994 (known as the Military List) are administered by the Export Control Organisation (ECO), part of the DTI's Export Control and Non-Proliferation Directorate (XNP). Most ECO staff may, for various reasons, be required to examine licence applications for goods on the Military List. The ECO staff complement in 1999–2000 is 135.8 staff; the actual number in post at any one time may vary slightly from this figure.

Financial Investigations

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry under what circumstances persons interviewed under section 177 of the Financial Services Act 1986 are instructed not to talk publicly about their evidence, after an investigation has been concluded. [96407]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 28 October 1999]: Confidentiality requirements placed on witnesses in inspections, above those set out in statute for which there are criminal penalties, are a matter for inspectors. However the Department encourages inspectors to make clear to all witnesses the general and continuing confidentiality of the inspection process.

Publications (Carriage Charges)

Mr. Alan Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what proposals he has to review the carriage charges for newspapers and magazines. [96871]

Dr. Howells: Terms and conditions are usually a matter for commercial negotiation between the parties concerned. The Director General of Fair Trading is responsible for monitoring markets and considering allegations of anti-competitive practices. If anybody has evidence of anti-competitive behaviour concerning carriage charges, they should contact the Director-General.

European Coal Industry

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what measures his Department has taken to ensure that EU member states do not engage in measures which distort the European coal industry after 2002. [96888]

Mrs. Liddell: Aid paid to coal producers in Europe is governed by the 1993 Coal State Aid Code. This expires along with the European Coal and Steel Community Treaty in 2002. The UK Government will be working with the European Commission and other Member States to ensure that the arrangements after 2002 avoid distortion of the European coal market. In the meantime, we must ensure that aid which is currently approved by the Commission under the existing rules does not distort the market against unsubsidised producers in the ECSC including those in the UK.

In the case of Spain, we have formally complained to the European Commission about discriminatory application of limits on the sulphur content of coals from different ECSC resources, and have received assurances that UK coal will be treated on the same basis as Spanish coal. This should open the Spanish market to a range of UK coals.

We have also laid a formal complaint against Spanish state aid for coal, questioning whether the required criteria of ultimate viability has been fulfilled for all those producers receiving operating aid under the ECSC Coal State Aid code. The European Commission have also made clear that a subsidy of one peseta per kilowatt/hour (equivalent to around 35p a gigajoule of coal) available to Spanish power-station operators burning Spanish coal should be equally available in respect of UK coal.

In the case of Germany, following our complaint to the European Commission on behalf of Celtic Energy Ltd setting out how state aid provided to Sophia Jacoba and Ibbenburen mines led to a distortion in the anthracite market in the ECSC and particularly in the UK, the Commission found there had been abuse of state aid and reached a decision on 29 July 1998 requiring repayment of nearly DM 20 million state aid by the German producers. This decision provides UK producers with an assurance that such unfair practices will not recur and should help to open up continental markets for competitive UK exports of anthracite.

We made representations to the Commission in March 1998 on the proposed merger of the three remaining German hard coal producers, setting out our view that the privatisation of Saarbergwerke for 1 DM represented significant unauthorised aid for German coal production. We are continuing to urge the Commission to reach a view on how this should be handled.

We have also responded to the Commission's notifications that it was initiating procedures under the ECSC Treaty in respect of unauthorised aid being provided by France to its coal producers. We have fully endorsed the preliminary conclusions which the Commission have reached in their formal notice to the French Government and we believe there is growing evidence that the aid to Charbonnages de France (CdF) is distorting competition in the coal and coal-related sectors.

We have expressed particular concern over the export of Polish coal to UK market at prices which appear to be below production costs. We have raised this issue both with the Polish Government and with the European Commission who are responsible for ensuring that Poland meets the conditions of its accession arrangements to the EU. We have made clear that we expect Polish coal exported to the British isles to be withdrawn unless its selling price can be shown to cover its appropriately allocated production and transportation costs.

We will continue to press the European Commission to interpret the Code strictly and, in particular, to ensure that operating aid is paid only to those undertakings which can demonstrate that they can be competitive within a reasonable time period. Undertakings which cannot demonstrate this should be given closure aid only. We support many of the arguments that RJM Mining have made in this respect to the court of First Instance and note that the Court's Judgement of 9 September 1999 that authorisation of operating aid must be subject to the condition that the recipient undertakings have achieved a significant reduction in their production costs.

Insider Dealing

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if persons interviewed by his Department's inspectors in relation to an inquiry into insider dealing are offered transcripts of the meeting to enable them to check for accuracy. [96744]

Dr. Howells: While the conduct of inspections is a matter for the inspectors, it is their usual practice to provide a transcript of any formal interview of a witness to that witness for comment.

World Poverty

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what specific progress he is making in linking his Department's work with the objective of the Department for International Development for relieving world poverty. [96663]

Mr. Caborn: My Department works closely with the Department for International Development, for example through an Interdepartmental Group on Trade and Development which co-ordinates our efforts to ensure that developing countries benefit more fully from the world trade system. Together, the two Departments have worked successfully to establish an EU approach to a comprehensive new round of negotiations in the WTO which reflects this concern—including a call for duty-free access for essentially all products from the least developed countries by the end of the round.

In July, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry announced the review of ECGD's Mission and Status, which will take account of the relationship of ECGD's activities with the Government's wider objectives. In this context, I particularly want the review to look at what more ECGD could do to help the Government to achieve their wider sustainable development objectives, as the UK continues to play a leading role in assisting the poorest developing countries to emerge from the debt and poverty burdens and return to the international trading community.

Arthritis Research

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what research into children's arthritis the Government fund; and if he will make a statement. [96661]

Ms Hewitt: The Government fund health and medical research mainly through the Medical Research Council and the Department of Health.

The Medical Research Council spent about £160k in 1998–99 on projects specifically involved with juvenile arthritis. In addition, the MRC spent £1,128k on arthritis as a whole—much of which will be relevant to the treatment of children with the condition.

The Department of Health has recently funded projects on juvenile arthritis with a total value of over £500k.

Performance Targets

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list all performance targets set for his Department, agencies and non-departmental public bodies since May 1997, other than those listed in Public Service Agreements 1999–2002 [Cm 4181], stating in each case (a) the target to be reached and (b) the date by which it was to be reached. [94985]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 1 November 1999]: My Department has set out the key performance targets on which it will be judged in its Public Service Agreement—published in the Government White Paper of December 1998, called "Public Services for the Future: Modernisation, Reform, Accountability" (Cm 4181)—and in its Expenditure Plans Reports. The Output and Performance Analysis published in March this year showed the measures of success it will use.

A full list of the targets and target dates for Agencies of this and other Government Departments is published annually in the Next Steps Report and these can also be found in each Agency's Annual Report. Targets for the Executive NDPBs are also published annually in the Executive Non-Departmental Public Bodies Report. Copies of these documents are in the Library of the House.

Departmental Accounts

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the methods of depreciation his Department will apply in the current financial year to fixed assets in the preparation of departmental resource accounting balance sheets. [96913]

Dr. Howells: The method of depreciation of fixed assets used by this Department is to use a calculated rate which will write off the valuation of the asset by equal instalments over its estimated useful life after allowing for any residual value. This method is in accordance with the Treasury's Resource Accounting Manual which is underpinned by Financial Reporting Standard 15, "Tangible Fixed Assets", issued by the Accounting Standard Board.

Members of Parliament (Company Affairs)

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many inquiries his Department has undertaken in relation to the company affairs of Members of the House of Commons and House of Lords within the last 10 years; and how many of these have been published. [97100]

Dr. Howells: Records are not maintained in a form which could provide the information requested.

Export Guarantees Advisory Council

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will place in the Library the minutes of meetings of the Export Guarantees Advisory Council. [97105]

Mr. Caborn: The Export Guarantees Advisory Council (EGAC) primarily provides advice on the Export Credits Guarantee Department's country risk assessments and cover policy proposals.

The minutes of the EGAC are not published because these assessments contain frank analysis of the political and economic prospects of many of our trading partners, disclosure of which could be market sensitive. Public disclosure of the minutes could also inhibit the frank discussion of the risk assessments and thus reduce the quality of independent advice provided by Members.

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will set out the procedures the Export Credit Guarantee Department uses when it appoints members of the Export Guarantees Advisory Council. [97103]

Mr. Caborn: Appointments to the Export Guarantees Advisory Council (EGAC) are made in accordance with guidance laid down by the Office of the Commissioner for Public Appointments.

A panel comprising the ECGD Chief Executive and two Independent Assessors selects a shortlist of candidates to recommend to my hon. Friend the Minster for Trade. Members appointed provide their time on a voluntary basis and would normally expect to serve a term of three years.

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the occasions since 1 May 1997 when he has asked for advice from the Export Guarantees Advisory Council in respect of matters relating to the operation of the Export Credit Guarantee Department. [97102]

Mr. Caborn: The Export Guarantees Advisory Council (EGAC) has met 25 times since 1 May 1997. It meets between 9 and 11 times a year to provide advice to the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry. The EGAC is established pursuant to Section 13 of the Export and Investment Guarantees Act 1991.

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list (a) the instances since 1 May 1997 when members of the Export Guarantees Advisory Council have absented themselves from a meeting because an area in which they have declared an interest is under discussion, (b) the names of the council members concerned and (c) the items under discussion. [97104]

Mr. Caborn: Members of the Export Guarantees Advisory Council are obliged to declare any interest which is then noted in the official record of the meeting. They are not required to absent themselves from the meeting when an interest has been declared.

The Council's main role is to consider ECGD's country risk assessments and recommendations—which determine whether ECGD should be on or off cover for particular markets.

Since 1 May 1997, Members have declared an interest on the following occasions:

Declarations of Interest—Export Guarantees Advisory Council

Meeting	Name	Item under discussion
1998
March	Mr. G. Lynch	Review of Overseas Investment Insurance (OII)
May	Mr. D. Harrison	Turkey
1999
May	Mr. P. Mason	Zimbabwe
July	Ms L. Airey Mr. P. Mason	Turkey
September	Mr. D. Harrison	OII—Cover for Portfolio Loans

Fixed-Term Contracts

Mr. Dobbin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will introduce regulation of the use of temporary contracts of employment in the private sector utilities. [97210]

Mr. Alan Johnson: The Government are committed to implementing the Fixed-term work Directive by July 2001. The Directive will ensure that fixed-term contracts are not abused, while retaining labour market flexibility.

Recruitment Industry

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to his answer on 28 October 1999, Official Report, column 935, concerning the calculations of costs arising from changes to the regulations governing care agencies, if he will (a) itemise the reasons his Department does not accept the calculations and (b) publish his own calculations. [97386]

Mr. Alan Johnson: The consultation document published on 31 May contains a regulatory impact assessment of possible cost consequences to those hiring staff through employment bureaux. The figures provided by Mrs. Gifford of Able Community Care contain substantial increases in respect of items, such as basic pay and agency commission, which we do not believe result from the proposals contained in the document.

Supermarkets

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he expects to receive the result of the Competition Commission's investigations into supermarkets in the UK; and if he will make a statement. [97299]

Dr. Howells: The Commission is due to report to the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry by 7 April 2000. If the Commission were to request an extension to the deadline for submitting its report, it would be considered carefully.

Nuclear Non-proliferation Treaty

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to the reply to the hon. Member for Putney (Mr. Colman) of 29 October 1999, Official Report, column 1016, on the Nuclear Non-proliferation Treaty, if he will list the relevant companies and institutions to which he makes reference in respect of safeguards declarations. [97562]

Dr. Howells: In preparing the voluntary declarations to the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA), the Safeguards Office of my Department contacted a total of 165 companies and institutions to determine whether they were performing activities which would need to be reported under the protocol additional to the UK/Euratom/IAEA safeguards agreement following its entry into force. The declarations eventually submitted to the IAEA were based upon information provided by:

Urenco Ltd.

AEA Technology plc.

BNFL

British Energy

British Steel Engineering

British Shielding Windows Ltd.

IMI Nuclear Components Ltd.

Health and Safety Executive.

Car Pricing

Ms Southworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what action he plans to take to make it easier for British consumers to buy fairly priced cars. [95846]

Dr. Howells: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Chorley (Mr. Hoyle) at column 275.

CHP Station (Ansty)

Mr. Stephen Twigg: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he will announce his decision on Rolls-Royce Power Ventures Ltd's proposal to build a combined heat and power station at Ansty, near Coventry. [97613]

Mrs. Liddell: I have today granted clearance under Section 14 of the Energy Act 1976 to Rolls-Royce Power Ventures Ltd.'s notification to build a 49 MW gas-fired combined heat and power station at Rolls-Royce's Ansty works. The decision has been taken in accordance with the policy set out in the White Paper entitled "Conclusions of the Review of Energy Sources for Power Generation and Government response to fourth and fifth Reports of the Trade and Industry Committee" (Cm 4071).

Decisions on other applications under consideration will be announced in due course.

Copies of the Press Notice and the clearance letter are being placed in the Library of the House.

Correspondence

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he plans to reply to the communication sent to him by the hon. Member for Rochford and Southend, East on 8 March, and to the reminder sent on 30 June, about unsolicited mail for his constituent Mr. Loveland. [96483]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 28 October 1999]: My office has received neither of these letters. If the hon. Member would provide me with a copy, I shall ensure he receives an immediate reply.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Justice and Home Affairs Council

Mr. Rammell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the outcome of the Justice and Home Affairs Council held in Luxembourg on 29 October; and if he will make a statement. [97106]

Mr. Straw: The Minister of State, Home Office, my hon. Friend the Member for Hornsey and Wood Green (Mrs. Roche) and I represented the United Kingdom at the Council. The main matters dealt with were as follows:

'A' points

The Council agreed as an 'A' point, among other things, the annual report for 1997–98 on football hooliganism in European Union member states.

Open debate on the Area of Freedom, Security and Justice

The Council discussed the outcome of the Tampere European Council. The Commission undertook to present to the December Justice and Home Affairs Council a first draft of the 'scoreboard' (ie progress report) on implementing specific Tampere measures.

Follow-up to the Tampere European Council

The Presidency presented a paper they had prepared jointly with the Commission and Council Secretariat on implementation of the results of the Tampere European Council. There was no significant discussion.

Draft Eurodac Regulation

The Council noted the Presidency's progress report and encouraged the intensification of efforts to resolve outstanding issues in order to reach agreement at the December Council.

Draft Mandate for a parallel Dublin Agreement with Iceland and Norway

At the previous Council meeting on 4 October, the Commission had presented its proposal for a Community agreement to bring Norway and Iceland into the Dublin Convention arrangements. On 29 October, the Council noted that the agreement needed to be concluded quickly and remitted the draft mandate to Coreper to resolve outstanding difficulties.

Council decision on opening negotiations between Europol and third countries and international organisations

After discussions, further consideration of the draft instrument was remitted to Coreper.

Mutual Legal Assistance Convention: Interception Provisions

The Presidency noted that, while good progress had been made and agreement appeared to be closer, the provisions relating to interception of telecommunications in the draft Convention on Mutual Assistance in criminal matters were still subject to some debate. It circulated for consideration a further compromise text. After discussion, the Presidency concluded that the issue should be remitted to Coreper, with a view to ultimate agreement at the December Council.

Justice and Home Affairs information for National Parliaments

This item was remitted to the December Council.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was (a) the total cost and (b) the cost by force of running police complaints and discipline departments for the last year in which figures are available in each of the 43 police authorities in England and Wales. [97119]

Mr. Charles Clarke: This information is not available centrally.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will state (a) what categories of complaints and (b) how many complaints were received in each category, by the police complaints and discipline departments for the last year in which figures are available, in each of the 43 police authorities in England and Wales. Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many police officers, broken down by rank, were employed in each of the 43 police complaints and discipline departments for the last year in which figures are available; [97122]

(2) how many whole-time equivalent police officers, broken down by rank, were seconded to each of the 43 police complaints and discipline departments for the last year in which figures are available; [97123]

(3) how many whole-time equivalent non-police support staff were employed to work in each of the 43 police complaints and discipline departments for the last year in which figures are available. [97124]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Figures on police staffing of complaints and discipline departments for 1995–96, the latest year for which information was collected, are given in the table. Information on secondments to complaints and discipline departments and on employment of non-police staff is not available.

Mr. Charles Clarke: This information is not available centrally.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (a) how many complaints and (b) in what categories, were supervised by the police complaints authority in each of the 43 police authorities in England and Wales for the last year in which figures are available. [97126]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Information is readily available only on the number of investigations, by individual force, supervised by the Police Complaints Authority (PCA). This is shown for 1998–99 in the table.

Police Manpower

Mr. Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish the conditions which police forces in England and Wales must fulfil before they can apply to his Crime Fighting Fund for money to recruit additional officers. [97232]

Mr. Charles Clarke: We will be discussing the proposals with the Association of Chief Police Officers and the Association of Police Authorities before formally inviting bids from forces for money from the Crime Fighting Fund. We are currently preparing the bidding guidelines. I will place a copy of the guidelines in the Library when they have been finalised.

Meat Supplies

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his policy towards the sourcing of meat and meat products for consumption in his Department's canteen. [96955]

Mr. Straw: The sourcing of meat and meat products for consumption in my Department's staff restaurant is a matter for the contractor, Gardner Merchant, to decide.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will make it his policy to require the Prison Service to buy meat exclusively from sources which match British standards of hygiene and animal welfare; and if he will make a statement; [96977]

(2) what is his policy towards the purchase of French meat and meat products by the Prison Service. [96976]

Mr. Boateng: All contracts for the supply of meat to the Prison Service are subject to European Union Supplies Directive 93/36/EEC. The contracts are awarded to the suppliers submitting the most economically advantageous bid. The criteria consider price, quality, delivery and service offered. The European Directive requires that all products are purchased openly and competitively to British and European standards. All Prison Service specifications for meat are written by the British Meat and Livestock commission and any company wishing to supply meat to the Prison Service must adhere to those specifications.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of meat purchased by the Prison Service is reared and produced in the United Kingdom. [96956]

Mr. Boateng: The proportion of meat purchased under central contract by the Prison Service by country of origin is given in the table.

However, this central contract is not mandatory and, as each prison establishment holds its own budget, purchases can be made under local arrangements from other sources. Details of these are not kept centrally. The introduction of mandatory contracts is under consideration.

Country of origin of meat purchased under central contract by the Prison Service

Meat type	Country of origin	Percentage

Beef—Dices and Minces	English	100

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if French meat and meat products are used in food sold in his Department's canteen; and if he will make it his policy to stop further purchases of French meat and meat products. [96978]

Mr. Straw: The staff restaurant at the Home Office, Queen Anne's Gate and the Prison Service restaurant at Abell House are both run under contract by Gardner Merchant. I understand from Gardner Merchant that neither French meat nor meat products are used in food sold in these staff restaurants.

Criminal Records Bureau

Dr. Brand: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the average costs to a voluntary organisation of access to the Criminal Records Bureau; and if he will make a statement. [96449]

Mr. Charles Clarke: When the Criminal Records Bureau comes into operation, it will be expected to recover its costs through charges for the certificates that it will issue, on application, to individuals. It will be for a voluntary organisation to decide the circumstances in which individuals should apply for a certificate, the type of certificate, and whether to reimburse the cost. Until the Bureau's operating costs have been determined, it will not be possible to fix the charges for certificates, but the cost of certificates has been previously estimated at between £5 and £10, depending upon the type of certificate. We have made clear our intention to keep the cost as low as possible.

Smuggling

Mr. Alan Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were prosecuted for smuggling tobacco or alcohol into the United Kingdom in 1997 to 1999. [96868]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Information held centrally on the Home Office Court Proceedings Database combines sections 50(2)(3), 68(2) and 170(1)(2) of the Customs and Excise Management Act 1979 "Fraudulent evasion of duty etc other than drugs". However, the type of goods involved (eg tobacco, spirits, beers, wines, oils, guns) are not identified separately.

Trespassers

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons have been convicted of offences under section 61 and section 77 of the Criminal Justice Act 1994 in each year since the implementation of the Act. [96665]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The information is given in the table.

Number of offenders convicted at all courts for offences under sections 61 and 77 of the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994, England and Wales, 1995–98 [1]

S77
Power of local authority to direct unauthorised campers to leave land	31	2	4	3

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what legal duty exists for the police to take into account social factors in exercising their power under Section 61 of the Criminal Justice Act 1994. [96664]

Mr. Charles Clarke: There is no statutory requirement on the police to take account of social factors in the exercise of their powers to direct trespassers to leave land under section 61 of the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994. However, a recent court ruling indicated that the police should take into account factors of "common humanity" in reaching their decisions (R v. West London Magistrates Court ex parte Small, Queen's Bench Division CO/3428/98).

Chinese President (State Visit)

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis had operational responsibility for the presence of police officers AB592 Belgravia and CD439 Scotland Yard on Friday 22 October in Cambridge. [96655]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Commissioner tells me that, at the request of Cambridgeshire Constabulary, two Metropolitan police officers were deployed in Cambridge on 22 October to provide advice and assistance on the policing of the visit of the Chinese delegation. The Commissioner retained responsibility for these officers on that date.

Disqualified Drivers

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for each year since 1991 what percentage of disqualifications for (a) causing death by dangerous driving and (b) dangerous driving has been accompanied by (i) an ordinary length retest and (ii) an extended retest. [96638]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The available information relates to the percentage of disqualifications for offences of causing death by dangerous driving (including causing death by careless driving under the influence of drink or drugs, causing death by aggravated vehicle taking and causing bodily harm by furious driving) and dangerous driving, which resulted in a requirement to undertake a driving test in England and Wales and is given in the table:

Percentage of disqualifications for causing death by dangerous driving etc. and dangerous driving that resulted in a driving test requirement, England and Wales

Percentage

Year	Causing death by dangerous driving etc.	Dangerous driving
1993	17	28
1994	35	37
1995	23	40
1996	4	44

No information is available centrally on the distinction between re-tests and extended re-tests. Information for 1998 is not yet available.

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in the latest year for which data are available how many driving disqualifications have been imposed; and how many people have been convicted of driving while disqualified. [96634]

Mr. Charles Clarke: 161,267 disqualifications were imposed for motoring offences in England and Wales during 1997, and in addition, 31,120 persons were disqualified under the penalty points system.

During the same period, there were 42,452 convictions for driving while disqualified.

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he had made of the number of people who drive while disqualified. [96635]

Mr. Charles Clarke: It is calculated from the figures of disqualifications imposed each year that some 370,000 drivers may be disqualified in England and Wales at any one time. A study conducted in 1991 showed that some 27 per cent. of drivers admitted to driving while disqualified, so on that basis, over 90,000 drivers may be driving while disqualified.

Cleveland Police

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 26 April, Official Report 1999, column 77, on the Cleveland Police, when he expects to be able to publish the legal costs of Cleveland Police in respect of the libel case relating to sexual harassment against three Cleveland police officers; and if he will make a statement. [96396]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Negotiations are still ongoing, however, Cleveland Police is insured against legal costs. This insurance has an excess of £100,000. Therefore, the legal costs of Cleveland Police will be anything up to £100,000. Any remaining costs would be a matter for the insurance company.

Holocaust Memorial Day

Mr. Jim Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if his Department's consultation on a Holocaust Memorial Day is taking place in Scotland. [96622]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Yes. The Government are consulting a wide range of individuals and organisations throughout the United Kingdom about this proposal.

Criminal Intelligence

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on his Government's policy on articles 15 to 20 of the Convention for Mutual Assistance in Criminal Matters, pertaining to the interception of telecommunications, with special reference to (i) assessed costs, (ii) burden of costs, (iii) monitoring of interceptions and (iv) requirement for warrant. [96582]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Government provided information on the requirement for a warrant and the burden of costs under the draft European Union Convention on Mutual Assistance in Criminal Matters in the reply given to the hon. Member for Buckingham (Mr. Bercow) on 26 May 1999, Official Report, columns 148–49, by the then Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, my hon. Friend the Member for Vauxhall (Kate Hoey). We do not anticipate significant extra costs arising out of these provisions. The cost of transmitting the intercept product in response to requests falls to the requesting Member State.

The interception provisions in the draft Convention remain under Parliamentary scrutiny.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the Government's policy on Article 14 of the Convention for Mutual Assistance in Criminal Matters, with special reference to (i) legal immunity for the foreign investigator, (ii) powers to be granted, (iii) monitoring of such activity by the Home Department and (iv) loan of resources from national agencies. [96583]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Article 14 of the draft Convention on Mutual Assistance in Criminal Matters allows member states, on request, to agree to assist one another by taking part in covert investigations. Any decisions on immunity or powers for foreign investigators will be the responsibility of the authorities in the United Kingdom when the initial decision is taken to agree to a covert investigation. Any decisions will be made with due regard for the existing law and procedures in the United Kingdom. There are no plans for foreign investigators in the United Kingdom to be granted either immunity or police powers.

Oversight of covert investigations and the loan of resources from national agencies are operational matters for the police and other investigating agencies themselves.

Electoral Register

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how he intends to prevent the use of the Electoral Register by commercial organisations for sending unwanted direct sales marketing to registered electors. [97149]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Working Party on Electoral Procedures, in its report published on 19 October 1999, recommended that each individual registered elector should have the option of deciding whether the details that they have provided should be included in the commercially available register by using an opt out box on the registration form. My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary has indicated that he will seek the earliest opportunity for legislation on the Working Party's proposals, but I cannot anticipate whether a Bill containing provisions about this particular matter will be included in the Queen's Speech for the next session.

HEALTH

Primary Care Professionals

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to enhance the role of pharmacists and other primary care professionals; and, if so, how. [94633]

Mr. Hutton: We plan shortly to publish a strategy on community pharmacy which will deal explicitly with the broader role that pharmacists can play in improving health and health care. We intend that, with appropriate training, optometrists should develop their role beyond sight testing to work with general practitioners and ophthalmologists in treating patients with eye diseases.

The steps we are taking elsewhere in primary care will develop services through walk-in centres, personal medical services pilots and the introduction of primary care groups, which will provide a wider range of opportunities for primary care professionals to expand their roles to improve services for patients. Nurses in particular will benefit from these changes and will be further supported by the roll-out of our programme to enable all nurses with district nursing or health visiting qualification who wish to be able to prescribe drugs and appliances for their patients in their own right.

Drugs

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures are being taken to ensure that the NHS is able to purchase drugs at the cheapest possible rate. [95163]

Mr. Hutton: We have a number of measures in place to help ensure that the National Health Service purchases medicines on reasonable terms.

The Pharmaceutical Price Regulation Scheme (PPRS) secures the provision of branded medicines at fair prices to the NHS that also reflect the cost of researching and developing these medicines. We have recently negotiated a new PPRS which came into effect on 1 October. This includes a reduction of 4.5 per cent. in list prices of branded medicines, which will save the NHS over £150 million a year.

Prices for generic medicines, which are outside the PPRS, are determined by competition in the market. In the past this market has delivered generic medicines at reasonable prices and ensured continuity of supply. Prices, however, have risen sharply this year owning at least in part to supply problems. We are concerned that the scale of the rises may be unjustified and are examining every possible option to see how a more normal market situation can be restored.

Hospitals buy many medicines by competitive tender, often pooling their purchasing power through the NHS Supplies Authority and may utilise formularies to make choices between medicines of similar properties but differing prices.

The arrangements for reimbursing community pharmacies and dispensing doctors for the cost of the medicines they supply contain incentives which encourage them to shop around for the lowest prices, while ensuring that much of the discount which they receive is clawed back. In 1998–99 a total of £400 million was saved in this way.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the total expenditure by the NHS on items in part IXB of the Drug Tariff in each year from 1988–89 to 1998–99, with such breakdown of the figures for each year to types of item as is available. [96079]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 1 November 1999]: The information available is shown in the table.

Total expenditure by the National Health Service on items in part IXB of the Drug Tariff is not available. The table shows the net ingredient cost of items in part IXB of the Drug Tariff that were dispensed in the community in England. Information on similar items dispensed in hospitals is not available.

The net ingredient cost is the basic cost of an appliance and does not take account of discounts, dispensing costs, fees or prescription charges income.

Detailed information by individual item can be found in the publication "Prescription Cost Analysis: England", copies of which are in the Library.

Notes:
1. The data up to 1990 are not strictly consistent with data from 1991 onwards. Figures for 1988–90 are based on fees and on a sample of 1 in 200 prescriptions dispensed by community pharmacists and appliance contractors only. Figures for 1991 onwards are based on items and cover all prescriptions dispensed by community pharmacists, appliance contractors, dispensing doctors and prescriptions submitted by prescribing doctors for items personally administered.
2. The net ingredient cost is the basic cost of a drug and does not take account of discounts, dispensing costs, fees or prescription charges income.

Kidney Transplants

Mr. Hilary Benn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS patients were waiting for kidney transplants on 1 January, or other relevant count dates, in each of the last 20 years. [95642]

Residential Care

Dr. Brand: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what were the reasons for the delay in making the consultation document, "Fit for the Future: National Required Standards for Residential and Nursing Homes", available to those working in the residential care sector; and if he plans to make an extension to the consultation period. [96447]

Mr. Hutton: "Fit for the Future" was issued to a wide range of organisations and individuals, including all the major provider organisations, for consultation nationally on 8 September. Owing to a very high demand for the report, there were initial difficulties in providing printed copies to people who subsequently requested them. However, "Fit for the Future" is immediately accessible on the internet at:

http://www.doh.gov.uk/pub/docs/doh/fitfuture.pdf

We have no plans to extend the formal consultation period. However, the development of National Required Standards will not be completed overnight and comments received on "Fit for the Future" within a reasonable length of time after 3 December will be considered.

Nut Sensitivity

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what recent representations he has received from groups concerned about anaphylaxis and the difficulties faced by sufferers in everyday life; [96437]

(2) what representations he has received from leisure providers concerning the use of their facilities, and participation in activities, by sufferers from anaphylaxis. [96441]

Mr. Hutton: My right hon. Friend the former Minister for Public health met with representatives of the Anaphylaxis Campaign in July 1998 to discuss their concerns about allergy services in the National Health Service and the difficulties faced by sufferers and their families. The Anaphylaxis Campaign has since been involved in further discussions with officials about allergy services. We have received no representations from leisure providers concerning the use of their facilities by sufferers of anaphylaxis.

Podiatric Services

Angela Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list those NHS trusts which provide dedicated podiatric surgical services; and if he will make a statement on their contribution to the NHS. [96205]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 28 October 1999]: We do not hold information on which National Health Service trusts provide dedicated podiatric surgical services. Surgical podiatry has developed as a specialty within the professional practice of podiatry. It plays a useful role in the overall provision of orthopaedic care in the community.

Local Pharmacies

Sir Peter Emery: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures he is taking to support local pharmacies. [96647]

Mr. Hutton: The Government support all pharmacies in England by ensuring they are paid fair and appropriate remuneration for the services they provide on behalf of the National Health Service.

Elderly People (Long-term Care)

Sir Peter Emery: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what provisions his Department is making to meet the recommendations of the royal commission on long-term care for the elderly; [96750]

(2) what action he has taken with regard to Sir Stewart Sutherland's report on the loss of funds for the elderly in long-term care. [96747]

Mr. Hutton: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Basingstoke (Mr. Hunter) on 25 October 1999, Official Report, column 752.

Mr. Alan Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many elderly people are living in long-term care; what proportion are responsible for paying the full or part cost of their care; and what is the average annual cost of looking after a person in long-term care. [96861]

Mr. Hutton: At 31 March 1997 there were 209,000 permanent residents in residential homes catering primarily for elderly people and elderly mentally ill people, and 154,166 people aged 65 and over in nursing homes. Permanent and temporary residents cannot be separately identified.

Information on the numbers of elderly people paying the full or part cost of their residential or nursing home care is not collected centrally. However, a 1996 personal Social Services Research Unit survey found that around 25 per cent. of elderly nursing home residents and around 30 per cent. of elderly residential care home residents are wholly privately funded. Other residential care and nursing home residents contribute towards the cost of their care, with the exception of National Health Service supported nursing home residents; however, any social security benefits they receive may be reduced.

Gross annual expenditure on residential or nursing care in homes for older people was £13,700 per supported resident in 1997–98.

Private Nursing Homes

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to encourage local authorities to place elderly patients who are awaiting discharge from hospital in private nursing homes; and if he will make a statement. [96758]

Mr. Hutton: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Waveney (Mr. Blizzard) on 29 October 1999, Official Report, column 1027.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans the Government have to reduce the regulatory framework for private nursing homes for the elderly. [96756]

Mr. Hutton: Our plans for reforming the regulatory arrangements for care homes and other social services are set out in our White Paper, "Modernising Social Services", published last year. The new arrangements are about improving regulation and reducing bureaucracy.

We will replace the current system, where over 100 health authorities register and inspect nursing homes, each applying locally developed standards, with an independent inspection and registration system applying clear, coherent and consistent National Required Standards to nursing homes across the whole country.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action the Government intend to take to support the private sector in the provision of homes for the elderly. [96755]

Mr. Hutton: We are undertaking a number of measures to improve the commissioning of social services, including from the independent sector. These include the development of better ways to help local authorities to identify what interventions are most effective in replacing good practice and securing sustainable improvements in the efficiency, quality and range of service commissioning for older people; and the use of Best Value service reviews, Joint Reviews with the Audit Commission and Social Services Inspectorate inspections to ensure that best practice is being implemented.

The Government's Small Business Service will be looking at how the needs of small businesses can be met at a national, regional and local level.

Elderly Patients

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what evidence he has assessed since May 1997 concerning the extra resources required to meet the general practice medical needs of people aged 85 years and over. [96326]

Mr. Hutton: Resources relating to patients aged 85 years and over are not examined separately. Resources to General Medical practices are increased, by way of the Standard Capitation fee, for patients aged 75 years and over. Additionally, the 1998 Doctors and Dentists Review Body recommended that an additional £60 million be allocated for the enhancement of general practitioners' net remuneration, particularly targeted on mental health and care of the elderly. The profession and the Department agreed that £5 million be distributed through local development schemes to this end.

Nursing and Care Homes

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to implement the recommendations of the Centre for Policy on Ageing in respect of nursing and care homes. [96975]

Mr. Hutton: We published the Centre for Policy on Ageing's proposals on National Required Standards for residential and nursing homes for older people in our consultation document, "Fit for the Future" issued on 8 September. The consultation document was sent to a wide range of organisations and individuals. We will carefully consider all the comments we receive before finalising any regulatory standards and the timetable for implementing them.

Pensions

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the effects on the number of pensioners receiving income support of an increase of 75p in the basic state pension coupled with an increase of £3 in the income support level, together with similar proportionate increases in the rates for older pensioners and married persons. [96023]

Mr. Rooker: We estimate that 30,000 pensioners would become newly entitled to the minimum income guarantee if benefit rates were amended in this way.

Notes:

1. "Pensioners" refers to single people aged 60 or over or couples or partners where one is 60 or over.
2. All estimates are derived from the 1999–2000 PSM model based on the 1996–67 FRS uprated to 1999–2000 prices with IS administrative adjustments.
3. Figures exclude cases in residential care and nursing homes.
4. Estimates are rounded to the nearest 5,000 cases.

Mortgage Interest

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what undertakings were given by the Building Societies Association with regard to their policy on repossessions in return for the agreement of Her Majesty's Government in 1991 to pay income support for mortgage interest direct to lenders. [96757]

Mr. Bayley: A statement was made to the House of Commons on 19 December 1991 by the then Chancellor of the Exchequer. He stated that in response to DSS making payments direct to the lender, lenders have confirmed that they will not take possession in cases where mortgage interest payments are covered by Income Support.

Income Support

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he will review the rates of (a) earnings disregard for Income Support and (b) earnings disregard for Housing Benefit. [96899]

Mr. Bayley: We review the rates of earnings disregards in all the income-related benefits (including Income Support and Housing Benefit) as part of the annual uprating process.

We believe that work is the best form of welfare, but that support should be there for those people who cannot work. The disregards are designed to achieve a balance between providing an encouragement to part-time work without creating disincentives to full-time work and independence. The Welfare to Work objectives are to create the right conditions for everyone of working age, who is able to work, to move into full-time paid work; supported as appropriate by Housing Benefit and Council Tax Benefit, and the new Working Families and Disabled Persons Tax Credits.

Older People

Mr. O'Hara: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the current full membership by (a) ministerial title and (b) minister's name of the inter-ministerial group for older people. [96511]

Mr. Rooker: The existing membership of the inter-ministerial group for older people is as follows:

The inter-ministerial group for older people

CABINET OFFICE

Rural Audit

Mr. Baldry: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office if she will publish the Performance and Innovation Unit's rural audit. [95463]

Marjorie Mowlam: My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister announced a project considering objectives for rural economies by the Performance and Innovation Unit on 10 December 1998, Official Report, column 278. The Unit expects to publish the report later this year.

Regulatory Impact Assessments

Mr. Michael J. Foster: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office if she will list those regulatory impact assessments published during the last six months. [97599]

Marjorie Mowlam: The Government are committed to ensuring that regulations are necessary, give effective protection, balance cost and risk, are fair and command public confidence. In accordance with this, we require Departments to produce and publish Regulatory Impact Assessments (RIAs) for all regulatory proposals likely to have an impact on business.

I have presented to Parliament today a Command Paper listing 90 RIAs published between 1 January and 30 June 1999. Copies of those listed have been placed in the Libraries of the House. Please note that this Command Paper entitled "Regulatory Impact Assessments" has replaced the previous series entitled "Compliance Cost Assessments". This is the eleventh such Command Paper.

Millennium Projects

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what steps she is taking to ensure the commercial viability of millennium projects. [96659]

Mr. Chris Smith: I have been asked to reply.

This is a matter for the Millennium Commission. I will reply to my hon. Friend in my capacity as Chairman of the Commission, and place copies of my reply in the Libraries of the House.

TREASURY

Baby Statistics

Mr. Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what were the numbers of (a) babies born under (i) 2,500g and (ii) 3,000g by maternal age and (b) babies born by maternal age in each of the last three years for which figures are available. [95534]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Dr. Tim Holt to Mr. Frank Field, dated 4 November 1999:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your parliamentary question (Order paper 147, page 3299):

[2] The 1998 figures presented relate to our database as at 9 June 1999. Therefore those figures may differ slight from those published elsewhere. In 1998 there were 894 births without a stated birthweight.

Charitable Donations

Mr. Alan Campbell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the total amount given to charitable organisations in the last year for which figures are available; and what was the total amount of tax relief for charitable donations in that year. [96864]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Annual estimates for total donations to charities are not available centrally. The Charities Aid Foundation estimates overall income donated by individuals to be around £5 billion to £6 billion per year. In addition to this, charities also benefit from donations by companies and other organisations.

The cost of tax relief on donations to charities under the tax-effective methods of giving, namely Deeds of Covenant, Gift Aid, Millennium Gift Aid and Payroll Giving, in 1998–99 was about £725 million.

National Statistics

Mr. Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will break down the numbers of people in work as a proportion of those over the state retirement age for each of the last 20 years. [96765]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Frank Field, dated 4 November 1999:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your parliamentary questions for time series of the numbers of people of working age and numbers of people in employment as a proportion of the population over working age.

The data requested is shown in the table attached using estimates from the Labour Force Survey (LFS). The LFS has been used because it can provide estimates of both overall populations and employment. For the periods shown there does not appear to be any trend in the first series and the second tends to have followed the economic cycle. The Labour Force Survey was conducted biannually in the United Kingdom between spring 1979 and spring 1983 and therefore estimates for 1980 and 1982 are not available.

The LFS is a household survey and therefore people in communal establishments will generally be excluded. Around one in 20 people over the state retirement age are in such establishments compared with around one in 100 for those of working age. Consequently the ratio of the population of working age to that over retirement age would have been a little less if people in such establishments were included. Similar considerations apply to the other series.

Mr. Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the numbers and percentage of workers in firms employing (a) below 10 workers, (b) from 10 to 50 workers, (c) from 50 to 100 workers and (d) over 100 workers, over the latest period for which he has data. [96235]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 29 October 1999]: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Frank Field, dated 2 November 1999:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your recent parliamentary question on the numbers and percentage of workers in firms employed in different size bands.

The information requested is available from the Annual Employment Survey (AES) at September 1997 (latest available date) for the size bands shown.

Employee jobs[1] at September 1997, Great Britain

Size band	Thousand	Percentage
1–10	4,528	20
11–49	5,787	26
50–99	2,695	12
100 and over	9,523	42

Performance Targets

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list all performance targets set for his Department, agencies and non-departmental public bodies since May 1997, other than those listed in Public Service Agreements 1999–2002 (Cm 4181), stating in each case (a) the target to be reached and (b) the date by which it was to be reached. [94977]

Mr. Andrew Smith [holding answer 1 November 1999]: The Chancellor's Departments have set out the key performance targets on which they will be judged in their Public Service Agreements (Cm 4181), and the measures of success they will use in the Output and Performance Analysis published by the Treasury on 31 March 1999.

These high level targets are supported at operational level by objectives and targets to ensure delivery by individual units.

Euro

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answers to the hon. Member for Buckingham of 27 October 1999, Official Report, column 895, if he will list which organisations appear in which working party of the outline National Changeover Plan; and if he will make a statement on the activities and conclusions to date of each working group. [97567]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Treasury published the "Third report on euro preparations" on 1 November. Copies of the report are available in the Library of the House.

Financial Exclusion

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what measures he has taken to ensure that banks address issues of financial exclusion arising from branch closures. [97128]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Banks are being encouraged to develop appropriate products and delivery channels to suit the needs and circumstances of financially excluded people.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what action he is taking to ensure that banks in England and Wales and Northern Ireland follow the lead of Scottish banks in offering basic bank accounts within minimal legal requirements to any customers who need and seek one. [97127]

Miss Melanie Johnson: A number of banks already offer these accounts to customers in England, Wales and Northern Ireland, and others are planning to do so next year. The Treasury will continue to monitor such developments.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will start rating the banks using post code information currently available on the basis of the extent to which they are providing credit and banking services to every part of the country. [97113]

Miss Melanie Johnson: There are no plans to introduce such a scheme.

Gold Reserves

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the adequacy of the gold reserves of (a) the United Kingdom and (b) Germany. [97152]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Government have placed considerable importance on making the best use of public assets, including financial assets such as the foreign currency and gold reserves. We considered that with almost half of the United Kingdom's $14 billion of net foreign currency and gold reserves held in gold, it was too big an exposure to one asset. Therefore, we announced on 7 May a technical restructuring of the reserves aimed at achieving a better balance in the portfolio by diversifying more widely. This will leave the reserves and the United Kingdom as a whole in a sounder financial position in the future.

We have made no assessment of the adequacy of the German gold reserves.

Tax Returns

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what consultations his Department has had with (a) the Treasury and (b) software providers regarding the availability of software packages to accommodate carry-forward and carry-back for the purpose of completing tax returns. [96894]

Mr. Rooker: I have been asked to reply.

This Department works closely with the Inland Revenue and the Treasury in taking forward the proposals in Stakeholder Pension Consultation Brief 6, including the proposal to remove the carry forward and carry back facility. The Department has not had separate discussions with software providers on this issue. However, software providers have had the opportunity to respond to the public consultation and we are now considering all the responses.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Class Sizes

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to his letter of 27 October to the hon. Member for Hertsmere on infant class sizes, if he will give a breakdown of the 1,600 new classrooms to which he refers (a) by type of school and (b) by local education authority. [96918]

Ms Estelle Morris: To date, over 1,700 extra classrooms have been provided through the class sizes initiative. These are detailed by both local education authority and type of school in the following table. Sufficient funding has been earmarked to allow at least 800 further classrooms to be built by September 2001, when statutory limits on infant class sizes are introduced.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to his letter of 27 October to the hon. Member for Hertsmere, what estimate he has made of the number of pupils (a) at Key Stage 2 in primary schools and (b) in secondary schools who will be in classes of over 30 pupils in September 2001. [96919]

Ms Estelle Morris: We have made no such estimates. However, the most recent figures show that the proportion of Key Stage 2 children in classes over 30 fell by 1 per cent. between January 1998 and January 1999. This contrasts with an annual rise every year from January 1996 to January 1998. There was also a year-on-year increase in primary class sizes from 1988 to 1998 as a result of the budgets of the previous administration. The average number of pupils in Key Stage 2 classes in January 1999 was 28.4. The average number of pupils in secondary classes in January 1999 was 21.9.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to his letter of 27 October to the hon. Member for Hertsmere on infant class sizes, how many new classrooms have been provided in (a) primary schools and (b) secondary schools in each year for the last 10 years and how many it is planned to provide in each year that has so far been planned for. [96917]

Ms Estelle Morris: Funding has so far been allocated in support of the Key Stage 1 Class Size Initiative to enable Local Education Authorities to provide over 1,600 more classrooms. Information more generally is not collected centrally.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to his letter of 27 October to the hon. Member for Hertsmere on infant class sizes, (1) how many secondary school pupils were in classes of over 30 in (a) January 1998, (b) January 1999 and (c) September 1999; [96772]

(2) how many pupils aged 8, 9 and 10 years were in classes of over 30 in (a) January 1998, (b) January 1999 and (c) September 1999; [96773]

(3) how many children in nursery classes were in classes of over 30 in (a) January 1998, (b) January 1999 and (c) September 1999. [96887]

Ms Estelle Morris: The available information is shown in the following tables.

Higher Education

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) how many students are currently enrolled on taught postgraduate courses in higher education institutions in (a) Derry, (b) Belfast, (c) Edinburgh, (d) Glasgow, (e) Manchester and (f) Birmingham; [97049]

(2) what proportions of UK students registered for taught postgraduate courses in computing science in the several higher education institutions located in (a) Derry, (b) Belfast, (c) Edinburgh, (d) Glasgow, (e) Manchester and (f) Birmingham, are paying their own fees. [97050]

Mr. Wicks: The numbers of students enrolled on taught postgraduate courses in institutions in the cities listed are given in the table:

Policy on higher education in Northern Ireland is the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

Policy on higher education in Scotland is the responsibility of the Scottish Parliament.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the Government's latest estimate of the proportion of young people in England entering higher education at the beginning of the academic year 1999–2000 from (a) semi-skilled and (b) unskilled family backgrounds and (c) from disadvantaged localities; and what were the comparable figures for each of the last three years. [97153]

Mr. Wicks: The available data on students accepted for entry through the Universities and Colleges Admissions Service (UCAS) to higher education in the United Kingdom are given in the table. Information on participation rates of young people from disadvantaged localities is not held centrally.

Departmental Accounts

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what methods of depreciation his Department will apply in the current financial year to fixed assets in the preparation of departmental resource accounting balance sheets. [97043]

Mr. Wills: All fixed assets are depreciated on a straight line basis to zero. Exceptions are land, which is not depreciated, and cars, which retain a 20 per cent. residual value. Depreciation methods are in accordance with the Treasury's Resource Accounting Manual. The requirements in the Manual regarding those methods will be underpinned by Financial Reporting Standard 15 'Tangible Fixed Assets' issued by the Accounting Standards Board. Details of the period over which assets are depreciated are as follows:

Asset type	Depreciation policy
Buildings	Up to 50 years
Land	No depreciation
Furniture	7–10 years
Fittings	10 years
Office machinery	3–10 years
Cars	5 years with residual value of 20 per cent.

Education Maintenance Allowances

Mr. Hilary Benn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when he expects the processing of initial payments of education maintenance allowances under the pilot scheme to have been completed. [97035]

Mr. Wicks: All 15 pilot areas will have made payments of Education Maintenance Allowances (EMAs) by Friday 5 November 1999.

Of the 15 pilot EMA areas, 10 had made payments by the end of September. All young people who were paid late, but were due an EMA when term started in September, received arrears of their EMA with their first payment.

Over 13,000 young people had applied for an EMA by 1 October 1999. EMA payments of over £185,000 had been made by 1 October.

EMAs are an important and exciting new initiative, and early indications are that they are already making a real difference to young people in the pilot areas.

Learning and Skills Councils

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what guidance he has issued to local authorities, training and enterprise councils and colleges of further education concerning the membership and responsibilities of the proposed learning and skills councils. [96710]

Mr. Wicks [holding answer 1 November 1999]: The "Learning to Succeed" White Paper set out that employers will be the single largest group on the Council. On 28 October, the Secretary of State announced that at least 40 per cent. of people on the Boards of the new Learning and Skills Councils, together with the national Chair and majority of local Chairs, will be people with significant business experience. It is expected that Board members will be drawn from a wide range of bodies that have an interest in education and training. We want to attract the best individuals available and we will be looking for people from a variety of backgrounds to represent individual and community interests.

In December we will be publishing a document setting out the Government's plans for implementing the proposals in the White Paper. The document will outline how the new structures will work and set out the next steps for implementation.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what plans he has to make the Integrated Youth Service areas coterminous with local education authority, regional development agency or sub-regional local learning and skills/small business service boundaries; and if he will make a statement; [97057]

(2) what plans he has to make careers and guidance areas coterminous with the sub-regional local learning and skills councils/small business service boundaries; and if he will make a statement. [97058]

Mr. Wicks [holding answer 2 November 1999]: The "Learning to Succeed" White Paper and the Social Exclusion Unit's report "Bridging the Gap" announced the creation of a new youth support service which will provide guidance and support for all young people aged 13–19, building on what is currently provided by the Careers Service, parts of the Youth Service and other organisations.

We have been consulting on the functions and local delivery arrangements for the new service. A further announcement on the Youth Support Service, including the local boundaries, will be made later in the year.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what guidance he has issued to local authorities, training and enterprise councils and colleges of further education concerning the division of responsibilities between the proposed local learning and skills councils and (a) local lifelong learning partnerships and (b) the National Learning and Skill Council. [96777]

Mr. Wicks [holding answer 3 November 1999]: We issue regular updates to all our partners on the implementation of our proposals, in "Learning to Succeed", to establish a Learning and Skills Council with both a national and local presence. The Local Councils will be accountable to the National Council for the implementation of national frameworks and policies in their areas. The Local Councils will be accountable to their local communities for meeting local needs, through mechanisms such as public meetings, dissemination of information on the LSC's activities, and effective feedback and complaints mechanisms.

In September, a joint letter was sent from the Department for Education and Employment and its main national partners to all TECs, local education authorities, further education colleges and other local partners summarising the responsibilities of Learning Partnerships in the new post-16 arrangements. Learning Partnerships will continue to be voluntary groupings of post-16 learning providers and users with a local focus. They will be responsible for ensuring that provision is responsive to local community needs. The work of the Learning and Skills Council will need to be informed by an understanding of local labour market needs—Lifelong Learning Partnerships are perfectly placed to provide that.

In December we intend to publish a document outlining how the new structures will work and setting out the next steps for implementation. We also plan to issue more detailed guidance to Learning Partnerships in December on their role, responsibilities and relationship with Local Learning and Skills Councils.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what guidelines he has issued to the training and enterprise councils in respect of (a) redundancy payments and (b) incentive payments to staff pending the establishment of learning and skills councils. [96718]

Mr. Wicks [holding answer 3 November 1999]: Government Offices are currently discussing with TECs their proposals to retain key staff during the transition period to the new Learning and Skills Council and packages for staff in the event that redundancies should be necessary. Those discussions have been based on initial guidance we have provided to Government Offices. We are in the process of finalising the guidance in the light of those discussions and will be issuing it to TECs shortly. I will provide my hon. Friend with a copy of that final guidance as soon as it is issued and I will also place copies in the Libraries of the House.

Citizenship Curriculum

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) if he will include in the new citizenship curriculum provision for the study of aspects of global citizenship, in particular sustainable development; [96461]

(2) what measures he is taking to ensure that guidance notes on the citizenship curriculum give attention to global citizenship. [96462]

Jacqui Smith: The framework for education for citizenship will include the study of the world as a global community. We will issue guidance, to include global citizenship and sustainable development, which will be available to schools in the new year.

Student Loans

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what representations he has received about the quality of service experienced by clients of the Student Loans Company; [96595]

(2) what assessment he has made of the performances of the Student Loans Company in relation to the (a) processing of applications and (b) answering of telephone inquiries. [96596]

Mr. Wicks: The Student Loans Company (SLC) has played a major part in the successful introduction of the new student support arrangements. To date in academic year 1999–2000, it has made 494,000 student loans. This is around 150,000 more than at the same time in 1998–99. 325,000 telephone inquiries have been answered on the SLC's student support helpline since the start of academic year 1999–2000.

The Department has received 90 complaints from students about the service provided by the SLC on loans for academic year 1999–2000. These represent a very small proportion—some 0.02 per cent.—of the 494,000 loans made. While there have been a very small number of concerns, students have benefited this year from our commitment to get loans to students at the start of term.

Assisted Places

Mr. Alan Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many children were in receipt of an assisted place; and what was the total cost in England and Wales in each year since 1992. [96860]

Ms Estelle Morris: The information requested is shown in the following table and is in respect of children in England. The cost in 1998–99 was £22 million less than planned expenditure under the previous administration. That saving was used to provide extra teachers to reduce class sizes. Figures for Wales are a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Assisted places scheme: England

1992–93	28,674	[1]92.9

Education Expenditure

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the current amounts available for expenditure on education by each of the (a) shire counties and (b) unitary authorities as a percentage of total spending; and indicate what each such authority would have to spend to bring it up to the spending level of the highest-spending shire county. [95221]

Ms Estelle Morris: The information given in the table shows, for 1999–2000, for each shire and unitary local authority in England, (i) the percentage of each authority's total spending which was allocated to education, and (ii) the extra sum each would have to allocate in order to spend as much per pupil as Slough.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Dairy Industry

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on prospects for the dairy industry. [95837]

Ms Quin: The UK dairy industry has faced a particularly difficult two years and this situation will not easily or quickly be reversed. But recent assistance from the Government in the form of a waiver of cattle passport charges, together with an ending to the uncertainty regarding Milk Marque, will go some way to helping the sector stabilise.

Grassland

Sir Peter Emery: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking to comply with the EU Directive on EIA agricultural land use changes to prevent further losses of grassland in Devon. [96876]

Mr. Morley: I refer the right hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Hereford (Mr. Keetch) on 2 November 1999, Official Report, column 157.

Lamb

Miss Geraldine Smith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he plans to take to improve the export market for lamb. [95758]

Ms Quin: Exports of sheepmeat remain close to historic levels. My fellow Ministers and I and overseas posts will ensure that we give British lamb a high profile wherever possible, but the promotion of exports is principally a matter for the industry itself.

Storm Damage (Sussex Coast)

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will estimate the costs of the damage caused by the recent storm on the West Sussex coast. [96328]

Mr. Morley: Information about such costs is not collected centrally. Local authorities have statutory powers to deal with emergencies and are expected to budget accordingly. They may apply for additional financial assistance where there is a case for doing so under existing rules. Where capital works for flood and coastal defences are justified, government grant will be considered against normal criteria.

Rural Development Regulation

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to increase funding in respect of Rural Development Regulation. [96928]

Mr. Morley: Options for funding the Rural Development Regulation are still being considered. An announcement will be made in due course.

Forestry Commission

Mr. Green: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what guidance he has given the Forestry Commission on maintaining public access after the sale of Forestry Commission land; and if he will make a statement. [96960]

Mr. Morley: We stopped large-scale sales of forest land managed by the Forestry Commission when we took up office in 1997. The Commission is, however, still able to sell relatively small and isolated blocks of forest land which do not make a significant contribution to its objectives and are surplus to requirements. Forest land which is important for public access will not be sold unless the Commission has secured a public access agreement with the local authority, which is binding on all subsequent owners of the land.

Organic Farming

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food which areas are eligible for grants for conversion to organic farming. [96703]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 1 November 1999]: Under the Statutory Instrument which was laid on 3 November 1999, aid under the Organic Farming Scheme will be available to farmers throughout England.

Pig Farmers

Mr. Dobbin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to alleviate the difficulties facing pig farmers. [96681]

Ms Quin: We are fully aware of the crisis facing the pig sector. We have made an additional £6 million in marketing and promotion aid available and it is our intention that this sector will benefit significantly from this money. I hope that this financial support will strengthen the sector's competitive position in the future and lead to better returns for pig producers.

Furthermore, my right hon. Friend the Minister has recently written to MPs and local authorities to emphasise the importance of sourcing pigmeat products to British standards. He has also made a formal request to the EU Commission to reopen the private storage aid scheme. We are tackling misleading labelling and are consulting on revised guidelines to Trading Standards Authorities. Ministers are committed to better auditing of claims on welfare and other standards of imported products. We will have meetings with retailers to insist that they reaffirm their commitments of last year on sourcing pigmeat to British standards. Similar meetings will take place with leading caterers. We will also be asking the Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee (SEAC) to consider whether the current ban on the use of porcine meat and bonemeal (MBM) is still justified.

CHURCH COMMISSIONERS

Pastoral Measure 1983

Mr. Quinn: To ask the hon. Member for Middlesbrough, representing the Church Commissioners, when it is proposed to review the Pastoral Measure 1983; and if he will make a statement. [96633]

Mr. Stuart Bell: A motion from the Wakefield Diocesan Synod seeking a review of the redundancy provisions of the Pastoral Measure is likely to be debated by the General Synod next year.

WALES

Departmental Expenditure Limit

Mr. Touhig: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if there are any proposals to amend the Welsh Departmental Expenditure Limit for 1999–2000. [97785]

Mr. Paul Murphy: Subject to Parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate for Class XIV, Vote 1 (the Welsh Office, the Wales Office and the National Assembly for Wales) the Welsh Departmental Expenditure Limit for 1999–2000 will be increased by £124,972,000 from £7,092,517,000 to £7,217,489,000. The increase is the result of:

i) Net transfers of £7,866,000 from other Government Departments as detailed from vi) to x);

ii) A £14,700,000 increase in the provision for Hill Livestock Compensatory Allowances;

iii) Provision of £235,000 for the Auditor General for Wales;

iv) An increase in provision of £4,300,000 as a result of the Dearing Review of Higher Education, and

v) The take up of end-year flexibility entitlement of £97,871,000.

There is also an increase in the provision for Welfare to Work of £923,000 as a result of the take up of end-year flexibility entitlement of £789,000. For further information relating to end-year flexibility see the answer given on 27 July 1999, Official Report, column 393. There is a further transfer of £134,000 from Class 1, Vote 3.

The increase will be offset by transfers from:

vi) Class II, Vote 1 (£7,487,000);

vii) Class III, Votes 2 and 3 (£298,000);

viii) Class VII, Vote 1 (£50,000);

ix) Class XIII, Vote 1 (£-73,000); and

x) Class X, Vote 1 (£104,000).

The balance will be met by a charge on the Departmental Expenditure Limit Reserve for the take-up of the end-year flexibility entitlement, the increase in Hill Livestock Compensatory Allowances and the Dearing moneys and will not, therefore, add to the planned total of public expenditure.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Departmental Expenditure Limit

Mr. McWalter: To ask the Solicitor-General what proposals there are to change the 1999–2000 Departmental Expenditure Limit and running costs limits for the work of the HM Procurator General and Treasury Solicitor. [97787]

The Solicitor-General: Subject to Parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate for Class V, Vote 6, the Departmental Expenditure Limit will increase by a net £264,000 from £7,175,000 to £7,439,000 whilst the Department's running cost limit will increase by £28,000 from £4,707,000 to £4,735,000.

The increase in Departmental Expenditure Limit is partially due to an increase in capital expenditure (£236,000) which will be used to continue the expansion of IT systems within the Department. This will be met from end year flexibility provision as announced by the Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 27 July 1999, Official Report, column 393. A further increase in the Departmental Expenditure Limit (£28,000), which also increases the running cost limit, is due to additional costs associated with the extension of the Attorney-General's powers in referring unduly lenient sentences which fall on this vote. This will be offset by a transfer from the Home Office (Class IV, Vote 1).

All this increase is offset by a transfer and not charged to the Reserve, it will not add to the planned total of public expenditure.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Northern Ireland

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many new enrolments there were in each of the past three years into each of the agricultural colleges; and if he will make a statement. [94441]

Mr. George Howarth: The new enrolments on full-time and part-time courses at DANI Colleges for the last two completed academic years and for the present academic year to mid-October were as follows:

New full-time and part-time enrolments	1997–98	1998–99	1999–2000
Enniskillen College of Agriculture	180	156	[1]155
Greenmount College of Agriculture and Horticulture	368	360	[1]348
Loughrey College—The Food Centre	184	161	[1]204
Total	732	677	[1]707

[1] Enrolments to mid-October—further enrolments on part-time course still expected

Many college courses are of 2, 3 and 4 years duration and the overall student enrolment would be much greater than that indicated above.

In addition to the full-time and part-time courses, the DANI Colleges provide a wide range of short courses of between half a day and 10 days duration for people working in the agri-food industry. The overall enrolment on these courses across the three Colleges for the last three academic years was:

Enrolments on Short Courses at DANI Colleges

1997–98: 7,805

1998–99: 13,031

1999–2000: 10,559.

Policing Review

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the directorships held by each member of the Patten Commission on the Review of Policing in Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement. [94350]

Mr. Ingram: No.

Equal Opportunities

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he (a) has established and (b) published a baseline for policy appraisal against which to measure progress on equal treatment. [94862]

Mr. George Howarth: In preparation for the new European Union Structural Funds Plan for Northern Ireland 2000–2006, an ex ante appraisal has established baseline data on equal opportunities for men and women. This will be published as part of the documentation for the Plan. In addition to their primary function in relation to the Structural Funds Plan, this data may also be used for future policy appraisal, including impact assessments in relation to the promotion of opportunity, as required by Section 75 and Schedule 9 of the Northern Ireland Act 1998.

CCTV (Portadown)

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress has been made in installing closed circuit television cameras in Portadown town centre; and at which locations have these cameras been installed. [95353]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 26 October 1999]: The Royal Ulster Constabulary have advised that, subject to the successful completion of the work, the CCTV scheme in Portadown will be in operation by January 2000. Nine sites have been identified for the installation of cameras. They are:

1. West Street/Mandeville Street
2. Shillington Street/Mandeville Street
3. Woodhouse Street/Market Street
4. Magowan Buildings Car Park
5. William Street/Market Street
6. Pleasure Gardens/Bridge Street
7. Woodhouse Street
8. Bottom of High Street
9. Thomas Street/Market Street.

RUC Guidelines

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what guidelines are issued to Royal Ulster Constabulary officers in respect of securing and sealing scenes of crime for the purposes of forensic examination where serious assaults have occurred in public places; and if he will place a copy of such guidelines in the Library. [95354]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 26 October 1999]: The RUC provides guidance on the preservation and examination of scenes of crime by way of a Force Order. This is an operational police document and it would therefore be inappropriate to place a copy in the Library.

Crime Clear-up Rates

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what are the latest available crime clear-up rates, broken down by District Council area, in Northern Ireland. [95891]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 28 October 1999]: It is not possible to provide the information by District Council area but the following table shows offences recorded and cleared by the RUC as a force, by Region, Division and Sub-Division:

Offences recorded and cleared 1998–99

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Export Licensing

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry for what reason export licence application 6078 was not placed before the interdepartmental licensing committee on 12 October and 18 October; and if he will ensure that the application is processed as a matter of extreme urgency. [96481]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 28 October 1999]: Export Licence Application 6078 was placed before the relevant interdepartmental committee on 18 October 1999. This application is being considered on its merits under the normal process to allow proper consideration.

Nuclear Fuel

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what quantities of spent fuel from Canada have been contracted for reprocessing at Sellafield; when the contracts were agreed; what arrangements exist for the repatriation of the reprocessed plutonium and radioactive waste; when the spent fuel arrived from Canada; and if it has been reprocessed yet. [96467]

Mrs. Liddell: The details and quantities of individual contracts, the timing of fuel deliveries and of reprocessing for specific customers as well as the detailed arrangements for returning plutonium and wastes to the country of origin are commercial and operational matters for BNFL and its customers. In understand from BNFL, however, that BNFL concluded a contract to reprocess a quantity of Canadian spent fuel in 1970 and that fuel covered by this contract has been delivered to Sellafield. Since 1976 all BNFL's contracts for reprocessing overseas spent fuel have contained options for the return of wastes to the country of origin. The Government's policy is that these options should be exercised. BNFL's overseas reprocessing contracts concluded prior to 1976 do not contain return of waste options.

Indonesia

Mr. Stinchcombe: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what level of ECGD cover has been provided in relation to arms sales to Indonesia for each of the three most recent years for which there are records. [96586]

Mr. Caborn: From the latest statistics available the value of defence related export credits to Indonesia for each of the past three years is as follows:

Year	£ million
1996–97	144
1997–98	17
1998–99	9

These figures include all ECGD covered business with defence buyers, including sales of non-lethal equipment.

Arms Sales

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what checks are made and controls imposed by his Department on arms manufacturers and arms brokers before they are granted permission to advertise on his Department's website. [97389]

Mr. Caborn: British Trade International brings together the joint work of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and the Department of Trade and Industry in support of UK trade and investment overseas and its TradeUK Internet website(www.tradeuk.com) has been created to help put UK suppliers in touch with overseas buyers. Over 57,000 firms are currently listed. The majority of UK firms' contact data is used under licence from a commercial database source but firms can also submit their own entries. Our current policy is to allow any firm in any sector involved in exporting for the UK to be listed, free of charge, on the TradeUK National Exporters Database. These firms are responsible for the information they supply and for its accuracy. It is clearly not in their interest to promote goods for which an export licence would not be granted. We are reviewing the guidance we provide to UK firms both in the TradeUK application form and on the website to make clear the need to comply with current export control legislation. We are also reviewing operational procedures with the TradeUK contractor.

Regional Selective Assistance

Mr. White: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement about his plans for processing applications for regional selective assistance within the existing assisted areas map which is due to be replaced on 1 January 2000 in accordance with the EU Guidelines on Regional State Aid. [97784]

Mr. Caborn: Under the European Commission's new regional aid guidelines all offers of Regional Selective Assistance under the existing Assisted Area map must be made by 31 December 1999. In order, therefore, to allow sufficient time for the processing of cases, no new applications for Regional Selective Assistance under the existing map will be accepted after 17.00 hours on 30 November 1999. This cut-off date will apply to applications across the whole of the GB map.

Departmental Expenditure Limits

Mr. Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what changes will be made to the departmental expenditure limits and running cost limits for his Department, the Office for Telecommunications, the Office of Gas Supply and the Office of Electricity Regulation. [97781]

Mr. Byers: Subject to Parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estate, the voted element of the Departmental Expenditure Limit for the Department of Trade and Industry will be increased by £53,901,000 from £3,127,781,000 to £3,181,682,000. This increase, which will be made to the net provision of Class IX Vote 1, results from:

(i) the take up of End Year Flexibility entitlements of £42,192,000, comprising £2,966,000 for capital, £9,226,000 for running costs and £30,000,000 for current expenditure, as announced by my right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 27 July 1999, Official Report, column 393;

(ii) the take up of the Department Unallocated Provision of £5,000,000;

(iii) the provision of £8,000,000 from the Reserve for a payment to the Post Office for Horizon re-negotiation costs;

(iv) the transfer of £250,000 in programme costs and £205,000 in running costs from the Home Office (Class IV Vote 1) as part of the Crime Reduction Programme; offset by:

(v) the transfer of £1,096,000 to the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions (Class III Vote 1) to cover the administrative costs of the Regional Development Agencies;

(vi) the transfer of £500,000 to Northern Ireland in respect of the SMART scheme;

(vii) the transfer of £150,000 to the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (Class X Vote 2) for the enforcement of the National Minimum Wage in the agricultural sector.

Within this total the gross running costs limit will be increased by £14,994,000 from £373,606,000 to £388,600,000, which will include £5,563,000 transferred from the capital computer budget in respect of the Elgar Private Finance Initiative project.

The take up of the End Year Flexibility entitlements of £42,192,000 and the £8,000,000 for the payment to the Post Office will be charged to the Reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Also, subject to Parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate, the Department Expenditure Limit of Class IX Vote 8—the Office of Telecommunications—will be increased by £2,140,000 from £1,000 to £2,141,000 and the gross running costs limit will be increased by £635,000 from £11,661,000 to £12,296,000. These increases result from the take up of End Year Flexibility entitlements of £1,426,000, comprising £791,000 for capital, £635,000 for running costs, as announced by my right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 27 July 1999, Official Report, column 393, and a reduction of £714,000 in appropriations in aid as a result of the adoption of the Telecommunications Licensing Directive, under which certain statutory responsibilities can no longer be met from licence fees. The increase in net provision will be charged to the Reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Additionally, subject to Parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate, the Departmental Expenditure Limit for Class IX Vote 9—the Office of Gas Supply—will be increased by £1,000 from £1,000 to £2,000 and the gross running costs limit will be increased by £1,830,000 from £12,000,000 to £13,830,000. An increase in running costs provision of £2,370,000 is necessary to cover the Office of Gas Supply's administrative costs preparatory to the merger with the Office of Electricity Regulation. An increase in VAT refunds arising from the increase in the gross expenditure provision reduces the increase in the gross running costs limit to £1,830,000, of which £30,000 represents the take up of End Year Flexibility. The total increase in expenditure of £3,300,000 is offset by additional receipts of £3,299,000, of which £1,200,000 represents VAT refunds and a £1,800,000 payment from DTI. The increase in net provision will be charged to the Reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

In addition, subject to Parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate, the Departmental Expenditure Limit for Class IX Vote 10—the Office of Electricity Regulation—will be increased by £86,000 from £1,000 to £87,000 and the gross running costs limit will be increased by £1,800,000 from £28,200,000 to £30,000,000. An increase in running costs provision of £3,375,000 and in capital expenditure provision of £886,000 is necessary to cover the Office of Electricity Regulation's administrative costs preparatory to the merger with the Office of Gas Supply. An increase in VAT refunds arising from the increase in the gross expenditure provision reduces the increase in the gross running costs limit to £1,800,000 and the Office of Electricity Regulation will also take up End Year Flexibility entitlements of £86,000. Additional receipts of £4,175,000, of which £1,400,000 will come from VAT refunds and the balance from electricity licence fees, will not fully meet the increase in gross provision. The shortfall is due to the requirement to reduce electricity licence fees in 1999–2000 by the amount overrecovered in 1998–99 and the take up of End Year Flexibility. The increase in net provision will be charged to the Reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Horizontal Questions Working Group

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list those proposals examined by the Horizontal Questions Working Group over the past 12 months. [97147]

Mr. Caborn: The Horizontal Questions Working Group has discussed a wide range of topics concerning the Single Market over the past 12 months including:

Joint Work Programme of the three Presidencies (October 1998 and June 1999),

Single Market Action Plan and plans for a new Single Market Strategy;

The Karolus Programme of personnel exchanges between member states;

Better regulation issues such as the Euro Business Test Panel and SLIM (Simplification of Legislation in the Internal Market);

Cardiff Economic Reform Process;

Integration of environmental aspects in the Internal Market;

The application of the principle of mutual recognition of one member state's rules, standards and qualifications by another.

Distant Water Trawlermen

Shona McIsaac: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if his Department and MAFF have completed their joint report on compensation for distant water trawlermen. [96902]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 2 November 1999]: This matter remains under active consideration by Ministers.

Packaging

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) if he will estimate the cost to United Kingdom companies of increasing recovery targets from 50 per cent. to 75 per cent. as contained in the European Union's Directive on Packaging and Packaging Waste; [97474]

(2) what assessment he has made of the European Commission draft review of the European Union Directive on Packaging and Packaging Waste; and if he will make a statement. [97473]

Ms Hewitt: The Department of Trade and Industry and the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions are assessing the possible overall costs and benefits of the European Commission's early suggestions for revising EC Directive 94/62 on Packaging and Packaging Waste, including the suggestion to increase the targets from 50 per cent. to 75 per cent. At present, there is significant uncertainty about the possible costs and benefits. Both Departments are therefore consulting businesses and other interested parties in order to gather better information and data. This will enable the Government to prepare a Regulatory Impact Assessment to accompany the Explanatory Memorandum which will be submitted to Parliament when a European Commission proposal is published.

US National Ignition Facility

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what contribution the UK Government are making to the USA National Ignition Facility project at Lawrence Livermore Laboratories in California. [96436]

Mr. Hoon: I have been asked to reply.

I refer the hon. Member to my predecessor's response on 5 July 1999, Official Report, columns 340–41, to my hon. Friend the Member for Nottingham, South (Mr. Simpson) to which I have nothing to add.

Hush-kit Aircraft

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement about what discussions he has had with his US counterpart about the use of hush-kit aircraft in the UK. [96924]

Mr. Mullin: I have been asked to reply.

The Deputy Prime Minister met the US Secretary for Transport Rodney Slater on 20 April. Officials in my Department have maintained contacts since then. Discussions about the use of hush-kit aircraft in the EU are continuing in various forums.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Benefits Agency

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what steps he has taken to ensure that the Benefits Agency has publicised the consequences of changes to benefit and pension entitlements over the last 14 years. [97308]

Mr. Rooker: The Benefits Agency keeps its published information as up to date and accurate as possible. A specific review of all Benefits Agency leaflets, outstanding legislative changes and guidance to staff on decision making was undertaken earlier this year.

Council Tax Bills

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate, based on his Department's Family Resources Survey, for each of the last five financial years, the average level of (a) gross council tax bills and (b) net council tax bills as a percentage of household income, for the whole population and separately for pensioner and non-pensioner households. [96676]

Angela Eagle: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is in the table.

Average Council Tax Bill as a percentage of average gross household income, by household type and year

	Pensioner households		Non-pensioner households		All households
	gross	net	gross	net	gross	net
1994–95	3.7	3.1	2.0	1.8	2.3	2.1
1995–96	3.7	3.1	2.0	1.8	2.3	2.1
1996–97	3.8	3.3	2.0	1.9	2.4	2.1
1997–98	3.9	3.4	2.1	1.9	2.4	2.2

Notes:

1. Gross Council Tax is taken to be net of Council Tax discount but prior to any deductions to the bill resulting from the receipt of Council Tax Benefit.
2. Net Council Tax is taken to be Gross Council Tax as defined above, minus any Council Tax Benefit for which any member of the household is eligible.
3. A pensioner household is a household that contains at least one adult of State Pension age or above.
4. A non-pensioner household is one in which all adults are below State Pension age.
5. Those households who do not pay Council Tax (such as students) have not been included in this analysis.
6. The estimates are based on sample counts, which have been adjusted for non-response using multipurpose grossing factors that control for region, Council Tax band and a number of demographic variables. Estimates are subject to sampling error and to variability in non-response.
7. All percentages have been rounded to the nearest 0.1 per cent.

Performance Targets

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list all performance targets set for his Department, agencies and non-departmental public bodies since May 1997, other than those listed in Public Service Agreements 1999–2002 [Cm 4181], stating in each case (a) the target to be reached and (b) the date by which it was to be reached. [94976]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 1 November 1999]: The Department has set out the key performance targets on which it will be judged in its PSA, and the measures of success it will use in the Output and Performance Analyses (OPA) published in March this year.

In addition, the Secretary of State sets annual targets for the Department's agencies. These targets are announced to Parliament by means of a written Parliamentary Question. A full list of the targets and target dates for the Department's agencies can be found in the Next Steps Report and in individual agency Business Plans. Performance against targets is also reported in agencies' Annual Reports. Copies of these documents can be found in the Library.

These high level targets are supported at operational level by numerous other internal targets, in order to ensure delivery by individual units. Listing these targets would be inappropriate and would incur disproportionate cost.

Benefits (Annual Uprating)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the shortest possible time between announcement and implementation of the annual uprating of benefits. [97556]

Angela Eagle: The Benefits Agency has a well established uprating plan that is currently based on the uprating announcement being made by late November/early December.

SCOTLAND

Departmental Expenditure Limit

Miss Begg: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if there are any proposals to amend his Department's departmental expenditure limit and running cost limits for 1999–2000. [97786]

Dr. Reid: Subject to Parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate for Class XIII, Vote I Scotland and Transfers to the Scottish Consolidated Fund, the Departmental Expenditure Limit for 1999–2000 will be increased by £314,030,000 from £13,809,474,000 to £14,123,504,000.

The increase will be offset by transfers of £6,074,000 from Environment, Transport and the Regions (Class III), of £73,000 from Wales (Class XIV), a net transfer of £1,259,000 from the Department of Social Security (Class XII), £1,177,000 to the Department of Health (Class IV), of £5,067,000 to Home Office (Class IV), of £957,000 to Education and Employment (Class I), the take up of end year flexibility as announced by the Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 27 July 1999, Official Report, column 393, of £314,245,000 and £150,000 for The Giving Age. In addition responsibility for the expenditure of £170,000 relating to the Scottish Parliamentary Boundary Commission will transfer from the Scottish Executive to the Scotland Office and will be shown in Section F of Class XIII, Vote 1.

The running costs limit for the Scotland Office will be increased by £1,760,000 from £2,455,000 to £4,215,000 following a review of the administrative support required for the Secretary of State for Scotland. The increases will be offset by transfers and a charge on the DEL Reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

DEFENCE

Multi-role Armoured Vehicle

Mr. Peter Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the Multi-Role Armoured Vehicle programme. [97922]

Mr. Hoon: I am pleased to announce that the UK and Germany today signed a contract with ARTEC GmbH, a consortium including Alvis Vehicles Ltd. from the UK, for the development of a family of armoured utility vehicles, known in the UK as the Multi-Role Armoured Vehicle (MRAV). The MRAV programme will provide the British Army with a modern and flexible family of armoured utility vehicles that can operate in both high intensity conflict and in rapid response peace support and humanitarian operations world-wide.

The contract represents a major step forward in European co-operation in armoured vehicles, and will be procured through the quadrilateral Organisation for Joint Armaments Cooperation known as OCCAR. This contract will help secure up to 500 manufacturing jobs within the UK supplier base over the life of the programme, the majority of which will be in the Telford area.

Landing Craft Utility Mk 10 Vessels

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what is the cost of the Landing Craft Utility Mk 10 programme; and if he will make a statement; [95799]

(2) what are the delivery dates for the production series Landing Craft Utility Mk 10 vessels. [95798]

Mr. Kilfoyle: The current delivery dates for the production of Landing Craft Utility (LCU) Mk 10 vessels are:

Delivery date	Mk 10 vessel
2001
14 December	LCU 03
14 December	LCU 04
2002
31 March	LCU 05
31 May	LCU 06
31 August	LCU 07

31 December	LCU 09
2003
28 February	LCU 10

In addition to these vessels, two prototype vessels will have delivery dates of 25 November this year.

The current cost of the LCU Mk 10 programme is £35 million.

Depleted Uranium

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the Government's policy on the manufacture, purchase, deployment and export of (a) cluster bombs and (b) munitions containing depleted uranium; and if he will make a statement. [95677]

Mr. Hoon: Cluster bombs and depleted uranium (DU)-based ammunition are purchased for the UK armed forces because they are currently the most effective weapons available to satisfy the military requirements for which they are deployed. Cluster bombs are used against armoured and soft-skinned vehicles, artillery, surface to air missile sites, anti-aircraft artillery or forces on the ground. DU-based ammunition is used because of its unique capability as a kinetic penetrator. It offers a significant operational advantage over all currently available alternative materials.

Any applications for a licence to export these equipments are considered against the criteria which my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary announced to the House on 28 July 1997, Official Report, columns 26–29, and the EU Code of Conduct on Arms Exports.

Kosovo

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on whether uranium-tipped weapons were used in Kosovo. [95865]

Mr. Hoon: I can confirm that depleted uranium-based munitions were used by NATO forces during the Kosovo campaign.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps his Department is taking to assist in the removal of undetonated land mines from Kosovo. [95973]

Mr. Hoon [holding answer 2 November 1999]: Since KFOR deployed, the UK has undertaken a great deal of work to ensure that Kosovo is made safe from unexploded ordnance (UXO) including undetonated Serbian land mines. The British Explosive Ordnance Disposal (EOD) teams in Kosovo have been closely involved in marking minefields and clearing unexploded ordnance where it presents an immediate threat to life. All such sites in the UK-led sector of Kosovo have now been marked. KFOR as a whole has now cleared over 4,400 Serbian anti-personnel mines and 2,300 anti-tank mines.

Western European Union

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what existing WEU agreements with NATO will be incorporated into the EU. [96971]

Mr. Hoon: A decision on agreements with NATO that will allow the EU to assume its responsibilities in respect of a Common Security and Defence policy is not expected until the end of the 2000—the timeframe agreed at the European Council meeting in June this year.

Arms Export Licences

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many people are employed in his Department in examining arms export licence applications. [97059]

Mr. Hoon [holding answer 2 November 1999]: Thirty people are currently employed full time in my Department examining export and promotion applications for military and dual-use items, and around a further fifty are involved on a regular basis as part of their duties. In addition, other staff may become involved as required.

AWE Aldermaston

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the health and safety incidents which have occurred at AWE Aldermaston since 1 October. [96986]

Mr. Hoon [holding answer 2 November 1999]: The data for October 1999 are still being compiled for inclusion in the fourth of AWE's quarterly Environment, Safety and Health Reports for 1999, produced as part of their normal procedures for informing the Local Liaison Committee (LLC). I will place a copy of that report in the Library of the House as soon as it is available. I will also place a copy of the first quarter's report in the Library of the House along with copies of the second and third quarters' reports, due for release to the LLC on 10 November, as soon as they become available.

Chinook Crash (Mull of Kintyre)

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has received in the last 12 months on the RAF Chinook helicopter crash on Mull of Kintyre in 1994. [97235]

Mr. Spellar: In the past 12 months there have been 40 parliamentary questions, 63 parliamentary inquires, an Early Day Motion and a short debate in the House of Lords. Some of these made representations and some sought information, which my Department was pleased to provide.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

EU Directive (Mineral Extracting Industries)

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if regulations required under EU Directive 92/104/EEC (O.J. No. L404, 31.12.92, p.10) regarding health and safety of workers in the mineral extracting industries have been published in all EU member states; and if he will list those regulations together with their proposed implementation dates. [96456]

Mr. Meacher: EU Directive 92/104/EEC has been implemented in the United Kingdom. Many of its provisions were covered in existing law. Those that were not, were implemented by:

The Mines Miscellaneous Health and Safety Provisions Regulations 1995 (SI 1995 No. 2005);

The Mines Miscellaneous Health and Safety Provisions Regulations (Northern Ireland) 1995 (SR 1995 No. 379);

The Quarries Miscellaneous Health and Safety Provisions Regulations 1995 (SI 1995 No. 2036);

The Quarries Miscellaneous Health and Safety Provisions Regulations (Northern Ireland) 1995 (SR 1995 No. 378);

The Escape and Rescue from Mines Regulations 1995 (SI 1995 No. 2870); and

The Escape and Rescue from Mines Regulations (Northern Ireland) 1999 (SR 1999 No. 173).

It is for the European Commission to monitor the transposition of EU Directives across the Community and take appropriate action as necessary. The Commission publishes information on which Directives have been transposed on its CELEX database. This can be accessed on the parliamentary intranet at the House of Commons Library.

Sites of Special Scientific Interest

Sir Peter Emery: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to update existing legislation on SSSIs. [96524]

Mr. Meacher: The Government are committed to introducing legislation to improve the protection and management of Sites of Special Scientific Interest. We will take action as soon as Parliamentary time allows.

Sir Peter Emery: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to increase the penalties for those who breach the regulations governing SSSIs. [96592]

Mr. Meacher: The Government are examining the level of penalties for damaging an SSSI, and has proposed that the Court should be able to impose unlimited fines where this is appropriate. We will take action as soon as Parliamentary time allows.

Regional Air Services Study

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what (a) groups and (b) organisations will be consulted during the south east-and east of England Regional Air Services Study. [97478]

Mr. Mullin: The proposed Terms of Reference for the south-east and east of England Regional Air Services Study were published on 30 September 1999. Over 1,000 copies were distributed to interested individuals and organisations, all of whom were invited to comment. 250 have done so to date.

An external reference Group has been set up to provide validation of the approach adopted by the study team and a source of expertise on a wide range of issues. Membership of the Group includes, among others, representatives from the aviation industry, local government organisations, environmental groups and business interests. A full list of participants is available if required.

The south-east and east of England Regional Air Services Study is expected to take around two years to complete and will be followed by extensive public consultation on options arising from it.

Gatwick Airport

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when BAA submitted the result of their feasibility study into a second runway at Gatwick to his Department; and if he will publish its findings. [97475]

Mr. Mullin: BAA did not complete their study, which the previous administration had asked them to undertake, of less environmentally damaging runway options, such as a close parallel runway at Gatwick. We announced on 19 January 1998, Official Report, column 372, that we had asked BAA to put this work on hold so that we could review the issue in light of the integrated transport White Paper.

Single Regeneration Budget

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how much money has been spent through the Single Regeneration Budget in each of the last five years (a) in England as a whole and (b) in rural England. [97238]

Ms Beverley Hughes: The total amount spent in England through the Single Regeneration Budget (SRB) since the programme began in 1995–96 is given in the table. It is not possible to break down the national expenditure totals to show how much has been spent on schemes in rural areas. However, under Round 5 of the SRB (the first round in which Regional Development Agencies were involved) more than one billion pounds was awarded to SRB Partnerships over the next seven years, of which it is estimated some 7 per cent. will go to wholly rural schemes or the rural parts of mixed area schemes.

Total SRB expenditure: England

Pesticide Tax

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what recent discussions his Department has had with trade representatives over the proposed pesticide tax. [97255]

Mr. Mullin: A consultants' report on the design of a tax or charge scheme for pesticides was put out to public consultation in March this year with an invitation to submit comments to the Treasury by June. Since then, I am not aware that my Department has held any meetings with trade representatives on this issue. Tax matters are of course the responsibility of the Chancellor.

Departmental Expenditure Limit

Shona McIsaac: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if there are any proposals to amend his departmental expenditure limits and running costs limits for 1999–2000. [97830]

Mr. Prescott: Subject to Parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimates for Class III, Votes 1, 2, 6, 8 and 11, the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions' Departmental Expenditure Limits for 1999–2000 will change as follows. All references to the take-up of end year flexibility refer to the Chief Secretary to the Treasury's announcement of 27 July 1999, Official Report, column 393.

(i) The DETR Main Programmes Departmental Expenditure Limit will be increased by £542,447,000 from £9,692,857,000 to £10,235,305,000. This increase reflects the net impact of a take-up of end year flexibility of £400,755,000; transfers out of the DETR Main Programmes Departmental Expenditure Limit of £11,278,000; and a call on the Departmental Expenditure Limit Reserve of £152,970,000. The changes are set out in greater detail below.

(a) The changes for Class III, Vote 1 are as follows: £64,765,000 for expenditure in advance of EC receipts on European Regional Development Fund programmes incurred on behalf of this Department, the Department of Trade and Industry, the Department for Culture, Media and Sports, and the Department for Education and Employment; take up of end year flexibility of £45,684,000 for programmes including the Major Repairs Initiative (£15,180,000), Single Regeneration Budget projects (£4,980,000), Regional Development Agencies (£4,111,000), initiatives in the UK construction industry following the Egan task force report and consultancies in Turkey (£3,750,000) and other smaller programmes (£17,663,000); a transfer of £7,500,000 from the non-Voted element of the DETR Main Programmes

Departmental Expenditure Limit due to an increase in demand for disabled facilities grants; a transfer of £1,096,000 from Class IX, Vote 1 (Department of Trade and Industry: programmes and administration) to cover ex-Department of Trade and Industry staff costs in Regional Development Agencies; and a reduction of £6,009,000 as a result of the cash limit breach on Class VI, Vote 4 in 1998–99. A transfer of £8,978,000 from the DETR Departmental Unallocated Provision will be made to cover the rationalisation of the inherited sub-regional office structure and costs associated with ex-Departmental staff in Regional Development Agencies. There will also be inter-vote transfers of £72,900,000 to Class III, Vote 6 (Transport industries) to provide additional funding for London Transport and to reflect the transfer of responsibility within the Department for the Docklands Light Railway.

(b) The changes for Class III, Vote 2 are as follows: inter-vote transfers of £5,944,000 from Class III, Vote 8 (Highways Agency) for multi modal studies and road user charging research; £94,000 from Class III, Vote 3 (Environmental protection and water) for work on petrol and diesel emissions testing; and £9,000 from the non-Voted element of the DETR Main Programmes Departmental Expenditure Limit for the National Travel Survey. There are also inter-vote transfers of £500,000 to Class III, Vote 3 (Environmental protection and water) for the Powershift project; £150,000 to Class III, Vote 6 (Transport industries) for a National Bus Summit, the Indian Transport seminar and a consultancy project; £200,000 to Class XIV, Vote 1 (Welsh Office, Secretary of State for Wales and payments to the National Assembly for Wales) for planning expenditure; £203,000 to Class XIII, Vote 1 (Scotland and transfers to the Scottish Consolidated Fund) for a Scottish travel awareness campaign; and £58,000 to Class IX, Vote 1 (Department of Trade and Industry: science) for a research project.

(c) The changes for Class III, Vote 3 are as follows: a transfer of £4,425,000 to Class XIII, Vote 1 (Scotland and transfers to the Scottish Consolidated Fund) for the Home Energy Efficiency Scheme; a transfer of £1,387,000 also to Class XIII, Vote 1 (Scotland and transfers to the Scottish Consolidated Fund) for the work of the Energy Saving Trust; transfers of £48,000 and £44,000 respectively to Class XIV, Vote 1 (Welsh Office, Secretary of State for Wales and payments to the National Assembly for Wales) and Class XIII, Vote 1 (Scotland and transfers to the Scottish Consolidated Fund) for Welsh and Scottish regional energy efficiency publicity work; and a transfer of £94,000 to Class III, Vote 2 (Planning, roads, local transport and vehicle safety) for work on petrol and diesel emission measurement by the Transport Research Laboratory. There are also inter-vote transfers from Class III, Vote 2 (Planning, roads, local transport and vehicle safety) of £500,000 to the Powershift project; £1,200,000 from Class III, Vote 8 (Highways Agency) for the Powershift project; and a transfer of £2,400,000 from the DETR Departmental Unallocated Provision to meet demand led pressures on the Pneumoconiosis compensation scheme.

(d) The changes for Class III, Vote 6 are as follows: an agreed claim on the Reserve of £152,970,000 to provide for payment of compensation to the National Bus Company Pension Scheme fund; take-up of £290,306,000 of end year flexibility to provide additional funding for London Transport, the Marchioness public inquiry, increased expenditure by the Marine Accident Investigation Board on Marine Environment High Risk Areas and the Docklands Light Railway. There will be inter-vote transfers of £150,000 from Class III, Vote 2 (Planning, roads, local transport and vehicle safety) for the National Bus Summit, the Indian Transport seminar and a consultancy project; £72,900,000 from Class III, Vote 1 (Housing, construction, regeneration, regional policy and countryside and wildlife, England) representing additional funding for London Transport and a transfer of responsibility within the Department for the Docklands Light Railway; and a transfer of £1,000,000 to the non-Voted element of the DETR Main Programmes Departmental Expenditure Limit for the re-introduction of Supplementary Credit Approvals for local authority ports.

(e) The changes for Class III, Vote 8 are as follows: transfers of £5,944,000 to Class III, Vote 2 (Planning, roads, local transport and vehicle safety) for multi modal studies and road user charging research; a transfer of £1,200,000 to Class III, Vote 3 (Environmental protection and water) for the Powershift project; and an increase in provision of £1,000 to allow for additional Appropriations in Aid to be used.

(f) Provision within the non-Voted element of the DETR Main Programmes Departmental Expenditure Limit will be decreased by £17,887,000 from £1,734,692,000 to £1,716,805,000. This reflects a transfer of £7,500,000 to Class III, Vote 1 (Housing, construction, regeneration, regional policy, and countryside and wildlife, England) due to an increase in demand for disabled facilities grants; and a transfer of £9,000 to Class III, Vote 2 (Planning, roads, local transport and vehicle safety) for the National Travel Survey. It also includes transfers from the DETR Departmental Unallocated Provision of £2,400,000 to Class III, Vote 3 (Environmental protection and water) to meet demand led pressures on the Pneumoconiosis compensation scheme; and of £8,978,000 to Class III, Vote 1 (Housing, construction, regeneration, regional policy and countryside and wildlife, England) to cover the rationalisation of the inherited sub-regional office structure and costs associated with ex-Departmental staff in Regional Development Agencies. There is a transfer of £1,000,000 from Class III, Vote 6 (Transport industries) for the re-introduction of Supplementary Credit Approvals for local authority ports.

The net increase in the DETR Main Programmes Departmental Expenditure Limit will be offset by transfers to the Scotland Departmental Expenditure Limit; to the Wales Departmental Expenditure Limit; from the Department of Trade and Industry Departmental Expenditure Limit; and by a charge on the DEL Reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

(ii) The Office of the Rail Regulator Departmental Expenditure Limit will increase by £1,133,000 from £1,000 to £1,134,000. This increase reflects the take-up of £1,133,000 running costs end year flexibility to meet increased in-year requirements associated with ongoing consultancy programmes and additional accommodation costs. The running cost limit will be increased by £1,133,000 from £8,900,000 to £10,033,000.

The increase in the Office of the Rail Regulator Departmental Expenditure Limit will be offset by a charge on the DEL Reserve and will therefore not add to the planned total of public expenditure.

TREASURY

Pesticide Tax

Mr. Drew: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent discussions his Department has had with trade representatives over the proposed pesticide tax. [97256]

Mr. Timms: HM Treasury Ministers and officials have held a number of recent discussions with trade representatives on the possible tax on pesticides. I met representatives of the British Agrochemicals Association on 25 October. These discussions, and the responses to the recent consultation on the design of a tax or charge scheme for pesticides, will be taken into account in the Government's consideration of its options.

Departmental Expenditure Limit

Ms Lawrence: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what changes are proposed to the Customs and Excise departmental expenditure limit or running costs limit for 1999–2000. [97918]

Dawn Primarolo: There are currently no plans to change the overall Departmental Expenditure Limit of HM Customs and Excise. However, subject to Parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate for Class XVI, Vote 3 (HM Customs and Excise: administration) the Voted element of the Departmental Expenditure Limit will be increased by £14,270,000 from £897,293,000 to £911,563,000. The increase reflects changes arising from a barter deal transaction associated with the award of a PFI contract for the provision of IT services. This increase will be offset by a matching reduction in the non-voted element.

Ms Lawrence: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what changes are proposed to the Office for National Statistics departmental expenditure limit/running cost limit for 1999–2000. [97920]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Subject to Parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary Estimate for Class XVI, Vote 11 (Office for National Statistics) the DEL will be increased by £1,000,000 from £110,242,000 to £111,242,000 and the running cost limit by £4,437,000 from £102,208,000 to £106,645,000.

The increase is the net effect of (a) the carry forward of £1,000,000 under the end year flexibility scheme as announced in the House of Commons by the Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 27 July 1999, Official Report, column 393, and (b) the transfer of £3,437,000 from capital to Running costs due to the implementation of ESA 95 and the 2001 Census Open Options Procurement.

The net increase will be charged to the Reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Ms Lawrence: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what changes are proposed to the Treasury's departmental expenditure limit and running costs limits for 1999–2000. [97921]

Dawn Primarolo: Subject to Parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate for Class XVI, Vote 1 (HM Treasury), the Departmental Expenditure Limit for 1999–2000 will be increased by £6,328,000 from £140,875,000 to £147,203,000.

The increase is the net effect of the take up of running costs EYF (£2,000,000) to meet the additional costs of the Treasury's planned programme of work; capital EYF (£2,328,000) mainly due to an increased requirement for the Debt Management Office's cash management project; and from the Capital Modernisation Fund (£2,000,000) for the costs of examining policy options in relation to the Partnerships UK and for work associated with the passage of the Bill which will establish this new body.

The running costs limit for HM Treasury will accordingly be increased by £11,748,000 from £56,965,000 to £68,713,000. The increase is mainly for work leading to the creation of Partnerships UK and the Office of Government Commerce, a direct recruitment campaign, consultancy costs on the project to refurbish the Treasury Building, the costs of the Public Services Productivity Panel, and a small increase for the Debt Management Office.

The increases will be offset by transfers or charged to the Reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Climate Change Levy

Mr. Baldry: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of the proceeds of the climate change levy will be used to encourage energy-saving measures. [96959]

Mr. Timms: In the March 1999 Budget it was announced that £50 million of the revenues from the £1.75 billion climate change levy would be used to provide direct additional support for energy efficiency measures and renewables, with the remaining £1.7 billion being recycled to business through a cut in employers' National Insurance Contributions. This additional support for energy efficiency measures represents a step change in the level of support provided by existing schemes.

HEALTH

New Hospital (Edgware)

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will make a decision on the plan to build a new hospital at Edgware. [94424]

Mr. Denham: Progress is being made by Barnet Healthcare National Health Service Trust on the completion of a full business case for this important development which will be progressed in line with the normal NHS planning process. A decision will follow completion of the business case.

Measles, Mumps and Rubella Immunisation

Mr. Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what actions he has taken to achieve 95 per cent. population coverage for measles, mumps and rubella immunisation. [96257]

Mr. Hutton: We have set a national target of 95 per cent. coverage for the routine childhood immunisations (including MMR) by age 2. Adverse publicity about the safety of MMR vaccine led to uptake falling from an annual peak of 92 per cent. over the past 3 years. Recent quarterly data from the Public Health Laboratory Service show that this earlier fall appears to have stabilised. For the quarter April to June 1999, 88 per cent. of children at age 2 had received the vaccine (up to 0.4 percentage points on the previous quarter). Most encouragingly, the percentage of children immunised at age 16 months at August 1999 stood at 79.1 per cent., an increase of 3.5 percentage points on April 1999.

Our recommendations on immunisation are based upon the advice of independent experts. All new evidence on the safety of MMR vaccine is carefully considered by independent groups of scientific and medical experts and subjected to the same rigorous scrutiny as was given to the evidence on which the advice to parents on protecting their children through MMR immunisation is based. The views of these independent experts, as well as those of experts from around the world, including the World Health Organisation, remain unequivocal that there is no evidence of any link between MMR vaccine and inflammatory bowel disease or autism.

We aim to make factually accurate scientific information freely and widely available. As new scientific data has become available—for example, the publication in June of a further two new studies supporting the safety and efficacy of the vaccine and showing no evidence of links to autistic spectrum disorders or bowel problems—this has been widely publicised. The Chief Medical Officer regularly provides health professionals with summaries of the relevant pieces of research emphasising the safety of the vaccine. Ministers have addressed the concerns of the constituents of hon. Members both formally in the House, through correspondence and also through a series of meetings.

The information provided to the public seeks to address anxious parents' calls for factually accurate scientific information and to provide support for doctors dealing with them. In considering what public information to provide, the Department has taken account of research conducted through the Health Education Authority (HEA) on parental attitudes to immunisation and the data on uptake of vaccines provided by the PHLS. The Department's activities on the MMR vaccine reflect the views of parents consulted through this research. The Department has worked with the HEA to provide leaflets for parents, factsheets for professionals and posters for surgeries that have been widely distributed.

Locally, immunisation co-ordinators have been supported with information and material for use in health authority-based campaigns to publicise the facts about MMR vaccine.

The Department will continue to respond promptly to any parental concerns about the vaccine and to make the facts available emphasising that MMR remains the safest way for parents to protect their children against these diseases.

Departmental Accounts

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what methods of depreciation his Department will apply in the current financial year to fixed assets in the preparation of departmental resource accounting balance sheets. [97038]

Mr. Denham: In the Department's resource accounts for the financial year 1999–2000, it is intended that fixed assets will be depreciated using the straight line method i.e. adjustments for changes in price aside, the same amount of depreciation will be charged each year over the life of an asset. This treatment is in line with HM Treasury's Resource Accounting Manual. The requirements in the Manual relating to depreciation methods will be underpinned by Financial Reporting Standard 15, "Tangible Fixed Assets", issued by the Accounting Standards Board.

Sick Leave

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many days off work have been taken by NHS employees each year since 1990 owing to sickness; how much this time off has cost the NHS; how many days off work have been taken by NHS employees each year since 1990 owing to stress; how much this time off has cost the NHS; what assessment he has made of stress levels among staff in the NHS; what proposals he has to reduce stress levels among NHS staff; and if he will make a statement. [97116]

Mr. Denham: According to a survey conducted by the Department in 1998–99 the average sickness absence rate for staff directly employed by National Health Service trusts was 4.6 per cent. This is equivalent to approximately 8 million out of the 176 million days worked each year by National Health Service staff. Details of the survey can be found in Health Service Circular 1999/229: 'Managing Violence, Accidents and Sickness Absence in the NHS' copies of which are available in the Library. Similar information for earlier years, and information about the overall cost and causes of sick leave, is not collected centrally, but may be held locally by individual National Health Service employers. We have agreed improvement targets for health authorities and NHS trusts to 'achieve year on year improvement in sickness absence rates' of 20 per cent. by 2001 and 30 per cent. by 2003.

The management of sickness absence in the National Health Service is being monitored by the Department's Public Sector Productivity Panel. The aim is to identify the most efficient and effective ways to secure a successful approach to improving attendance in the NHS. The project will report in February 2000.

The report of the Partnership for the Health of the National Health Service Workforce, chaired by the Nuffield Trust, identified that 10,000 working days are lost each year through medically certified mental illness, including stress related illness, in the NHS. The NHS

Executive has issued a range of guidance aimed at improving the quality of working life for staff, including tackling violence, the provision of counselling services, improved health and safety and access to occupational health services.

NHS (Funding)

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish the correspondence between his predecessor and the former Chief Secretary during the last six months on the adequacy of the resources for the NHS. [97223]

Mr. Hutton: All correspondence between Cabinet Ministers is confidential, as is made clear in the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Mental Health Act

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people in England are receiving services under section 117 of the Mental Health Act 1983. [97289]

Mr. Hutton: 27,100 people were formally admitted to hospital under the Mental Health Act 1983 in 1998–99. Information on after-care services provided under section 117 of the Act is not held centrally. This is a matter for local and health authorities.

Commercial Sponsorship

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make it his policy to reject NICE recommendations for further commercially sponsored clinical trials in circumstances where his Department has already ruled out such trials as uneconomic. [97309]

Mr. Denham: The decision to fund, or not to fund a piece of research should continue to be taken case by case, but ultimately by the research funding body in question in accordance with their particular remit.

Food Poisoning

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many food poisoning cases in each of the last five years have been attributed to cheese made from (a) pasteurised and (b) unpasteurised milk; and what proportion of the total number of cases they represent. [97310]

Ms Stuart: Most cases of food poisoning are sporadic and in such cases it is usually impossible to identify a source for the infection. Even in the case of outbreaks, it is sometimes not possible to identify the source. Details of cases of food poisoning and the likely sources of infection identified are collected by the Public Health Laboratory Service and published in CDR Weekly.

The number of cases of food poisoning where the sole vehicle identified has been cheese made from pasteurised and unpasteurised milk (the latter representing less than 1 per cent. of all cheeses manufactured) is set out in the table. Since these figures are based on laboratory reports they cannot be related to food poisoning figures based on statutory notifications. Data for 1994 and 1995 are unavailable.

Mental Health Spending

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish his Department's criteria for distributing the additional funds recently announced for increasing spending on mental health. [97257]

Mr. Hutton: Three main principles were used to guide the allocation of funds for the first tranche of new investment in 1999–2000:

An assessment of need, assessed partly by the weighted population score for each health authority (based on population, size, deprivation indices and other factors)

Evidence concerning the gaps in services gathered during a review of mental health services in 1996–97

The vision for safe, sound and supportive services described in the Government's strategy "Modernising Mental Health Services".

Criteria to be used for allocating funds in the next two years have yet to be decided.

Patient Eligibility (Criteria)

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what criteria his Department uses to decide whether a patient is ordinarily resident in the United Kingdom and thus entitled to free treatment on the NHS. [97262]

Mr. Denham: Eligibility for free hospital treatment depends mainly on residence in the United Kingdom. With some exceptions, for example in accident and emergency departments, all new patients are asked if they have been living in the United Kingdom for the previous 12 months. Patients who have done so, with up to no more than three months absence during that time, will be eligible. Patients who have not lived in the United Kingdom for 12 months may still be eligible if either they are exempt from charges by virtue of the National Health Service (Charges to Overseas Visitors) Regulations 1989 or, following a House of Lords ruling, if they can demonstrate that they are lawfully in the United Kingdom for a settled, identifiable purpose. It is unlikely that anyone intending to stay for less than six months would fulfil this criteria.

General practitioners are encouraged to consider residency before accepting a patient for National Health Service treatment but are not bound by the same regulations. Under the National Health Service (General Medical Services) Regulations 1992 a GP does not have to accept any patient for NHS treatment unless specifically allocated by a health authority. The GP's decision does not automatically exempt the patient from charges for hospital treatment they may subsequently need.

Departmental Assets

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the assets sold by his Department together with their values in each year from 1991–92 to 1998–99; and if he will estimate the value of assets planned to be sold in 1999–2000 and 2000–01. [96274]

Mr. Denham: Although information on individual sales of assets disposed of by the Department is not held centrally, the following information is available and relates to assets owned directly by the department:

(a) The total income from disposal of NHS assets between 1991–92 and 1998–99 is in the table.

Capital receipts—NHS assets

Note:
In this period, there were, and are expected to be, no significant disposals of non-National Health Service assets and information on minor or routine disposals could be ascertained only at disproportionate cost.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Departmental Expenditure Limit

Mr. Ivan Henderson: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what proposals there are to amend the departmental expenditure limit and running costs limit for 1999–2000. [97923]

Mr. Lock: Subject to Parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate for Class V, Vote 1 the Lord Chancellor's Department Departmental Expenditure Limit for 1999–2000 will be increased by £100,000 from £2,421,144,000 to £2,421,244,000. The increase is the effect of a transfer for £100,000 from the Home Office, relating to legal aid costs in respect of reducing volatile substance abuse—gas lighter refills.

The running costs limit for the Lord Chancellor's Department will be increased by £5,386,000 from £496,817,000 to £502,203,000. The increase is in respect of funding for PFI projects in the civil courts and tribunals. This overall increase includes a reduction of £667,000 to gross running costs, with a matching reduction to running costs receipts in respect of a penalty for the running cost breach which occurred in 1998–99.

The increases will be offset by a transfer from the Home Office Departmental Expenditure Limit, as well as receipts arising from asset disposals and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Audit Commission

Mr. Field: To ask the President of the Council from what date hon. Members have been expected to pay for Audit Commission reports. [97142]

Mrs. Beckett: Hon. Members can obtain copies of Audit Commission reports, free of charge, from the Vote Office, through the usual procedures.

Scottish Grand Committee

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the President of the Council what proposals she has for the Scottish Grand Committee to meet in Scotland. [97586]

Mrs. Beckett: No decisions have been taken about possible sittings of the Grand Committees next session.

The Grand Committee is a useful mechanism for Scottish MPs to highlight UK-wide policies which have an impact in Scotland. As the hon. Member may be aware, in the Government's response to the Procedure Committee's Fourth report on Procedural Consequences of Devolution, it recognised that the role and procedure of the Grand Committees would have to be adapted in the light of experience with devolution. Decisions on future meetings will be taken in the light of this.

Departmental Expenditure Limit

Mr. Reed: To ask the President of the Council if there are any proposals to amend the Privy Council Office Departmental Expenditure Limit/running costs limit for 1999–2000. [97831]

Mrs. Beckett: Subject to approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate, the Departmental Expenditure Limit (DEL) for Class XVII, Vote 5 will be decreased by £296,000 from £2,166,000 and the running cost limit will be decreased by £296,000 from £2,502,000 to £2,206,000.

The reduction in DEL and running cost limit is the net effect of increases to cover the salary and associated costs of the Parliamentary Secretary, Privy Council Office; and to meet the costs arising from my roles as cross Government spokesperson and as Leader of the House, offset by a payment to the Cabinet Office, Class XVII, Vote 1 of £480,000, reflecting the transfer of responsibility for the Lord Privy Seal's Office.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Departmental Expenditure Limit

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if there are any proposals to amend the Departmental Expenditure Limit and gross running costs limit for 1999–2000. [97783]

Mr. Wills: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimates for Class I, Vote 1 (Department for Education and Employment: programmes and central services) and Vote 3 (the Employment Service), the Departmental Expenditure Limit (DEL) for 1999–2000 (excluding Welfare to Work) will be increased by £120,664,000 from £15,671,526,000 to £15,792,190,000.

This overall increase is made up of DEL increases on Votes 1 and 3 of £122,047,000 and £28,617,000 respectively and a decrease of £30,000,000 in non-voted expenditure. As a result, the Voted element of the Departmental Expenditure Limit (excluding Welfare to Work) will be increased by £150,664,000 from £14,396,974,000 to £14,547,638,000 and the non-Voted element will be reduced by £30,000,000 from £1,274,552,000 to £1,244,552,000.

The changes in Vote 1 are the result of the take up of £73,800,000 of the end-year flexibility entitlement announced by the Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 27 July 1999, Official Report, column 393; transfers of £1,425,000 from Class II, Vote 2 (Department of Health) as their contribution to the Healthy Schools programme, of £4,800,000 from Class II, Vote 1 (Department of Health) for the Tomlinson merger of Kings College and the United Medical and Dental School, of £957,000 from the Students Awards Agency for Scotland for changes in the funding of Oxbridge colleges, of £2,122,000 from Class XVII, Vote 1 (Property Advisers to the Civil Estate) relating to Qualifications and Curriculum Authority premises, and of £8,943,000 from Class I, Vote 3 (the Employment Service) for Key Stage 2 revision classes, National trainees and Employment Zones; and the draw down of £30,000,000 from the Department's non-Voted Departmental Unallocated Provision (DUP) for Adult Basic Skills and Excellence in Cities.

The Employment Service provision has been increased by the take up of £18,022,000 under the capital, £11,300,000 under the running costs and £1,000,000 under the other current end-year flexibility schemes as announced by the Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 27 July 1999, Official Report, column 393; the transfer of £6,631,000 from Class XII, Vote 3 (Department of Social Security: administration) in respect of work undertaken on behalf of the Benefit Agency and the transfer of £607,000 from Class XVII, Vote 1 (Cabinet Office: administration) to cover the transfer of the lease for 102, New Street, Birmingham; offset by the transfer of £8,943,000 to Vote 1.

The Departmental running costs limit (excluding Welfare to Work) will be increased by £18,538,000 from £1,042,210,000 to £1,060,748,000 as a result of the take up of £11,300,000 of end-year flexibility and the transfers of £6,631,000 from the Department of Social Security and £607,000 from the Cabinet Office. The Supplementary estimates also include a transfer of £128,000 of running costs from Vote 3 to Vote 1 which does not affect the running costs limit.

The Department's Welfare to Work provision is being increased by £38,557,000 from £1,349,816,000 to £1,388,373,000. The increase is made up of changes on Votes 1 and 3 of £39,987,000 and -£1,430,000 respectively. The change on Vote 1 is as the result of the take up of £38,654,000 of end-year flexibility, and transfers of £1,351,000 from Vote 3 and of £18,000 to Class XII, Vote 3 (Department of Social Security: administration) to cover the salary costs of staff supporting the New Deal project. The change on Vote 3 is made up of the transfer of £1,351,000 to Vote 1 and transfers of £134,000 to Class XIV, Vote 1 (Welsh Office) to cover costs of monitoring New Deal training in Wales and of £55,000 from Class XII, Vote 3 (Department of Social Security: administration) for work on the New Deal for the Disabled Innovative Scheme.

The Departmental Welfare to Work running costs limit will be decreased by £378,000 from £162,699,000 to £162,321,000 as a result of the transfer from Vote 1 of £18,000 to the Department of Social Security and the transfers from Vote 3 of £281,000 to Vote 1 for Inspection of New Deal Providers, of £134,000 to the Welsh Office and of £55,000 from the Department of Social Security. The Supplementary estimates also include a transfer of £1,070,000 of Welfare to Work running costs from Vote 3 to Vote 1 which does not affect the running costs limit.

The increases are the result of transfers or will be charged to the Reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Learning Difficulties

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will undertake a review of funding for people with learning difficulties. [97258]

Jacqui Smith: The Government are committed to providing high quality learning opportunities for people with learning difficulties. We will be publishing a consultation document on the Learning and Skills Council's funding system at the end of the year. It will seek views on the arrangements for funding across the range of the Learning and Skills Council's responsibilities, including the funding arrangements for people with learning difficulties.

University for Industry

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to make the University for Industry learning hubs co-terminus with regional development agency or sub-regional local learning and skills/small business service boundaries; and if he will make a statement. [97056]

Mr. Wills [holding answer 2 November 1999]: It is Ufl Ltd.'s intention that as far as possible the boundaries of the Ufl hubs will be co-terminus with either sub-regional Learning and Skills Council and Small Business Service boundaries or with local Learning Partnership boundaries. It may not be possible to map this in every case but Ufl Regional Staff are working closely with Ufl hubs to ensure that a high level of coherence is achieved.

New Deal (Young People)

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he is collecting data on the number of people who leave the New Deal for 18 to 24-year-olds for employment but subsequently return to jobseeker's allowance after 13 weeks but within (a) 26 weeks and (b) 52 weeks. [95538]

Ms Jowell: Yes, data are collected on the number of clients who leave the New Deal for 18-to-24 year olds for employment and reclaim jobseeker's allowance both after 13 weeks but before 26 weeks and after 13 weeks but before 52 weeks.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Botswana

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what current proposals she has to assist Botswana. [95737]

Clare Short: We expect to spend around £3 million this year to support national development strategies which focus on helping to ensure an equitable distribution of the nation's wealth.

Main current projects include improvements in sustainable livelihoods by providing better access to, and the use of, natural resources; improvement of the management of resources for primary education; development of distance learning materials, support for the electoral process and development of community policing. Botswana is also a partner in a regional initiative to tackle the spread of HIV/AIDS through increased awareness and improved treatment and prevention systems.

Botswana also benefits through its membership of the South African Development Committee (SADC) from programmes to improve regional integration especially in the areas of HIV/AIDS, trade and customs reform, and improvements in the electoral process.

Departmental Expenditure Limit

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if there are any proposals to amend the departmental expenditure limit for 1999–2000. [97872]

Clare Short: Subject to Parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate for Class VIII Vote 1, the Department for International Development's Departmental Expenditure Limit for 1999–2000 will be decreased by £12,000,000 from £1,804,764,000 to £1,792,764,000. The decrease is the net effect of transferring the Chevening Scholarship Scheme from the Department for International Development to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Democracy Initiatives

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much his Department has spent in each of the past five years in supporting initiatives to build democracy in other countries. [95752]

Mr. Robin Cook: All FCO programme spending is justified in terms of the FCO's objectives. This includes commitment to spreading the values of human rights, civil liberties and democracy, the rule of law and good governance.

The Human Rights Project Fund (HRPF) is the FCO's dedicated fund for human rights projects around the world. Since the inception of HRPF in April 1998 the fund has allocated some £9.7 million to support over 300 projects (£5.05 million in financial year 1998–99 and £4.69 million so far in 1999–2000). Before the HRPF was established there was no comparable funding arrangement for the support of human rights.

The FCO also provides support for democracy building in the form of grant in aid to the Westminster Foundation for Democracy, which exists to promote democratic development world-wide. In each of the past five years the department has contributed:

Year	£
1999–2000	4,000,000
1998–99	3,000,000
1997–98	2,713,650
1996–97	2,500,000
1995–96	2,500,000

Projects under a number of other FCO programmes and budgets contribute to a combination of objectives including, but not exclusively, the promotion of democracy.

Arms Embargoes

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs for what reasons the EU has lifted sanctions against Libya while retaining the arms embargo; if the UN has retained an arms embargo; and if he will make a statement on Government policy on such sanctions and embargoes. [97145]

Mr. Hain: UN Sanctions against Libya, including the arms embargo, were suspended on 5 April 1999, following the UN Secretary-General's report to the Council that Libya had complied with the requirements of Security Council resolution 1192 and the Lockerbie accused had arrived in the Netherlands for the purpose of trial.

On 16 April 1999 the EU suspended its measures implementing the UN sanctions. But it left in place EU measures, including an arms embargo, imposed in 1986 in response to Libya's general implication in terrorism. These measures, with the exception of the arms embargo, were lifted on 13 September 1999, in the light of the UN Secretary-General's report of 30 June 1999, in which he cited several elements suggesting that recent acts by the Libyan authorities were indicative of the Libyan Government's renunciation of terrorism. EU member states will keep the question of the arms embargo under review.

The conclusions of a Government review of sanctions were announced to Parliament on 15 March 1999. The review found that sanctions, including arms embargoes, had an important role to play in responding to challenges to international peace and security, and should be tailored to fit the circumstances.

Kashmir

Mr. Sarwar: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the current human rights situation in Kashmir; and what representations he has made to the Indian Government. [97581]

Mr. Hain: We are concerned about the abuses of human rights which bring suffering to the population of Kashmir, and have urged an improvement. We also call for an end to all external support for violence in Kashmir. The late Derek Fatchett raised the human rights issue with the Indian Home Minister during his visit to India in November last year. Senior officials have raised the issue at various levels.

Departmental Expenditure Limit

Ann Keen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if there are any proposals to amend the departmental expenditure limit/running costs limit for 1999–2000. [97871]

Mr. Hain: Subject to Parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimates for Class VII Vote 1 the Foreign and Commonwealth Office Departmental Expenditure limit for 1999–2000 will be increased by £59,218,000 from £1,112,022,000 to £1,171,240,000 and the running costs limit has been decreased by £1,000,000 from £531,968,000 to £530,968,000. The increase is the net effect of:

(i) additional provision of £36,702,000 on Section B for UK contributions to United Nations Missions in the former Yugoslavia (includes UN Interim Administration Mission in Kosovo) and the former Soviet Union, United Nations Special Commission on Iraq, United Nations Iraq-Kuwait Observer Mission, United Nations Mission for the Referendum on Western Sahara, United Nations Police Mission in Haiti, United Nations Mission in East Timor, United Nations Observe Mission in Angola, United Nations Peacekeeping Operation in Central African Republic, United Nations Observer Mission in Sierra Leone, the United Nations International Criminal Tribunals for Yugoslavia and Rwanda, the Organisation for Security and Co-operation in Europe, the European Community Monitoring Mission and Western European Union Police Mission in Albania. This is partially offset by a reduction of £1,000,000 in Section A;

(ii) an increase in provision of £3,000,000 to support an independent media in Serbia, civil society in Serbia and to continue the provision of forensic teams to the International Criminal Tribunal for Yugoslavia;

(iii) a transfer of £12,000,000 to Section A from DfID (Class VIII, Vote 1), in respect of Chevening Scholarship;

(iv) take up of end year flexibility of £8,516,000 for assistance to Sierra Leone as announced by the Chief Secretary to the Treasury to House of Commons on 27 July 1999, Official Report, column 393.

The increase will be offset by a transfer from another Departmental Expenditure Limit (DfID) and a change on the DEL Reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Regional Museums

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions about the funding of regional museums. [95135]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 25 October 1999]: I have not had discussions with my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions about the funding of regional museums. However, funding from DCMS is available indirectly through the Area Museums Councils (which received a total of £4 million in 1998–99, most of which was given to individual museums and galleries). Through the Museums and Galleries Commission, the Department provides funds for the PRISM Fund (71 grants worth £292,567 in 1998–99) and the V&A Purchase Grant Fund (227 grants worth £1 million) which assist regional museums in acquiring objects for their collections. For the first time, this Government have been able to provide £15 million over three years (1999–2002) to pre-eminent regional collections through the Designated Museums Challenge Fund.

In addition, the Heritage Lottery Fund supports regional museums through the Capital Grants Programme and the Museums and Galleries Access Fund (£7 million).

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will make a statement about his powers and responsibilities in relation to regional museums. [95137]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 25 October 1999]: Apart from the museums sponsored by my Department, Ministers do not have specific powers and responsibilities in relation to regional museums (some of which are independently run, while others are administered by local authorities). The Department's responsibility is to play a strategic role in championing the interests of the museum sector as a whole.

Departmental Expenditure Limit

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if there are any proposals to amend his Department's expenditure limit and running costs limit for 1999–2000. [97782]

Mr. Chris Smith: Subject to Parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate for Class XI, Vote 1, the DCMS Departmental Expenditure Limit (DEL) for 1999–2000 will be increased by £2,821,000 from £993,137,000 to £995,958,000 and the running costs limit will be increased by £902,000 from £32,972,000 to £33,874,000.

This is to provide £2,023,000 for minor increases in provision for various sectors of the Vote taking up the DEL end year flexibility on programme expenditure as announced by the then Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 27 July 1999, Official Report, column 393; a transfer of £104,000 to the National Assembly for Wales (Class XIV, Vote 1) in respect of annual grant formerly paid by the Crafts Council to the Arts Council for Wales towards their craft programme; a payment of £281,000 from the Department of Trade and Industry (Class IX, Vote 1) for Sector Challenge funding of tourist projects; a payment of £887,000 from the Department of Trade and Industry (Class IX, Vote 1) for Sector Challenge funding of media projects; and to provide £902,000 for increased expenditure on DCMS running costs in line with the DEL end year flexibility on running costs expenditure as announced by the then Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 27 July 1999, Official Report, column 393.

The increases will be offset by transfers, savings or a charge on the DEL Reserve, and will not, therefore, add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Millennium Commission

Mr. Rapson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport in what way the Millennium Commission is promoting its activities around the country. [97212]

Mr. Chris Smith: This is a matter for the Millennium Commission. I will reply to my hon. Friend in my capacity as Chairman of the Commission, and place copies of my reply in the Libraries of the House.

Departmental Accounts

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will list the methods of depreciation his Department will apply in the current financial year to fixed assets in the preparation of departmental resource accounting balance sheets. [96922]

Mr. Chris Smith: In accordance with the Treasury's Resource Accounting Manual and with Financial Reporting Standard 15: Tangible Fixed Assets, issued by the Accounting Standards Board, my Department has adopted the following methods of depreciation.

Depreciation is applied at rates calculated to write off the value of freehold buildings and other tangible fixed assets by equal instalments over their estimated useful lives. Lives are in the following ranges:

Buildings—up to 75 years

Leasehold Improvements—the term of the lease

Equipment and Computers—3–10 years

Fixtures and Fittings—3–20 years

Intangible Assets—1 year.

Freehold land is not depreciated.

CABINET OFFICE

Departmental Expenditure Limit

Mr. Alan Campbell: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what proposals there are to change the 1999–2000 Departmental Expenditure Limit or running costs limits for the Cabinet Office. [97833]

Marjorie Mowlam: Subject to Parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimates, the Departmental Expenditure Limit (DEL) for the Cabinet office will be increased by £16,881,000 from £301,820,000 to £318,701,000 and the running costs limit has been increased by £5,122,000 to £115,018,000.

The increase is mainly to take account of the following:

(a) A transfer payment has been received from the Privy Council (Class XVII, Vote 5) (£480,000) for responsibility of Lord Privy Seal and from the Department of Social Security (Class XII, Vote 3) (£1,670,000) to provide for the Women's Unit and Women's National Commission. Provision for ownership of properties (£2,729,000) has transferred from the Property Advisers to the Civil Estate to Department for Education and Employment (Class I, Vote 1 and Class I, Vote 3).

(b) The Cabinet Office has taken end year flexibility (£12,000,000) as announced by the Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 27 July 1999, Official Report, column 393, and remaining Departmental Unallocated provision (£340,000). This is to meet increased anticipated spend on disposing of the vacant Civil Estate and modernisation of government programme, including E-Envoy and Central Internet Strategy Unit.

(c) Increased provision (£5,000,000) for the autumn campaign raising awareness about Year 2000 millennium bug.

(d) Unanticipated expenditure (£120,000) in connection with NATO alliance in Kosovo.

The increase will be offset by transfer or charged to the DEL Reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Departmental Expenditure Limits

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proposals he has for changes to the 1999–2000 departmental expenditure limits and running cost limits within his responsibility. [97832]

Mr. Straw: Subject to Parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimates, the Departmental Expenditure Limit (DEL) will be increased by £11,319,000 from £7,752,125,000 to £7,763,444,000. The running cost limit will be increased by £1,561,000 from £2,136,392,000 to £2,137,953,000. A separate running cost limit of £163,000 will be established for expenditure on Welfare to Work.

The changes in Class IV, Vote 1 are the net effect of the following transfers: £455,000 to the Department of Trade and Industry (Class IX, Vote 1), £50,000 to the Welsh Assembly (Class XIV, Vote 1), £1,499,000 to Prison Service (Class IV, Vote 2) in respect of the Crime Reduction Programme; £100,000 to the Lord Chancellor's Department (Class V, Vote 1) in respect of a new offence to reduce volatile substance abuse; £28,000 to the Treasury Solicitors (Class V, Vote VI) in relation to extending the Attorney-General's powers on unduly lenient sentences; £700,000 from the DEL Reserve in respect of a contribution to the Active Community Initiative; £10,000 to Department of Health (Class II, Vote II) as contribution towards a research programme; Neutral payment of £3,000,000 from the Lord Chancellor's Department (Class V, Vote 1) in respect of the Confiscated Assets Fund; £15,000 to the Prison Service (Class IV, Vote II) in respect of secondment costs; £5,067,000 from the Scottish Office (Class XIII, Vote 5) in respect of the balance due following a reduction in the level of contribution by the Scottish Office (Class XIII, Vote 5) in respect of the balance due following a reduction in the level of contribution by the Scottish Office towards Criminal Injuries administration and compensation costs from 13 per cent. to 11 per cent.; £7,000,000 from the DEL Reserve in respect of administration costs for the Asylum Seekers Directorate; £305,000 to the Department of Health (Class II, Vote II) in respect of drugs related research; Neutral payments of £100,000 from the Department of Health, £100,000 from the Department for Education and Employment, £100,000 from the Lord Chancellor's Department and £36,000 from the Welsh Assembly in respect of a contribution towards grant in aid for the National Family and Parenting Institute; Neutral payment of £12,000 from the Cabinet Office in respect of contribution towards grant in aid for Youth Net.

The changes in Class IV, Vote 2 are the net effect of the following transfers: £500,000 to the Department of Health (Class II, Vote 2) for the running costs of the Prison Health Policy Unit and the Prison Health Task Force; £1,499,000 from the Home Office (Class IV, Vote 1) in respect of the Crime Reduction Programme; and £15,000 from the Home Office (Class IV, Vote 1) to cover a secondment to the Mental Health Unit. In addition, the Supplementary Estimate gives effect to the take up of £173,000 for Welfare to Work DEL under the end year flexibility scheme entitlements announced by my right hon. Friend the then Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 27 July 1999, Official Report, column 393, in reply to a question by my hon. Friend the Member for Preseli Pembrokeshire (Ms Lawrence).

The increase in the Department's running costs limit is the net effect of the following transfers: £500,000 to the Department of Health for the running costs of the Prison Health Policy Unit and the Prison Health Task Force; £205,000 to the Department of Trade and Industry and £50,000 to the Welsh Assembly in respect of the Crime Reduction Programme; £28,000 to the Treasury Solicitors in relation to extending the Attorney General's powers on unduly lenient sentences; £10,000 to the Department of Health as contribution towards a research programme; £3,000,000 from the DEL Reserve in respect of administration costs for the Asylum Seekers Directorate; transfer of £646,000 from the Departmental Unallocated Provision to other current expenditure to meet the cost of upgrading the Emergency Communications Network.

These increases will be offset by transfers or charged to the Reserve and will not, therefore, add to the planned total of expenditure.

Immigration and Asylum Bill

Lorna Fitzsimons: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if the cost of additional staff for the Support Agency described in point 368 of the Explanatory Notes to the Immigration and Asylum Bill was included in point 359; and what the estimated staff costs for the Support Agency are. [97139]

Mrs. Roche: The question refers to paragraphs in the Explanatory Notes, published on 9 February 1999. A further set of Explanatory Notes were published on 18 June 1999 to accompany the introduction of the Immigration and Asylum Bill into the House of Lords.

Paragraph 368 of the Explanatory Memorandum suggested that the Asylum Seekers Support Agency would require between 100–200 additional staff. Since then, further work has been done to identify the appropriate size of the body to administer the new support arrangements. We have also taken account of revised forecasts for applications for asylum. Our latest estimates are that the new body to administer the support arrangements will need 512 full-time equivalent staff.

The costs of the staff were not included in the support costs listed in paragraph 359 of the Explanatory Memorandum. It is now expected that the staff costs will be of the order of £11.5 million per year.

Lorna Fitzsimons: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how the estimates in point 359 of the Explanatory Notes to the Immigration and Asylum Bill were determined; and what assumptions were made underlying those calculations. [97138]

Mrs. Roche: The question refers to a paragraph in the Explanatory Notes which were published on 9 February. A further set of Explanatory Notes were published on 18 June when the Immigration and Asylum Bill was introduced into the House of Lords.

A budget of £350 million for 1999–2000, £300 million for 2000–01, and £250 million for 2001–02 was provisionally allocated for asylum support costs in the Comprehensive Spending Review in July 1998. These figures were determined from the Asylum Costs model which calculates support costs on the basis of a number of assumptions including the number of asylum applications. Details of this model including its assumptions were set out in the document "Asylum Seeker Support—estimates of public expenditure" which was published on 22 March.

State Visits

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were arrested in connection with activities related to each State Visit in the last three years. [97263]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Within the Metropolitan Police Area, no-one was arrested in connection with activities related to the State Visits by the President of Israel (February 1997), the President of Brazil (December 1997), the Emperor of Japan (May 1998), the President of Germany (December 1998), or the President of Hungary (June 1999), and 15 people were arrested in connection with activities related to last month's State Visit by the President of China. Of these, five were released by the arresting officer without any further proceedings. Information for other police force areas is not collected centrally.

HMP Liverpool

Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department who was appointed to investigate recent allegations of bullying in relation to nursing staff at HMP Liverpool and on whose authority; who set the terms of reference for the inquiry; what guidance was given on the conduct of the inquiry and the compilation of the report; and to whom he intends the report will be made available in its entirety. [97281]

Mr. Boateng: The area manager for Merseyside and Manchester appointed Mr. R. S. McColm, then deputy governor grade at Manchester prison and now deputy governor at Wymott prison, and a trained senior investigating officer, to conduct the investigation. The area manager did so on his own authority, but he had discussed the matter with the operational director and the then Director General. The area manager set the terms of reference for the inquiry. The terms of reference directed Mr. McColm to conduct the investigation in accordance with Prison Service Instruction to governors 37/1994, a copy of which is available in the Library, and to take account of the Prison Service guidance on "Combating harassment and discrimination".

On the question of disclosure, I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I have her on 27 October 1999, Official Report, column 878. However, my hon. Friend has also asked to meet me to discuss the matter and I shall arrange to do so shortly.

Law and Order

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to begin the national implementation of the framework for final warning schemes, reparation orders, action plan order, child safety orders, parenting orders, and youth offending teams; and if he will make a statement on the piloting of these schemes. [97307]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Pilots of the final warning scheme, reparation order, action plan order, child safety order, parenting order and youth offending teams under the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 began in 10 areas in September 1998 and will run for 18 months. Subject to the experience of the pilots, the Government expect to implement nationally the provisions in the 1998 Act for youth offending teams in April 2000 and for the final warning scheme and new court orders in 2000–01. The pilots are being evaluated by a team led by Sheffield University. The Government expect to receive an interim report on the progress of the pilots shortly and this will be published in due course.

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the local authorities which have used (a) local child curfew schemes, (b) anti-social behaviour orders and (c) court-ordered secure demands. [97306]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Applying to establish a local child curfew scheme is optional for local authorities, to be considered in the light of the wider crime and disorder reduction strategy developed under the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 and of the outcome of local consultation. No applications have yet been received.

Information on the number of anti-social behaviour orders made is not held centrally, but we are aware of seven orders made since 1 April 1999. Two were applied for by Liverpool City Council, one by North Somerset District Council and one by the London Borough of Camden. In addition, two were applied for by Derbyshire Constabulary and one by West Mercia Police.

Remands direct to local authority secure accommodation are made by the courts without an application from a local authority. Information on the use of court-ordered secure remands since 1 June 1999 is being collected from local authorities. I will write to my right hon. Friend as soon as it has been assembled.

Racism and Xenophobia (Draft Directive)

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects the European Commission to publish a draft directive on racism and xenophobia. [97286]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: This matter is due to be discussed by the College of Commissioners on 10 November. However, I understand that there is a full agenda and it is possible that this item may not be reached, in which case it will be deferred to their next meeting on 16 November.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his estimate of the number of asylum seekers who are currently (a) supported by local authorities and (b) in receipt of social security benefits. [97584]

Mrs. Roche: The latest information estimates that in August 1999, local authorities in London were supporting approximately 52,000 asylum seekers, including dependants. Figures for asylum seekers not supported by London boroughs are not available at present.

The latest information from the Department of Social Security (DSS) shows the estimated number of asylum seekers/other urgent case payment cases currently in receipt of Income Support or Jobseeker's allowance as at May 1999, is 47,000 (excluding dependants).

Millennium Compliance

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the state of millennium compliance in (a) the Passport Agency and (b) the Immigration and Nationality Directorate. [97287]

Mrs. Roche: All business critical systems within the United Kingdom Passport Agency have been prepared for millennium compliance. No risks of material disruption to the infrastructure process as a result of millennium date change have been identified.

The three business critical systems within the Immigration and Nationality Directorate have been prepared for millennium compliance. Business continuity plans have been prepared and tested in event of failure of the systems or supporting infrastructure.

Police

Mr. Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he had made, at the time of his announcement of 16,000 police recruits on 30 September, of the number of officers who would leave the service over the next three years. [97234]

Mr. Charles Clarke [holding answer 4 November 1999]: It is not possible to make such a projection. This is because of the uncertainty surrounding the number of officers who take early retirement on medical grounds or who leave the service before normal retirement age for other reasons. I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary, to the hon. Member for Ruislip-Northwood (Mr. Wilkinson) on 29 October 1999, Official Report, column 1023.

Electoral Reform

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will place in the Library the submissions made to the Home Office Working Party on Electoral Procedures by the two main consumer credit reference agencies; and if he will make a statement. [97431]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: No. But the hon. Member may wish to ask the agencies concerned if they would agree to his doing so.

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimates his Department has made of the effect the proposals by the Home Office Working Party on Electoral Procedures on commercial access to the electoral register would have on (a) costs to and employment in the direct marketing and mail order industry and (b) fund raising by charities; and if he will make a statement. [97432]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: An extract of estimates by some businesses and charities of the costs that would result to them from a complete withdrawal of commercial access to the electoral register was attached as Annexe M of the Working Party's report, published on 19 October. The Working Party took note of these estimates in concluding that, in the wider economic interests of the United Kingdom, it would be wrong wholly to withdraw electoral registration data from commercial use. In the light of the recommendations in the report, further submissions with revised and detailed costings are being prepared by businesses, and my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary will take these into account when considering the way forward on this issue.

Tampere Agreement

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the nature of the Tampere discussions pertaining to Corpus Juris. [96574]

Mr. Charles Clarke: As my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister reported to the House in his statement on 19 October 1999, Official Report, columns 253–65, "Corpus Juris" was not a topic for discussion at the Tampere European Council, nor did the European Council endorse any of the specific proposals in "Corpus Juris" such as creating a European penal code or a European public prosecutor. There was a brief discussion on whether to examine one Corpus Juris proposal, the idea of creating a European Public Prosecutor, concerned only with protecting the financial interests of the Community, but this was not pursued. The conclusions of the European Council were aimed at achieving > "better compatibility and more convergence between the legal systems of member states".

In particular, the European Council concluded that the principle of mutual recognition, put forward by the United Kingdom, should become > "the cornerstone of judicial co-operation in both civil and criminal matters within the Union".

The European Council also agreed to create an intergovernmental unit, 'Eurojust', to work in liaison with Europol and the European Judicial Network to help to facilitate > "the proper co-ordination of national prosecuting authorities', and support national criminal investigations in cases of serious organised crime".

Motoring Offences

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for which motoring offences curfew orders and vehicle forfeiture can be used; and how often these court disposals have been used for motoring offences in each of the last three years for which data are available. [96637]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Curfew orders under section 12 of the Criminal Justice Act 1991 are available for any offence for which a community penalty is appropriate. This provision has been piloted from July 1995 in seven areas, and will be made available throughout England and Wales from 1 December. The available data on the use of these provisions relate to the period July 1995 to June 1997.

Motoring offences resulting in a curfew order under section 12 of the Criminal Justice Act 1991—July 1995 to June 1997

Note:
These figures do not include theft of, or from, a vehicle.

Curfew orders are also available under sections 35, 37 and 43 of the Crime (Sentences) Act 1997 for fine defaulters, persistent petty offenders and children aged 10 to 15 years, respectively, in specified circumstances. These provisions are also currently being piloted. The pilots began in January 1998. Available information as to their use for motoring offences in the pilot areas is as follows:

Use of curfews for offenders with summary motoring offences as the most serious offences	Number of orders 1998	1999 (January-June)
Fine defaulters	35	22
Persistent petty offenders	32	37
Children 10–15	6	3

Note:
1999 figures are provisional.

The courts' powers of forfeiture under section 43 of the Powers of Criminal Courts Act 1973 are available for certain motoring offences (broadly those which are punishable by imprisonment). Unfortunately, no separate statistics are kept for the use of vehicle forfeiture.

Departmental Assets

Miss Widdecombe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the assets sold by his Department and their value, item by item, in each year from 1991–92 to 1998–99 and estimate the value of asset sales planned to be made in 1999–00 and 2000–01. [96018]

Mr. Straw [holding answer 28 October 1999]: The following information is available:

Year	Land and property	Plant and machinery	Vehicles	Total
1991–92	18,920,000	3,305,000	389,000	22,614,000
1992–93	10,316,000	4,858,000	363,000	15,537,000
1993–94	8,540,000	—	1,027,000	9,567,000
1994–95	7,233,000	98,000	115,000	7,446,000
1995–96	4,614,000	189,000	400,000	5,203,000
1996–97	1,451,000	2,818,000	121,000	4,390,000
1997–98	8,285,000	150,000	—	8,435,000

I regret that it is not possible to give an item by item listing of these sales due to their large number and the disproportionate cost of compiling this information.

The unaudited figures for 1998–99 indicate that the value of asset sales is likely to amount to around £17 million. Our projections for future asset sales were published in our Departmental Investment Strategy, in March 1999; for 1999–2000 and 2000–01 sales are estimated at £6,228,000 per year.

Departmental Accounts

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what methods of depreciation his Department will apply in the current financial year to fixed assets in the preparation of departmental resource accounting balance sheets. [97044]

Mr. Straw: The straight line method of depreciation, whereby the cost of the asset is spread evenly over its useful life, is used in the Home Office for most of its assets. In accordance with the Treasury's Resource Accounting Manual and accepted accounting standards, the following are not depreciated: land (which does not have a finite life); fixed assets in the course of construction; inventory items; and property held for disposal.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Pig Farming

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has for the introduction of financial support for pig farming. [96704]

Ms Quin: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Heywood and Middleton (Mr. Dobbin) on 4 November 1999, Official Report, column 330.

Departmental Expenditure Limit

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what changes are proposed to the Departmental Expenditure Limit for his Department for 1999–2000. [97834]

Mr. Nick Brown: The Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food's Departmental Expenditure Limit (DEL) will be reduced by £42,504,000 from £1,267,812,000 to £1,225,308,000. The reduction is the net effect of an Intervention Board (IB) running cost End Year-Flexibility (EYF) take up of £2,310,000; a £150,000 transfer from DTI; a £264,000 net increase in receipts for the Centre for Environment, Fisheries and Aquaculture Science; and a transfer of £44,700,000 to the territorial departments for Hill Livestock Compensatory Allowance (HLCA) payments.

Within the DEL there will be transfers from IB to MAFF of the following:

(i) an additional £22,000,000 for enforcement of Specified Risk Material (SRM) controls;

(ii) a reduction of £8,000,000 in SRM receipts by the Meat Hygiene Service;

(iii) an increase of £15,300,000 for HLCAs;

(iv) £1,000,000 for a business support measure; and

(v) a reduction of £9,000,000 in receipts from charging for cattle passports.

Departmental Asset Sales

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the assets sold by his Ministry and their values, broken down by item, for each year from 1991–92 to 1998–99; and if he will estimate the value of assets sales planned to be made in 1999–2000 and 2000–01. [96224]

Mr. Nick Brown [holding answer 28 October 1999]: The information is as follows:

Disposal of Fixed Assets

I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Gordon (Mr. Bruce) on 15 February 1999, Official Report, columns 574–75. The following additional information is available.

Property Assets

A list of all properties sold since 1991, together with the income received, has been placed in the Library of the House.

Non Property Assets

The Ministry owns a high volume of relatively low value fixed assets, where fixed assets are defined as items costing in excess of £2,000 with a useful life in excess of one year.

A continuing programme of investment means items such as vehicles and IT equipment are renewed every 4 to 6 years. As a result, a number of life expired assets will be sold each year as new assets are purchased to replace them. Extracting information on these sales could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

However, information for the 1998–99 financial year is given in the following table:

Group	Number items retired	Cash received £
IT equipment	58	0
Vehicles	67	195,731
Office equipment	24	528

IT equipment and office equipment, by its nature, will have minimal value at the end of its life. Vehicles in the Private Use Car scheme are replaced every 4 years and are sold by auction.

Estimated Sales for 1999–2000 and 2000–01

Planned property sales over the next two years include the continued disposal of buffer depots and stores, together with the sale of redundant office space. A total of £20 million is expected in 1999–2000, of which £12 million has already been received. Sales revenue of £12 million is planned for 2000–01. These figures exclude the proposed sale of New Covent Garden as it is not yet possible to determine what the proceeds from this sale might be.

Non-property assets are expected to continue to turn over at a similar rate to the figures presented for 1998–99.

Sheep Imports

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many sheep were imported (a) live and (b) in carcase form into the United Kingdom from continental Europe and Ireland, broken down by country of origin, in each of the last five years and in 1999 to date. [95814]

Ms Quin [holding answer 28 October 1999]: The number of live sheep imported into Great Britain from other member states since 1994 is given in the following table. These figures are derived from the information messages which European law requires exporting countries to send to the importing country to inform them of the number of animals certified for export in a given consignment.

Figures are not available for Northern Ireland at this time.

Animal Feedstuffs

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what reports he has received about the French response to the European Commission report exposing instances of the use of sewage sludge in feed for French livestock; and if he will publish them. [97229]

Mr. Nick Brown [holding answer 4 November 1999]: No written reports have been directly received on the French response. However, at the September Agricultural Council, the French Agriculture Minister provided verbal assurances that the shortcomings identified in the Commission's inspection report had been firmly addressed. There has been no suggestion of widespread use in animal feed of human sewage. The Commission's report focused on the recovery of animal material from waste water treatment systems in rendering plants.

Food Imports

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he can take to prevent the import of food and food products known or believed to have been produced using illegal methods. [97230]

Mr. Nick Brown [holding answer 4 November 1999]: Detailed rules are in place under European Community law and in national legislation in member states making it an offence to export food and food products which might compromise the health and life of humans, animals or plants. Similar controls apply to imports into the Community from third countries under EC and domestic legislation. Under World Trade Organisation rules, imports from countries outside the EU can be restricted in order to protect human, animal or plant life and health, provided such measures are based on sound science.

Member states may take unilateral safeguard measures to restrict specific imports on an ad hoc basis where they believe health risks exist which are not adequately provided for under EC legislation. Such supplementary measures, details of which must be notified to the European Commission for their agreement, must be proportionate to and consistent with any harmonised Community rules in the area concerned.

Written Answers to Questions

Monday 8 November 1999

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Employee Consultation

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the current status of the draft Council Directive establishing a general framework for informing and consulting employees; and if a blocking minority currently shares the Government's position. [97565]

Mr. Alan Johnson: The draft directive establishing a general framework for informing and consulting employees has not been discussed in the Council of Ministers since it was first proposed by the Commission in December 1998.

Working Time Directive

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has to extend the Working Time Directive to the transport industry. [97355]

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he intends to propose amendments to the Working Time Regulations to specify working hours for the occupations of mobile workers, including roundsmen. [97252]

Mr. Alan Johnson: Proposals to extend the working time directive to workers (mobile and non-mobile) in the transport sector are currently being negotiated in Brussels. It is not expected that the Directive will be formally adopted before next year. After that, there will be consultation on implementation in the United Kingdom.

National Minimum Wage

Mr. Sarwar: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the number of the people who have benefited from the introduction of the national minimum wage. [97579]

Mr. Alan Johnson: Figures from the Office for National Statistics show that 700,000 more people were earning above national minimum wage rates in March-May 1999 than in the same period last year and almost two million who were earning below the national minimum wage will benefit when its full effects can be measured.

Defence and Security Goods (Exports)

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the defence and security goods that are currently prohibited from (a) use by UK security services, (b) sale within the UK and (c) sale abroad under export licence. [97481]

Dr. Howells: I understand that specified weapons are prohibited from manufacture, sale, hire or importation by the Criminal Justice Act 1988 (Offensive Weapons) Order 1988. Section 141 of the 1988 Act includes an exemption for the supply of such items to the Crown and visiting forces, but not the police service. I also understand that, under the Firearms Act 1968, weapons whose possession is prohibited without the express authority of the Secretary of State include fully automatic weapons, self-loading and pump action rifles, handguns, mortars, rocket launchers, weapons designed to discharge noxious substances and firearms disguised as something else. Ammunition regarded as particularly dangerous (such as that designed to explode or expand on impact, pierce armour or have an incendiary effect at the target) is also subject to prohibition.

The export of certain defence and security goods has been banned, and details are set out in the Summary of additional UK Restrictions on the Export of Strategic Goods, compiled by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office; a copy of this document is in the Library of the House.

Packaging Waste

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what measures he proposes to ensure that (a) retailers and (b) packer and fillers take an increased share of the recovery and recycling obligation contained in the UK Packaging Waste Regulations 1997. [97472]

Mr. Meacher: I have been asked to reply.

The Advisory Committee on Packaging has proposed that the percentage obligation of packaging manufacturers should be reduced by two percentage points and that of packer/fillers and retailers be increased by one percentage point each. I expect to make a further announcement on this matter shortly.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will estimate the increased cost to United Kingdom packaging manufacturers following implementation of the UK Packaging Waste Regulations in 1997. [97471]

Mr. Meacher: I have been asked to reply.

The recovery and recycling obligations under the Producer Responsibility Obligations (Packaging Waste) Regulations 1997 took effect in 1998. My Department estimates that the costs of complying with these obligations in 1998 was some £78,000,000 for the 4,011 obligated parties registered with the Environment Agency or Scottish Environment Protection Agency. We do not have a breakdown of figures specifically for packaging manufacturers, but these made up some 8 per cent. of the 4,011 registrations in 1998.

Energy Efficiency

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he has taken to provide direct support to manufacturing industry to improve energy efficiency; and if he will make a statement. [97632]

Mr. Meacher: I have been asked to reply.

Since 1989, the Government have been providing impartial advice to business and commerce through the Energy Efficiency Best Practice Programme. This provides information, energy efficiency studies and research and development support to manufacturers and others in the non-domestic sector. The Energy Efficiency Best Practice Programme has helped industry to save over £650 million per annum, to reduce emissions by over 3 million tonnes of carbon per annum and to improve energy efficiency.

In his Budget statement on 9 March 1999, my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer announced that, as a part of the Government's proposal to introduce the Climate Change Levy, he intended to recycle the revenue from the levy, in full, to business. He indicated that the Government intended that some £50 million of revenue from the levy would be used to assist with funding of schemes to promote energy efficiency, including additional support for renewable sources of energy. The Government are considering how best to make use of the proposed additional funding to maximise the benefit to the non-domestic sector.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the extent to which the industrial sectors already with high energy efficiency will assist in achieving Kyoto targets; and if he will make a statement. [97641]

Mr. Meacher: I have been asked to reply.

The Department commissions research which estimates the potential for cost-effective energy efficiency improvements in industry, commerce, the public sector and housing. This is done at a disaggregated level so that the scope in individual industrial sub-sectors is known. The information is being used in discussions with energy intensive sectors as a starting point for energy efficiency targets for negotiated agreements on the Climate Change Levy.

Integrated Tariff

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many types of duty there are on imported goods and services under the Integrated Tariff of the United Kingdom. [96202]

Dawn Primarolo: I have been asked to reply.

The Integrated Tariff of the United Kingdom (The Tariff) provides for ten types of duty or other charges on imported goods.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Departmental Expenditure

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what changes will be made to his Department's departmental expenditure limit/running cost limit for 1999–2000. [98013]

Mr. Rooker: Subject to Parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate for Class XII Vote 2 and Class XII Vote 3, the Department of Social Security Departmental Expenditure Limit for 1999–2000 will be reduced by £111,836,000 from £3,377,638,000 to £3,265,802,000. This is the net effect of increased Voted provision of £130,974,000 and reduced non-Voted provision of £242,810,000.

The increase on Class XII Vote 3 is the net effect of additional Comprehensive Spending Review funding of £37,000,000 (running costs), a take up of £8,000,000 (running costs) from the Departmental Unallocated Provision (which will not change the gross running costs limit), an increase of £3,137,000 (running costs) in respect of the reform of all work test and active case management, an increase of £120,407,000 (running costs) under the end year flexibility scheme as announced by the then Chief Secretary to the Treasury, my right hon. Friend the Member for Darlington (Mr. Milburn), on 27 July 1999, Official Report, column 393, and an increase of £8,520,000 and £9,769,000 under the capital and other discretionary end year flexibility schemes respectively.

Other changes result from a reduction of £6,631,000 (running costs) arising from a number of small transfers offset by a corresponding increase on Class I Vote 3 (Employment Services), a reduction of £24,351,000 (running costs) arising from the continuing effects of the transfer of responsibility for Contributions Agency and Working Family Tax Credit to Inland Revenue, offset by a corresponding increase on Class XVI Vote 4, Inland Revenue: administration, a reduction of £1,670,000 (running costs) arising from the transfer of responsibility for the Womens Unit to the Cabinet Office, offset by a corresponding increase in Class XVII, Vote 1, a net reduction of £261,000 (running costs) and £998,000 (capital) arising from the continuing implications to DSS of the Scotland Bill, offset by a corresponding increase in the Scottish Executive and a reduction of £486,000 (running costs) towards increased Administration costs of Motability, offset by a corresponding increase on Class XII Vote 2. There is also an increase of £11,972,000 (running costs) associated with services provided to other Government Departments on a repayment basis, an increase of £160,000 to meet the costs of overseas medical examinations of War Pensioners, an increase of £37,997,000 (running costs) arising from increased payments of Value Added Tax on contracted out services. Also an increase of £13,814,000 resulting from the virement from capital expenditure to running costs. Appropriations in aid increase by £86,427,000.

Changes in the Welfare to Work provision arise from an increase of £755,000 in the administrative costs of measures to help people with a disability or long term illness move into or remain in work, an increase of £3,378,000 under the end year flexibility scheme as announced by the then the Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 27 July 1999, Official Report, column 393, an increase of £18,000 in costs associated with the unemployed project team offset by a corresponding reduction on Class I, Vote 1 Education and Employment, a reduction of £55,000 for costs associated with innovative schemes relating to the programme of measures to help people with a disability or long term illness move into or remain in work, offset by a corresponding increase on Class I Vote 3 Employment Service and a reduction of £80,000 in the Child Care disregard provision.

As a result of these changes the running cost limit of this Department will be increased by £141,119,000 from £2,868,735,000 to £3,009,854,000 and the running cost limit of the Welfare to Work programme will be increased by £4,016,000 from £6,952,000 to £10,968,000.

Changes to Class XII Vote 2 arise from the transfer of £486,000 for increased administrative costs of Motability offset by a corresponding reduction on Class XII, Vote 3 and an increase of £14,350,000 under the end year flexibility scheme as announced by the then Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 27 July 1999, Official Report, column 393.

The net change in non-Voted provision of £242,810,000 arises from a reduction in payments from the National Insurance Fund to other Government Departments and Department of Social Security following the transfer of responsibility for the Contributions Agency to Inland Revenue (£281,027,000) and also a switch from non-Voted to Voted from the Departmental Unallocated Provision (£8,000,000) offset by an increase in National Insurance Fund payments to Department of Social Security (£46,217,000).

Increases will be offset by transfers or a charge on the DEL Reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Child Maintenance

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate (a) the total number of absent parents who are liable for child maintenance payments and (b) of this total the numbers who have an assessment made by the Child Support Agency, for the latest available date. [97143]

Angela Eagle: Information is not available on which to estimate the number of non-resident parents who may be liable for child maintenance as part of a private arrangement.

However, as at May 1999, 942,300 non-resident parents had an assessment made by the Child Support Agency.

Social Security Agreement (Australia)

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what notice Australia gave of its decision to terminate the social security agreement between Australia and the UK; and what the ramifications will be for British pensioners covered by the existing agreement. [97399]

Mr. Rooker: The Australian Government announced in July that they intended to terminate the Social Security agreement with the UK. We have not received formal notice of termination. The agreement would terminate 12 months after the UK received formal notification.

The agreement helps UK pensioners who have lived in Australia for less than 10 years to meet the residence test for Australia's Age Pension. It can also help former residents of Australia now living in the UK to qualify for UK State Pension. People who had already become entitled to benefit through the agreement when it terminated would remain covered by its terms, so there would be no effect on them.

Pensions

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what inflation assumption and what financial provision was made in the Comprehensive Spending Review for 2000–01 for the uprating of the basic state pension. [97480]

Mr. Darling: Financial provision for the costs of uprating is set by reference to the most recent inflation assumption. Inflation assumptions for 2000–01 underpinning forecasts for expenditure for the Comprehensive Spending Review are set out at page 108 table B1 of the Financial Statement and Budget Report 1998 (HC620). These forecasts were updated in November 1998 and for the Budget in March 1999. The inflation assumptions underlying the Department's latest expenditure forecasts are set out on page 89 of the Social Security Departmental Report (Cm 4214).

Disability Benefits

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will provide, for (i) invalidity benefit and (ii) incapacity benefit for each of the last 15 financial years, (a) the average number of recipients, (b) the average number of successful new claims, (c) the average total expenditure in current prices and (d) the average weekly amount received in current prices; and if he will provide separate estimates for those under state pension age. [96300]

Mr. Bayley [holding answer 29 October 1999]: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is in the tables.

Table 1 gives figures for recipients and average payments for Invalidity Benefit and for short-term (higher) and long-term Incapacity Benefit (IB) which like Invalidity Benefit (IVB) apply from the twenty ninth week of incapacity. The table excludes short-term (lower) IB which is the equivalent of the old Sickness Benefit for the first twenty eight weeks.

Table 1: Numbers of IVB/IB short-term higher and long-term rate recipients, and average weekly amounts in payment at April 1998 prices

	Recipients all ages	Average weekly amount (£)	Recipients under pension age	Average weekly amount (£)

28 February 1998	1,561,740	85.95	1,440,120	86.00

However, it should be noted that the great majority of IB recipients are on the long term rate of benefit. Table 2 shows the average amount payable to these recipients as this is the most accurate reflection of benefit levels for long term sick and disabled people on IB, and the most appropriate comparison with Invalidity Benefit rates.

Table 2: Numbers of IB long term recipients, and average weekly amounts in payment at April 1998 prices

Notes:
1. From 1984 to 1995, figures are taken from a 1 per cent. sample of claimants. From 1996, figures are taken from a 5 per cent. sample of the benefit computer system and exclude a small number of cases held clerically.
2. Figures are rounded to the nearest 5 pence.
3. Since April 1995 IB has not been paid to people who are over State Pension age. However, people who transferred to IB from IVB were permitted to continue to receive it beyond State Pension age.

Table 3 gives the required information for new claims. People do not make a fresh claim when moving from short-term (lower) to short-term (higher) IB.

Table 4 gives estimate expenditure figures. It is not possible to provide figures for short-term (higher) and long-term rates of IB only. The figures are therefore for the whole of IB including short-term (lower) rate. For consistency, expenditure on Sickness Benefit (the equivalent of short-term (lower) rate IB) has been included for the years up to 1994–95.

Disability Living Allowance

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people have claimed the higher rate of disability living allowance (a) this year and (b) in each of the last three years. [97267]

Mr. Bayley: Disability Living Allowance has a care component with three rates and a mobility component with two. People may be awarded either component or both, depending on their care and mobility needs.

Personal Service Companies

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many individuals trading as personal service companies are currently under contract to (a) his Department, (b) the Information Technology Services Agency and (c) the Benefits Agency. [97294]

Angela Eagle: The Department uses the services of professional contractors chiefly in the areas of accountancy and IT services. We have no information on the numbers of accountancy contractors who may have established personal service companies.

A Framework Agreement for the provision of Computer and Related Services to the Department has been in place since June 1996. Within this Framework are 7 companies that are contracted to provide the Department with IT Contractor staff. The Department's contractual arrangements are with the Framework suppliers and not the individual IT Contractors.

New Deal (Costs)

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list (a) the administrative staff costs, (b) the costs of employer subsidies and (c) the amount spent on training recruits under the New Deal scheme during the last year. [96266]

Ms Jowell: I have been asked to reply.

In 1998–99, total expenditure for the New Deal for Young People (18–24 year olds) for administrative staff costs was £95m. This includes the cost of New Deal Personal Advisers who are at the core of the successful delivery of New Deal.

The spend on employer subsides was £18.6m.

Within New Deal for Young People, participants benefit from a wide variety of advice, guidance, training, work experience and other specialist provision. The amount spent on New Deal provision was £82.4m. (This figure excludes administration costs, employer subsidies, options allowance payments, marketing and initial set-up costs). A significant further volume of provision will be paid for in this financial year. The national launch of New Deal took place in April 1998 and as a result young people did not move into Options provision until later in the year and secondly that there was some late billing by providers. Expenditure on training provision is also affected by the higher than expected, and welcome, movement from the Gateway into unsubsidised jobs.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

McKenzie Friends

Mr. Hilary Benn: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what plans he has to put McKenzie friends on a statutory footing; and if he will make a statement. [97250]

Mr. Lock: The Government have no plans at present to place the role of McKenzie friends on a statutory footing. Judges have developed common law rules so that litigants in person are permitted a McKenzie friend in proceedings in open court, and in chambers, unless the court is satisfied that fairness and justice does not require that assistance or where the court has grounds for believing that a McKenzie friend has acted inappropriately.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Housing Benefit

Mr. Curry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the

HOUSE OF COMMONS PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES (HANSARD) ● 1998-99

CHADWYCK-HEALEY Vol. 337 cols. 387 - 574 1 - 11 November 1999

communications addressed to local authorities from his Department on the administration of housing benefit since 1 January. [96529]

Ms Armstrong: The administration of housing benefit is primarily the responsibility of the Department of Social Security. However, the Department did write to the Chief Executives of local authorities in England on 30 July concerning the implementation work on the 'Supporting People' initiative which will impact on the implementation of the Transitional Housing Benefit scheme in April 2000.

Walton Group Plc

Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how much public sector funding the Walton Group Plc received in the last 10 years for re-generating properties in Liverpool; when this funding was approved; for what purpose the moneys were made available; when the expenditure was audited by the relevant authorities; and if he will make a statement. [96469]

Ms Armstrong: The Walton Commercial Group Ltd. (now Walton Group plc) was awarded a grant of £4.5 million in July 1992 towards the refurbishment of the Exchange Flags Building in Liverpool City Centre to provide 400,000 sq. ft. of refurbished office space and a museum. Total grant payments of £4,444,782 were made over the period November 1992 to May 1994 against claimed qualifying expenditure of £23,705,511.

The Urban Regeneration Agency (English Partnerships), acting as agents for the Secretary of State for Environment, Transport and the Regions, are currently reviewing the project and the use to which the grant has been put.

Motoring Offences

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what studies into the incidence of repeat offending by motorists and ways to reduce such repeat offending his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) received the results of in the last five years. [96640]

Mr. Hill: Research is currently in progress to study the effect of the Road Traffic Act 1991 on prosecutions for dangerous driving. Among other topics, this includes a comparison of sentencing trends before and since the 1991 Act and monitoring of the behaviour of persons convicted of serious driving offences. The aim is to improve understanding so as to deter poor driving more effectively. The project began in May 1998 and is due to be completed in October 2000.

A project has recently been completed for the Department to monitor the effectiveness of the experimental drink-drive rehabilitation scheme. The research carried out by the Transport Research Laboratory and published as "Drink/driver rehabilitation courses in England and Wales" (TRL report 426) suggests that offenders who have attended an approved rehabilitation course are three times less likely to re-offend. The scheme is to be made permanent throughout Great Britain from 1 January 2000. Consideration is currently being given to further research and monitoring.

A research project has also recently been published on "The High Risk Offenders Scheme for drink-drivers" (TRL report 394). This covers, among other categories, drivers who have been convicted more than once of driving over the limit within a 10 year period. The research has shown that reoffenders have different characteristics to the other High Risk categories.

Tree Planting

Mr. Hilary Benn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what estimate he has made of the contribution that the planting of trees could make to meeting the United Kingdom's Kyoto targets on the reduction of carbon dioxide emissions. [97034]

Mr. Mullin: New planting of trees has taken place at a rate of 15,000 to 20,000 hectares per year since 1990 as a result of Government policy on woodland expansion. The present rate of increase in tree cover is likely to contribute about 0.25 per cent. towards the commitment under the Kyoto protocol.

It would be possible to increase this proportion by accelerating the rate of new planting. Policies and initiative schemes whereby this might be achieved are under consideration by the Government Departments responsible. The first priority, however, must be to reduce emission levels as the most effective and secure way of delivering the UK's targets.

The Government aim to publish their Draft Climate Change Programme around the turn of the year. It will set out how the Government plan to meet their Kyoto target and move towards their domestic goal of reducing CO2 emissions by 20 per cent.

Housing

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many housing starts and completions by (a) local authorities and (b) social housing providers there were in (i) 1996–97, (ii) 1997–98 and (iii) 1998–1999. [96932]

Mr. Mullin: Figures are given in the table for the estimated number of new dwellings started and completed in England by local authorities and registered social landlords, in the latest three financial years:

Housebuilding

Financial year	Local authority	Registered social landlords
Starts
1996–97	395	22,916
1997–98	259	19,629
1998–99	149	17,602
Completions
1996–97	451	24,535
1997–98	323	21,397
1998–99	194	18,920

Motorways and Trunk Roads

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what proportion of (a) motorways and (b) trunk roads are expected to have a residual life of (i) less than zero and (ii) zero to four years at the end of the current financial year. [97067]

Mr. Hill [holding answer 2 November 1999]: I have asked the Chief Executive of the Highways Agency, Mr. Peter Nutt, to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Nutt to Mr. Bernard Jenkin, dated 8 November 1999:

You recently wrote to the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions concerning the expected residual life of motorways and trunk roads.

The Highways Agency has a target to ensure that the percentage of the trunk road network having zero residual life at the end of financial year 1999/2000 is less than the figure published in the 1998 report of the National Road Maintenance Condition Survey (NRMCS). This gives the proportion of Motorways and All-purpose trunk roads as 4.6 percent and 8.2 percent respectively. The Agency expects to achieve this target with the proportions being lower than the 1998 figures at the end of the current financial year.

There is no specific target for the residual life band zero to four years in the Agency's Business Plan but the information will be published in the 1999 edition of the NRMCS report. The Agency expects that the proportions will not be significantly different to those quoted in the 1998 report. These state that 8.2 percent of Motorways and 7.2 percent of All-purpose trunk roads had a residual life of zero to four years.

It is important to emphasise that residual life is only one of several indicators of road condition. A zero residual life indicates the onset of a less predictable deterioration pattern and the need for investigation. It does not necessarily indicate that the road is about to fail. I trust that this information is helpful.

Rail Services

Mr. Efford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received (a) on train cancellations and delays that are due to leaves on the track, (b) on the arrangements made by Railtrack and train operating companies to clear leaves from the track, (c) on the level of resources spent each year since privatisation on such activities and (d) on train cancellations and delays on Connex North Kent lines due to leaves on the track. [97225]

Mr. Hill: The Secretary of State and the Franchising Director have received few representations about train cancellations and delays relating to leaves on the track or the level of resources devoted to leaf clearance. None of these has concerned the Connex North Kent lines specifically. Railtrack and train operating companies have set aside £50 million to combat leaves on the lines.

Train Drivers

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the circumstances surrounding the suspension and subsequently continued employment of train drivers who are caught driving without due care or attention. [97776]

Mr. Hill: In the first instance, it is for the employer to decide on appropriate disciplinary action to be taken with staff who contravene proper working practices. In addition there are duties on employees and employers under the Health and Safety at Work, etc. Act 1974 and under specific regulations to ensure that work is done safely. For instance, the Railways (Safety Critical Work) Regulations 1994 require that employees are fit and competent to undertake activities (such as train driving) which are safety critical. The Health and Safety Executive could prosecute employers or employees who have contravened these duties and requirements.

Among the immediate measures agreed at the meeting that my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister held with rail industry leaders on 25 October were a review of consistent standards of driver training and establishing a consistent approach to safety management, embracing best practice across the network.

Climate Change Levy

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions by what means the Government will define energy-intensive operations when deciding which firms will receive significant discounts on the climate change levy. [97378]

Mr. Meacher: For the purpose of the climate change levy, energy intensive operations have been defined as those listed in Annex I to the European Union's Integrated Pollution Prevention and Control Directive. Sites which undertake operations of this type may join an appropriate sectoral energy efficiency agreement. Sectors which are able to negotiate satisfactory agreements will be eligible for reduced rates of levy.

We have received suggestions from industry for alternative definitions and are giving these consideration as part of overall consideration of industry representations on the design of the levy.

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions with which less energy-intensive sectors the Government have started preliminary discussions on energy efficiency agreements; and to what extent those discussions have included the possibility of linking in with such agreements a mechanism for varying rates of climate change levy. [97380]

Mr. Meacher: The Government are not discussing energy efficiency agreements with less energy-intensive sectors. The Government invited the ten largest energy intensive industry sectors to participate in negotiations for energy efficiency agreements in March this year. Subsequently, we have initiated negotiations for agreements with a number of smaller energy intensive sectors.

In both cases, the Government are offering the prospect of significantly lower rates of levy for those sectors that can agree targets for improving their energy efficiency which meet the Government's criteria.

We have received representations from some non-intensive sectors. For non-intensive sectors, it may be worthwhile for them to explore the possibility of voluntary energy efficiency agreements under the Government's energy efficiency best practice programme. Though voluntary agreements would not entitle participants to discounts from the levy, they would facilitate the sharing of best practice, benchmarking, and other information between companies. They would also help them cut out waste, save money and reduce carbon dioxide emissions.

Lackenby to Shipton Pylon Line

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what estimate he has made of the cost of road improvement works in connection with the line of pylons from Lackenby to Shipton; and if he will make a statement. [97375]

Ms Beverley Hughes: I understand that the National Grid Company, in consultation with appropriate parties, is making various road improvements in the process of constructing the North Yorkshire electricity line. The cost of these roads improvements is being met by the company and the details are a matter for it.

Leasehold Reform

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to introduce legislation on leasehold reform. [97434]

Mr. Mullin: We have almost completed our analysis of the responses received to our consultation paper on residential leasehold reform, and will announce our conclusions shortly.

Rural Rail Services

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to set targets for (a) investment in railways serving rural areas and (b) improvement in rail services in rural areas. [97433]

Mr. Hill: There are no plans to set targets for this investment. I would refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave on 1 November 1999, Official Report, column 10, concerning funding of improvements in rail services in rural areas.

Regional Planning Guidance

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is his timetable for dealing with the report of the panel on Regional Planning Guidance for the south-east of England; and what opportunities there will be for the public to have their views on the panel report taken into account. [97288]

Ms Beverley Hughes [holding answer 5 November 1999]: There will be an opportunity for the public to make their views known when the Government's proposed changes to the draft Regional Planning Guidance are published for consultation. As my hon. Friend the Minister for Housing and Planning indicated in the Opposition Day debate on Planning on 2 November 1999, Official Report, column 1221, we hope this will happen early in the new year.

Auditing Procedures

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what investigations are currently under way into the auditing procedures for town and parish councils; [97284]

(2) what recent discussions have been held between officials of his Department and representatives of the National Association of Local Councils the auditing procedures faced by town and parish councils. [97285]

Ms Beverley Hughes [holding answer 5 November 1999]: Audit procedures are a matter for the independent Audit Commission. Their officials have been discussing with the National Association of Local Councils a pilot exercise to investigate whether the cost of audits of town and parish councils can be reduced whilst maintaining the necessary level of assurance.

Government Office for the North West

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how much money has been spent on publications by the Government Office for the North West since its establishment. [97608]

Ms Beverley Hughes: I will write to the hon. Member with the information and place a copy in the Library.

Environment Protection Act 1990

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he plans to bring into force the contaminated land regime in Part IIA of the Environment Protection Act 1990. [97755]

Mr. Mullin: Subject to the outcome of the current consultation, and necessary Parliamentary procedures, we expect to bring the regime into force on 1 April 2000.

Mopeds

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has for the removal of full moped licence entitlement from new car licences; and if he will make a statement. [97672]

Mr. Hill: In July, we consulted on a proposal to issue successful car driving test candidates with a provisional, rather than a full moped licence, as part of a package of measures to improve rider safety. This would mean that newly qualified drivers wanting to ride a moped would be required to take a basic training course like other persons who wish to ride powered two-wheelers. These drivers are generally young, and they have high accident rates. Our reason for proposing this change is that the skills for riding safely a powered two-wheeler are different from those for driving a car and that these riders would be safer on the road after basic training. The proposed change would not affect anyone who already held a full moped licence. We are currently considering the responses that we have received and, when we have taken decisions, they will be announced.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many (a) moped riders and (b) cyclists were (i) killed and (ii) seriously injured in the years 1993 to 1998; what were the annual rates per 100,000 in each case; and if he will make a statement. [97673]

Mr. Hill: The number of killed and seriously injured pedal cyclists and moped riders in Great Britain and rates of casualty per 100,000 population are given in the table.

	Pedal cyclists		Moped riders
	Killed	Seriously injured	Killed	Seriously injured
Casualties
1993	186	3,611	22	660
1994	172	3,629	17	545
1995	213	3,754	19	541
1996	203	3,586	11	431
1997	183	3,409	17	402
1998	158	3,154	10	393
Casualty rate per 100,000 population
1993	0.33	6.38	0.04	1.17
1994	0.30	6.75	0.03	0.96
1995	0.37	6.59	0.03	0.95
1996	0.36	6.28	0.02	0.75
1997	0.32	5.95	0.03	0.70
1998	0.27	5.48	0.02	0.68

Road Fatalities

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what estimate he has made of the number of road fatalities that are caused by (a) excessive speed, (b) failure to observe traffic regulations, (c) failure to observe traffic signs and (d) failure to observe maximum speed limits in the most recent year for which figures are available. [97777]

Mr. Hill: Research suggests that vehicle speeds in excess of the speed limit, or which are inappropriate for prevailing conditions, are a major contributory factor in around one third of collisions on our roads. No estimate has been made of the total number caused by failure to observe traffic signs, or other traffic regulations.

London-Tilbury-Southend Line

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what information his Department holds and what discussions have taken place with (a) Railtrack and (b) train operators in relation to (i) the funding of signalling on the LTS line and (ii) the punctuality and safety implications of the introduction of a new station at West Ham on this line; and if he will make a statement. [97406]

Mr. Hill: The Secretary of State has not held discussions with either Railtrack or train operators about the funding of signalling on the LTS line or the punctuality and safety implications of the new station at West Ham. The Rail Regulator has discussed a new signalling system for the LTS line with Railtrack. The Franchising Director is aware that the new station at Wet Ham has resulted in some loss of punctuality on the line. He is monitoring the situation and will be meeting the train operator within the next two weeks to discuss this matter. I am not aware of any safety implications associated with the opening of this station.

Bursting Stone Quarry

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what discussions he has had on the application to extend Bursting Stone Quarry in Cumbria. [97670]

Mr. Raynsford: The Lake District National Park Authority resolved to grant planning permission for a proposed extension to Bursting Stone Quarry but referred the matter to Secretary of State because, in its view, the proposal constituted a departure from the development plan. After carefully considering all the documents and representations before him, the Secretary of State informed the Authority on 7 May that he had decided to call in the application for his own decision as, in his view, it raises planning issues of wider than local importance which he considers he ought to decide himself. The Secretary of State's legal duty of impartiality prevents him for having any discussions with any party concerning it.

I understand that the applicants have been discussing with the Authority the scope for agreeing a modern scheme of planning conditions for the quarry under the minerals review provisions of the Environment Act 1995 and based upon its existing planning permissions. Further action on the called in planning application is being held in abeyance pending the outcome of those discussions.

Biosafety Protocol

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received from non-Governmental organisations concerned with development issues regarding the UK Government's position on the Biosafety Protocol; and if he will make a statement. [97658]

Mr. Meacher: My Department has received no representations to date. Development issues would be a matter for the Department for International Development.

Docklands Light Railway

Mr. Woolas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will report on the progress of the Docklands Light Railway. [97901]

Mr. Hill: I have placed in the Library of the House the Docklands Light Railway Ltd.'s Annual Report and accounts for 1998–99.

The Railway continues to make excellent progress. The extension under the River Thames to Lewisham is set to open in November, in time for the Millennium and some two months ahead of schedule. Passenger numbers increased from 23 million to 30 million during the year. DLR Ltd. is currently owned by the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, and will transfer to Transport for London on 3 July 2000.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Departmental Accounts

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the methods of depreciation his Department will apply in the current financial year to fixed assets in the preparation of departmental resource accounting balance sheets. [96921]

Mr. Ingram: Straight line depreciation is the principal method which NI Departments and the Northern Ireland Office intend to apply to fixed assets in the current financial year in the preparation of departmental resource accounting balance sheets. In addition the Department of the Environment (NI) also intend to apply the following methods—renewals accounting, reducing balance and accelerated depreciation. As part of the dry run audit, depreciation policies will be subject to review by the Northern Ireland Audit Office.

Use of these methods of depreciation is in accordance with the Department of Finance and Personnel's Northern Ireland Resource Accounting Manual, which follows private sector accounting practice as far as is appropriate. The requirements in the Manual, regarding depreciation policy, are underpinned by Financial Reporting Standard 15 "Tangible Fixed Assets" issued by the Accounting Standards Board.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

"News at Ten"

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what recent discussions he has had with the ITC in respect of News at Ten and its successor programmes; and if he will make a statement. [97597]

Mr. Chris Smith: Programme scheduling and content are of course matters for the broadcasters and the Independent Television Commission. I have however expressed the hope that, when the ITC reviews next Spring the conditions laid down as part of its approval of the ending of "News at Ten", it will be robust in its analysis of whether those conditions are being met.

National Lottery

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will make a statement on the practicality of compiling an analysis of National Lottery ticket sales on a constituency basis based on sales in postal districts. [97098]

Kate Hoey: My Department holds information only on gross ticket sales. Neither the National Lottery Commission nor my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State require an analysis of sales by constituency to fulfil their statutory objectives under the National Lottery etc. Act 1993 (as amended). There is, therefore, no requirement for the National Lottery operator, Camelot Group plc, to provide the information in this format, and they have not done so.

Museums and Galleries

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will list the acquisition budgets in each of the last five years of the museums and galleries funded by his Department. [95145]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 25 October 1999]: Since 1992, the grant in aid allocation to each of the museums and galleries supported by DCMS has not included a separate acquisition budget. Decisions concerning the amount set aside for acquisitions are for the Trustees of each institution. Except for the Wallace Collection, which is a closed collection, details of the acquisition budgets of the other national museums and galleries for the last five years are given in their annual accounts which are available in the House of Commons Library. Regarding information for the other sponsored museums and galleries, I will write to the hon. Member and place copies of my reply in the Libraries of the House.

Arts Council (Annual Report)

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when he expects the Arts Council of England to publish its 1998–99 Annual report. [97712]

Mr. Chris Smith: We expect that the Arts Council of England's Annual Report will be published in December.

Football Spectators

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what progress has been made in eliminating racist behaviour among spectators at football matches. [97435]

Kate Hoey: I have been assured by the bodies identified in the Football Task Force Report "Eliminating Racism from Football", that they have implemented the Task Force's recommendations and I am monitoring the success of these initiatives.

National Arts Day

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport, pursuant to his answer of 25 October 1999, Official Report, column 755, on the National Arts Day, if the proposal for a National Arts Day meets his criteria. [97477]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 5 November 1999]: I have not to date been presented with any proposal for a national arts day that meets those criteria.

DEFENCE

European Security and Defence Identity

10. Ms Rosie Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the future of the European Security and Defence Identity. [96131]

24. Ms McCafferty: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the future of the European security and defence identity. [96146]

Mr. Hoon: The Government are committed to strengthening the European Security and Defence Identity within NATO. We want European nations to improve their combined military capabilities and to develop the means to act in support of their foreign and security policy objectives. We are making good progress with our Allies and Partners both in the European Union and in NATO.

Marine Forces

11. Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on collaboration between the Royal Marines and the Royal Netherlands Marine Force. [96132]

Mr. Spellar: The Royal Marines and the Royal Netherlands Marine Force have worked closely together for 26 years. This relationship was formalised in a Memorandum of Understanding signed in March 1997. Most recently, the UK Royal Marines and the Netherlands Royal Marines worked closely on Exercise BRIGHT STAR, an amphibious multinational exercise in Egypt last month.

Heavy-lift Aircraft

12. Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the RAF's requirement for heavy-lift transport aircraft. [96133]

Mr. Kilfoyle: The Strategic Defence Review concluded that we needed to improve our strategic airlift, to allow us to move forces quickly to an overseas theatre. We are considering solutions to both our short and long-term requirements. In the short term, we expect to do this through acquiring four C-17 aircraft or their equivalents. In the longer term, we would need a suitable replacement for our remaining transport aircraft. We expect to make an announcement early next year.

Multi-role Armoured Vehicle Project

13. Mr. Peter Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress has been made in concluding the multi-national agreement on the Multi-Role Armoured Vehicle project; and if he will make a statement. [96134]

Mr. Kilfoyle: As announced on 5 November, the UK and Germany have signed a Memorandum of Understanding, and have placed a contract with ARTEC GmbH, a consortium including Alvis Vehicles Ltd. from the UK, for the development of a family of armoured utility vehicles, known in the UK as the Multi-Role Armoured Vehicle.

Smart Procurement Initiative

14. Mrs. Gilroy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the progress of the Smart procurement initiative. [96135]

Mr. Hoon: Smart Procurement is at the heart of our effort to reform radically the way we acquire equipment capability. The programme to roll out Integrated Project Teams is on track with 33 now fully operational. 39 further teams formed up in September and 141 will be fully operational by April 2000.

Territorial Army

15. Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to increase the strength of the Territorial Army; and if he will make a statement. [96136]

Mr. Spellar: The Strategic Defence Review made a number of changes to the Territorial Army, including increases in support functions such as medical services and signallers. The new structure was implemented on 1 July this year, and is making the TA more relevant and useful. There are therefore no plans to change the conclusions reached on the size of the Territorial Army.

16. Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement regarding his plans for the mobilisation of TA units. [96137]

Mr. Spellar: We are examining the feasibility of deploying a formed TA unit or sub-units to sustain peace support operations in the Balkans. No decisions have yet been taken.

22. Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many people are currently enlisted with the Territorial Army; how many there were five years ago; and what his projection is for the figures in 12 months' time. [96143]

Mr. Spellar: The strength of the Territorial Army as at 1 September, the latest date for which figures are available, was 45,047. The strength of the Territorial Army on 1 September 1994 was 61,047. These figures exclude Non Regular Permanent Staff.

The estimated strength of the Territorial Army in 12 months' time will be our target establishment of 41,200.

Mr. Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the impact mobilisation of the Territorial Army would have upon the National Health Service. [97246]

Mr. Spellar: My Department and the Department of Health currently have work in hand to assess the implications for the National Health Service of deploying substantial numbers of Territorial Army and other medical Reservists on military operations.

Mr. Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many more doctors he plans to recruit into the Territorial Army or reserve forces; and in what time span. [97244]

Mr. Spellar: At present, the three Services are seeking to recruit some 545 doctors into the Volunteer Reserve Forces to meet current shortfalls. There is no specific timescale for achieving this figure but the aim is to recruit the doctors as soon as possible.

Bosnia

17. Lorna Fitzsimons: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on troop levels in Bosnia. [96138]

20. Mr. Roy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on troop levels in Bosnia. [96141]

Mr. Hoon: The UK remains fully committed to supporting NATO operations in Bosnia. In conjunction with Allies, we have recently completed a careful assessment of the current security situation in Bosnia. This has improved sufficiently in the four years since the deployment of the Implementation Force (IFOR) for NATO to be able to move safely to a restructured force of some 20,000 members. The implication for UK forces is that 900 personnel will now return to the UK, without replacement, before Christmas. The UK contribution to the Stabilisation Force (SFOR) will then stand at some 3,300.

Kosovo and Serbia

18. Sir Sydney Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about the environmental consequences of the conflict in Kosovo and Serbia. [96139]

Mr. Spellar: The UN's Balkans Task Force issued its report on the environmental consequences of the Kosovo conflict on 5 October. A copy of the report has been placed in the Library of the House. This Government have not conducted a separate assessment of the environmental consequences of the conflict in Kosovo and Serbia.

Depleted Uranium

19. Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the environmental impact of depleted uranium munitions. [96140]

Mr. Spellar: My Department has conducted extensive monitoring programmes of the environmental effects of depleted uranium munitions at the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency's firing ranges at Eskmeals and Kirkcudbright. The monitoring programme has confirmed that there are only low levels of DU contamination, which are well below anything that could be considered a health hazard. The results of this monitoring are published annually.

Army Northern Headquarters

25. Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the decision was made to transfer the Army's northern headquarters from York to Edinburgh. [96147]

Mr. Spellar: The decision to transfer the Army's northern HQ from York to Edinburgh was made on 4 March.

Learning Forces Initiative

26. Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the progress of the learning forces initiative. [96148]

27. Mr. Michael J. Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the progress of the learning forces initiative. [96149]

32. Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the progress of the learning forces initiative. [96154]

Mr. Spellar: I refer my hon. Friends to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Portsmouth, North (Mr. Rapson) on 8 November 1999, Official Report, columns 683-84.

East Timor

28. Mr. Savidge: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the current security situation in East Timor. [96150]

Mr. Hoon: The security situation in East Timor is much improved. The Australian-led International Force in East Timor (INTERFET) has now reached a total strength of 8,100 personnel, and includes significant contributions from Canada, Fiji, South Korea, New Zealand, Philippines, Thailand, UK and the US. INTERFET has a firm base in Dili and is operating patrols along the border with West Timor. Remaining militia on the eastern side of the island, together with those based in West Timor, are still a cause for concern. The Indonesian Armed Forces have been co-operative. Some refugees have returned as peace is being restored. British Army Gurkhas have played an important role from the start of INTERFET operations in East Timor, and most recently in the Ambeno enclave. Gurkhas have been involved in conducting security patrols, facilitating the delivery of humanitarian assistance and providing medical relief.

Royal Navy

29. Mr. Jim Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on staff amenities and support services on board Royal Navy ships. [96151]

Mr. Kilfoyle: The staff amenities and support services on board Royal Naval ships vary widely according to their size, age and role. Typically, all ships are provided with mess and galley facilities together with recreational facilities such as TVs, video recorders, books and fitness equipment. As part of our policy for people, measures to improve the amenities on ships, including the extension of satellite TV, welfare communications and internet facilities where possible, are being progressed.

Front Line Logistics

30. Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps the Government are taking to improve support to the front line in respect of logistics. [96152]

Mr. Spellar: Following the Strategic Defence Review, we have established the post of Chief of Logistics, to command a unified Defence Logistics Organisation (DLO), to replace the Single Service logistics commands. The DLO will be fully operational by April 2000, and has already begun to rationalise logistics and spread best practice across the Services. The DLO is involved in implementing the Smart Procurement Initiative, which aims to make the initial procurement of equipment and subsequent provision of spares, repairs and overhaul more efficient and responsive to the needs of the Services.

As part of the reorganisation of the management of logistics in my Department, we are creating two new Joint Force Logistic Component headquarters. The first is due to become operational in 2001 and the second in 2003. In addition, a number of new support units have been created to strengthen lines of communication, including two combat service support squadrons, a local resource section, a petroleum troop and a rations troop. In addition, our plans following SDR to create a fifth engineer logistic squadron have been brought forward from 2002 to late 2000.

Kosovo

31. Laura Moffatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on future commitments in Kosovo. [96153]

Mr. Hoon: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Stevenage (Ms Follett) on 8 November 1999, Official Report, column 678.

Welfare Telephone Allowances

33. Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps the Government are taking to improve service welfare telephone allowances. [96155]

Mr. Spellar: We recognise the importance of personnel deployed on operations being able to telephone home. We increased the free telephone allowance from 3 to 10 minutes in the Strategic Defence Review last year. The previous Secretary of State for Defence, Lord Robertson, announced on 28 September 1999 a further increase, doubling the allowance to 20 minutes a week. This was to take immediate effect and demonstrated our commitment to the welfare of Service personnel.

Iraq

34. Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on UK forces' involvement in patrolling the no-fly zone in northern and southern Iraq. [96156]

Mr. Hoon: Coalition patrols of the no fly zones remain an essential humanitarian task in support of UN Security Council Resolution 688 as they prevent Saddam Hussein from using his airforce against the Iraqi people in the north and south. Since the end of Operation Desert Fox last December, Saddam has waged a systematic campaign against coalition aircraft carrying out these patrols. Some 215 Iraqi aircraft have violated the No Fly Zones, and there have been over 500 other direct threats against our aircrew, including missile attacks and heavy anti-aircraft fire. Coalition responses are limited strictly to proportionate action in self-defence against Iraqi weapons and facilities which pose a direct threat to our forces.

Overstretch

Mr. Rammell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps his Department is taking to reduce the problem of overstretch. [96142]

Mr. Spellar: We remain firmly committed to tackling overstretch in the Armed Forces. Recruitment is improving and measures are under way to improve retention. These include improvements to the operational welfare package, for example: free telephone calls home, and a guaranteed period of post operational tour leave, as well as measures in support of families put in place through the role of the Service Families Task Force. We believe that measures such as these, combined with improved recruiting, and retention initiatives already in place, will help to reduce overstretch.

Apache Helicopters

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the cost of the helmet pointing system being delivered with the Apache helicopters; how long he expects the helmet pointing system for the helicopters to be in service before being upgraded; and what the cost of the upgrade will be. [95346]

Mr. Spellar: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency. I have asked the Chief Executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from John Howe to Mr. Mike Hancock, dated 8 November 1999:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the helmet pointing system being delivered with the UK Apache helicopters. This matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency.

The cost of the helmet pointing system being delivered with the Apache helicopter is not separately identified within the package deal contract which was signed with GKN Westland Helicopter Ltd in March 1996, at a value of some £2Bn. There are no current plans to upgrade the system, but we continue to monitor developments in this field and are exploring opportunities to collaborate with the US Army in providing a longer term upgrade.

Aircraft Carriers

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many orders for aircraft carriers he expects to place in the next year; and when tenders will be invited for such orders. [95512]

Mr. Hoon: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency. I have asked the Chief Executive to write to my right hon. Friend.

Letter from John Howe to Mr. Frank Field, dated 8 November 1999:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence asking how many orders for aircraft carriers he expects to place in the next year and when tenders will be invited. This matter falls to me for answer within my area of responsibility as Chief of Defence Procurement and Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency.

The Strategic Defence Review set out our plans to replace our existing aircraft carriers from 2012 with two larger and more capable vessels. Tenders for the Assessment Phase of the programme, which will develop overall design proposals for the carriers, were released to industry in January 1999. Bids were received from two industry teams in May and, subject to the outcome of commercial negotiations, it is planned to place up to two contracts by the end of the year. Bids for the Demonstration and Manufacture Phase are expected in 2003 and contract placement is scheduled for 2004.

European Joint Procurement Structures

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what programmes are subject to European joint procurement structures. [96228]

Mr. Hoon [holding answer 28 October 1999]: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency. I have asked the Chief Executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from John Howe to Mr. Iain Duncan Smith, dated 8 November 1999:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence about what programmes are subject to European joint procurement structures. This matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief of Defence Procurement and Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency.

The Counter Battery Radar (COBRA) is currently the only fully integrated programme involving the UK managed by a "European Joint Procurement Structure", the Organisme Conjoint de Cooperation en Matiere d'Armement (OCCAR). In addition, the Multi-Role Armoured Vehicle (MRAV), Medium Range TRIGAT and Principal Anti-Air Missile System (PAAMS) programmes have been nominated to move to OCCAR management, subject to agreeing satisfactory arrangements with the participating countries.

In addition, two programmes involving the UK are managed by NETMA, an organisation founded under the auspices of NATO but with European partners.

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the European joint procurement structures which have been set up and those which are due to be set up over the next year. [96225]

Mr. Hoon [holding answer 28 October 1999]: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency. I have asked the Chief Executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from John Howe to Mr. Iain Duncan Smith, dated 8 November 1999:

This matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief of Defence Procurement and Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency.

The Organisme Conjoint de Cooperation en Matiere d'Armement (OCCAR) is currently the only European joint defence procurement structure involving the UK. It was established by Treaty in September 1998. In addition, the Eurofighter and Tornado programmes are managed by NETMA, an organisation founded under the auspices of NATO but with European partners.

Aldermaston

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what measures are to be implemented in building A12N at Aldermaston to ensure its continued safe operation until building A91 enters into service; [96425]

(2) what progress has been made in commissioning building A91 at Aldermaston; and if he will make a statement. [96423]

Mr. Spellar: Technical problems with A91 have delayed its active commissioning. A decision on the most appropriate way forward for the facility will not now be made until the new term operating contractor has been appointed and they have had the opportunity to consider the situation.

The existing A12N plant will be maintained to ensure the continued safe processing of radioactive material while options for A91 are being evaluated. A review has been carried out and some minor engineering improvements have been included in the current engineering work programme. The Nuclear Installations Inspectorate and the Environment Agency have been consulted on both A12N and the difficulties with A91.

Strategic Airlift

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will break down the five bids for the abandoned strategic airlift competition indicating the capability and cost in each case; and what alternative approaches to the strategic airlift capability the Defence Procurement Agency is seeking and from which companies. [96746]

Mr. Hoon: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency. I have asked the Chief Executive to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from John Howe to Mr. Harry Cohen, dated 8 November 1999:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence in which you asked if he will provide a breakdown of the five bids received in response to the Short Term Strategic Airlift competition and what alternative approaches the Defence Procurement Agency is seeking to fulfil this requirement. This matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief of Defence Procurement and Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency.

In answer to the first part of your question, I provide below details of the bidders and the aircraft they proposed for the terminated competition:

Airbus Transport International (ATI) offering a beluga and conventional freighters.

An Air Foyle Ltd-led consortium offering a yet-to-be developed version of the Antonov An-124.

Boeing/BAe offering the C-17.

IBP Ltd offering the current standard Antonov An-124.

Rolls Royce offering a managed service provision.

I am withholding details of costs and capabilities offered under Exemption 13 (third party's commercial confidences) of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

In answer to the second part of your question, the Defence Procurement Agency is exploring other possible options for meeting our Airlift requirement, with the intention of reaching a decision in early 2000. This includes discussions with Boeing and the USAF on acquiring a C-17 capability through commercial lease or alternative arrangements and discussions with Air Foyle Ltd and Heavy Lift Cargo Airlines Ltd on more assured short-term chartering. A third company has now withdrawn its interest. The companies were requested to submit proposals by 29 October.

Soldiers (Service Extension)

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proportion of soldiers serving for three years extended their service beyond three years by (a) three, (b) six, and (c) nine years in each of the last five years. [97518]

Mr. Spellar: Soldiers enlisting into the Regular Army since 1991 have done so on the Open Engagement (up to 22 years), which commits them to a minimum of three years service (four years for those enlisting after 2 November 1999). Continuation of service beyond that point is subject to the wishes of the individual and the needs of the Army. There is no requirement for soldiers to specify the length of any further commitment, but they are normally required to give 12 months notice of their wish to leave.

The information is not, therefore, available in the form requested. The table, however, identify the average soldier trained strength in each of the last five financial years, by length of reckonable service, and as a percentage of the total trained soldier strength.

[1] UK Trained Army Personnel (soldiers) only.

[2] The Strengths are calculated by adding together the start and end strengths of each financial year, and dividing by two.

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what effect the extension of the minimum commitment for soldiers from three to four years will have on pay differentials for those signing on for an extended three, six or nine years. [97519]

Mr. Spellar: The extension of the minimum commitment for soldiers from three to four years will have no effect on pay differentials. Soldiers have been enlisted on open engagements since 1 January 1991 and pay differentials for initial engagements of three, six or nine years have not applied since that date.

Patten Commission

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what contribution the armed forces made to the Patten Commission on policing in Northern Ireland. [97558]

Mr. Spellar: The Patten Commission on Policing received a briefing on the role of the Armed Forces in Northern Ireland and the support they provide to the Royal Ulster Constabulary on 2 October 1998.

Service Personnel (Turnover)

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the inflow and outflow rates for (a) the Territorial Army, (b) the Royal Naval Reserve and (c) the Royal Auxiliary Airforce for (i) officers and (ii) other ranks, for each of the years from 1994–95 to date. [97661]

Mr. Spellar: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Sexual Discrimination Cases

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many sexual discrimination cases involving his Department are pending before (a) the European Court of Justice and (b) the European Court of Human Rights. [97666]

Mr. Spellar: There are no cases pending before either Court.

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many sexual discrimination cases have been brought against his Department in industrial tribunals since 1 February 1995; in how many such cases rulings were made against his Department; how much financial compensation was paid in each case; and how many cases are awaiting decision. [97668]

Mr. Spellar: The information requested relating to Industrial (now Employment) Tribunal applications together with details of compensation paid is available only for applications made by serving members, or former members, of the Armed Forces, since 1996–1997 when complete records began to be kept. The information provided does not include those applications submitted by MOD civilian and former civilian staff to Employment Tribunals, for which information is not held centrally.

Legal advice is taken on all cases and where a thorough and objective assessment of the case proves that there is a legal liability to pay compensation we do so. In such cases, the Ministry of Defence would hope to avoid cases proceeding to a full Tribunal hearing. My Department is currently handling 35 Employment Tribunal cases for sexual discrimination, two of which have been listed for full hearings.

The following figures exclude Employment Tribunal applications from those Servicewomen who were obliged to leave the Services on grounds of pregnancy. All 5,038 of these claims received have been settled in full at a cost of £60,279,782.

	Number of Employment Tribunal applications received in period	Number of Employment Tribunal cases settled/ repudiated in period	Compensation paid in period (£)
1996–97	58	15 settled 15 repudiated	260,000
1997–98	57	16 settled 25 repudiated	271,000
1998–99	25	14 settled 20 repudiated	425,000
1999–2000[1]	12	1 settled 7 repudiated	1,000

[1] To 4 November 1999

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many sexual discrimination complaints against his Department since 1 February 1995 (a) have been made under service redress procedures, (b) were upheld by his Department at that stage, (c) came before industrial tribunals, (d) came before the European Court of Justice and (e) came before the European Court of Human Rights. [97664]

Mr. Spellar: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Service Personnel (Employment Protection)

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much his Department has paid in employment protection to employers of members of (a) the Territorial Army, (b) the Royal Navy Reserve, (c) the Royal Auxiliary Air Force and (d) sponsored reservists mobilised in each year for which figures are available since 1989–90; and if he will make a statement. [97663]

Mr. Spellar: No payments are made to employers of members of the reserve forces for the purposes of employment protection. Under the terms of the Reserve Forces Act 1996 and the Reserve Forces (Call-out and Recall) (Financial Assistance) Regulations 1997 (SI 1997/309), employers may claim financial assistance for the loss of a member of staff who is mobilised for reserve service, and to cover any necessary retraining for that staff member on return. No financial assistance was provided to employers before 1 April 1997.

No awards of financial assistance have been made to employers of Royal Naval Reserve personnel as a result of called-out service since 1 April 1997.

It has not been possible to distinguish payments made to employers of TA personnel from those made to the employers of ex-Regular Army reserves. However, since 1 April 1997, the following totals have been paid to the employers of Army reservists:

Financial Year	Amount paid to employers (£)
1997–98	11,939
1998–99	64,762
1999–2000	[1]26,654

[1] As at end October 1999

Figures relating to employers' claims are available only for the Royal Auxiliary Air Force since June 1999. Since June 1999, payments totalling £7,158.27 have been made to employers of Royal Auxiliary Air Force reservists.

There are no Sponsored Reserves in service.

"Welfare in the Army"

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on Major-General Spacie's report, "Welfare in the Army"; and when he intends to make the report public. [97660]

Mr. Spellar: As part of the development of an overarching Human Resources Strategy, the Army's approach to welfare has been subjected to a fundamental and comprehensive review. In 1998, Major-General (Retired) Spacie was commissioned to undertake a study into welfare provision across the Army. This work was completed in September 1999 and is currently being assessed. The study was commissioned to inform the Army's personnel management policies and there are currently no plans to publish the findings externally.

RAF Neatishead

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to make an announcement about the future of RAF Neatishead, Norfolk. [97665]

Mr. Spellar: I expect to make an announcement shortly about the outcome of consultation relating to all of the rationalisation proposals affecting the RAF stations which make up the UK Air Surveillance and Control System (ASACS). This will of course include RAF Neatishead.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Hawk Aircraft

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many Hawk aircraft have arrived in Indonesia since the 16 September common position of the European Council; how many have been halted in transit; and what discussions he has held with representatives of (a) British industry, (b) overseas posts and (c) foreign agencies on the issue of halting Hawk transfers in transit. [97575]

Mr. Battle: Three Hawk aircraft were exported from the UK on 31 August, before the adoption of the Common Position. Once the aircraft left UK shores, we had no power to prevent delivery of these aircraft. No further Hawks have been exported from the UK while the embargo has been in place since 16 September.

Departmental Staff (Working Week)

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the average length of the working week in hours, broken down by grade, of staff in his Department (a) in the United Kingdom and (b) overseas. [97532]

Mr. Hain: The information requested by the hon. Member is not available. The conditioned hours of the Department's staff in the United Kingdom and overseas are 41 or 42 hours per week. However staff posted overseas have a 24 hour on-call liability.

International Criminal Court

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions his Department has had concerning the implications for future British involvement in peacekeeping operations of ratification of the International Criminal Court. [97516]

Mr. Hain: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office, the Ministry of Defence and the Home Office have worked closely together throughout the negotiations on the establishment of the International Criminal Court. The Government believe ratification of the Rome Statute will have no implications for future British involvement in peacekeeping operations.

Middle East Peace Process

Mr. Sarwar: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on progress in the Middle East peace process. [97580]

Mr. Hain: The Sharm el-Sheikh agreement has created a real prospect of peace between the Israelis and Palestinians. The parties are committed to making a determined effort to conclude a Framework Agreement on Permanent Status issues by February, and to reaching a Permanent Status Agreement by September. We are confident that the permanent status negotiations, which have been formally resumed, will deliver substantive results.

Implementation of the Sharm el-Sheikh commitments is proceeding, albeit with some short delays. A southern safe passage between Gaza and the West Bank was opened during my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary's recent visit.

We do not underestimate the difficulties faced by both sides. Real vision will be needed to deliver a peace settlement which offers lasting security for Israel, and a real prospect of hope and prosperity for Palestinians.

Peace between Israel, Syria and Lebanon is an essential component of a comprehensive peace in the Middle East. We remain hopeful of a resumption of negotiations on the Syrian and Lebanese tracks.

We stand ready to help in any way we can in the pursuit of a comprehensive, just and lasting peace.

St. Helena

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to extend full British citizenship to cover the population of St. Helena; and if he will make a statement. [97466]

Mr. Battle: The White Paper on Overseas Territories, published in March this year, sets out the Government's offer of British citizenship to those citizens of the Overseas Territories, including those of St. Helena, who do not already enjoy it and who meet certain conditions. This will require primary legislation. The issues are complex and the Government are working on the preparation of the necessary legislation.

Kosovo

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what initiatives Her Majesty's Government are taking to assist the civil prison service in Kosovo; and if he will make a statement. [97404]

Mr. Vaz: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) and Department for International Development (DfID) arranged for a visit to Kosovo for Her Majesty's Prison Service experts in August to consider what assistance we could provide for prison administration. DfID is providing $1 million in repair assistance and has made available the DfID Emergency Engineering Unit to the United Nations and to the NATO-led international force in Kosovo (KFOR) to help repair prison facilities before winter sets in.

Two British prisons experts also went to Kosovo at the start of October for a two month visit to provide technical advice to the United Nations Mission in Kosovo (UNMIK) on the transfer of responsibility for prisons from KFOR to UNMIK, and the re-opening of prison facilities. DfID are also funding the secondment of four prison technical monitors to supervise local staff until February 2000.

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many houses of the minorities have been burnt in Kosovo since the KFOR occupation. [96101]

Mr. Vaz: Between KFOR's arrival in Kosovo on 12 June 1999 and mid-October there have been 1,157 reported cases of arson. Figures disaggregated by ethnic group or property type are not available.

Chinese President (State Visit)

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many people accompanied the Chinese President on his state visit, (a) arriving with him and (b) in advance; into which categories these people fell; and how many of them were known to his Department to be from the Chinese police or other security services. [97756]

Mr. Battle: The Chinese President was accompanied by 140 people froM China: 14 members of his official suite, 70 staff, 29 media correspondents and a plane crew of 27, all of whom arrived with the President. Thirty-five people had security responsibilities.

European Union Programme

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list (a) the forthcoming business in the Council of the European Union for November and (b) the major European Union events for the next six months. [96950]

Mr. Vaz [pursuant to his reply, 29 October 1999, c. 1038–44]: An administrative error led to an omission in my answer of 29 October to my hon. Friend. The correct answer should read as follows:

HOME DEPARTMENT

"Picking up the Pieces"

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the Picking up the Pieces III report from local authorities dated 11 to 13 January. [97273]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Home Office broadly supports the work this group is undertaking to develop better post-disaster psycho-social care arrangements.

Drug-related Crime

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what range of national initiatives Her Majesty's Government have employed to reduce drug-related crime since 1997.A [94523]

Mr. Charles Clarke [pursuant to his reply, 19 October 1999, c.436]: One of the four Key Aims of the Government's drugs strategy is to protect communities from drug related crime. National initiatives introduced since 1997 include the piloting of the new Drug Treatment and Testing Order, for which around £60 million has been earmarked for national roll-out from next year; the Prison Service has been given £76 million over the next three years for tackling drug misuse in prisons, of which in the region of £60 million has been allocated to drug treatment programmes, and up to £20 million over the next three years is being made available to assist in the development of arrest referral schemes to get drug misusing offenders into treatment.

Travellers

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to announce the results of his examination of guidance on the exercise of powers under the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 by the DETR and his Department relating to travellers. [97384]

Mr. Charles Clarke: My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary has asked for the good practice document "Managing Unauthorised Camping", published jointly by the Home Office and the Department for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (DETR) in 1998, to be reviewed. This is being carried forward with the DETR and the results will be announced in due course.

Asylum and Immigration

Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what options are available to visitors to the UK who are refused entry and who have no right of appeal against the decision; what steps are taken to make such visitors and their sponsors in the UK aware of those options before they are required to leave the country; and if it is the practice to stamp passports with a symbol indicating that entry has been refused before the visitor has had the opportunity to exercise such options. [97446]

Mrs. Roche: A person seeking entry as a visitor, but refused leave to enter is informed in writing that they may contact their High Commission or Consul or anyone else they think may be able to help them. A chief immigration officer will consider any representations made before a person's departure. It is normal practice to endorse the passport of a person refused leave to enter at the time the decision is made.

Local Authority Housing

Mr. Hilary Benn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will issue guidance to police forces about sharing information with local housing authorities about persons with previous convictions for burglary who are applying for local authority housing so that those authorities can consider whether to make an offer of accommodation; and if he will make a statement. [97036]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Under Part VI of the Housing Act 1996, local housing authorities are required to have an allocation scheme which sets out their procedures and priorities for allocating social housing. There are a number of classes of household or person who must be given "reasonable preference" under an allocation scheme. This framework is designed to ensure that priority for subsidised housing is given to those with the greatest need.

Authorities have the power to define which classes of people are eligible for local authority housing. When deciding which classes of people should be non-qualifying, they are entitled to decide on the basis of objective criteria and evidence, whether granting a tenancy to a person is likely to result in disruption to the stability of the community.

The Department for the Environment, Transport and the Regions' "Code of Guidance for Local Authorities on the Allocation of Accommodation and Homelessness", which will be published shortly, will recommend that any decision to exclude classes of persons on the grounds of the need to protect the community or reduce levels of crime on an estate should be taken in consultation with relevant organisations in the criminal justice system, in particular the police and probation services.

We shall consider the need for further guidance on the disclosure of information by the police if necessary.

Freedom of Information

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to amend the draft Freedom of Information Bill to accommodate commitments on environmental information disclosure contained in EU directives and the Aarhus Convention on Access to Environmental Information. [97364]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The consultation paper on the draft Freedom of Information Bill (published 24 May 1999) set out the Government's intention to modify as necessary the general right of access in the Freedom of Information Bill in order to implement the Aarhus Convention (United Nations Economic Commission for Europe Convention on access to information, public participation in decision-making and access to justice in environmental matters) insofar as it relates to access to environmental information.

The Bill will now contain a provision giving power to the Secretary of State to make regulations to give effect to the Aarhus Convention as it relates to access to environmental information. Ministers have agreed to this change of approach. This will allow for the creation of a free-standing regime for environmental information which will give effect to the Aarhus Convention and the existing European Community Directive on Freedom of Access to Information on the Environment. The current regulations will be revoked.

Access to environmental information will, therefore, be given in the first instance under the regulations rather than the Bill itself. Freedom of Information legislation will continue to have an effect, however, by placing a duty on authorities to consider any discretion they may have to disclose information in the public interest where it is otherwise exempt under the regulations.

Firearms Compensation

Mr. Neil Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many claims made for compensation for the surrender of handguns and ammunition have (a) been settled and (b) remain outstanding; what has been the total compensation paid to date; and what the final figure is expected to be. [97545]

Mr. Charles Clarke: As at the end of October, a total of 74,597 claims under the firearms compensation and ex gratia payment schemes had been paid. There are currently 966 claims outstanding, of which 800 are ones where payment offers have been made to the claimants in question and are awaiting acceptance. A total of £88.96 million has been paid out and the final figure is expected to be approximately £90 million.

Motoring Offences

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what use has been made of restorative justice in response to motoring offences involving injury or loss to third parties. [96636]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Where it judges it appropriate and proportional, a court can make a probation order for a motoring offence. Probation service motoring programmes typically include sessions on raising offenders' awareness of the impact on victims. Such programmes often include police or hospital staff presenting information about the impact and injuries resulting from motoring offences and the consequences for victims.

The Crime Reduction Programme announced last year, contains a restorative justice component. It is evaluating a number of existing restorative justice schemes in order to identify which elements or combination of elements are most effective in reducing crime and at what cost. Some of the schemes will include offenders who have committed motoring offences.

Defence Exports

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the Government's policy is on the manufacture for sale abroad by UK companies of defence and security goods that are illegal in the UK; what action is taken against such companies; and if he will make a statement. [97483]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The kinds of weapons used by military and security forces are prohibited under the provisions of section 5 of the Firearms Act 1968. This means that no company may manufacture such weapons without the written authority of the Secretary of State. In order to obtain such an authority, an applicant must show that there is a compelling reason for possessing prohibited weapons, that the applicant is fit to be entrusted with prohibited weapons and that they will be stored under conditions of security commensurate with the danger to the public posed by such weapons.

Authorities are carefully conditioned to restrict to the minimum genuinely needed, the numbers and types of prohibited weapons the authority holder is allowed to possess. They are also specifically conditioned to restrict the purposes for which the holder may possess prohibited weapons and how the weapons may be disposed of.

It is an offence punishable by up to six months' imprisonment, a fine of up to £5,000 or both for a person to breach any of the conditions of an authority. Unauthorised possession of prohibited weapons is punishable by up to ten years' imprisonment, a fine or both. Where it is believed that an offence may have been committed, the information would be passed to the police for investigation. Any decision on whether or not to prosecute in an individual case is a matter for the police and the Crown Prosecution Service.

Export sales of such weapons are subject to the export licensing regime. Applications for export licences for prohibited weapons are considered carefully by the Department of Trade and Industry in consultation with the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and the Ministry of Defence.

Cross-examination

Mr. Dawson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he intends to implement sections 40 and 41 of the Youth Justice and Criminal Evidence Act 1999. [97408]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Sections 34–40 of the Youth Justice and Criminal Evidence Act 1999 provide protection for witnesses from cross-examination by the accused in person. Sections 41–43 provide restrictions on evidence or questions about the complainant's sexual history in proceedings for sexual offences. Rules of Court will be required to govern procedures relating to applications made under both these sets of provisions, and these are currently being prepared with a view to implementation in Spring 2000.

Police Firearms

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on how many occasions in the past five years a Metropolitan Police vehicle has been damaged consequent to the firing of police small arms during an operation; and if he will make a statement. [97407]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Metropolitan Police Commissioner tells me that the information requested is not recorded centrally.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on how many occasions in the past five years a firearm held by a Metropolitan Police officer has been fired accidentally in an operational situation; and if he will make a statement. [97398]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Metropolitan Police Commissioner tells me that since 1994, there have been six occasions when a firearm has been discharged accidentally by a Metropolitan Police officer, when employed on an operation.

Corporate Manslaughter

Dr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to consult on proposals for a new criminal offence of corporate manslaughter; and if he will make a statement. [97217]

Mr. Charles Clarke: We are considering what action to take in the light of the Law Commission's report on Involuntary Manslaughter which includes proposals in relation to corporate manslaughter. We will make our proposals known shortly.

West Midlands Police Authority

Mr. John M. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on plans for an upper age limit for lay visitors within the area of the West Midlands Police Authority. [97216]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Lay visiting is the responsibility of individual police authorities and each scheme must evolve to suit local circumstances. The West Midlands Police Authority began introducing an upper age limit of 70 for lay visitors from October 1998.

Current Home Office guidance to police authorities on lay visiting makes no reference to age limits. However, the separate guidance issued for the Metropolitan Police area states that persons who are under the age of 18 or over the age of 70 will not normally be appointed. All this Home Office guidance, which is advisory, is shortly to be reviewed and the arguments for and against age limits will be considered as part of that process.

Data Protection

Mr. Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are his plans for publishing on the Internet further draft statutory instruments to be made under the Data Protection Act 1998. [97886]

Mr. Straw: Drafts of a further six statutory instruments will be published on the Internet at www.homeoffice.gov.uk on Tuesday 9 November. I am also placing copies in the Library.

PRIME MINISTER

Internal Histories

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list those internal histories (a) commissioned under his Government and (b) currently in progress. [95307]

The Prime Minister: No central record is required for histories commissioned by Departments for their own purposes. Two internal histories have been commissioned since the General Election and work on them is under way. It is the established practice under section 10 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information not to disclose information relating to a planned or potential publication. After completion, consideration will be given on an individual basis under the Public Records Acts for their release to the Public Record Office.

Bilderberg Meetings

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Prime Minister what official records are kept of attendance by Government Ministers at Bilderberg meetings. [95784]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to my answer to him of 20 May 1999, Official Report, column 402. Records of meetings attended by Government Ministers are not held centrally.

Pensions

Mr. Trend: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his oral answer of 20 October 1999, Official Report, column 435, what the basis was for his statement that the average pensioner is currently receiving more than if pensions had been indexed to earnings. [96031]

The Prime Minister: In the first three years of this Parliament, pensioners will have received an extra £1.6 billion through the new Winter Fuel Payments and the introduction of the Minimum Income Guarantee. This is more than twice the amount that pensioners would have received from uprating the basic state pension in line with earnings rather than prices.

As well as being worth more than uprating, our policies for pensioners strike a better balance between benefiting all pensioners and getting more help to those in greatest need. The £100 Winter Fuel Payment goes to every pensioner household, regardless of their income. The Minimum Guarantee means even more help for pensioners on low incomes.

Special Advisers

Mr. Baker: To ask the Prime Minister what has been the annual salary of each special adviser employed at 10 Downing Street for each year since 1 May 1997. [96875]

The Prime Minister: Special Advisers are paid individually negotiated salaries within a published pay range as follows:

	Salaries
1997–1998	£24,349 to £73,484
1998–1999	£26,000 to £76,056
1999–2000	£26,728 to £78,186

In line with the practice of previous Administrations, the salaries of individual Special Advisers are not disclosed as this would breach the privacy of the individuals concerned. The exceptions are two of my Advisers—Jonathan Powell and Alastair Campbell—who have additional executive responsibilities and are paid outside this range. Their salaries are each as follows:

	Salaries
1997–1998	£87,936
1998–1999	£91,014
1999–2000	£93,562

Animal Welfare

Mr. Baker: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 26 July 1999, Official Report, column 29, on animal welfare, if the inter-departmental minister group on animal welfare has now been established; if he will list its membership; and if he will set out its terms of reference. [96496]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 2 November 1999]: Work is under way and continuing on the establishment of inter-departmental ministerial group on animal welfare and an announcement will be made shortly.

Media Briefings

Mr. Baker: To ask the Prime Minister under what circumstances Permanent Secretaries are permitted to brief the media personally. [96712]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 2 November 1999]: Permanent Secretaries may brief the media on their official responsibilities and they have often done so in relation to their management roles.

Press Secretary

Mr. Baker: To ask the Prime Minister if the Press Secretary to the Prime Minister can issue instructions to departmental heads of information. [96339]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 2 November 1999]: My Chief Press Secretary is appointed under Article 3(3) of the Civil Service (Amendment) Order in Council 1997, which provides him with the necessary executive powers to direct civil servants as appropriate.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the dates on which the Press Secretary to the Prime Minister has met departmental heads of information since 1 May 1997. [96337]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 2 November 1999]: My Chief Press Secretary has set up a system of weekly co-ordination meetings between No. 10 and heads of departmental planning units and in addition holds strategy meetings periodically with heads of information to ensure effective co-ordination and presentation of Government policy.

Chinese President (State Visit)

Mr. Baker: To ask the Prime Minister for what reason Rupert Murdoch was invited to lunch at 10 Downing Street on the occasion of the visit there of President Jiang Zemin; if Tibet was discussed at that meeting; and if he will make a statement. [96340]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 2 November 1999]: Mr. Murdoch was one of a number of business people with interests in China invited to the lunch. On my discussions with President Jiang Zemin about Tibet, I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Stoke-on-Trent, South (Mr. Stevenson) on 1 November 1999, Official Report, column 4.

Departmental Leak Investigations

Mr. Baker: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the departmental leak investigations in progress, specifying in each case the nature of material leaked. [96343]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 2 November 1999]: I am aware of seven leak investigations that are in progress in Government Departments. They involve various types of material including internal departmental policy documents, operational information and legal advice to a Department. Each Department is responsible for its own security arrangements, including leak investigations.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Prime Minister how many leak investigations have been instigated since 1 May 1997; how many have identified the culprit; and what action has been taken in each case. [96344]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 2 November 1999]: Government Departments have notified the Cabinet Office of a total of 58 leak investigations since 1 May 1997. It has been the normal practice of successive Governments not to disclose information on the outcome of investigations.

Deaths in Custody

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Prime Minister what response he has made to the recent petition presented to him about deaths in custody; and if he will make a statement. [97148]

The Prime Minister: It is customary when petitions are delivered to my Office for the relevant Government Department to be informed and where appropriate passed to them for consideration. In this case my Office passed the petition to the Home Office in order to draw it to the attention of my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary, whom I understand met representatives of the United Families and Friends Campaign earlier this year.

Intergovernmental Conference

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Prime Minister further to his reply to the hon. Member for Buckingham of 26 October 1999, Official Report, column 772, on the intergovernmental conference, if it is his Government's policy to seek a review of the Common Fisheries Policy prior to 2002. [97564]

The Prime Minister: The preparatory stage of the review of the Common Fisheries Policy which is due to conclude by the end of 2002 has already started.

Infant Deaths

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Prime Minister if he will meet representatives of the Foundation for the Study of Infant Deaths to discuss ways in which there could be a more coherent public service response to the causes of unexpected infant deaths. [97716]

The Prime Minister: I am aware of the Foundation's excellent work in improving our understanding of the causes of unexpected infant deaths and in prompting an appropriate public response. I understand that the Foundation has developed a strong working relationship with officials at the Department of Health. My hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Health would be happy to meet with representatives of the Foundation should they wish to do so.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make it his policy to combine the responsibilities of the Home Office and Department of Health with those of other departments in order (a) to institute infant death response teams of trained police and specialist nurses to visit and support families within 24 hours, (b) to provide for inquests held by specialist pathologists and (c) to institute case conferences to consider and agree the cause of death. [97715]

The Prime Minister: The tragedy of death in infancy calls upon the expertise of a number of agencies with shared responsibility for supporting parents who have suffered bereavement. It is already accepted good practice for bereaved families to be visited by a police officer attached to the Coroner's Office and a nurse experienced in bereavement counselling. The benefit of a specialist pathology service for inquests into infant deaths has been recognised and I understand that closer working relationships between paediatric and forensic pathologists are being developed to this end. It is the duty of the Coroner to consider and identify the cause of death.

Official Engagements

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister what his official engagements were between 3.30 p.m. and 7 p.m. on Wednesday 3 November. [97748]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Torbay (Mr. Sanders) in the House on 3 November 1999, Official Report, column 285. At 7 p.m. I voted in the division following the debate on Lords Amendment 42 to the Welfare Reform and Pensions Bill.

Foudry Court Elderly Persons Home

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Prime Minister which department will answer the letter from the hon. Member for North Essex to him of 29 July concerning the threatened closure of Foudry Court Elderly Persons Home; when it will do so; and which department has responsibility for care of the elderly. [97746]

The Prime Minister: The Minister of State, Department of Health, has replied to the hon. Member today. The Department of Health has responsibility for the health and social care of the elderly.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Belize

Mr. Peter Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development to what projects and in what proportions the United Kingdom's overseas aid to Belize was allocated in each of the years 1990 to 1997. [96178]

Clare Short: The requested information is shown:

Year	UK assistance to Belize (£000)	Percentage of total UK bilateral assistance
1990–91	6,016	0.508
1991–92	3,674	0.312
1992–93	4,498	0.332
1993–94	6,233	0.473

Year	UK assistance to Belize (£000)	Percentage of total UK bilateral assistance
1994–95	[1]16,886	1.223
1995–96	6,335	0.446
1996–97	7,666	0:595
1997–98	2,383	0.176

[1] This figure reflects a large CDC investment of £11,487,000—the bulk of which went on hydro-electric power

Note:

This expenditure was predominantly in the following sectors: Agriculture and Livestock, Forestry, Fishing, Roads, Energy, Public Administration and Education.

Departmental Asset Sales

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list assets sold by her Department and their value item by item in each year from 1991–92 to 1998–99; and if she will estimate the value of asset sales planned to be made in 1999–2000 and 2000–01. [97723]

Clare Short: The information requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

St. Helena

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what measures she proposes to (a) increase the standard of living of the residents of St. Helena and (b) improve access to St. Helena; and if she will make a statement. [97385]

Clare Short: The framework for St. Helena's development over the period 1997/98–1999/2000, and the level and scope of HMG development assistance, is set out in the Country Policy Plan agreed by HMG and the St. Helena Government in 1997 (a copy of which is in the Library). A new Country Policy Plan (CPP), for the period 2000/01–2003/04, is scheduled to be agreed by the end of 1999. Discussions on the new CPP and on access issues will take place on St. Helena between 2–10 December 1999.

CHURCH COMMISSIONERS

Historic Churches

40. Mr. Woodward: To ask the hon. Member for Middlesbrough, representing the Church Commissioners, what representations he has made to Ministers on the reduction of VAT on conversion schemes for historic churches. [96163]

Mr. Stuart Bell: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave earlier today to the hon. Members for the Vale of York (Miss McIntosh) and for Chipping Barnet (Sir S. Chapman). I have raised the Church's concerns directly with my colleagues at the Treasury responsible for the oversight of the ongoing review of charity taxation. Following the latest submission of evidence and the overwhelming support given by General Synod to changes in the VAT regime as it affects the Church, we have written to the Financial Secretary to the Treasury seeking a meeting to expand on the thrust of the Church's case.

42. Mr. Burns: To ask the hon. Member for Middlesbrough, representing the Church Commissioners, what representations he has made to Ministers on the reduction of VAT on conversion projects for historic churches. [96165]

Mr. Stuart Bell: I refer to my answer given to the hon. Member for Witney (Mr. Woodward). As the representative of the Church Commissioners, I am in frequent touch with colleagues in Government and have raised the Church's concerns in connection with VAT and listed buildings in support of the various submissions made by the Church to the ongoing charity tax review.

GM Crops

Mr. Baker: To ask the hon. Member for Middlesbrough, representing the Church Commissioners, if he will make a statement on his policy on the use of land for which the Church Commissioners are responsible for the cultivation of GM crops. [96157]

Mr. Stuart Bell: The issue of whether Commissioners' land should be leased to allow trials of genetically modified crops to take place is being initially considered by the Church's Ethical Investment Working Group (EIWG), which develops a co-ordinated investment policy for the Church. The EIWG has been studying and consulting widely on the potential impact genetically modified technology could have on current farming practices, biodiversity and the environment. It has not yet concluded its research.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

New Deal (Young People)

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list by unit of delivery the number of jobs lasting less than 13 weeks gained by 18–24 year olds from the New Deal since January 1998. [95088]

Ms Jowell: The information showing the number of young people who had gained a job from New Deal and returned to claim the Jobseekers Allowance or returned to a New Deal Option within 13 weeks, by Unit of Delivery, is given in the following table. The figures include both subsidised and unsubsidised jobs. Also shown are the numbers gaining jobs that were sustained, lasting for 13 weeks or more. Job turnover is normal in a healthy labour market, especially among young people who need to try different jobs and accumulate experience to establish themselves successfully in the labour market. It is vital that those young people returning to unemployment after a short spell in work are given the support and encouragement they need to build on that experience and use it to find another job quickly. It is this kind of sustained help that sets New Deal above previous labour market policies.

From January 1998 to the end of July 1999

New Deal (Lone Parents)

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many lone parents had been invited to join the New Deal for Lone Parents by the end of July. [95515]

Ms Hodge: The number of lone parents invited to join the New Deal for Lone Parents between the national roll-out of the programme on 26 October 1998 and the end of July was 406,440. The total number of invitations, including the earlier pilot phases of the programme which began on 21 July 1997, is 457,052. Letters inviting participation in the New Deal for Lone Parents programme are sent to lone parents who are in receipt of Income Support and whose youngest child is aged at least 5 years and 3 months. Some 80,130 lone parents have attended an initial interview (including those outside the target group and early starters who did not receive an invite) and some 89 per cent. of these agreed to join the caseload and 26 per cent. of these have found jobs.

New Deal (Oxfordshire)

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many people in Oxfordshire have moved into permanent jobs through the New Deal programme; and what is the average cost to public funds of each new permanent job created. [95996]

Ms Jowell [holding answer 27 October 1999]: In the Oxfordshire Unit of Delivery, 303 young people have gained sustained employment through the New Deal for Young People since it started in April 1998 to the end of August 1999. In addition, 70 people aged 25+ have gained sustained employment through the New Deal in the Oxfordshire Unit of Delivery.
At the end of August 1999, 365 young people were participating in the New Deal. A further 255 people aged 25+ were participating in the New Deal for Long-term Unemployed People aged 25 and over.

As at June 1999, for the group of people who entered New Deal in Oxfordshire in the period July to September 1998, the average cost to public funds of each job found was £2,088.

New Deal (North-east)

Mr. Alan Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many 18 to 24 year olds have started New Deal in (a) the area covered by the Government Office for the North East and (b) Tynemouth broken down by (i) employer, (ii) full time education, (iii) the voluntary sector (iv) the environment task force and (v) other. [96859]

Ms Jowell: In the period ending August 1999, the table shows the number of young people who have jointed New Deal and the number who have gone on to join an option for (a) Employment Service Northern region, and (b) Tynemouth constituency.

GCSE Achievement

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment which local education authorities have asked for a variation of the national target for GCSE achievement in 2002; what variations have been agreed; and what reasons for variation have been accepted in each case. [95897]

Mr. Wicks [holding answer 28 October 1999]: The national targets for GCSE achievement in 2002 cover all pupils in England. It is not open to local education authorities to seek to vary the national targets.

Labour and Social Affairs Council

Mr. Rammell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the outcome of the Labour and Social Affairs Council held in Luxembourg on 22 October; and if he will make a statement. [96775]

Ms Jowell: I represented the UK at this meeting of the Council.

The Council was dominated by discussion of the employment package. Discussion will continue during November, with a final version of the package due for submission to the Helsinki European Council on 11–12 December.

The Council welcomed the Commission's proposals for amendments to the Employment Guidelines for 2000. On Commission proposals for Council recommendations on the implementation of member states' employment policies, the UK led a discussion which sought to ensure support for the principle of recommendations. The majority of the Council members endorsed this approach.

The Council heard a progress report from the Presidency on a draft Council decision to establish the Employment Committee. The Presidency also reported on the negotiations for a Community programme to promote the social integration of refugees.

The Council agreed conclusions welcoming a new action programme to promote equality between men and women and conclusions noting a Presidency report on member states' implementation of the Beijing Platform for Action.

The Commission Communication on a strategy for modernising social protection was warmly welcomed by most member states.

Mature Students

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will estimate the number of mature students at universities and other higher education establishments for the years (a) 1989, (b) 1994 and (c) 1999; and if he will make a statement. [97370]

Mr. Wicks: Information for 1999–2000 is not yet available. The most recent data are shown in the table.

Mature[1] Home Domiciled Higher Education Students[2] in Great Britain

	1989–90	1994–95	1998–99
Full-time	234,755	441,011	430,978
Part-time	338,823	505,619	630,603
Total	573,583	946,630	1,061,581

[1] Postgraduates aged 25 or over, and undergraduates aged 21 or over.
[2] Higher education and further education establishments including the Open University.

Educational Maintenance Allowance Pilots

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the total amount top-sliced from the SSA discretionary awards budget to pay for the Educational Maintenance Allowance Pilots in 1999–2000. [97548]

Mr. Wicks: None. The Educational Maintenance Allowance (EMA) Pilots have been funded entirely from new money provided for this purpose. The transfer from local education authority discretionary awards is being used to contribute to the costs of the access funds and specific help for residential students and for childcare. These new arrangements will mean more spending on students than would have been the case had the discretionary awards scheme continued.

EMAs have the potential to make a real difference to young people's life chances. Early indications are that they are having a positive impact in the pilot areas.

Bolton Institute of Higher Education

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when he expects to make a decision concerning the application of Bolton Institute of Higher Education to become a university. [97362]

Mr. Wicks: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State expects to be able to announce a decision before the end of the year.

"Voices" Magazine

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many copies of "Voices" magazine have been published; how many have been distributed and to whom; and what was the cost of publishing this magazine. [97311]

Ms Jowell [holding answer 5 November 1999]: 20,000 copies of the "Voices" magazine were published. The publishing and production costs were £59,976.80. The cost of the publication was shared in part with other Government Departments.

Every copy of "Voices" has been distributed. Copies were sent to approximately 2,000 women who attended the Listening to women roadshows, as promised to them, the Women's National Commission, all GP's surgeries and Primary Health Care Directors and NHS and Local Authority Chief Executives, Citizens Advice Bureaux, the Equal Opportunities Commission and the Commission for Racial Equality, media contacts and individual requests from members of the public, universities, local authority services etc. Copies were sent to the Parliamentary Library, Cabinet Ministers, women MPs and Peers, The Welsh Assembly, The Scottish Executive and the Scottish Women's Forum, The Northern Ireland Executive, Women MEPs, three EU Commissioners, Civil Service Departments and appropriate branch heads. There is a significant demand for "Voices" from a wide range of sources, so a re-print of 10,000 copies has been ordered to meet these requests. This will cost a further £17,439. Copies of "Voices" will be distributed to all public libraries shortly. Copies have been sent to the UN, the European Commission and overseas contacts.

The Key points, Government actions and contact numbers in "Voices" were also published in a summary leaflet. Approximately 250,000 leaflets were printed at a cost of £12,927 and these are being distributed through retail outlets (Bhs and Mothercare) and GP surgeries to ensure we reached as many women as possible.

Student Identification Numbers

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what progress has been made in developing a unique student identification number. [97488]

Mr. Wicks: The National Committee of Inquiry into Higher Education, chaired by Lord Dearing, recommended in July 1997 that works be undertaken over the medium term on the creation of a framework for data about lifelong learning, using a "unique student record number".

Since then a number of important developments have taken place—notably the introduction this term of a national system of "unique pupil numbers" to facilitate the statistical tracking of pupils through the school system. The potential for extending the use of the unique pupil number (or some alternative) beyond school needs to be reviewed, not only in relation to the Dearing recommendation, but also in the light of developments in post 16 education and training policy as a whole.

The contribution of a unique student record number to the creation of a framework of data on lifelong learning (the real aim of the Dearing recommendation rather than the unique student record number in itself) would however take a great many years to materialise, because the number could be used only to reference learning episodes occurring from that point on. As an interim measure, we are therefore carrying out a technical evaluation of the possibility of accumulating data on individuals' learning experience by means of so-called "fuzzy matching" based on (for example) names and dates of birth. This approach too has its limits, given the increasing incidence of name changes with age. The aim in the first instance is to cover learning up to age 21, with a view subsequently to extending that up to age 25.

Careers Advice

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what advice he has circulated to local authorities and contractors about the relative priority in careers advice to be given to young people studying for qualifications (a) at Level 3, (b) at Level 2 and (c) at or below Foundation Level. [97486]

Mr. Wicks: Careers services are required by contract to ensure that all young people get the careers information and guidance at whatever level they study. They must do this in close partnership with schools and colleges in order to provide the right help at the right time for each individual student. The Secretary of State has asked careers services to focus their resources on those most at risk of dropping out or under-achieving, to ensure that they remain in learning after they have left school.

Nurses

Dr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what guidance Her Majesty's Government have given to universities which employ nurses on the relationship between pay awards for nurses employed by universities and those employed by the NHS; and if he will make a statement. [97671]

Mr. Wicks: Neither my Department nor the Higher Education Funding Council for England has issued guidance to higher education institutions on the pay of nurses. The terms and conditions of nurses employed by universities and colleges are matters for them as the employer.

Educational Exchanges

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the development of educational and youth international exchanges. [97484]

Mr. Wicks: The UK fully participates in European Union education programmes including SOCRATES and LEONARDO which enable exchange opportunities for teachers, lecturers, pupils, students and young people in vocational training. Both programmes have recently been renegotiated and expanded.

The European Commission has recently published proposals for a new youth programme to develop the exchange programmes currently funded under Youth for Europe and the European Voluntary Service for Young People.

The Government fund the Central Bureau for International Education and Training and the League for the Exchange of Commonwealth Teachers to organise educational exchanges. Both organisations are modernising their programmes in the light of the Green Paper, "Teachers: Meeting the Challenge of Change", which proposed a major new programme of international development opportunities for teachers. Pilots of the new programme are currently operating. We intend to announce plans for the new programmes next year.

National Academic Recognition and Information Centre

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the (a) current operations and (b) use made of the National Academic Recognition and Information Centre. [97487]

Mr. Wicks: The UK National Academic Recognition and Information Centre (NARIC) is one of a number of such centres established under the SOCRATES EC education programme. It also forms part of a wider group of European Centres established through the Council of Europe. Both these networks promote the mobility of students by providing them and institutions with information and advice on the comparability of academic qualifications from other countries: UK NARIC handle over 26,500 such inquiries per year. The UK NARIC's responsibilities also include researching and evaluating foreign qualifications, compiling a newsletter to universities and colleges and others, and organising and participating in meetings, seminars and conferences to disseminate information.

Tuition Fees

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the current net yield of tuition fees at higher education institutions in England. [97656]

Mr. Wicks: Figures for the current net yield of tuition fees at the higher education institutions in England are not yet available.

The higher education funding plans assumed that institutions in England will receive private income from home and EU students starting full-time undergraduate courses for 1998–99 as follows: £130 million in 1998–99; an extra £105 million in 1999–2000; and, compared with 1998–99, an extra £203 million in 2000–01. Over this period, the higher education sector will retain all the income from student contributions to fees and receive extra public funding on top. Figures for 2001–02 will be announced later.

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what arrangements his Department has made to ensure that higher education institutions do not breach the prohibition on top-up fees. [97657]

Mr. Wicks: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has imposed a condition on the grant to the Higher Education Funding Council for England (HEFCE) for 1999–2000 under section 26(4) of the Teaching and Higher Education Act 1998. Any institution which charges, or announces its intention to charge, top-up fees to students who have been assessed as eligible to be considered for fee support could incur financial penalties. With the assistance of HEFCE, the Department has been monitoring the charges made by individual institutions to ensure that top-up fees are not levied.

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many students are wholly or partly exempted from paying tuition fees; what proportion that represents of the student body; and what is the range of that proportion between the various higher education institutions. [97655]

Mr. Wicks: The first data on local education authority financial support, for the student tuition fees introduced in 1998–99, will be available in April 2000, from returns collected retrospectively from local education authorities in England and Wales.

These data will show the number of locally-domiciled students who, are income assessment, have had their fees paid (i) in part; and (ii) in full by their local education authority, and the number of students who paid their own tuition fees in full. It will not be possible to identify payments made to individual institutions from these data.

Student Support (Fraud)

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on measures designed to curtail fraud in the student support system. [97489]

Mr. Wicks: There are a number of well established measures to combat fraud in the student support system. All applications for higher education places submitted through the Universities and Colleges Admissions Services (UCAS) are scrutinised by HUNTER, a specialist computer system which checks for suspect applications. The UCAS Verification Unit—which received £50,000 in grant aid from my Department this year—investigates individual cases arousing suspicion. It also shares information with local education authorities (LEAs), which assess eligibility for support; the Student Loans Company (SLC), which is responsible for most payments; and higher education institutions, which confirm student attendance on their courses. The LEAs and SLC make their own complementary checks including scrutiny of supporting documentary evidence, and the SLC carries out its own investigations using the HUNTER system.

A-Levels

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what studies he has undertaken into the relative values of grades awarded at GCE A Level. [97490]

Mr. Wicks: No specific studies of the relative value of GCE A level grades have been carried out either by the Department or the Qualifications and Curriculum Authority. However, QCA regularly monitors A levels to ensure consistency in grading standards across different syllabuses, subjects and awarding bodies, and over time, as part of its normal evaluation programme.

TREASURY

Departmental Asset Sales

Mr. Maude: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish (a) a list of assets sold by his Department and their value, item by item, in each year from 1991–92 to 1998–99 and (b) an estimate of the value of asset sales planned to be made in the years 1999–2000 and 2000–01. [95092]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The information requested has been placed in the Library of the House.

Married Couple's Allowance

Mr. Alan Campbell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the cost of restoring the married couple's allowance to the pre-1992 Budget level at today's prices. [96865]

Dawn Primarolo: In 1991–92 the married couple's allowance for couples under 65 was £1,720 and reduced the taxpayer's taxable income. If this allowance were increased in line with inflation to 1999–2000 and still given as a deduction from income, the cost would be around £4 billion. This estimate is based on the 1997–98 survey of personal incomes, projected to 1999–2000 consistent with the March 1999 Budget forecast.

Climate Change Levy

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he has assessed the impact on the UK brick industry of the climate change levy; and if he will make a statement. [96893]

Mr. Baldry: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the impact of the climate change levy on the (a) food processing and manufacturing industry, (b) chemical industry and (c) aluminium industry. [96958]

Mr. Timms: It is not possible to say at this stage what the effect of the climate change levy will be on individual industries. That will depend on the final design of the levy, including the rates set for the energy intensive sectors covered by the current negotiations with the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions.

Mr. Baldry: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer for what reasons electrolysis of aluminium is to be excluded from the climate change levy. [96965]

Mr. Timms: The exemption for electricity used for electrolysis in certain applications including primary smelting of aluminium, announced by the former Economic Secretary, my hon. Friend the Member for Leicester, West (Ms Hewitt), is designed to mirror the exemption for gas and coal used in chemical reactions.

Excise Duty (Beer)

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent discussions he has had with EU member states and the Commission regarding the harmonisation of excise duty on beer. [97543]

Mr. Timms: None.

Energy Discounts

Mr. Brake: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what research has been conducted into the impact on less energy-intensive firms and sectors of granting significant discounts to energy-intensive operations; and how this has affected the levels and extent of such discounts. [97379]

Mr. Timms: The Government aim to design the climate change levy in a way which maximises environmental effectiveness while safeguarding competitiveness. The Government have received a number of representations about the effects of the climate change levy and the rates that might apply to different sectors, which we will be considering carefully when finalising the design of the levy. The Chancellor has indicated that he intends to say more about the design of the climate change levy in the 9 November Pre-Budget Report.

CABINET OFFICE

Departmental Asset Sales

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office if she will list the assets sold by her Department and their value, item by item, in each year from 1991–92 to 1998–99; and if she will estimate the value of asset sales planned to be made in 1999–00 and 2000–01. [96900]

Marjorie Mowlam: I refer the hon. Member to the answer the Prime Minister gave to the hon. Member for Gordon (Mr. Bruce) on 22 February 1999, Official Report, columns 39–40. In addition, the following information is also available for:

	Item sold	Year of sale	Sale proceeds (£000)
Cabinet Office	Government Buildings, Leatherhead Road, Chessington	1997–98	13,670
	Crown Buildings, Alencon Link, Basingstoke	1999–2000	1,300
Civil Service College	Parcel of land—Sunningdale Park, Ascot	1997–98	22
Central Computer and Telecommunications Agency	Metropolitan Telephone Service related assets	1996–97	[1]4,000

[1] Assets were transferred as part of a deal under the Private Finance Initiative, payment for the assets will be made over a period of 10 years from the date of sale.

Departmental Accounts

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what methods of depreciation her Department will apply in the current financial year to fixed assets in the preparation of departmental resource accounting balance sheets. [97041]

Marjorie Mowlam: In the preparation of the 1999–2000 Cabinet Office resource account, depreciation will be provided on a straight line basis calculated to write off the valuation of fixed assets over their estimated useful lives. The method of depreciation is in accordance with the Treasury's Resource Accounting Manual, the requirements of which are underpinned by Financial Reporting Standard 15 'Tangible Fixed Assets', issued by the Accounting Standards Board.

Severance Pay

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what is the current entitlement to severance pay for Secretaries of State who have resigned; and what was the amount spent on such severance pay in the last 12 months, broken down by ministry. [97390]

Marjorie Mowlam: Under the terms of section 4 of the Ministerial and other Pensions and Salaries Act 1991, Ministers are entitled to receive a severance payment of one quarter of their final annual ministerial salary when they leave office. This applies as long as the individual is under the age of 65 and is not appointed to another relevant Ministerial or other paid office within three weeks of their leaving office. The Prime Minister and the Lord Chancellor are not included in this scheme.

The amounts spent on Ministerial severance pay by each department since 27 October 1998 are as follows:

Department	Amount (£)
Agriculture, Fisheries and Food	13,907.75
Cabinet Office	11,787.25
Culture, Media and Sport	6,329.75
Defence	25,991.75

Department	Amount (£)
Education and Employment	6,329.75
Environment, Transport and the Regions	12,659.50
Foreign and Commonwealth Office	8,339.75
Health	11,787.25
HM Treasury	11,208
Trade and Industry	11,300.25
Office of the Secretary of State for Scotland	20,237.50
Welsh Office	17,630
Total	157,508.50

HEALTH

Health Services (Merseyside and Sefton)

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to reduce health inequalities (a) on Merseyside and (b) in Sefton. [94651]

Yvette Cooper: The Merseyside Health Action Zone is already developing and implementing plans to reduce health inequalities across the whole of Merseyside, including Sefton.

Health Action Zones are the main plank of the Government's strategy to reduce health inequalities by targeting resources at areas which have greatest health needs related to poverty and social exclusion. Extra resources are being made available to the Merseyside HAZ partnership to tackle this agenda.

The Merseyside HAZ programme is designed to integrate with other Government initiatives to tackle social exclusion by focusing on marginalised and hard to reach groups. Major themes include employment and Merseyside wide healthy schools initiatives. In its first year the HAZ will fund work to assess the 'Health Impact' of the Merseyside Transport Plan and local Housing Investment Programmes.

During 1999–2000 the HAZ is to make £1.6 million available as a match against European Objective 1 Urban Moneys, supporting regeneration initiatives in some of the most deprived areas of Merseyside.

Blood

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what is the number of cord blood units held in each of the cord blood banks in the UK; [94420]

(2) what is the target for the number of units of cord blood to be held by each cord blood bank; what progress is being made towards achieving the target; [94422]

(3) what is the present level of stocks held by the cord blood service at Edgware; and if he will make a statement. [94820]

Mr. Denham: The actual and target number of units of cord blood held in each of the National Blood Service banks is:

Bank	Donations	Targets
London	3,159	10,000
Newcastle	500	1,000
Bristol	749	1,500
Total	4,408	12,500

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the percentage of cord blood stocks held at each cord blood bank, broken down by ethnic group. [94419]

Mr. Denham: The percentage of cord blood stocks by ethnic group held by the National Blood Service is as follows:

European Caucasoid—67 per cent.
Non-European Caucasoid—21 per cent.
African and Afro-Caribbean—9 per cent.
Oriental—1.5 per cent.
Others—1.5 per cent.

The majority of non-caucasoid donations are stored at the London cord blood bank based in Edgware.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Health over the last three years, to which countries overseas cord blood has been made available from the UK. [94418]

Mr. Denham: Over the last three years, cord blood donations have been made available by the National Blood Service in England to Australia, Hong Kong, France, Spain, United States of America, Italy and Portugal.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many children in each of the last three years received cord blood donation; for what conditions; and with what survival rate. [94417]

Mr. Denham: Since 1996, six children have received cord blood transplants in the United Kingdom. One cord blood unit was supplied from the Newcastle Cord Blood Bank, three from the United States of America, one from Italy, and one from Germany. Five out of the six units were provided for malignant diseases, of which 4 were for acute lymphoblastic leukaemia and one for myeloproliferative disease. One transplant was for a genetic disorder, Falconi's anaemia.

Of the five children who received transplants for malignant disease, two died of infection, and one has relapsed. The fourth is too early to assess, but the fifth is doing well one year after transplantation. The patient with Falconi's anaemia is also doing well 11 months after the transplant.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what funding has been made available for each of the last three years, for the development of cord blood transplantation services (a) throughout the UK and (b) at Edgware. [94416]

Mr. Denham: Approximately £4 million has been spent by the National Blood Service on the development of cord blood banking in England. Approximately £3.5 million of this investment has been in the London cord blood bank.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the Government's strategy towards developing cord blood transplantation services. [94421]

Mr. Denham: The use of cord blood in the treatment of various diseases in children, including leukaemia, is a new development. This high technology treatment raises questions about clinical benefits, bioethics and availability within the National Health Service. We have therefore asked the four UK blood services to address these issues and to make joint recommendations for the future collection and storage of cord blood in the UK. We are currently considering their report.

Bone Marrow Donor

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the percentage broken down by ethnic group of bone marrow donors. [94423]

Mr. Denham: There are two bone marrow donor registers: the British Bone Marrow Register and The Anthony Nolan Bone Marrow Trust. Both are working actively to encourage donor recruitment from black and ethnic minority groups through publicity campaigns. The Anthony Nolan Bone Marrow Trust has around 300,000 donors on its register and holds a breakdown of the percentage of donors by ethnic groups on its register which is shown in the table. The British Bone Marrow Register (BBMR) holds 100,000 donors but does not hold a similar breakdown by ethnic groups.

Donor figures: ethnic minority groups on the Anthony Nolan register as of 30 September 1999 (by percentage)

Water Fluoridation

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the EU countries which fluoridise their water supplies; and if he will make a statement. [94687]

Yvette Cooper: Within the European Union, there are water fluoridation schemes where natural fluoride content has been artificially adjusted up to the optimum level of 1 part per million in the United Kingdom, the Republic of Ireland and Spain.

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the (a) scientific and (b) laboratory studies which provide evidence that fluoridation of water supplies reduces tooth decay in humans. [94688]

Yvette Cooper: The evidence for the safety and efficacy of fluoridation of water supplies is to be found in the very extensive, relevant published scientific literature. Recent reviews, which contain lists or references, include:

WHO Technical Report Series 846: Fluorides and oral health (World Health Organisation, Geneva, 1994). ISBN 92 4 120846 5;

One in a Million: water fluoridation and dental public health (Public Health Alliance and British Fluoridation Society, 1995). ISBN 1 873514 11 5;

Review of Fluoride Benefits and Risks (Report of the Ad Hoc Subcommittee on fluoride of the committee to co-ordinate environmental health and related programs. Public Health Service. Department of Health and Social Services, USA. February 1991).

We have commissioned a review which is being undertaken by the University of York Centre for Reviews and Dissemination to assess the evidence on the efficacy and safety of population wide drinking water fluoridation strategies to prevent caries.

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 16 July 1999, Official Report, column 361, on water fluoridation, how he will measure the significant risks referred to; and what proposals his Department has to monitor such risks post-fluoridation. [93916]

Yvette Cooper: The review will assess the scientific evidence from which it has been widely accepted that the fluoridation of water at one part per million is a safe and effective means of reducing tooth decay. We cannot pre-judge its outcome, but if significant risks were identified we would need to review our policy before any further fluoridation schemes were considered.

Oncologists

Miss Kirkbride: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many clinical and medical oncologists there are in each EU country; and if he will make a statement. [94193]

Yvette Cooper: Information about the number of clinical and medical oncologists in each European Union country is not available centrally. Information about the number of clinical and medical oncologists in Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland are matters for my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Wales, for Scotland and for Northern Ireland. The latest available information about the number of clinical and medical oncologists in England is shown in the table.

Departmental Publications

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list his Department's spending on official publications since May 1997. [93686]

Yvette Cooper: The information requested is not available centrally and can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Contaminated Polio Vaccine

Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 21 July 1999, Official Report, column 548, what assessment he has made of the implications of contamination of polio vaccine in the United Kingdom with simian virus 40 between 1955 and 1963, for the development of cancers in humans. [93663]

Yvette Cooper: SV40 (simian vacuolating virus 40) is a virus found in some species of monkeys. The polio virus in inactivated polio vaccine (IPV) used in the 1950s and early 1960s was grown on monkey kidneys, some of which have been shown to be potentially contaminated with SV40 virus. Concern about the possible impact of SV40 on the human population was raised in the early 1960s and precautions to prevent contamination were introduced internationally in 1962, shortly after the virus was identified. SV40 has been shown to be oncogenic in certain animals and has been found in several human tumours. It is not known whether SV40 causes the human tumours or whether it is just coincidentally present in the tumours. However, research studies in people who received potentially SV40 contaminated IPV have found no increase in cancers when compared with people who did not receive potentially contaminated IPV.

The National Institute of Biological Standards and Control (NIBSC) has tested stored polio vaccine using the most sensitive available modern molecular biological techniques to check whether the precautions introduced in the 1960s were effective. All the polio vaccines used since 1980 have been shown to be free of SV40 and all vaccines used since 1962 for which samples could be located are also free. Samples of IPV from the 1950s to the 1960s were not available. Serological studies have been conducted with the Public Health Laboratory Service which showed no evidence of increased antibody to SV40 in people receiving polio vaccine. In all ages of the people tested, about 5 per cent. had SV40 virus antibodies, suggesting that the virus may have been present in humans for a very long time and hence these antibodies are unlikely to have come from SV40 contaminated polio vaccine.

This issue has been considered by the Joint Committee on Vaccination and Immunisation, the Government's independent expert advisory committee, which has expressed reassurance as a result of the NIBSC work. NIBSC's study has been published (Biologicals (1999), vol. 27, pps 1–10) copies of which are available in the Library.

National Cancer Forum

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the National Cancer Forum has met; at each meeting what new best practice and joint working projects were established; and if he will make a statement. [94065]

Yvette Cooper: The National Cancer Forum (NCF) was established to support the implementation of the Calman/Hine cancer blueprint and to advise on specialised issues related to cancer. The Forum has met three times on 19 February 1998, 16 September 1998 and on 25 October 1999 at which I discussed the Government's priorities for cancer. The NCF has identified the need to secure quality and consistency in cancer services through ongoing implementation of Calman/Hine, the development of national standards and performance indicators and the publication of evidence-based guidance as key priorities. Members of the NCF have been working with the Department to take specific pieces of work forward. A number of NCF members were present at the Downing Street cancer summit held in May 1999 where these priorities were ratified and a work programme and action plan agreed. In view of the new agenda set for cancer it will be necessary to reconstitute the NCF to address a revised work programme.

Cloning

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement regarding the required qualifications and experience for membership of the Chief Medical Officer's expert advisory group on the HFEA/HGAG recommendations on cloning. [93879]

Yvette Cooper: Individuals were invited to serve on the expert group in the light of their personal expertise in appropriate areas of science and medicine including genetics, cell biology, reproductive biology, veterinary medicine, haematology, surgery and molecular biology. Three additional members were appointed for their expertise in ethics and law.

Microwave Transmissions

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what studies his Department has commissioned into the non-thermal effects of microwave transmissions associated with (a) telecommunication masts, (b) mobile telephones and (c) cordless telephones; and if he will make a statement. [93913]

Yvette Cooper: The Department's Radiation Protection Research Programme has funded a study of the effect of mobile phone frequency radiation (microwaves) on memory and reaction times in humans. The work was carried out at Bristol University and the results were published on 8 April in the International Journal of Radiation Biology. A further study on the effects of radiofrequency radiation on behaviour patterns is being carried out at Chemical and Biological Defence Porton Down. This work is not yet complete.

In addition, the National Radiological Protection Board, which is sponsored by the Department, is carrying out biological investigations into possible behavioural effects of mobile phone radiation.

Bovine Tuberculosis

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research the Government have

(a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into any correlation between cattle-associated occupations and bovine tuberculosis in people; and if the recent increase in bovine tuberculosis in cattle has caused an increase in bovine tuberculosis in the local human population. [94537]

Yvette Cooper: There is no evidence at present that the increase in bovine tuberculosis in cattle has led to an increase in bovine tuberculosis in the local human population.

The number of isolates of M.bovis from human cases of bovine tuberculosis in England and Wales has varied from 22 to 37 per year between 1993 and 1998 with no trend to increase or decrease. The numbers of cases arising in those regions of England and Wales with the greatest increase in bovine tuberculosis in cattle (South West, Wales and West Midlands) have remained low and have also varied from year to year with no increasing or decreasing trend.

If the risk of tuberculosis due to M.bovis infection was increasing in the population generally as a result of bovine tuberculosis in cattle, an increase in tuberculosis notifications in young children (the group least likely to have other explanations for tuberculous infection) might be expected in the part of the country most affected by bovine tuberculosis. The number of cases of tuberculosis notified in children (less than 15 years of age) in the South West Region has remained low between 1993 and 1998. At the request of the Department of Health, the Public Health Laboratory Service has looked at existing data to investigate whether there is a correlation between cattle-associated occupations and bovine tuberculosis. The Department has not commissioned additional research.

Meningitis Vaccine

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many students who had requested meningitis vaccine had not received it before returning to college this autumn; and what action is being taken to make it available to them as quickly as practicable. [94722]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 19 October 1999]: Meningococcal A + C vaccine was recommended for higher education students starting their first year at university or college. It was recommended that first year students receive the vaccine either before the start of term or when they begin at university/college. Around 550,000 doses of meningococcal A & C vaccine were issued from the end of August, throughout September and into October. This quantity is well in excess of the target population.

The Department wrote direct to all universities and colleges asking them to ensure that arrangements were in place for the vaccine to be offered to all first year students who had not been immunised. The Department also contacted direct those health centres and general practitioner practices which serve universities and colleges to see how best the vaccine could be delivered to them. The Health Education Authority sent packs of information, including special leaflets, to all universities and colleges so that they could target those first year students who had not been immunised. Publicity was also provided through student-focused media. Local implementation of the immunisation programme is managed by the local immunisation co-ordinator.

Equal Opportunities

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if an action plan for increasing the representation of women in public life has been (a) prepared by his Department and (b) published since November 1998. [94849]

Yvette Cooper: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Minister for the Cabinet Office on 25 October 1999, Official Report, column 682.

Waiting Lists

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the numbers of patients who left the NHS waiting list for acute surgery because they opted to pay for an operation using private funds in each of the last three years. [95332]

Yvette Cooper: The Information requested is not available centrally.

Fertility Treatment

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the issuing of national guidance for fertility treatment available on the NHS. [95165]

Yvette Cooper: The Royal College of Obstetricians and Gynaecologists intend to publish their third, and final, set of evidence based clinical guidelines on infertility in January 2000.

Pathology Services

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has for further allocation of resources to improve pathology services from the modernisation fund. [95708]

Mr. Denham: Ministers are considering the allocation process and amounts for future years. An announcement about 2000–2001 will be made in due course.

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the process and what criteria are used to determine successful bids for resources to improve pathology services under the modernisation fund. [95694]

Mr. Denham: The process and criteria for the 1999–2000 Pathology Modernisation Fund are set out in Health Service Circular 1999–170. The criteria for judging the probity of bids for capital investment purposes were taken from the NHS Executive guidance issued in accordance with the Capital Investment Manual.

MRSA

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the total number of recorded MRSA patients in NHS hospitals in each of the last five years; how many and what proportion of NHS hospitals recorded MRSA outbreaks; and how many and what proportion of NHS hospitals have full-time staff dedicated to the prevention and control of MRSA and related infections. [95661]

Yvette Cooper: MRSA infection is not a notifiable disease and therefore the total number of patients in National Health Service hospitals who have MRSA is not recorded centrally. The Public Health Laboratory Service compiles aggregate data on numbers of incidents of MRSA which are reported by trusts. The available data on the incidents of MRSA are given in the table. The number of NHS acute trusts recording MRSA outbreaks are not collected centrally. All NHS acute trusts should have an infection control team which has primary responsibility for, and reports to the chief executive on, all aspects of surveillance, prevention and control of infection, including MRSA. The structure of infection control teams is a matter for local management discretion. Details of the number of whole time equivalent staff dedicated to the prevention and control of MRSA and related infections are not available centrally.

Public Health White Paper

Mr. Hesford: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans the Government have for the implementation of the proposals contained in the Public Health White Paper. [95706]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 25 October 1999]: We are working across Government and at regional and local levels to implement the wide range of initiatives in the White Paper "Saving Lives: Our Healthier Nation" published on 6 July 1999. We are committed to the achievement of the targets for reducing deaths in the priority areas of cancer, coronary heart disease and stroke, accidents and mental illness and to the establishment of local targets for reducing health inequalities.

With the White Paper, we issued a circular to health authorities and local authorities setting out the follow-up action they should take together. We shall be publishing at the end of the year a technical supplement which will identify key data sources and aid the local selection and monitoring of targets.

Cancer Diagnosis

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent discussions have taken place between his Department and representatives of general practitioners regarding guidelines on the levels of clinical suspicion in cancer diagnosis; and when those discussions took place. [95112]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 25 October 1999]: In May 1999, the Department brought together a Cancer Referral Steering Group, including cancer specialists and general practitioners, including representatives from the Royal College of General Practitioners to lead work to develop cancer referral guidelines to help general practitioners identify more easily those patients with symptoms that could be cancer and require urgent investigation. There will be wide ranging consultation on the draft guidelines, nationally and locally, in which GPs and others will be invited to take part.

Heart Disease

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to encourage employers to provide low-fat meals for employees in order to reduce heart disease. [94931]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 25 October 1999]: We have funded, through our food and nutrition contract with the Health Education Authority, a variety of projects aimed at providing healthy eating choices in the workplace. The Heartbeat Award for example, encourages workplace caterers to work with local health professionals to help reduce the incidence of coronary heart disease by providing people with access to healthier food choices. Furthermore, in July this year, a video resource called "Tipping the Balance" was launched to show workplace caterers how they can make small but significant changes to their customers' favourite dishes without affecting their popularity. We are also funding a workplace catering pack, which is currently being redeveloped and will become available after pre testing in spring next year. The aim of these measures is to improve the balance of the ingredients used in dishes, and to encourage people to eat less fat and more cereals, fruit and vegetables.

Mobile Telephones

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects that the working party set up to assess the state of research into the health implications of mobile telephone usage will report; and if he will make a statement. [95720]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 26 October 1999]: The Independent Expert Group on Mobile Phones, chaired by Sir William Stewart FRS, FRSE, is expected to report in spring 2000. The group is currently considering the possible health effects from the use of mobile phones, base stations and transmitters and is conducting a rigorous assessment of existing research. A call for evidence has recently been placed in national newspapers and scientific journals.

Human Infant Organs

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what inquiries he is making into the retention of human infant organs by Alder Hey Hospital. [96255]

Yvette Cooper: In view of the concerns raised about the removal and retention of organs (at post-mortem), I have asked the Chief Medical Officer to conduct an investigation. This investigation will look at what has happened not only at the Royal Liverpool Children's Hospital (Alder Hey) but in the country generally and at the implications for the National Health Service. Any recommendations relating to Coronial practice emerging from the Chief Medical Officer's investigation, the Bristol Inquiry, or other local reviews will receive full consideration.

Nurse Recruitment

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many new nurses have been recruited during each of the past five years; what is the target of new nursing recruits for the next 12 months; what initiatives are being pursued to attract more young people into nursing; and what is the cost of these initiatives. [96251]

Mr. Denham: The number of pre-registration diploma and degree recruits into nursing and midwifery training in England over the last five years are:

Year	Number
1994–95	11,463
1995–96	12,364
1996–97	13,967
1997–98	15,522

The latest estimate of outturn for 1998–99 is 17,221.

The number of pre-registration diploma and degree nursing and midwifery recruits planned for 1999–2000 is 19,332.

We are supporting a number of initiatives to attract more people into nursing, including a national competition run in secondary schools (£100,000), the national nurse recruitment campaign (£5 million), NHS Careers (£500,000), widening access to nurse training and the Positively Diverse initiative. In addition, the Government have implemented in full the Nurse Pay Review Body recommendations for a 12 percent. pay rise for newly qualified staff.

Nut Allergies

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what action his Department has taken and what plans he has to ensure children from atopic families avoid early sensitisation to nut products and that parents and carers are aware of the risk of sensitisation; [96442]

(2) what information his Department issues concerning anaphylaxis and contact between young children and nut products. [96439]

Yvette Cooper: The Department of Health asked the Committee on Toxicity of Chemicals in Food, Consumer Products and the Environment (COT), an advisory committee comprised of independent experts, to make recommendations to help reduce the prevalence of peanut allergy. The report was published in June 1998 and includes advice to parents of children from atopic families and pregnant mothers from atopic families about sensitisation to peanut products. Copies are available in the Library. In addition, a leaflet "Peanut Allergy—the Facts" which summarises the Committee's advice was sent to all GP surgeries in England. Copies of it are also available in the Library.

Medical Treatment

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what response he has made to the British Medical Association Guidelines and Code of Practice on Advance Statements about Medical Treatment; and if he will make a statement. [96517]

Yvette Cooper: We have considered these Guidelines and Code of Practice carefully. They aim to promote clarity in the area of advance statements to enable their validity and applicability to be decided on a case by case basis.

Clinical Priority

Sir Peter Emery: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures he will take to ensure that access to hospital treatment is based on clinical priority. [96648]

Mr. Denham: We have made it clear that clinical priority must be the main determinant for when patients are seen in outpatient clinics or when they are admitted to hospital.

Disabled Children

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many children were excluded from (a) local council and (b) other leisure and play schemes on the grounds of medical conditions which are not classed as disabilities in each of the last five years. [96443]

Ms Hodge: I have been asked to reply.

The information required is not collected centrally.

Cancer Services

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will list his Department's expenditure on cancer services for the last five years; [96239]

(2) how much extra money he plans to allocate to cancer services; and if this will be provided solely from general taxation; [96241]

(3) what plans he has to increase the extent of service provision for multi-disciplinary care for (a) breast, (b) ovarian, (c) lung, (d) prostate and (e) colorectal cancers throughout the UK. [96240]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 29 October 1999]: It is estimated that over 6 per cent. of total Government expenditure on the National Health Service is spent on cancer services. Since 1997, we have provided an additional £70 million into improving breast, colorectal, lung and outpatient cancer services. We will build on this record of achievement. An extra £80 million from the NHS modernisation fund will be invested in cancer services over the next two years. This will support the implementation of the two week outpatient wait for all urgent cancer referrals and work to further improve consistency and equity of access to cancer services through investment in workforce and equipment.

£93 million is being spent on cancer equipment from the New Opportunities Fund from the National Lottery and a further £23 million is also being set aside from the New Opportunities Fund for palliative care and prevention initiatives.

Professor Mike Richards will spearhead the drive on cancer within the Department and work with professional groups and the voluntary sector outside to modernise cancer services from prevention through to treatment and care.

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the remit of Professor Michael Richards in relation to Government policy on cancer treatment; and to whom he reports. [96238]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 29 October 1999]: On 25 October, we announced a package of measures to up the pace of change and deliver faster and more wide ranging improvement to cancer services. This included, for the first time, the appointment of a National Cancer Director. Reporting to Ministers, Professor Mike Richards will spearhead our concerted drive on cancer. He will work in partnership with doctors, nurses, general practitioners, other health professionals and the voluntary sector to improve prevention and modernise cancer services to help ensure equitable access to high quality cancer care. He will work within the Department of Health with executive responsibility.

Smoking

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to publish the figures on the incidence of smoking between 1996 and 1998. [96646]

Yvette Cooper: Figures on adult smoking prevalence in 1996 were published in "Living in Britain—results from the 1996 General Household Survey", in March 1998. Key figures from the 1998 General Household Survey, including smoking prevalence among adults aged 16 and over, are due to be published on 1 December 1999 by the Office for National Statistics.

Figures on regular smoking by young people aged 11 to 15 years in England in 1998 were published by ONS on 14 October 1999 in "Smoking, drinking and drug use among young teenagers in 1998". This report also contained data from earlier surveys in the series, including the survey carried out in 1996.

Copies of these reports are available in the Library.

CJD

Mr. Jim Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions he has had with his Scottish counterparts about CJD victims. [96627]

Yvette Cooper: None. We remain committed to ensuring that all patients who are suffering from CJD are provided with appropriate and timely health and social care.

Performance Targets

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list all performance targets set for his Department, agencies and non-departmental public bodies since May 1997, other than those listed in Public Service Agreements 1999–2002 [Cm 4181], stating in each case (a) the target to be reached and (b) the date by which it was to be reached. [94986]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 1 November 1999]: The Department has set out the key performance targets on which it will be judged in its PSA, and the measures of success it will use in the Output and Performance Analyses published in March this year. A full list of the targets and target dates for Agencies can be found annually in the "Next Steps Report", and for executive NDPBs in the "Executive Non-Departmental Public Bodies Report", or in the appropriate annual report and accounts. The Departmental Annual Report contains further details of the Department's objectives and targets.

These high-level targets are supported at operational level by numerous targets to ensure delivery by individual units. Listing these operational targets would be inappropriate and disproportionate in terms of resources.

Tube Feeding

Mr. Hilary Benn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if his Department will issue guidance on the withholding or withdrawal of tube feeding and hydration from patients who are not terminally ill, following the BMA's own guidance on this issue. [97251]

Ms Stuart: We have no plans to publish specific guidance on withholding or withdrawing medical treatment from patients.

NHS Hearing Tests (Worthing)

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the action he proposes to take to cut the delays in providing NHS hearing tests to the over-85s in Worthing; and what the average delay is in non-emergency cases. [97222]

Mr. Hutton: Worthing and Southlands Hospitals National Health Service Trust has recently reviewed the skill mix within the Audiology Department to enable increased clinic availability and have recruited two additional qualified audiologists.

These measures, plus £6,000 of additional funding, will enable the Trust to operate weekend clinics and bring down waiting times for all patients.

Long-term Care

Mrs. Shephard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many copies of the report of the Centre for Policy on Aging Standards for Care Homes he has made available to consultees; and if he will make a statement. [97155]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 4 November 1999]: 5,000 copies of the Department's consultation document "Fit for the Future?" were printed. About 1,500 were sent to a wide range of organisations and individuals, representing users, carers, regulators and providers and other interested bodies, for consultation nationally. The others were available for anyone who wished to have a copy. I understand that about 600 copies are still in stock. "Fit for the Future?" is available on the internet to anyone who wishes to see it.

We will carefully consider all the comments we receive before finalising the standards and the timetable for their implementation.

School Nurses

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on his plans for the School Nursing Service. [97437]

Mr. Hutton: School nurses are often ideally placed to help children, young people and their parents find the support and services they need to make the most of their time at school. This role is more fully described in "Saving Lives—Our Healthier Nation" and "Making a Difference: strengthening the nursing, midwifery and health visiting contribution to health and health care"—copies are available in the Library.

Correspondence

Mr. Arbuthnot: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will give a substantive reply to the letter from the right hon. Member for North-East Hampshire dated 5 July regarding the outcome of his Department's review of direct payments for care. [97292]

Mr. Hutton: I replied to the right hon. Member on 3 November.

Student Grants (Nurses)

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on delays in the payment of grants to student nurses. [97492]

Mr. Denham: We accept that there have been delays in the payment of bursaries to some National Health Service funded student nurses and are aware that a minority of students have not yet received bursaries to which they are entitled.

Around 24,000 bursary applications have now been processed and all students who are entitled will have received a payment by 10 November.

Generic Drugs

Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the (a) actual and (b) percentage increase in the price of generic drugs to the NHS over the last 12 months. [97293]

Mr. Denham: An index of Drug Tariff prices for the top 100 generic drugs dispensed in 1998 (by net ingredient cost) for this year is as follows:

Month	Index
January	100.0
April	103.4
May	106.5
June	112.0
July	117.0
August	124.4
September	126.2
October	130.7
November	132.9

It has been possible to provide only 11 months' data.

Thyroxin

Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the change in the drug tariff to the NHS for 1,000 thyroxin 100 mcg in actual and percentage terms between November 1998 and November 1999. [97291]

Mr. Denham: The price in the November 1998 Drug Tariff for a 1,000 pack of thyroxine 100 microgramme tablets was £8.85; the November 1999 Drug Tariff price was £60.16. This is an increase of £51.31 or 580 per cent.

Prostate Cancer

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans his Department has to reduce deaths from prostate cancer. [97669]

Ms Stuart: The White Paper "Saving Lives—Our Healthier Nation"—published in July—proposed a target to reduce the death rate from cancer in those under 75 by 20 per cent. by 2010. The Government encourage early detection of prostate cancer and have already announced that, by December 2000, all urgent general practitioner referrals of suspected cases should be seen by a consultant within two weeks of referral. The National Institute for Clinical Excellence will commission outcomes guidance on prostate cancer within the next two years.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Milk Prices

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what financial help he is giving to dairy farmers to compensate for the low price of milk; and if he will make a statement. [96608]

Ms Quin [holding answer 1 November 1999]: The EU dairy regime provides substantial support to UK dairy farmers but EU rules do not allow member states to provide support to compensate for the low price of milk. However, as part of the aid package announced by my right hon. Friend the Minister on 20 September, the deferral of the proposed £7 per animal cattle passport charges until April 2002, at the earliest, will help dairy farmers.

Quarantine

Mr. Amess: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food which recommendations of the Kennedy report on quarantine the Government have not accepted. [97051]

Ms Quin: The Pet Travel Scheme pilot is essentially the scheme recommended by Professor Kennedy, except that cats and dogs originating in rabies-free islands (other than assistance dogs from Australasia) will only be allowed to enter the UK once the full scheme is in operation.

The Advisory Committee on Dangerous Pathogens considered Professor Kennedy's recommendations on exotic diseases other than rabies. The Committee agreed that treatment should be given to all imported pet cats and dogs for a tapeworm (Echinococcus multilocularis) and ticks. The ACDP advised that treatment be given not less than 24 hours and not more than 48 hours before embarkation to the UK. Professor Kennedy recommended that treatment be given no more than 24 hours before embarkation. This would represent a modification of Professor Kennedy's Recommendations 1, 2, 35 and 36.

As regards microchips, animals will be allowed to enter the UK with any microchip fitted. Where a microchip is fitted that does not comply with the ISO standards recommended by Professor Kennedy, the owner of the animal will have to provide a reader. Thus Recommendations 11 and 22 have been accepted but with modification.

In the Pet Travel Scheme, authorised transport operators will carry out pre-entry checks on pets. Thus, Professor Kennedy's Recommendations 16–18 and 28 will be implemented in a different way from that proposed.

Professor Kennedy recommended that the Minister examine further the need for a database of health certificates (Recommendations 13 and 14). It has been concluded that a database is not necessary for the operation of the pilot scheme.

The recommendations that Professor Kennedy made in respect of species other than pet cats and dogs will be considered later (Recommendations 30 to 33 inclusive). Consideration of Recommendations 9 and 38 (research projects) will also be taken forward in due course.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what date has been selected for the operation of the pilot scheme of quarantine reform. [97052]

Ms Quin: An announcement will be made as soon as possible.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food which countries are currently deemed rabies-free by his Department in respect of quarantine regulations. [95636]

Ms Quin: The present quarantine regulations apply to animals from all countries entering the UK, except those from the Irish Republic, the Channel Islands and the Isle of Man.

By April 2000, the Pet Travel Scheme pilot scheme will be introduced. Eligibility will be confined to cats and dogs entering the UK from western European countries (including UK and Irish animals returning from these countries) that meet the Scheme conditions. Assistance dogs from Australia and New Zealand that meet the Scheme conditions will also be eligible.

Not all countries in western Europe are considered rabies free, but Professor Kennedy found that provided dogs and cats were microchipped, vaccinated and blood tested, the risk of importing rabies in animals from these countries was comparable to that under the existing policy of quarantine.

The Office International des Epizooties (OIE), the international veterinary organisation sets down criteria for countries to be regarded as rabies free, but it does not publish a list of those countries.

My Department is currently considering the status of other islands, whose authorities claim to meet the OIE criteria for rabies freedom, for participation in the full Pet Travel Scheme which will come into effect by April 2001. Australia and New Zealand are known to meet these criteria.

Hill Livestock Compensatory Allowance

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he will publish his proposals for the future of the hill livestock compensatory allowance scheme. [96920]

Ms Quin: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to my hon. Friend for Waveney (Mr. Blizzard) on 29 October 1999, Official Report, column 1044.

Bovine TB

Mr. Paice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many (a) Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food officials and (b) external contractors were engaged in the execution of the bovine TB study area trials under Professor Bourne on (i) 1 October 1998, (ii) 1 January 1999, (iii) 1 June 1999 and (iv) 1 October 1999. [96066]

Ms Quin [holding answer 1 November 1999]: The trials are being carried out by the Ministry's Wildlife Unit. Wildlife Unit staff numbers were (i) 74, (ii) 75, (iii) 80 and (iv) 126.

The numbers of external contractors were (i) none, (ii) one, (iii) two and (iv) three.

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on progress in developing a vaccine against TB for (a) cattle and (b) badgers. [96193]

Ms Quin: The Government are funding expenditure of about £1.4 million a year on vaccine development. The main thrust of the programme in its first five-year phase is to identify vaccine candidates. The work is being carried out by the Veterinary Laboratories Agency and the Institute of Animal Health, drawing on work carried out internationally and in related fields, such as human vaccines, as appropriate. Emerging findings will be published as and when appropriate. At this stage the main development work could apply equally to both a cattle or a badger vaccine.

Common Agricultural Policy

Miss Geraldine Smith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps the Government are taking to reform the CAP. [95759]

Ms Quin: The Government pressed for a radical reform of the Common Agricultural Policy throughout the Agenda 2000 negotiations. While the final agreement reached at Berlin in March this year did not go as far as we would have liked, the reforms did achieve very significant changes, bringing closer the UK objective of securing a competitive and sustainable agricultural industry with a stronger market orientation.

We will pursue opportunities created by anticipated market pressures, the reviews contained within the Agenda 2000 agreement and the existing commitment to reform the sugar regime by 2001 to push for the reform process started at Berlin to be completed.

Cattle Movement Service

Mr. Todd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to review the British Cattle Movement Service; and if he will make a statement. [95455]

Ms Quin: The British Cattle Movement Service (BCMS) has been in operation for just over a year. A review of the current arrangements for administering it, and alternatives, would be premature. The BCMS has recently published a Standards of Service Statement against which its performance will be continually assessed.

Vitamin and Mineral Supplements

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on Government policy relating to consumer choice in the purchase of vitamin and mineral supplements. [95872]

Ms Quin [holding answer 25 October 1999]: Consumers are currently able to choose from a wide variety of vitamin and mineral supplements sold under food law. The Government have no plans to limit access to supplements that are lawfully sold under food law unless this is necessary for the protection of public health.

Pig Meat Imports

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food from which countries the UK imports pig meat and pig meat products; what steps he has taken to ensure that the standards of welfare and traceability are comparable to those in the UK; and if he will make a statement. [95719]

Ms Quin [holding answer 26 October 1999]: The major overseas suppliers of pigmeat and pigmeat products to the UK market are Denmark, the Netherlands, the Irish Republic, Germany and France. While we have no legal authority to impose British standards of welfare and traceability on those suppliers, my right hon. Friend the Minister will be meeting a number of retail groups to assess progress in their commitment given to him that all their own label fresh pork and certain processed products such as bacon would come from stall and tether and MBM free production systems.

Also, as part of the strategy to assist the pig production sector, a verification officer has been appointed. His remit is to work with industry bodies to identify cases where product is being sold at retail or catering level which misleads the consumer into believing it contains pork of British origin when in fact it is imported.

BSE Inquiry

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he expects the BSE inquiry report will be completed; and if the report will be made public. [95666]

Ms Quin [holding answer 26 October 1999]: My right hon. Friend the Minister announced on 25 May 1999, Official Report, columns 110–11, that the Inquiry had requested an extension of the time needed to complete their task and the Government had agreed that the Report should be delivered by 31 March 2000. I expect the Report to be delivered on that date. It will subsequently be published.

Food Imports

Mr. Hilary Benn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will estimate the total value of food products, imported into the United Kingdom in 1998 from countries outside the EU, which were produced to hygiene standards less stringent that those required of British farmers. [96265]

Ms Quin: Imports of food products from third countries must meet the same, or equivalent, standards of hygiene as food products produced in the European Union.

Meat Inspection

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what initiatives are being pursued by his Department to ensure that all EU member states implement the Community legislation on meat inspection to the same level. [96261]

Ms Quin: It is for the European Commission to ensure that member states fully implement European legislation, including meat inspection legislation. However, where we receive evidence that other member states are failing to comply with Community obligations, we will of course pass such evidence on to the Commission for investigation. In this connection, we have passed copies of our own survey of meat inspection charges in other member states, and of the recently published Meat and Livestock Commission (MLC) report on meat inspection charges and other enforcement costs to the Commission. In so doing, we have urged the Commission to carry out a thorough investigation of the way in which the EU Charges Directive has been implemented in other member states and of the level of inspection charges in each country. We are, in particular, pressing the Commission to investigate the allegations of subsidy in Italy and non-collection of charges in Spain outlined in the MLC report.

Nuts

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking to improve the labelling of produce containing (a) nuts and (b) nut oils. [96531]

Ms Quin: We have been pressing the European Commission to bring forward proposals to change EC food labelling legislation to make the labelling of nuts and nut products, and other substances recognised as causing hypersensitivity, compulsory in all cases when their presence is intentional. We will continue to press for action, and hope to see positive developments on this towards the end of the year.

In the meantime, we will continue to encourage the voluntary provision of such information on food labels where this is appropriate.

Shropshire Farmers

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much Government funding was given to Shropshire farmers in the last 12 months for which figures are available. [96476]

Ms Quin: Under the Common Agricultural Policy, a total of just over £43 million was paid to Shropshire farmers in 1997. This included both EU and nationally funded contributions. However, they will also have received a share of funding under market support measures, which benefit farming generally but which cannot be calculated at a county level.

French Animal Feed

Mrs. Shephard: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) on what date officials in his Department were informed that human and animal waste, and meat and bonemeal were being used in French animal feed; and if he will make a statement; [96016]

(2) on what date he was informed that human and animal waste, and meat and bonemeal were being used in French animal feed; and if he will make a statement. [96017]

Ms Quin [holding answer 28 October 1999]: A Reuters article, reported by several newspapers, alleging contamination of French animal feed with waste was seen by officials in my Department on 10 June 1999. Subsequent contact between the UK and the Commission was pursued by officials in the Joint Food Safety and Standards Group, the Department of Health and the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. MAFF officials also contacted their French counterparts and received assurances on 15 June that these were isolated incidents and remedial action had been taken.

Following new media reports on 16 August, the Commission then raised the issue with the French Government and initiated an investigation. At the same time, Ministers were advised by the Joint Food Safety and Standards Group that there was no immediate risk to health and no special action necessary.

Supermarket Prices

Mr. Dobbin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has for further discussions with supermarket chains on pricing policy; and what progress he has made. [96683]

Ms Quin: Pricing decisions in respect of produce at retail level are matters for the commercial judgment of the retailers involved. The Competition Commission are currently investigating competition in the grocery retailing sector which will include relationships with suppliers including farmers. However, some of the actions arising from the work of the Food Chain Group should help to increase understanding throughout the food chain of the competitive pressures faced by individual sectors and how decisions and actions by one part of the chain may impact upon another.

Over-30-month Rule

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when the Government expect to lift the over-30-month rule. [96749]

Ms Quin: The Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee has identified criteria against which the controls on beef over-30-months of age can be reviewed in the future, and began to address these at its meeting on 18 March 1999. The Committee recognised that the issue would require careful study and would almost certainly need to be considered over several meetings.

At its meeting on 20 September the Committee noted that it was expected that updated epidemiological analyses of the BSE epidemic would be available for its meeting on 29 November. The Committee agreed to postpone further consideration of the over-30-month rule until that meeting so that it could take these analyses into account.

In the light of the Committee's conclusions, and after consultation with all interested parties, the Government will consider what changes to the over-30-month rule, if any, could be made, consistent with the continued protection of public health. Any changes to the rule will need to be agreed with the European Commission and member states as it forms part of the Florence Agreement on the lifting of the beef export ban.

WALES

Objective 1

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if Lottery moneys which are used as a constituent part of projects attracting Objective 1 European funding will be termed public or private expenditure; and if he will make a statement. [97534]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The National Assembly would not have to provide public expenditure cover for Lottery match funding. Lottery moneys are not Exchequer funding. Lottery funding counts as public expenditure within the Total Managed Expenditure of the Department of Culture, Media and Sport.

Written Answers to Questions

Tuesday 9 November 1999

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Parliamentary Estate (Running Costs)

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Chairman of the Accommodation and Works Committee what are the estimated running costs for Portcullis House and the running costs in the latest year for which figures are available for 7 Millbank and Norman Shaw North and South. [96726]

Sir Sydney Chapman [holding answer 3 November 1999]: The annual running costs for Portcullis House are estimated to be some £3.6 million. This includes the cost of utilities, rates, cleaning and maintenance. Comparable figures for other buildings on the parliamentary estate for 1998–99 are; 7 Millbank—£2.5 million and Norman Shaw North and South—£1.3 million. The hon. Member will wish to note that Norman Shaw South is overdue for a major refurbishment, and therefore running costs have been somewhat curtailed in the last few years.

Westminster Hall

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Chairman of the Accommodation and Works Committee what is the cost of refurbishing the Grand Committee Room for the Westminster Hall sittings. [97520]

Sir Sydney Chapman: The total cost of the refurbishment is £882,000.

Scottish Grand Committee

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission, from what budget heading costs for Scottish Grand Committee meetings will be allocated. [97587]

Mr. Kirkwood [holding answer 5 November 1999]: Costs associated with meetings of the Scottish Grand Committee at Westminster are met from the general administrative budgets of the House of Commons. Additional costs associated with meetings in Scotland are met from the budget for standing committees' travel and subsistence.

Library

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Chairman of the Information Committee what arrangements have been made between the Library and the British Museum for the keeping of those parts of the Library's older book stock which are of antiquarian interest but which are seldom needed by hon. Members. [97838]

Mr. Allan: The Library has a substantial number of books which were acquired when it was re-stocked after the fire of 1834. These volumes, often in fine bindings, are not often used by hon. Members but are of potential interest to scholars. I have been informed that the Librarian has signed an agreement with the Director of the British Museum which will mean that these books will be transferred on a long term loan to the care of the Museum, where they will be housed in the King's Library. This room was vacated when the British Library moved to its new St. Pancras building. The loan will mean that the books will be on display in a fine setting and that the Museum will be able to provide access by scholars, both its own staff and others. If any volumes are needed by hon. Members, the Library will be able to retrieve them, but it will not be responsible for the continuing care of the books and will gain the use of valuable storage space. The books will be transferred when the refurbishment of the King's Library is complete, which is expected to be in 2003.

Lords Amendments

Mr. Baker: To ask the President of the Council on how many occasions, in each parliamentary session since 1992, Lords amendments to Bills which have been the subject of a motion moved in this House to disagree have been (a) rejected and (b) accepted by this House. [97820]

Mrs. Beckett: There appear to be no examples to category (b) in the period in question. The table gives details, according to the records, of Lords amendments disagreed to by this House since Session 1992–93. All were subject to motions to disagree except for one case in 1993–94, where a motion to agree with a Lords amendment to the Sunday Trading Bill was negatived on division.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Schengen Accord

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the mechanism by which Her Majesty's Government can rescind participation in Schengen. [97527]

Mrs. Roche: The Protocol integrating the Schengen acquis into the framework of the European Union, annexed to the Treaties by the Treaty of Amsterdam, makes provision in Articles 4 and 5 for the participation of the United Kingdom in the Schengen acquis and in its development. Once the United Kingdom has chosen to participate, to that extent the normal arrangements of the Treaties apply, and it would not be possible to rescind participation. The United Kingdom is otherwise not bound by the Schengen acquis. My right hon. Friend, the Home Secretary, submitted on 26 May 1999, an application on behalf of the United Kingdom to participate in certain provisions of the Schengen acquis, a copy of which is available in the Library.

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department from which elements of Schengen Information System data, in accordance with Section 13 of the Commission Opinion on the request by the UK to take part in certain provisions of the Schengen acquis, the Commission recommends the UK remain excluded from access. [97522]

Mrs. Roche: The Commission Opinion refers to the need to study the feasibility of limiting the United Kingdom's access to data held under Article 96 of the Schengen Implementing Convention. This reflects the terms of the United Kingdom to participate in certain provisions of the Schengen acquis; we requested that we should be allowed not to enter or receive such data, which is related to the refusal of admission to third country nationals at the external frontier. This is because we are not seeking to participate in the external frontier control provisions of the Schengen acquis.

Asylum and Immigration

Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list for the latest period for which figures are available the number of people entering the UK from non-EU countries as visitors with permission to stay for up to six months; the proportion of these not permitted to pass immediately through passport control but subject to interview and the proportion of those interviewed refused entry. [97445]

Mrs. Roche: All non-European Economic Area (EEA) passengers seeking entry as visitors are subject to interview to determine their admissibility under the immigration rules. In the 12 months from July 1998 to June 1999, some 8.2 million non-EEA nationals were granted leave to enter as visitors for up to six months. Information on persons seeking entry as visitors who were subject to further examination is available only for 13 of the largest ports. At these ports, 23,500 non-EEA visitors were subject to further examination in the 12-month period and of these, 68 per cent. (16,100) were refused leave to enter.

Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the average waiting time at (a) Heathrow and (b) Gatwick airports of people wishing to enter the UK as visitors who are not permitted to pass immediately through passport control but are subject to interview. [97444]

Mrs. Roche: The information requested is not available.

The length of time involved in assessing a passenger's eligibility for entry varies considerably depending on the particular situation and on factors such as the availability of interpreters and sponsors, which are outside the control of the Immigration Officer.

Every effort is made to deal with each case at the earliest opportunity.

Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps are taken to ensure that the Immigration and Nationality Directorate operates in a non-discriminatory way; and what monitoring is carried out of the Directorate's (a) operations and (b) statistics on immigration case decisions. [97530]

Mrs. Roche: Staff in the Immigration and Nationality Directorate (IND) are required by the Immigration Rules to perform their duties without regard to the race, colour or religion of persons seeking to enter or remain in the United Kingdom. Staff dealing with applications are trained in racial and cultural awareness. All IND staff are in the process of receiving training in discrimination issues and equal opportunities. IND investigates all complaints by members of the public against IND staff, including complaints of racial and other unfair discrimination. The independent Complaints Audit Committee, appointed by my right hon. Friend, the Home Secretary, monitors the effectiveness of the procedures, and reports to him annually. Copies of these Reports are placed in the Library. The number of complaints of discrimination since 1995 are given in the table:

	Racial discrimination	Other unfair discrimination	Total	Substantiated
1995	40	1	41	1
1996	31	6	37	1
1997	41	8	49	0
1998	38	11	49	0
1999[1]	21	4	25	4

[1] Provisional figures to end of September

Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the numbers of staff employed in the Immigration and Nationality Directorate who deal with individual casework excluding administrative staff, indicating the proportions from (a) black and (b) ethnic minority communities. [97529]

Mrs. Roche: Since January 1999, the majority of casework has been undertaken by staff in the Integrated Casework Directorate (ICD). Most casework decisions in the ICD are taken by Administrative Officers (AOs) or Executive Officers (EOs) with staff in other grades providing either management, quality control, or administrative support for the caseworking function. The data requested are as follows:

Domestic Violence

Ms Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidance he has issued to police authorities in respect of the concession in immigration law on the one year rule in respect of domestic violence. [97372]

Mrs. Roche: The Secretary to the Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO) Standing Committee on the Disclosure of Convictions was notified at the same time as the concession was announced so that all Chief Police Officers could, in turn, be advised that the concession was operational. This is now being taken forward through ACPO procedures. ACPO's Standing Committee had previously agreed that immigration caseworkers could make written inquiries of the criminal records office of individual police headquarters about cautions for domestic violence. Referral forms and procedures were agreed with ACPO.

Ms Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidance he has issued to Women's Aid and other agencies regarding the concession in immigration law on the one year rule in respect of domestic violence. [97373]

Mrs. Roche: No specific notification was sent to Women's Aid but Southall Black Sisters, who were involved in discussions about the proposed concession, were sent details when it was announced. Information about the concession can be found in the Immigration Directorate Instructions. These are available on the Home Office Internet website and a copy is also available in the Library.

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) men and (b) women died as a result of domestic violence in each of the last three years for which figures were available; and if he will make a statement. [97450]

Mr. Boateng: Details of homicides held centrally do not enable those cases preceded by domestic violence to be separately identified.

The table shows the number of currently (as at 31 July 1998) recorded homicides in England and Wales, 1995 to 1997, where the victim was the current or former spouse, cohabitant or lover of the principal suspect:

Currently recorded homicides where the victim was the current or former spouse, cohabitant or lover of the principal suspect, England and Wales, 1995 to 1997

	Male victims	Female victims
1995	38	92
1996	26	92
1997	34	105

A Home Office Research, Development and Statistics project has looked at domestic homicides in West Yorkshire between 1994 and 1997, based on data provided by the police. The aim of this study included an exploration of the links between domestic violence histories of offenders and domestic homicides. A draft report is currently in preparation; it is anticipated that a final report will be produced next year.

Immigration Detainees

Mr. Sarwar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people are currently detained under the Immigration Acts in (a) detention centres, (b) Prison Service establishments and (c) other accommodation. [97576]

Mrs. Roche: The latest available information, relating to the snapshot of all persons detained solely under Immigration Act powers, by location, on 30 September 1999, is given in the table.

Freedom of Information

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to amend the draft Freedom of Information Bill to ensure that non-departmental public bodies are required to disclose information explaining the bases of their decisions to allocate financial resources. [97365]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The draft Freedom of Information Bill provides that all public authorities, including non-departmental public bodies, are required to disclose information they hold, subject to the conditions and exemptions set out in the draft Bill. Even where information is exempted information, the changes to the draft Bill which my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary announced in a reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Dudley, South (Mr. Pearson), Official Report, 21 October 1999, column 624, will mean that a public authority will have to consider the public interest in disclosing information when considering whether to exercise the discretionary authority to disclose.

Probation Service (Computers)

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to seek compensation from the suppliers of software to the Probation Service. [97550]

Mr. Boateng: The suppliers of the case management software to the Probation Service are contractually obliged to deliver a Year 2000 compliant version of that software by the end of November. Although there was some delay, earlier this year, in progress against plan in the development of that software, the suppliers are now back on schedule to achieve this.

British Board of Film Classification

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on how many occasions since 1 May 1997 local authorities have (a) refused to allow the screening of films cleared by the British Board of Film Classification and (b) permitted the screening of films deemed unsuitable for screening by the British Board of Film Classification. [97593]

Mr. Boateng [holding answer 8 November 1999]: Under the cinema licensing regime provided by the Cinemas Act 1985, local authorities have the power to determine whether particular films may be shown in cinemas in their area. I understand that local authorities generally require cinemas to abide by the classification certificate issued by the British Board of Film Classification and that decisions not to do so are rare. Records of their decisions are not held centrally.

Prison Goods (Sales)

Judy Mallaber: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if the textile, clothing and footwear produced within HM Prisons is sold at normal commercial prices for goods of comparable quality; and what measures are in place to ensure that this is done. [97959]

Mr. Boateng: Clothing, textiles and footwear are sold at normal commercial prices. Products are costed using an industry-recognised costing software package. Allowance is made for the lower productivity levels achieved in prison workshops. These prices are compared with commercially available statistics to check that they are in line with normal wholesale prices.

Judy Mallaber: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the annual sales turnover of textile, clothing and footwear products produced within HM Prisons broken down between those consumed by (a) the Prison Service, (b) other Government Departments, (c) local authorities and (d) the private sector in each of the last five years. [97958]

Mr. Boateng: The breakdown of sales for textiles and footwear products from prison workshops for the year 1989–99 is given in the table. Figures are not available for previous years due to a change in reporting procedures.

Sales of textiles and footwear from prison workshops 1998–99	£

Judy Mallaber: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many of HM Prisons are engaged in the production of textiles, clothing and footwear; and what was the annual turnover of such products in each establishment in the latest year for which information is available. [97957]

Mr. Boateng: There are 64 prison establishments involved in textiles and four in footwear. Turnover for textiles and footwear products for 1998–99 are given in the table.

Animal Sanctuaries

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make it his policy to require operators of animal sanctuaries to be licensed. [97505]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: It is not Government policy at this time to seek to license the operators of animal sanctuaries, and there are no plans to change that. Animals in sanctuaries have the same protection against cruelty—afforded principally by the Protection of Animals Act 1911—as those in other privately run establishments. It is not considered that there is sufficient evidence of problems with sanctuaries across the country to warrant additional introduction of a statutory licensing regime.

Anti-social Behaviour Orders

Mr. Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to transfer the operation of anti-social behaviour orders to the County Court. [96380]

Mr. Charles Clarke: I have no such plans.

Conveyancing (Electoral Register)

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the impact on the speed of the home buying process of his proposal to restrict the commercial use of the electoral register. [97989]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: My right hon. Friend, the Home Secretary, is currently considering the recommendation, by the Working Party on Electoral Procedures, that electors should have the option of deciding whether the details that they provide for electoral purposes should be made commercially available. He will take into account representations from organisations that offer credit for house purchase when doing so.

Jury Trials (Fraud)

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proposals he has to amend the right to trial by jury in fraud cases. [96386]

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to alter the right to trial by jury in fraud cases. [96389]

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proposals he has to amend the right to trial by jury in fraud cases. [96382]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Government are considering the responses to the consultation document "Juries in Serious Fraud Trials" which was issued last year. They are aiming to announce their conclusions shortly.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Departmental Estate

Mrs. Browning: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will (a) list the assets sold by his Department and their value, item by item, in each year from 1991–92 to 1998–99 and (b) estimate the asset sales planned for 1999–2000 and 2000–01. [95808]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 26 October 1999]: The information requested by the hon. Member is not available in the form requested.

Labelling (Dangerous Substances)

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if regulations required by Commission Directive 97/64/EC (O.J. No. L315, 19.11.1997, p.13) regarding labelling of dangerous substances have been published in all EU countries; and if he will list those regulations together with their proposed implementation dates. [96454]

Dr. Howells: The Dangerous Substances and Preparations (Safety)(Consolidation)(Amendment) Regulations 1999, which implement Directive 97/64/EC—The Lamp Oils Directive, were laid before Parliament on 22 July 1999 and came into force on 13 August 1999.

It is for the European Commission to monitor the transposition of EU Directives across the Community and take appropriate action as necessary. The Commission publishes information on which Directives have been transposed on its CELEX database. This can be accessed on the Parliamentary intranet at the Library of the House.

Telecommunications

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if regulations required under EU Directive 97/66/EC concerning the processing of personal data in the telecommunications sector have been published in all EU member states; and if he will list those regulations together with their proposed implementation dates. [96455]

Ms Hewitt: As far as the Government are aware, the latest position regarding the implementation of Directive 97/66/EC, in full or in part by EU member states, is as follows:

Postal Services

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if regulations required under EU Directive 97/67/EC regarding postal services have been published in all EU member states; and if he will list those regulations together with their proposed implementation dates. [96451]

Mr. Alan Johnson: The Postal Services Regulations 1999 (1999 No. 2107) laid before Parliament on 27 July 1999 implement the EU Postal Services Directive (97/67/EC) in the United Kingdom to the extent that it was not already covered by existing legislation and procedures. It came into force on 1 September.

It is for the European Commission to monitor the transposition of EU Directives across the Community and take appropriate action as necessary. The Commission publishes information on which Directives have been transposed on its CELEX database. This can be accessed on the Parliamentary intranet at the Library of the House.

Consumer Contracts

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if regulations required by EU Council Directive 93/13/EEC on unfair terms in consumer contracts (O.J. No. L95, 21.4.93, p.29) have been published in each EU country; and if he will list those regulations together with their proposed implementation dates. [96452]

Dr. Howells: The Unfair Terms in Consumer Contracts Regulations 1999 (S.I. 1999 No. 2083) currently give effect to the Directive in the UK. These Regulations repealed and replaced 1994 Regulations (S.I. 1994 No. 3159) of the same name which came into force on 1 July 1994.

It is for the European Commission to monitor the transposition of EU Directives across the Community and take appropriate action as necessary. The Commission publishes information on which Directives have been transposed on its CELEX database. This can be accessed on the Parliamentary intranet at the Library of the House.

Objective 2 Areas

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he expects to receive the European Commission's views on the proposed Objective 2 areas identified by the Government. [97546]

Mr. Caborn: We are currently in discussion with the Commission about the areas proposed for Objective 2 status for 2000 to 2006. We hope our proposed areas will be agreed by the end of the year.

APEC

Mrs. Browning: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what representations he has made to the European Commission about the accelerated tariff liberalisation proposed by APEC; and if he will make a statement; [97151]

(2) what analysis he has made of the advantages and disadvantages of APEC's proposals in respect of accelerated tariff liberalisation of (a) chemicals, (b) energy products, (c) environmental products, (d) fish, (e) forest products, (f) gems and jewellery, (g) medical and scientific equipment and (h) toys. [97150]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 4 November 1999]: APEC's proposals have been considered in detail at both national and Community level. We and all other member states have concluded that the APEC approach is selective and excludes sectors of importance to the EU. Our preference is to optimise market access within the framework of a comprehensive negotiation rather than accelerated sectoral liberalisation but we see no reason why sectoral agreements reached in the course of a comprehensive negotiation could not be implemented on a provisional basis prior to the formal conclusion of the New Round.

Climate Change Levy

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the impact on small and medium-sized enterprises in manufacturing of the introduction of the climate change levy; and if he will make a statement. [97640]

Mrs. Liddell: The Government believe that small and medium-sized enterprises also have a contribution to make towards reducing greenhouse emissions. Their initial proposals for the climate change levy reflect Lord Marshall's conclusion that a tax could help improve energy efficiency in small and medium-sized enterprises. The Government are seeking to design and implement the levy in a way that maximises the environmental benefits, while at the same time safeguarding the competitiveness of business of all sizes.

The Government have previously announced that £50 million per annum of the anticipated revenues from the levy will be used to provide energy efficiency advice for business, including small and medium-sized enterprises; as well as for increased support for renewable sources of energy and a "carbon trust" to develop low carbon technologies. This represents a step change from previous levels of funding. The Government are preparing proposals on the details of these arrangements and expect to make further announcements in due course.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will assess the effect the climate change levy will have on UK industrial competitiveness relative to that of (a) Belgium, (b) Norway and (c) Sweden; and if he will make a statement. [97860]

Ms Hewitt: The Government aim to design the climate change levy in a way which safeguards the international competitiveness of UK business.

The United Kingdom is not alone in having to reduce greenhouse gas emissions, nor in using economic instruments to do so. We expect that, on current projections, most OECD countries will have to introduce new measures of one kind or another in order to meet their Kyoto obligations. Governments are considering the policies and measures which they will need to deliver these commitments. This will take account of their various national circumstances, including existing fiscal regimes.

Compensation (Miners)

Mr. Healey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many claims for compensation from miners and miners' widows have been received to date for (a) vibration white finger and (b) chronic bronchitis and emphysema in (i) South Yorkshire, (ii) Yorkshire and (iii) the UK. [97283]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 5 November 1999]: As at 1 November 1999, the Government have received 87,336 claims from ex-miners and their families for respiratory diseases, of these 17,741 are from claimants in the Yorkshire area and 11,986 of these are from South Yorkshire. On VWF, the Government have received 50,755 claims from ex-miners and their families for vibration white finger, of these 12,783 are from claimants in the Yorkshire area and 10,299 of these are from South Yorkshire.

Mr. Healey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is his estimate of the compensation that will be paid out over the next three years to miners and miners' widows for (a) vibration white finger and (b) chronic bronchitis and emphysema in (i) South Yorkshire, (ii) Yorkshire and (iii) the UK. [97282]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 5 November 1999]: The gross level of provision for the British Coal health liabilities assumed by the Department is:

Year	£ million
1999–2000	228.2
2000–01	490.3
2001–02	507.5

Due to a number of uncertainties—not least the number of claims likely to be received and the actual levels of compensation payable in individual cases—it is not possible to say how much will be required to meet the specific cost of miners' health claims for vibration white finger, and chronic bronchitis and emphysema, or to provide regional breakdowns.

The Government have, however, made clear that they will provide the funds necessary to meet the cost of legitimate claims.

Power Generation

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he introduced his stricter consents policy on energy sources for power generation; and when he will relax it. [97659]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 8 November 1999]: The White Paper of October 1998 "Conclusions of The Review of Energy Sources for Power Generation and Government responses to fourth and fifth Reports of the Trade and Industry Committee" (Cm 4071) set out the Government's programme of reform in the electricity market and introduced a stricter policy on consents for gas-fired power stations to protect diversity and security of supply while the programme of reform was underway. As set out in the White Paper, the policy will be relaxed as soon as the Government conclude, on the basis of advice from the Director General of Electricity Supply on progress in addressing the competition issues, that the reform programme has been undertaken and the distortions in the electricity market removed. While this would not necessarily mean completing every aspect of the programme, the Government expect the reforms to be substantially complete across the picture before the consents policy is relaxed.

Arms Sales

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what mechanisms are in place to control and monitor advertisements on his Department's export website; and if he will make a statement on the advertisement placed on his Department's website by Nisam International of Esher listing stun guns among the equipment the firm was prepared to sell. [97482]

Mr. Caborn [holding answer 8 November 1999]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Richmond Park (Dr. Tonge) on 5 November 1999, Official Report, columns 335–36.

The information included in the TradeUK entry for Nisam International Ltd. was provided by them on their application form. The reference to stun guns was removed by the TradeUK contractor on Friday 29 October 1999.

Gas Turbine Power Stations

Ms Dari Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he will announce his decision on proposals by Burlington Resources (Irish Sea) Limited to build a combined-cycle gas turbine power station at Rhosgoch, Anglesey and by Kent Power Limited for the construction of a combined-cycle gas turbine power station on the Isle of Grain, Kent. [98158]

Mrs. Liddell: A direction has been given to Burlington Resources (Irish Sea) Limited under section 14(3) of the Energy Act 1976 in response to their notice under section 14(1) of that Act to prevent the building of a 560 MW combined cycle gas turbine power station to be fuelled by natural gas at Rhosgoch, Anglesey. Although the scheme would make significant heat supplies available, these would not be sufficient to demonstrate the efficiency levels for combined heat and power set out in the October 1998 White Paper. As well as the benefits which would result from the heat utilisation, the project offers other distinct environmental benefits. However, taken together, I do not consider that these are sufficient in this instance to outweigh the Government's concern over new gas-fired generation.

Consent, under section 36 of the Electricity Act 1989, has not been granted to Kent Power Limited (Enron Europe Ltd.) for the construction and operation of a 1,200 MW combined cycle gas turbine (CCGT) power station on the Isle of Grain, Kent. The company's application will be put on hold unless a case is put forward for a decision to be taken now.

I have taken these decisions in accordance with the policy set out in the White Paper entitled "Conclusions of the Review of Energy Sources for Power Generation and Government response to fourth and fifth Reports of the Trade and Industry Committee" (Cm 4071). I would be prepared to review these decisions, if requested, when the stricter consents policy announced in the White Paper is lifted.

Copies of the relevant Press Notice and letters are being placed in the Library of the House.

Coal Industry

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many persons are employed in the opencast coal industry in (a) Scotland and (b) England; what is the annual output of the industry in each country; and what percentage of the output of each is used by power stations. [R] [97677]

Mrs. Liddell: At the end of March 1999, employment in the opencast coal industry (including contractors), as declared to the Coal Authority, was 1,301 in Scotland and 1,882 in England. Opencast output in the year to 31 March 1999 was 6.4 million tonnes in Scotland and 7.0 million tonnes in England.

Information on the percentage of opencast output used in power stations is not readily available, but in 1998, 82 per cent. of all the coal produced in the United Kingdom by the five largest producers (one third of which was from opencast mining) was sold to power stations.

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the total amount of coal imported to the UK in each of the past five years broken down by the nations from which the coal was imported. [R] [97680]

Mrs. Liddell: The information requested is shown in the table.

Post Office

Mr. Fallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he was consulted by the Post Office before its decision to appeal against the minimum wage ruling of the Employment Tribunal in the case of Sub-postmistress Elizabeth Bain of Tone, Inverness. [97863]

Mr. Alan Johnson: No. This is an operational matter, which is the responsibility of the Post Office Board and management.

HEALTH

Life Support

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to introduce legislation requiring that the withdrawal of food and fluid from persistent vegetative state patients be subject to a court order but otherwise following the Guideline of the British Medical Association on the withdrawal of treatment. [97097]

Ms Stuart: The courts have ruled that the withdrawal of artificial nutrition and hydration from a patient who is diagnosed in a persistent vegetative state should first be referred to a court for a decision. We have no plans to change the law in this respect.

We have no plans to introduce legislation requiring the guidelines of the British Medical Association on the Withholding and Withdrawal of Life-prolonging Medical Treatment to be followed.

Departmental Expenditure Limit

Ms Kingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if there are any proposals to amend his Department's Departmental Expenditure Limit/running cost limit for 1999–2000. [98079]

Mr. Milburn: Subject to Parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimates for Class II, Votes 1 and 2, the Department of Health Departmental Expenditure Limit for 1999–2000 will be increased by £109,984,000 from £40,345,035,000 to £40,455,019,000. The increase is the net effect of changes to Class II, Vote 1 (Hospital, community health, family health and related services, England) of £207,861,000 made up of £114,058,000 in respect of the take up of end year flexibility as announced by the Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 27 July 1999, Official Report, column 393, and £100,000,000 for the take up of departmental unallocated provision. In addition the following transfers will take place: £1,177,000 from Scotland (£47,000 for the High Security Infectious Diseases Unit and £1,130,000 for out of area treatments); £877,000 from Wales for out of area treatments and £7,464,000 from Class II, Vote 2 (Department of Health, administration, miscellaneous health and personal social services, England) (£662,000 for the Public Health Development Fund and £802,000 for regional professional development projects). The overall increase is partially offset by transfers of £8,364,000 to Wales, (£6,720,000 for high security psychiatric services and £1,644,000 for cross border adjustments for primary care groups); £4,800,000 to Class I, Vote 1 (Department for Education and Employment: programmes and central services) for the King's College Hospital/United Medical and Dental School merger and £2,551,000 to Class II, Vote 2 (£2,500,000 for publicity on Meningitis C vaccine and £51,000 for cancer prevention).

The increase of £770,000 for Class II, Vote 2 (Department of Health, administration, miscellaneous health and personal social services, England) is the net effect of transfers to Vote 1 of £4,913,000 (detailed above), £6,293,000 take-up of end year flexibility (mentioned above) for claims in respect of 1998–99 asylum seekers grant; £315,000 (£10,000 running costs) from Class IV, Vote 1 (Home Office administration, police, probation, immigration and other services, England and Wales) mainly for research; £500,000 (running costs) from Class IV, Vote 2 (Prisons, England and Wales) for prison health care services. The overall increase is partially offset by a transfer of £1,425,000 to Class I, Vote 1 (Department for Education and Employment: programmes and central services) for a contribution towards the healthy schools initiative.

The amount required for non-voted supplementary credit approvals for personal social services (DoH/LACAP) in England is to be increased by £1,353,000 from £18,700,000 to £20,053,000 in respect of take up of end year flexibility entitlement as mentioned above.

The Department's gross running cost limit will be increased by £510,000 from £279,940,000 to £280,450,000 as detailed above.

All increases will either be offset by transfers to or from other Departmental Expenditure Limits (detailed above) or take-up of end year flexibility and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Waiting Lists (Worcester)

Mr. Michael J. Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what were (a) the number of people waiting for 12 months or more for hospital treatment and (b) the total number of people waiting for hospital treatment, in May in each year from 1992 to 1999 in the Worcester Royal Infirmary Trust area. [96414]

Mr. Denham: The figures are for the Worcester Royal Infirmary National Health Service Trust for the end of March every year. Monthly collection of data only started in April 1998 so a time series for May was not possible. Trusts, as they are coded today, have only supplied data from June 1994. Prior to 1994–95 waiting list data were compiled from district health authorities returns. Therefore, there is no comparable data available for 1992 to 1994.

Worcester Royal Infirmary Trust

	Total	Over 12 months
March 1995	3,092	0
March 1996	3,230	0
March 1997	4,111	29
March 1998	5,047	191
March 1999	4,302	282

Clinical Suspicion

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the hon. Member for New Forest, West will receive a substantive response to his question of 19 October on discussions with the professions regarding levels of clinical suspicion. [97827]

Yvette Cooper: I replied to the hon. Member on 8 November.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Arms Exports

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 25 October 1999, Official Report, column 738, on how many occasions Her Majesty's Government have denied an arms export licence, notified EU partners and objected to another member state's stance on the appropriateness of export; what value of exports was involved; and what (a) values and (b) type of exports have been approved for export by another EU state despite United Kingdom notification. [97247]

Mr. Hain: The UK has issued 54 denial notifications under the EU Code of Conduct on Arms Exports between the adoption of the Code on 8 June 1998 and 31 October 1999.

Operative Provision 4 of the EU Code of Conduct states that "EU member states will keep such denials and consultations confidential and not use them for commercial advantage".

Mont Tremblant Conference

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list (a) British and (b) European Communities delegations to the conference on federalism at Mont Tremblant, Quebec, in October; which members of either gave speeches; and if he will deposit texts of the speeches in the Library. [97523]

Mr. Battle: There were no formal delegations from the UK or the EC to the conference on federalism held recently at Mont Tremblant in Canada, at which participation was in a personal, rather than governmental capacity. A few, invited British officials attended but they did not make speeches. A British journalist and the Deputy Presiding Officer of the Scottish Parliament did speak, but these were statements of their own views. Information and documentation on the conference may be obtained from the organisers' website (address: www.ciff.on.ca).

Treaty Modifications

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will deposit in the Library a list of those areas which the Government have indicated a willingness to discuss as focus points for Treaty modification. [97531]

Mr. Vaz: The conclusions of the Cologne European Council set out the topics which are likely to be on the agenda for the IGC. A copy of the Cologne conclusions is in the Library.

Russian Federation

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs in which (a) regions and (b) cities there are European Commission representative offices in the Russian Federation outside of Moscow. [97405]

Mr. Vaz [holding answer 8 November 1999]: The European Commission does not have any representative offices outside Moscow in the Russian Federation.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs in which (a) regions and (b) cities there are diplomatic representations of European Union member states in the Russian Federation outside of Moscow, indicating which of these posts issue visas to Russian nationals to travel to (i) EU countries in the Schengen zone and (ii) EU countries outside the Schengen zone. [97400]

Mr. Vaz [holding answer 8 November 1999]: The following European Union member states have representations in the Russian Federation outside Moscow:

Austria—St. Petersburg (Honorary Consulate—no visa service)

Denmark—Kaliningrad, St. Petersburg

Finland—Karelyia, Murmansk, St. Petersburg

France—St. Petersburg

Germany—Novosibirsk, St. Petersburg, Saratov

Greece—Novorosisk, St. Petersburg

Italy—St. Petersburg

Netherlands—St. Petersburg

United Kingdom—Ekaterinburg, St. Petersburg.

Belgium, Ireland, Luxembourg, Portugal, Spain and Sweden are represented only in Moscow.

Those EU member states who are party to the Schengen agreement (Austria, Belgium, France, Germany, Greece, Italy, Luxembourg, Netherlands, Portugal and Spain) issue Schengen visas as well as visas solely for travel to their own country. None of the EU member states issue visas to Russians for travel to EU countries outside the Schengen zone.

Kosovo

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what initiatives Her Majesty's Government are taking to assist the restoration of municipal Government in Kosovo; and if he will make a statement. [97403]

Mr. Vaz [holding answer 8 November 1999]: The United Nations Mission in Kosovo (UNMIK) has responsibility for restoring municipal government in Kosovo. The United Kingdom is making a major contribution to UNMIK in terms of finance and personnel. One of the five UNMIK District Administrators in Kosovo is a British national. Four UK local government and two central government experts are working as part of the United Nations civil administration to advise and assist re-establishment of local government in Kosovo. One of the UK secondees, formerly involved in local government in Northern Ireland, has been appointed UN civil administrator for the city of Pristina.

Afghanistan

Mr. Coleman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the UK will continue to impose an arms embargo on Afghanistan in line with the EU's Common Position of 17 December 1996. [98111]

Mr. Hain: We remain committed to the EU arms embargo against Afghanistan which the UK interprets as covering all goods and technology entered on Part III to Schedule 1 to the Export of Goods (Control) Order 1994, as amended.

Following consultations with this Department and the Ministry of Defence, the Department of Trade and Industry has issued three licences for the export of mine clearance equipment for use by the United Nations and The Halo Trust to aid their demining activities in Afghanistan. The grant of these licences is for humanitarian purposes.

British Nationals (Overseas Trials)

Mr. Coleman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the role of his Department in respect of British nationals on trial overseas. [98112]

Mr. Battle: I would like to take this opportunity to clarify the oral answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Milton Keynes, North-East (Mr. White) on 2 November 1999, Official Report, column 80. The FCO takes no view as to the innocence or guilt of British nationals on trial overseas—that is a matter for the courts. International law does not allow the FCO to interfere in the judicial procedures of other sovereign states, just as we would not tolerate other countries interfering in our own judicial procedures.

The FCO therefore cannot intervene in the trials of British nationals overseas. However, the FCO will do everything it can to ensure that such nationals have access to legal representation, and insist that they are treated as well as nationals of the countries concerned.

Chinese President (State Visit)

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Cynon Valley (Ann Clwyd) of 28 October 1999, Official Report, column 993, on the Chinese State visit, (a) for what reason no minutes were taken of these meetings and whether that is normal practice and (b) if he will name the officers from (i) the Metropolitan Police and (ii) the Cambridgeshire Constabulary who attended these meetings. [97508]

Mr. Battle: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Stratford-on-Avon (Mr. Maples) on 4 November 1999, Official Report columns 271–72.

Drugs (Precursors)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions (i) he and (ii) his Department has had with the Governments of Peru and Colombia about the export of precursors to drugs; and if he will make a statement. [96497]

Mr. Battle: We share the increasing international concern about precursors. We have frequent exchanges with Peru and Colombia at Ministerial and official level on drugs issues. These cover all aspects of the problems which drugs present to our societies, including the problem of the diversion into drugs production of legitimately exported chemicals.

In 1995, the European Community signed agreements with Bolivia, Colombia, Ecuador, Peru and Venezuela aimed at preventing the diversion of precursor chemicals.

UK law enforcement agencies work closely with their counterparts in other countries to counter such diversion.

Extradition

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans Her Majesty's Government have to enter into bilateral agreements under Article 98 of the International Court Statute which would prevent the extradition of nationals to (a) the court and (b) a third country. [97828]

Mr. Hain: We have no plans to enter into new bilateral agreements which would prevent the surrender of British nationals to the International Criminal Court under Article 98 of the Court's Statute. Article 98 relates to surrender of persons to the International Criminal Court; it does not relate to extradition to a third country.

Entry Clearance (Subcontinent)

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how long a person applying for entry clearance for settlement in June, July and August can be expected to have to wait for an interview in each queue at each post in the Indian subcontinent. [96617]

Mr. Vaz [pursuant to his reply, 3 November 1999, c. 186]: An administrative error led to an omission in my answer of 3 November to my hon. Friend. The complete answer should read as follows.

The statistics are as follows:

Waiting times in weeks on last day of month

Queue 2—Spouses and Children under 18;
Queue 3—Fiance(e)s and Other First Time Applicants; and Queue 4—Re-applicants

The extended queues in Islamabad and Dhaka in particular are a consequence of seasonal pressures. We have deployed additional staff to Islamabad to deal with increased applications for short term visits.

Central and Eastern Europe

Mr. Pearson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what programmes and resources British Trade International and his Department have to support companies which wish to make investments in Central and Eastern Europe; [97865]

(2) what programmes and resources British Trade International and his Department have to assist companies looking into the feasibility of making investments in Central and Eastern Europe. [97864]

Mr. Battle: Companies wishing to invest in Central and Eastern Europe, like those exporting to those markets, are supported by a variety of British Trade International schemes. These include support for inward and outward trade missions, trade fairs and promotional seminars, and the Export Marketing Research Scheme which is being extended to cover better the needs of outward investors.

This year British Trade International's budget for promoting trade and investment opportunities in Central and Eastern Europe is £3.5 million.

PRIME MINISTER

Qualified Majority Voting

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Prime Minister (1) if it is the Government's policy to support, at the forthcoming Intergovernmental Conference, extension of qualified majority voting to include treaty modification; and if he will make a statement; [96570]

(2) if he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government's policy on the extension of qualified majority voting, set out in the Von Weizsäcker/Dehaene/Simon report. [96577]

The Prime Minister: The Government have already made it clear that they will consider the extension of qualified majority voting on a case by case basis. Where it is in Britain's interests we shall support it. But where key national interests need to be protected, such as border controls, defence, Treaty change and taxation, we shall insist on retaining unanimity.

European Charter of Rights

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 1 November 1999, Official Report, column 3, on the European Charter of Rights, (a) when he expects to publish the name and qualifications of the personal representative he is nominating to the drafting body of the working group and (b) what items he expects to be included in such a charter additional to those in the existing European Convention and those capable of introduction under existing treaty powers. [97954]

The Prime Minister: The Finnish Presidency has now confirmed that the first meeting of the drafting body will take place on 17 December. I will therefore announce the details of my representative shortly.

I believe that the Charter should make it easier for EU citizens to know the civil and political rights they already enjoy under the Treaties, including those covered by Article 6.2 of the Treaty on European Union. The Cologne Conclusions, copies of which were placed in the Libraries, provide further indications of the ground that might be covered.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Flight Crew Licensing

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what measures he is taking at European Communities Level to enforce compliance with the age limits in the joint aviation requirement on flight crew licensing. [97144]

Mr. Mullin: Under Council Regulation 3922–91 on the harmonisation of aviation technical standards the national aviation authorities of member states are required to be members of the Joint Aviation Authorities (JAA). The Regulation also adopted some of the JAA's Joint Aviation Requirements (JARs) as the European Community's harmonised standard and established a procedure to adopt future JARs as the EC standard. Where a JAR has not yet been adopted under EC law, JAA member states implement them under national law and are obliged, under the JAA Arrangements, to use their best efforts to implement JARs by the due date. The JAR on Flight Crew Licensing (JAR-FCL) was adopted by the JAA in 1996 with an implementation date of 1 July 1999.

JARs generally set standards that are compatible with those set by the International Civil Aviation Authority (ICAO) under the terms of the Chicago Convention, but can introduce differences, so long as member states notify the differences to ICAO. In drawing up the JAR-FCL, the JAA determined that commercial pilots can safely be licensed to the age of sixty five, provided that only one pilot in a multi pilot aircraft may be over 60: this differs from the ICAO standard under which a person can only act as a pilot in command if they are under 60. The UK and most other JAA member states are, or are in the process of, applying this age limit. However, the French Authorities are continuing to apply the ICAO age limits within French airspace, although co-pilots up to the age of 65 are permitted. The UK has raised this matter both within the JAA and directly with the French authorities.

National Air Traffic Services

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions on how many occasions since May 1997, on what dates, and for what duration he met representatives of the air traffic controllers to discuss the Government's proposals for the National Air Traffic Services. [97248]

Mr. Mullin: Since May 1997, Ministers in this Department have met representatives of air traffic controllers on eight separate occasions.

Household Waste

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what are the targets, and corresponding dates, for the increase in the recycling of household waste; and if he will make a statement. [97140]

Mr. Mullin: In the draft waste strategy "A Way with Waste", published on 30 June 1999 by my Department and the Welsh Office, we have set a goal of recycling or composting 30 per cent. of household waste by 2010. We will aim to meet the existing target of recycling or composting 25 per cent. of household waste by 2005.

By 2015 we expect to recover value from two thirds of our household waste, with at least half of this through recycling or composting.

Devolution of responsibility for waste policy means that final decisions about the way the strategy is taken forward in Wales will be a matter for the National Assembly.

Loft Insulation

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what percentage of houses in England and Wales have (a) three, (b) four, (c) five and (d) six inches of loft insulation. [97226]

Mr. Mullin: It is estimated that around 15 per cent., 24 per cent., 10 per cent. and 17 per cent. of homes with accessible lofts in England and Wales have respectively three, four, five and six inches or more of loft insulation. A further 11 per cent. have two inches or less and in 13 per cent. of cases the depth of the insulation is not known. Over 6 per cent. have no loft insulation and there are no data for the remaining 3 per cent. of homes.

Source:

GfK Home Audit, Ownership of home insulation at December 1998.

In-flight Incidents

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions which body is responsible for monitoring complaints by air passengers regarding perceived dangerous in-flight incidents. [97265]

Mr. Mullin: The Civil Aviation Authority is responsible for the safety regulation of UK registered aircraft and airlines. Under the Air Navigation Order UK airlines are required to report all in-flight occurrences which could affect the safety of the aircraft so that the CAA can monitor airline safety performance. The CAA review all such reports and publish a monthly summary. If a passenger has a concern about an in-flight incident on a UK airline they should take it up with the airline concerned in the first instance. If they are not happy with the response they should write to the CAA.

The safety regulation of foreign airlines is primarily the responsibility of the State in which the airline is based. Foreign airlines operating to the UK are required to comply with the minimum standards set by the International Civil Aviation Organisation. When the Department receives a complaint from a passenger which indicates that a foreign airline operating to the UK is not complying with ICAO standards we will follow the matter up with the airline concerned, or its regulatory authority.

Regional Development Agencies

Mr. Dobbin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what relationship he proposes between Regional Development Agencies and local authority development agencies. [97837]

Ms Beverley Hughes: Working in partnership is a central part of the new approach in the regions. We asked the Regional Development Agencies to draw up their regional strategies in conjunction with regional partners, including local authorities and the private and voluntary sectors.

Implementing the strategies will also require genuine partnership working, since it requires co-ordination and coherence in policies and across programmes.

Mr. Dobbin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what part regional development agencies will play in the development and implementation of local transport policies. [97835]

Ms Beverley Hughes: Regional Planning Guidance incorporates regional transport strategies which in turn inform local transport plans. RDAs are key partners in the preparation of RPG and draw attention to the transport priorities as they see them related to their regional economic strategies.

Mr. Dobbin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what relationship he proposes between regional development agencies and local authorities. [97836]

Ms Beverley Hughes: Our regional agenda, set out in the 1997 White Paper "Building Partnerships for Prosperity" is based on a number of principles. These include the need for regional structures to be based on partnership, with each local or regional interest being able to contribute effectively towards an integrated and coherent strategic programme which commands general support. We have, therefore, asked the RDAs to proceed in dialogue with regional partners—local authorities and the private and voluntary sectors—and work to secure the support of regional interests.

Successful implementation of RDA strategies will mean genuine partnership working in the regions since it will involve co-ordination and coherence in policy and across programmes.

Local authorities have a significant stake in the work of the Regional Development Agencies (RDAs). Four of the thirteen board members of each RDA are drawn from local government.

The Regional Chambers will also be a key partner of the RDAs. The Chambers are local authority led, but also include representatives from business, the voluntary sector and others. Their statutory functions include commenting on the RDAs' strategies and receiving reports on the RDAs' activities.

House Conveyancing

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what changes in the law will be required to implement the Government's policy for speeding up the process of buying and selling homes in England and Wales. [96379]

Mr. Mullin: We believe that most of the actions we are seeking from service providers can be achieved on a voluntary basis, except that home buyers' searches will probably need to be put on a statutory footing. However, sellers' information packs will need to be made compulsory to ensure that everyone benefits from them. The surveyor will be liable both to the seller and the buyer for the House Condition Report which will be part of the seller's information pack. These changes will require legislation and we plan to do this as soon as a suitable opportunity arises.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

South Africa

Ms Atherton: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many advisers the South African Sandmen's Institute employ, who are funded by her Department, to work with the San bushmen of South Africa. [97264]

Clare Short: My Department is contributing to the running costs of the South African San Institute (SAS) office in Cape Town, and with the establishment of an office in the Northern Cape to support the San communities located in Schmitsdrift near Kimberley, and throughout the Mier area, near the Kalahari Gemsbok National Park. This will include up to ten full-time staff whose costs are met by the Department for International Development (DFID). Funds are also available for the provision of short term expertise to support the components of the programme of activities in support of the San communities.

Pakistan

Mr. Sarwar: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what aid programmes her Department is supporting in the current financial year in Pakistan; at what cost; and what was the comparable figure for 1998–99. [97582]

Clare Short: On October 15 after the military coup in Pakistan, I announced a freeze on all British assistance to the Government of Pakistan and a continuation of all our programmes that directly help the poor. At this stage it is impossible to predict what our 1999–2000 spend will be. Provisional DFID programme expenditure for the 1998–99 financial year is £24.24 million.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

National Lottery

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what estimates he has made of expenditure on Lottery ticket sales as (a) a percentage of household income and (b) a share of total ticket sales for each income decile. [97054]

Kate Hoey: My Department has made no such estimates. However, there is an analysis of National Lottery ticket sales by income category in the National Lottery Commission's Social Research Programme Report, Number 1, published in May 1999. I have arranged for copies of this Report to be placed in the Libraries of the House.

St. James's Park and Green Park

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) if he will make a statement on the depredations by foxes on wildlife in St. James's Park and Green Park; [97220]

(2) how many of the Laysan Teal introduced to St. James's Park have (a) survived and (b) died; [97219]

(3) if he will make a statement on the cause of death of the Laysan Teal in St. James's Park. [97218]

Mr. Alan Howarth: Responsibility for the subject of these questions has been delegated to the Royal Parks Agency under its Chief Executive, Mr. David Welch. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from David Welch to Mr. Peter Bottomley, dated 19 November 1999:

I have been asked by the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport to reply to your Parliamentary Questions about foxes and the numbers and fate of Laysan Teal in St. James's Park.

No foxes actually live in St. James's Park or Green Park although they do regularly come into the parks. The nearest live in the grounds of Lancaster House and under a portacabin in the Treasury building compound. Foxes live largely on rodents, sick pigeons and refuse, which are readily available within the park. They only occasionally take birds and this is only really a problem in winter when the lake freezes over, allowing them to gain access to the two islands. To prevent this, the gamekeepers break the ice between the shore and the islands.

Six Laysan Teal were introduced into the wildlife collection in St. James's Park about three years ago, of which only one is still alive. The other five have died over the last two years, but as the carcases have not been found it is not possible to say how they died.

DEFENCE

Multi-role Armoured Vehicle

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has made of the cost of the Multi-role Armoured Vehicle; and if he will make a statement. [96981]

Mr. Spellar: The precise number of vehicles required has yet to be defined, but on current planning the estimated total procurement cost to the UK will be over £1 billion. That includes the cost of procuring the vehicles and supporting them for the first two years of their service life.

Equipment Exhibition

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the cost to the public purse, (a) directly and (b) in terms of the time of officials, of supporting the Defence Systems Equipment International Exhibition; and if he will review the need for future public sector support. [96901]

Mr. Kilfoyle: In reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Newport, West (Mr. Flynn) on 22 February 1999, Official Report, column 33, my predecessor outlined that the principal costs for the exhibition would fall to the organisers, Spearhead Exhibitions Ltd., but that my Department would make a contribution towards the cost of the official missions to be invited by Her Majesty's Government. We estimated the direct costs to MOD for this to be about £250,000. In the event, official delegations from over 50 countries attended and the final cost remains to be established, although we do not anticipate it will exceed the estimated figure. In addition, the Defence Export Services Organisation (DESO) organised a British Army Demonstration Area at the exhibition which featured a range of UK equipment; the estimated direct cost of this was £108,000. MOD officials and military personnel carried out activities associated with the exhibition as part of their duties, but these costs could be fully identified only at disproportionate cost. A number of MOD Agencies and organisations also participated at the exhibition, the costs for which are not held centrally. MOD support for future exhibitions will be considered in the light of our experience of this year's DSEi and plans for 2001.

Raytheon AIM-120 Programme

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the performance of the ramjet-powered variant of Raytheon's AIM-120 programme. [97134]

Mr. Kilfoyle: My Department was made aware of and attended in 1997 a ground based system demonstration firing undertaken in the United States to demonstrate ducted ramjet powered motor technology. No detailed assessment has been made on any ramjet powered variant of Raytheon's AIM-120 programme.

International Criminal Court

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions his Department has had concerning the implications for future British involvement in peacekeeping operations of ratification of the International Criminal Court. [97515]

Mr. Spellar: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer which the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office, my hon. Friend the Member for Neath (Mr. Hain) gave him on 8 November 1999, Official Report, column 409.

Armed Forces (Peacekeeping)

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which forces, listed in the Memorandum of Understanding with the UN on forces available for peacekeeping operations, are unavailable; what proportion of earmarked forces this represents; and if he will make a statement on the purpose of the Memorandum of Understanding. [97763]

Mr. Hoon: The purpose of the Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) is to demonstrate our continued commitment to the UN. The MOU provides the planning staff in the UN with details of those UK forces on which it might be able to call. Whether those forces are available for any particular operation depends on the nature, location and duration of the operation; and other continuing or known future commitments.

Post Traumatic Stress Disorder

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many members of HM armed forces who were in active service during the Gulf War are known to be suffering from Post Traumatic Stress Disorder. [97635]

Mr. Spellar: The MOD holds information on those Gulf veterans who were referred by their Service Medical Officer or GP for assessment at the MOD's Gulf Veterans Medical Assessment Programme (MAP). Since its establishment in October 1993 and up to 4 November 1999, the MAP has seen 2,893 patients. Of these, 2,283 have had their clinical findings recorded on the MAP database. Of the 2,283, 214 Gulf veterans have a recorded diagnosis of PTSD confirmed by a consultant psychiatrist. Of the 214 patients, the number still suffering from PTSD is not known since the MAP does not routinely monitor their health status nor is it responsible for providing treatment. As the veterans assessed by the programme were all self-selected, these figures cannot be used to determine the extent of PTSD in Gulf veterans as a whole. I will write to the right hon. and learned Gentlemen with information on the prevalence of PTSD in the remaining MAP patients who were seen up to 4 November once their medical notes have been reviewed and catalogued.

However, the MOD does not keep a central record of all diagnoses made on currently serving personnel. Responsibility for the health of ex-service personnel, if resident in the UK, lies with the NHS which similarly does not keep a central record on all diagnoses. Neither does the NHS routinely communicate diagnostic information to the MOD. No arrangements are in place to monitor the health of ex-service personnel living overseas. Therefore, the total number of service people on active service in 1990–91 or of Gulf veterans suffering from PTSD is not known.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many members of (a) the Royal Navy, (b) the Royal Air Force and (c) the Army have been medically discharged solely for Post Traumatic Stress Disorder since 1995. [97637]

Mr. Spellar: The numbers of personnel medically discharged from the armed forces since 1 January 1995 solely on grounds of Post Traumatic Stress Disorder are shown in the table:

	Number
Royal Navy	23
Army	38
RAF	10

Note:
Figures as reported up to and including 4 November 1999

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the investigations which have been commissioned by medical officers in each year since 1990 regarding the frequency of Post Traumatic Stress Disorder among serving members of the armed forces. [97636]

Mr. Spellar: I refer the right hon. and learned Member to the answer given by my predecessor to my hon. Friend the Member for Hull, North (Mr. McNamara) on 10 February 1999, Official Report, column 216.

Reservists

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many reservists served in the Balkans theatre with (a) the Army, (b) the RAF and (c) the Royal Navy in each year since 1994; with which units they served; what percentage of forces deployed to the theatre they represented; for each service in each year what was the average length of service of reservists; and if he will make a statement. [97615]

Mr. Spellar: This information is not available in the form requested, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Since operations commenced in December 1995, reserve forces personnel have represented around 10 per cent. of UK forces deployed in the Balkans theatre.

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the readiness cycle for mobilisation for operations in (a) the Territorial Army, (b) the Royal Navy Reserve, (c) the Royal Auxiliary Airforce and (d) among sponsored reservists for the deployment of (i) formed units and (ii) individual members to regular units; and if he will make a statement. [97662]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 8 November 1999]: Volunteer reserve units from all the Services are held at readiness levels appropriate to their role. In the case of the Territorial Army, this varies from 30 days to 24 months. Following call out, a unit would be required to undergo a period of training before deployment on operations. Individual Territorial Army members called out to serve with the Regular Army are trained at the Reserves Training and Mobilisation Centre and then deployed to theatre. Royal Naval Reserve personnel, when mobilised, are deployed as individuals to augment regular units rather than in formed units. It is anticipated that the majority of RNR personnel would be ready to deploy within 30 days of receipt of their call out notice. RAF Planning assumptions also provide for individual reservists to be ready for deployment within 30 days of call out. Operational requirements may necessitate reduced periods of notice and training, and planning is carried out for such contingencies.

High Readiness Reserves largely drawn from the Territorial Army, have accepted an enhanced liability for call out for permanent service, and in most cases are held at seven days notice to report for duty.

There are no sponsored reserves currently in service.

Amphibious Readiness Group

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what forces make up the UK's Amphibious Readiness Group. [97878]

Mr. Spellar: The UK's Amphibious Readiness Group is not a standing force and there are no specific forces assigned. The composition of the Group would be dependent on operational considerations and force availability at the time.

Saffron Sands

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many UK troops participated in the Saffron Sands exercise; at what cost; and if he will make a statement. [97877]

Mr. Spellar: A total of 600 troops were deployed on Exercise Saffron Sands this year at a cost of approximately £600K.

Low Flying

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the (a) safety and (b) continuing need for practice low flying for (i) home and (ii) NATO defence commitments. [97929]

Mr. Kilfoyle: We continue to pay close attention to the need for low flying when assessing our national and international military training requirements. Low level penetration of hostile airspace remains an effective tactic in many scenarios. The high readiness states which our aircrew have to maintain for participation in operations or preparation for conflict only allows for the honing of low flying expertise, not its creation. All aspects of flight safety are kept under continuous review.

Uranium Oxide

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proportion of the depleted uranium in armour-piercing ammunition is converted upon impact to insoluble oxide particles of less than 10 microns in diameter; and what parameters, transfer coefficients and methodologies are used in estimating the radiological effects of such particles. [97689]

Mr. Kilfoyle: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Departmental Accounts

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the methods of depreciation his Department will apply in the current financial year to fixed assets in the preparation of departmental resource accounting balance sheets. [96914]

Mr. Morley: The Ministry applies depreciation to its fixed assets on a straight line basis, over the useful economic life of each asset. Depreciation is charged in the month of disposal but not in the month of purchase.

Depreciation is not charged on freehold land, investment properties, assets declared surplus and for sale and assets under the course of construction.

Fixed asset lives are normally in the following ranges:

Fixed assets	Years
Freehold Buildings	5 to 60
Plant, Office, Scientific, IT equipment	3 to 15
Fixtures and fittings	5 to 10
Vehicles	4 to 15
Vessels	20

Assets are revalued annually and depreciation is adjusted accordingly.

Property assets are subject to a full valuation review every five years and the values and lives are adjusted accordingly.

The above depreciation method is in accordance with the Treasury's Resource Accounting Manual and the requirements in the manual regarding those methods will be underpinned by Financial Reporting Standard 15 'Tangible Fixed Assets', issued by the Accounting Standards Board.

Offshore Bass Fishing

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he proposes to take, following the Offshore Bass Fishery Pilot Study report, to control trawl fishing for bass; and if he will make a statement. [97141]

Mr. Morley: I announced on 18 October as public consultation on proposals to restrict landings of bass by British fishing vessels to 5 tonnes per week, in the light of concerns about the impact of the spring offshore fishery on the bass stock. I have arranged for copies of the consultation document to be placed in the Libraries of the House.

Fisheries

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many EU vessels, by nationality, are covered by agreements with non-EU countries for fisheries access; what is the total cost of these agreements to the EU budget; and if he will deposit the Commission report on third country fisheries agreements in the Library. [97521]

Mr. Morley: I have placed a copy of the summary report on the "Evaluation of the Fisheries Agreements Concluded by the European Community", prepared for the European Commission by IFREMER, in the Library of the House.

According to this report, the average annual number of licences issued to EU vessels to fish in third country waters between 1993 and 1997, broken down by nationality, is as follows:

Country	Total average annual number of licences
Austria	0
Belgium	62
Denmark	865
Finland	5
France	255
Germany	159
Greece	1
Ireland	2
Italy	11
Luxembourg	0
Netherlands	187
Portugal	46
Spain	953
Sweden	54
UK	433

The report also indicates that the average annual total cost to the EU budget of agreements with third countries between 1993 and 1997 was 211 million euros.

Organic Farming

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what funding his Department has provided for research and development into organic farming for each year from 1992 to date; and if he will make a statement. [97280]

Mr. Morley: MAFF has provided the following funds for research and development into organic farming since 1992:

Year	£000
1991–92	481
1992–93	720
1993–94	1,077
1994–95	1,058
1995–96	931
1996–97	1,116
1997–98	908
1998–99	1,481
1999–2000[1]	2,139

[1] Estimate

This includes research funded within the organic farming research programme and £323K funded under the Open Contract Scheme over the period.

In addition the organic farming sector also benefits from much of the other research the Ministry undertakes, for example, its planned spend of over £8 million on biological control techniques, plant health, animal welfare and wildlife conservation on farms this year.

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the approved length of time needed to convert farms to organic farming for (a) the United Kingdom and (b) the average EU member state. [97639]

Mr. Morley: Council Regulation (EEC) No. 2092/91 provides that as a general rule for organic products, except for perennial crops, the conversion period for the land should be two years before the first planting of a crop to be sold as organic. In the case of perennial crops the period is three years before the first harvest of products to be sold as organic. However, these periods may be varied, having regard to the previous use of the land.

In the UK the majority of conversions will extend over the full periods prescribed by Regulation 2092/91. However, shorter periods are sometimes agreed by the control body (the UK Register of Organic Food Standards) in cases where there is clear evidence that prohibited inputs have not been used on the land (e.g. the land has been subject to an environmental scheme which prohibits such inputs). Other member states are subject to the same Regulation and operate similar rules.

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what forecast he has made of the future take-up of grant aid for conversion to organic farming. [97843]

Mr. Morley: On 4 October, we announced a review of the Organic Farming Scheme, which provides aid to farmers converting to organic farming. Future up-take of aid is an issue which will be considered in this review.

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of the growth of the UK organic food market over the next five years; and if he will make a statement. [97940]

Mr. Morley: None. Estimates made by the organic sector itself indicate the size of the retail market for organic food to have been just short of £400 million in 1998–99 and project its growth to £1,500 million by 2002–03.

Fishing Fleets

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what proportion of EU national fishing fleets are based in objective 1 areas, broken down by country. [97525]

Mr. Morley: For the UK, the Objective 1 areas under the 1994–1999 Structural Funds Programme are the Highlands and Islands of Scotland, Northern Ireland and Merseyside. Vessels with home ports in these areas make up approximately 26 percent. of the UK fleet as at 1 November 1999.

The Objective 1 areas under the 2000–06 Structural Funds Programme are West Wales and the Valleys, Cornwall and Merseyside. Vessels with home ports in these areas make up approximately 14 percent. of the UK fleet as at 1 November 1999.

Under the 2000–06 Structural Funds Programme, the Highlands and Islands of Scotland and Northern Ireland are transitional Objective 1 areas. Vessels with home ports in these areas, plus West Wales and the Valleys, Cornwall and Merseyside make up approximately 39 percent. of the UK fleet as at 1 November 1999.

We do not have similar statistics for the fleets in Objective 1 areas of other member states.

Live Exports

Mr. Prosser: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking to discourage vessels which carry live farm animals from Dover to the continent from sailing (a) during severe weather conditions and (b) when severe weather conditions are forecast. [97552]

Mr. Morley: MAFF officials on duty at Dover docks have instructions to follow on any occasion when a vessel operator intends to carry livestock for slaughter or further fattening when wind conditions are forecast to reach Force 7 or more during the voyage, and/or the sea state is forecast as rough or worse. These instructions require them to discuss with the master of the vessel his legal obligation to consider if the animals are likely to be caused injury or unnecessary suffering due to adverse weather or sea conditions likely to be encountered during the voyage. If the master decides to sail but our staff have grounds to consider that animals may suffer, they have the legal powers to prevent him from transporting the animals.

Diversification Grants

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will introduce diversification grants in non-assisted areas. [97841]

Mr. Morley: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to him on 3 November 1999, Official Report, column 223.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Departmental Assets

Mr. MacKay: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the assets sold by his Department, indicating their value broken down by item, for each year from 1991–92 to 1998–99 together with an estimate of the value of asset sales planned to be made within 1999–2000 and 2000–01. [95467]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 25 October 1999]: The detailed information is not available in the format or for the years requested. However, the following information can be provided for the Northern Ireland Office and the Northern Ireland Departments from the 1997–98 financial year:

£000

Year	Land and buildings	Vehicles, plant and machinery	Computer and office equipment
1997–98	19,378	364	15

1999–2000	18,535	527	9
2000–01	15,611	527	2

Thermal underwear
Flame retardant suit
Public order gloves

Prisoners (Early Release)

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will review whether members of the UVF should qualify for early release under the terms of the Northern Ireland (Sentences) Act 1998. [97821]

Mr. Ingram: The situation with regard to the maintenance of the ceasefires is kept under continual review.

If there is evidence that in balance an organisation is not maintaining its ceasefire, the Government will not hesitate to take action.

Quinn Murders

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if the person recently found guilty of the murder of the Quinn children has been accepted in the prison as a member of the UVF group there. [97822]

Mr. Ingram: The prisoner in question is serving his life sentence at HMP Maghaberry, a fully integrated establishment with no facility for segregation according to paramilitary affiliation. He has not made any application to be transferred to HMP Maze, nor have the UVF prisoners there made any representations for transfer on his behalf.

Child Care (Expenditure)

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what additional funding, excluding funds for training, was provided to each of the health and social services boards for implementation of the Children (NI) Order 1995 in the financial years 1995–96 to date. [97688]

Mr. George Howarth: The information requested is given in the table.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Community Legal Service

35. Angela Smith: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement about the Community Legal Service and the services it will provide. [96383]

Mr. Lock: The Community Legal Service will provide local networks of good quality legal services, based for the first time on local needs and priorities. They will work towards providing a seamless service to the public through an active referral system, so people will receive the right service, of the right quality, at the right price to allow them to resolve disputes, enforce their rights or seek the protection of the courts.

Family Law

36. Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what steps he is taking to promote the interests of children and families in court proceedings. [96384]

Jane Kennedy: One of the major initiatives my Department is taking forward is the setting up of the Children and Family Court Advisory Service. It brings together the Family Court Welfare Service function, provided by the Probation Service, the Children's Branch of the Official Solicitor's Department and the Guardian ad Litem and Reporting Officer Service. This will protect the interests of children and families in the court system.

Magistracy

37. Mr. Swayne: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement on progress in the reform of selection criteria for magistrates. [96385]

Jane Kennedy: The Lord Chancellor set out the personal qualities required for appointment in his Directions for Advisory Committees on Justices of the Peace issued in August 1998. Advisory Committees must take into account the need for benches to be balanced in terms of gender, ethnic origin, occupation, place of residence and social 'background'. Since the beginning of this century, social background has been linked to party affiliation. This has been supported by successive Lord Chancellors. This Government are not, however, convinced that political balance is an adequate proxy and an alternative is being sought.

Rural Magistrates Courts

38. Mr. Paterson: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement on his policy on rural magistrates courts. [96387]

39. Mr. Luff: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement on his policy towards magistrates courts in rural England. [96388]

Jane Kennedy: The Government's policy is that magistrates courts are best managed locally by magistrates courts committees under the provisions of the Justices of the Peace Act 1997. Decisions concerning the future of magistrates courts in their area, whether rural or urban, are for the relevant magistrates courts committee to determine.

Motoring Offences (Magistrates)

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what training magistrates receive for dealing with motoring offenders in the ways most effective for reducing re-offending. [96641]

Jane Kennedy [holding answer 3 November 1999]: The training of magistrates is the responsibility of the magistrates courts committees within a framework approved by the Lord Chancellor. Magistrates must acquire specified competences necessary to perform their role, some of which relate to motoring offences. Magistrates also have access to detailed sentencing guidelines, produced by the Magistrates Association, some of which are specific to traffic offences. Magistrates are made aware of the availability of national and local initiatives which are designed to re-educate motoring offenders.

Law Commission's Reports

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when he expects to respond (a) to the Law Commission's report of March 1998 on liability for psychiatric illness and (b) to the Law Commission's report of December 1997 on aggravated and exemplary damages. [97540]

Mr. Lock: I am pleased to be able to announce that the Government accept the recommendations on aggravated and restitutionary damages that the Law Commission made in "Aggravated, Exemplary and Restitutionary Damages" (Law Com Rep No. 247). They will legislate when a suitable legislative opportunity arises.

This Report also made recommendations for legislation on exemplary, or punitive, damages. The Government are grateful to the Law Commission for its important and painstaking work on this subject, and to those who expressed their views during the Law Commission's consultation exercises on the topic. The contending arguments for a complete legislative overhaul of exemplary damages, as recommended by the Law Commission, or abolition as preferred by many commentators, are finely balanced. In the absence of a clear consensus on the issue the Government have decided not to take forward the Law Commission's proposals for legislation on exemplary damages. It may be that some further judicial development of the law in this area might help clarify the issues.

The Government have carefully considered the Law Commission's recommendations in its Report on "Liability for Psychiatric Illness" (Law Com Rep No. 249). They believe that it would be worthwhile to undertake a comprehensive assessment of the individual and aggregate effects of the proposals for legislation that are contained in this Report and "Damages for Personal Injury: Medical, Nursing and Other Expenses; Collateral Benefits" (Law Com Rep No. 262) and "Claims for Wrongful Death" (Law Com Rep No. 263). I have asked my officials to undertake the assessment in co-ordination with officials from the other Departments which have an interest in the outcome. It is hoped that the full assessment will be available to inform the Government's final decision on the Law Commission's proposals early next year.

This assessment is only concerned with those Reports which recommend legislation concerning eligibility for damages and the size of damages awards. It will not consider "Damages for Personal Injury: Non-Pecuniary Loss (Law Commission Report No. 257)", in which the Law Commission offers opinions of which the courts are free to take such account, if any, as they choose in the assessment of damages. This is an area of law which is in the courts' independefit sphere and where the Government have no plans to legislate.

Social Security Commissioners

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department for each of the last three years, what is (a) the average, (b) the longest and (c) the median time taken by Social Security Commissioners between conducting an appeal hearing and reaching a decision. [97538]

Jane Kennedy: The data requested are not held centrally and could be provided only by referring to each individual case file, which would be at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department for each of the last three years, what is (a) the average, (b) the longest and (c) the median length of time between the lodging of an appeal to the Social Security Commissioners and the hearing of the appeal. [97537]

Jane Kennedy: The information is not available in the form requested. However, many appeals are determined without a hearing. The average waiting time from the lodging of an appeal to the Commissioner's decision for each of the last three years is as follows; 1996—54.75 weeks, 1997—54.64 weeks and 1998—64.27 weeks. The average waiting time in 1999 to the end of September is 50.9 weeks.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department for each of the last three years, what is the (a) average, (b) longest and (c) median number of appeals (i) heard and (ii) decided by Social Security Commissioners. [97539]

Jane Kennedy: The data are not available in the form requested and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. However, the table gives the number of appeals determined in each year and the number of oral hearings conducted by the Commissioners.

Year	Appeals determined	Oral hearings
1996	4,197	340
1997	3,926	326
1998	4,317	254

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department for each of the last three years, how many appeals were lodged with the Social Security Commissioners; and how many were successful (a) in full and (b) in part. [97536]

Jane Kennedy: The number of appeals lodged and the number of appeals which were successful are detailed in the table. Information is not kept as to whether appeals were successful in full or in part and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Year	Appeals lodged	Appeals determined	Appeals determined in Claimant's favour
1996	3,731	4,197	1,909
1997	3,400	3,926	2,939
1998	2,688	4,317	3,210

SOCIAL SECURITY

Child Support Agency

Mr. Peter Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what proportion of complaints against the CSA are investigated (a) by the Independent Case Examiner and (b) by the Parliamentary Ombudsman; [96763]

(2) what is the current backlog of CSA investigations; and what is his estimate of the length of time needed to clear the backlog (a) with the Independent Complaints Examiner and (b) with the Ombudsman; [96759]

(3) how many staff the Independent Case Examiner for the Child Support Agency employs; how many are investigating officers; and what plans he has for further recruitment; [96761]

(4) what is the trend in the numbers of complaints against the CSA being made to (a) the Independent Complaints Commissioner and (b) the Ombudsman; [96760]

(5) what is the average time for the completion of (a) Independent Case Examiners and (b) Parliamentary Ombudsman investigations of CSA cases (i) from the time when the cause for complaint arises; (ii) from the submission of a complaint and (iii) from the start of the investigation. [96762]

Angela Eagle: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mrs. Faith Boardman. She will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Mike Isaac to Mr. Peter Bradley, dated 5 November 1999:

In Faith Boardman's absence, as Deputy Chief Executive, I am replying to your Parliamentary Questions about the Independent Case Examiner (ICE) for the Child Support Agency and the Ombudsman.

During 1998/99 28,073 complaints were received by the Agency, 1,536 (5.18%) were received by ICE and 45 (0.15%) were accepted by the Ombudsman for full investigation, a total of 29,654. This total includes cases double counted where they were first dealt with by CSA and then by ICE/Ombudsman.

It may be of interest to note that the 28,073 complaints received by CSA represents a 0.7% increase over the previous year. However, our caseload increased by 22% to 923,960. As a percentage of caseload the complaints rate for the year reduced by 17%.

ICE have 195 cases awaiting investigation and, if intake levels remain unchanged, they would expect this number to reduce to around 50 by March 2000. I cannot answer the part of your question about the Ombudsman's backlog, if indeed there is one, because that is not a matter for the Department of Social Security or its Agencies. Similarly with your questions about trends and clearance times, I would suggest that you approach the Ombudsman's office directly.

46 staff are currently employed by ICE, of which 38 are engaged in investigation work. There are no plans to recruit additional staff.

I have attached a month by month breakdown of the numbers of complaints received by ICE. It is clear from this that the first six months of ICE operation were unrepresentative. You will see that since October 1997, following publication of their first Annual Report, there is no discernible trend up or down, especially as a percentage of the Agency's rising caseload.

No records are held which would allow your question about clearance times to be fully answered without revisiting all cases to extract the information required. However, ICE do record the time taken from receipt of a complaint in the ICE office. Up to the end of September 1999 the average clearance time for a complaint is 29.8 weeks.

A process was introduced in 1998/99 which allows appropriate cases to be identified and referred to the Child Support Agency for early resolution of the problem by taking prompt action. Thus negating the need for a full investigation by ICE. One effect of this initiative is to lengthen the average time taken to resolve those complaints where early resolution proved impossible and full investigation was needed.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 27 October 1999, Official Report, columns 875–76, if he will estimate the number of non-resident parents who, because they receive income support or other related benefit, are deemed by the Child Support Agency to have nil maintenance liability. [96979]

Angela Eagle: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mrs. Faith Boardman. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Mike Isaac to Mr. Steve Webb, dated 5 November 1999:

In Faith Boardman's absence, as Deputy Chief Executive, I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his Answer of 27 October (Official report, columns 875–6).

Table 3.3 on page 31 of the Child Support Agency Quarterly Summary of Statistics for May 1999, the latest published figures, provides an estimate of 289,400 non-resident parents in receipt of Income Support/Job Seekers Allowance Income Based with nil maintenance liability.

I hope this is helpful.

State Pension

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for North Tayside (Mr. Swinney) of 27 October 1999, Official Report, column 876, on the state pension, what rates of increase in average earnings were assumed in calculating the cost of uprating the basic pension in line with earnings. [97555]

Mr. Rooker: The assumed annual rate of increase in average earnings is 4.3 per cent. throughout the period.

Note:

Average earnings growth is based on a DSS assumption which is broadly consistent with the average of independent (non-Government) forecasts.

Observatory on Family Matters

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what function is performed by, the Observatory on Family Matters, appointed by the European Commission; what are its (a) terms of reference and (b) annual cost; and who represents Her Majesty's Government on it. [97955]

Angela Eagle: The European Observatory on National Family Policies is the responsibility of the European Commission. I understand that its membership involves academics who produce annual reports monitoring family policy in each member state at a cost to the European Commission of £400,000 annually. The Government are not represented on the Observatory but the current UK national expert is Ceridwen Roberts of the Family Policy Study Centre.

SCOTLAND

European Structural Funds

9. Ms Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the criteria for eligibility for EU structural funds in Scotland. [96353]

Mr. Wilson: The framework for the new round of Structural Funds was set by decisions at the Berlin Summit in March 1999. As elsewhere in Great Britain, the criteria relate to industrial decline, urban deprivation, declining rural areas and fisheries dependency.

20. Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received on the recent list of areas eligible for European structural funding in Scotland, compiled by UK ministers and sent to the European Commission for approval; and if he will make a statement. [96365]

Mr. Wilson: The detailed proposals for Scotland were based on recommendations by the Scottish Executive, prepared in close consultation with my department. Both I and the Scottish Executive have received a number of representations from different parts of Scotland, including from the North East. The Scottish Executive has made it clear that in implementing Structural Funds it will want to see transitional support concentrated on the highest priority areas which were not included in the proposals for full Objective 2 coverage.

27. Mr. Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the prospects for the Scottish economy following the publication of the Government proposals on assisted areas and Objective 2 funds. [96372]

Mr. Wilson: Proposed new assisted areas announced in July provide continuing coverage for locations which account for a very high proportion of regional selective assistance awarded over recent years. Proposals for Objective 2 coverage put forward in October represent a fair balance between pressing needs in urban and rural Scotland, while transitional funding will be available for areas no longer covered by Objective 2 and Objective 5b. In each case the outcome should minimise any economic impact of the overall reduction in coverage being imposed for the period from January 2000.

Memorandum of Understanding

10. Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if, when he last met the First Minister, they discussed the memorandum of understanding and the implementation of concordats. [96354]

Dr. Reid: The First Minister and I have frequent meetings at which we discuss matters of mutual concern and interest. The Memorandum of Understanding and the overarching concordats, reinforce the principle of devolution which is that we have a Partnership of Parliaments. That is why the First Minister and I launched them jointly on 1 October.

New Deal

11. Mr. Ernie Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the operation of the new deal in Scotland. [96355]

Dr. Reid: Thanks to the New Deal, 38,000 young people in Scotland so far have better prospects of long term employability and the self respect which comes from participation in work and society.

Small Business

12. Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent representations he has made to the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry regarding the competitiveness of small firms in Scotland. [96356]

Mr. Wilson: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry published a consultation paper about the Small Business Service in June. 98 per cent. of businesses in Scotland employ less than 50 people and they account for around 45 per cent. of non-Government jobs. I, with my right hon. Friend, will consider how any measures within reserved competence can be applied most effectively in Scotland.

Single Currency

14. Mr. St. Aubyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what preparations his Department is making for the possible effects of entry of the UK into the eurozone on inward investment in Scotland. [96359]

Mr. Wilson: International investors look keenly at the stability of economies in making their decisions. This Government's commitment to lasting economic stability will ensure that, in or out of the single currency, Scotland and the UK offer the best possible climate for business investment and growth.

Coalfield Communities

15. Mr. Eric Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what progress has been made through the Government task force on investment in the Scottish coalfield communities. [96360]

Mr. Wilson: The Coalfields Task Force is a UK wide initiative and an announcement on the allocation of the Coalfield Regeneration Trust's funding for Scotland will be made on 22 November.

Agriculture

16. Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on his recent discussions with the First Minister on the representation of Scottish agricultural issues at UKREP. [96361]

Dr. Reid: I have had a number of recent discussions with the First Minister on concordats in general and on the EU concordat in particular.

Meat Trade (Europe)

17. Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received from the Scottish Executive concerning meat exports and imports to the European Union. [96362]

Mr. Wilson: My right hon. Friend has had no formal representations from the Scottish Executive on this issue but I am fully aware of how important it is to Scotland.

Clothing Industry

18. Mr. Connarty: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met representatives of business and trade unions to discuss employment in the clothing industry in Scotland; and if he will make a statement. [96363]

Mr. Wilson: My right hon. Friend has had the opportunity on a number of recent occasions to discuss, formally and informally, employment in the clothing industry in Scotland.

Beef Industry

19. Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on prospects for the Scottish beef industry. [96364]

Mr. Wilson: This is a matter for the Scottish Executive.

City Status

21. Mr. Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the granting of city status to Scottish towns. [96366]

22. Mrs. Irene Adams: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recommendations he has made to the Home Secretary regarding Scottish towns bidding for city status. [96367]

Dr. Reid: The competition for city status has attracted bids from four Scottish towns. Each of the towns has put in a good bid and each is deserving of further consideration. They all have unique qualities, including rich histories and Royal connections. I was particularly struck by their quality and the degree of local support they have each generated. I think it right that all four bids should have the opportunity to compete in the final stages, and I have therefore, indicated my support, to the Home Secretary, for all Scottish bids.

Working Families Tax Credit

23. Mr. Savidge: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent representations he has made to the Chancellor of the Exchequer regarding the number of people in Scotland who will be able to benefit from the working families tax credit; and if he will make a statement. [96368]

Dr. Reid: I congratulate my right hon. Friend the Chancellor on the introduction of the Working Families Tax Credit, which could benefit up to 140,000 families in Scotland. People who think they may be eligible can ring a freephone number—0800 597 5976—to check eligibility and get application forms. 24,000 Scots have already done so. Those currently receiving Family Credit will automatically be sent an application form.

Anti-drugs Strategy

25. Mrs. McKenna: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions he has held with the First Minister on the co-ordination of the Government's anti-drugs strategy. [96370]

Dr. Reid: I meet regularly with the First Minister and discuss a range of topics. The Government's anti-drugs strategy is on the agenda for our meeting immediately after my meeting next month with the Government's Anti-Drugs Co-ordinator.

Fuel Poverty

26. Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions he had with the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions on determining the proportion of total resources for tackling fuel poverty and cold homes which were allocated to Scotland. [96371]

Mr. Wilson: Discussions on the allocation of resources to Scotland for the years 1999/2000 to 2001/02 began under my right hon. Friend's predecessor. They were concluded after 1 July 1999, when responsibility for the subject had passed to the Scottish Executive.

National Air Traffic Services

28. Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has made to the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions on the future of National Air Traffic Services; and if he will make a statement. [96373]

Dr. Reid: The Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions is fully aware that the Scotland Office supports the Government's commitment to maintaining, and improving wherever necessary, some of the most stringent aviation safety standards in the world. We also support the public/private partnership which will ensure the separation of safety regulation from the provision of air traffic control services. The Government's commitment to the New Scottish Centre at Prestwick is secure through the partnership arrangements.

Oil and Gas Industry

29. Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has made to the oil and gas industry task force; and if he will make a statement. [96374]

Mr. Wilson: I participated in the most recent meeting of the Oil and Gas Task Force on 5 October, and expect to attend the last meeting of the Task Force in its current form, which is due to be held in early December. I am taking a very close interest in the oil industry and its service sector because we believe that it will continue to be enormously important to the UK economy for many years to come. We wish to see the industry and Government continue to work in partnership, with the objective being the maintenance of a vital UK Continental Shelf and the recognition of the UK as a world centre for the global oil and gas business.

Food Safety

Miss Begg: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the steps being taken by the United Kingdom Government to improve food safety in Scotland. [96369]

Mr. Wilson: The UK Government are working with the devolved authorities to implement a UK-wide Food Standards Agency. Food safety is a devolved matter and the Agency will provide, through its Scottish arm, advice to the Scottish Executive.

Departmental Accounts

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what methods of depreciation his Department will apply in the current financial year to fixed assets in the preparation of departmental resource accounting balance sheets. [97040]

Dr. Reid: Freehold land is not depreciated. Depreciation on other tangible fixed assets will be provided using the straight line method. This is in accordance with the Treasury's Resource Accounting Manual and Financial Reporting Standard 15 "Tangible Fixed Assets" issued by the Accounting Standards Board.

Entertainments Budget

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what has been the entertainments budget for his Department since June in total; and if he will list the Scottish organisations he has met since June. [96717]

Dr. Reid [holding answer 3 November 1999]: From 1 July to 31 October the Scotland Office has spent £80 on official entertainment. I and my ministerial colleagues have met a number of organisations representing a wide range of Scottish interests.

Coal Industry

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last had meetings with representatives of the Scottish opencast coal industry; and what issues were discussed. [R] [97682]

Mr. Wilson: I met with Mr. Campbell Christie, a Director of The Scottish Coal Company Ltd, on 12 October 1999 to discuss transport of coal by rail.

TREASURY

Medical Equipment (VAT)

Dr. Brand: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received relating to the differences in treatment for VAT between medical appliances donated to hospitals for named patients and the same items donated to hospital wards. [96448]

Dawn Primarolo: No representations have been received relating to differences in treatment for VAT between medical appliances donated to named patients or to hospital wards. This is because the VAT treatment of goods donated to an NHS hospital is the same whether the goods are for a ward or named patient.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will assess the advantages and disadvantages of exempting patient participation groups from VAT on their purchases of medical equipment; [97260]

(2) for what reasons some charitable bodies are exempt from VAT on medical equipment and others are not. [97261]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 5 November 1999]: There is VAT relief for medical equipment bought by charitable patient participation groups when it is donated to National Health Service bodies, charity run hospitals and research institutions operating on a not for profit basis, first aid or rescue charities or charities providing care to disabled people. This relief benefits public and charitable health care providers. There is no scope to extend VAT relief to medical equipment bought by patient participation groups for any other purpose.

New Jobs (Pay Rates)

Mr. Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what information his Department collates on the rates of pay of new jobs as a proportion of average earnings; [96237]

(2) what proportion of new jobs pay (a) below half average earnings, (b) from half average earnings up to average earnings, (c) from average earnings to twice average earnings and from (d) twice average earnings to five times average earnings and above for a convenient period for which he has data. [96236]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 29 October 1999]: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Frank Field, dated 9 November 1999:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your parliamentary questions about the earnings of people in new jobs.

The ONS is not able to identify people in newly created jobs. However, the Labour Force Survey (LFS) does collect data on the earnings of employees and on the length of time people have worked for their current employer. LFS estimates of the distribution of the hourly earnings of those who recently joined their employer relative to the average for all employees are shown in the attached table.

Data for those earning more than five times average hourly earnings have been combined with that for two to five times average earnings because the sample size in the former group is too small for the estimate to be shown separately. The distribution for all employees is also shown. We cannot know how many of these jobs in the former group are newly created and it would be difficult to collect such information reliably from a household survey such as the LFS. Nor does the New Earnings Survey ask employers whether a job is newly created.

Welfare Reform and Pensions Bill

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the effect of changes in the definition of employment for self-employed contractors contained in the Welfare Reform and Pensions Bill; and on what basis he has calculated the effect of such changes to the status of employment. [97112]

Dawn Primarolo: Our assumption is that the number of workers covered by the normal employment status tests will not be significantly different from the number which would have been covered by the "control" test, though the population is likely to be different. Any variation would be within the margin of error of the original estimate. The revised Regulatory Impact Assessment published in October, a copy of which is placed in the Library, sets out the likely impact of the changes we announced on 23 September.

Expatriate Scots (England)

Mr. Jim Murphy: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the number of Scots who have been resident in England in each of the last five years. [97369]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Jim Murphy, dated 9 November 1999:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your parliamentary question asking what estimates have been made of the number of Scots who have been resident in England in each of the last five years.

The ONS is not able to make estimates of the number of Scots resident in England.

Young People (Employment)

Mr. Pike: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what data he has collated concerning the numbers of 18 to 25 year olds moving from the North to the South of England to seek employment; and if he will make a statement. [97572]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Peter Pike, dated 9 November 1999:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your parliamentary question about young people moving from the North to the South of England to seek employment.

The ONS does not collect information on the reasons why people move from one area of England to another. The Labour Force Survey (LFS) does collect information on people's region of residence and employment status, both current and a year ago. One might infer that people who had not been in employment and who had moved and were either employed or actively seeking and available for work a year later may have moved in order to seek employment. However, LFS estimates for the geographies and age group specified are below the LFS release threshold. This release threshold (10,000 for one quarter's LFS data) arises because, like any other sample survey, the LFS is subject to sampling variability. Numbers below the threshold are not considered sufficiently reliable to release.

Departmental Expenditure Limit

Ms Lawrence: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what changes are proposed to the Inland Revenue's Departmental Expenditure Limit and running costs limit for 1999–2000. [97919]

Dawn Primarolo: Subject to parliamentary approval of the Supplementary Estimates for Class XVI, Votes 4 and 5 (Inland Revenue and Valuation Office Agency) the Inland Revenue Departmental Expenditure Limit for 1999–2000 will be increased by £297,235,000 from £1,871,226,000 to £2,168,461,000. The Inland Revenue running cost limit will also be increased by £28,351,000 from £2,140,489,000 to £2,168,840,000.

The increase is due to the transfer to the Inland Revenue of the Contributions Agency and the National Insurance Fund funded by transfers from DSS and DHSS(NI) and the take up of end year flexibility of £950,000 by the Valuation Office.

The increase will be offset by transfers or charged to the DEL Reserve and will not add therefore to the planned total of public expenditure.

Pensions (Tax Treatment)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will take steps to ensure equal tax treatment of contributions to state and occupational pension schemes. [97619]

Dawn Primarolo: Tax relief is given on contributions for occupational and personal pension schemes to encourage people to make pension provision for their retirement. Adopting the same treatment on contributions for state pensions would result in a significant loss to the Exchequer which would have to be made good by an increase in the rate of taxation, or by corresponding reductions in other tax allowances.

Enterprise Investment Schemes

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many enterprise investment schemes were undertaken in (a) 1997 and (b) 1998. [97717]

Dawn Primarolo: Available information on the number of small unquoted companies raising money by issuing shares under the Enterprise Investment Scheme, and the number and amount of subscriptions, are shown in the table. The table is based on company returns received up to July 1999. However, because of time lags in the receipt of claims, figures for more recent years are less complete than for earlier years. In particular, information for 1998–99 gives a very partial picture.

Enterprise Investment Scheme: companies, subscriptions and amount invested

Year	Number of companies	Number of subscriptions	Amount (£ million)
1996–97	643	8,765	59.6
1997–98	615	10,305	56.7
1998–99	464	8,192	40.5

EC Goods

Dr. Brand: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list those goods legally available in other European Community countries which cannot be brought into the United Kingdom. [97647]

Dawn Primarolo: I regret that this information, which would require detailed comparison of relevant UK legislation with that of all other Member States, is not available.

Official Engagements

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his official engagements were between 3.30 p.m. and 7 p.m. on Wednesday 3 November. [97749]

Mr. Gordon Brown [holding answer 8 November 1999]: I had meetings at the Treasury and visited the London Stock Exchange to launch Techmark, the London Stock Exchange's new technology market. At 7 p.m. I voted in the division following the debate on Lords Amendment 42 to the Welfare Reform and Pensions Bill.

Personal Service Companies

Mr. Jack: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many individuals trading as personal service companies are currently (a) on contract to HM Treasury, (b) on contract to the Inland Revenue and (c) employed by EDS in pursuance of their contractual obligations to the Inland Revenue. [97295]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 8 November 1999]: It is not possible to say how many individuals trading as personal service companies are currently on contract to (a) HM Treasury, (b) the Inland Revenue or employed by EDS in pursuance of their contractual obligations to the Inland Revenue.

Gold

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how, and under whose authority, the London gold bullion market is supervised; and what reporting requirements exist in gold bullion trades to prevent the manipulation of the gold market. [97394]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 8 November 1999]: The London bullion market is regulated by the Financial Services Authority in accordance with the principles of the London Code of Conduct. The Code sets out general standards of behaviour and conduct, and appropriate systems and controls, for market participants to adopt when transacting business in gold. The Code also sets out procedures to be followed should there be complaints about non-compliance.

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what procedure was followed to sell gold from Britain's reserves. [97395]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 8 November 1999]: As announced on 7 May 1999 the sale of part of the United Kingdom's gold holdings will be through a programme of five auctions in 1999–2000. The Information Memorandum, issued by the Bank of England on behalf of HM Treasury, details the arrangements and terms and conditions for the auctions in 1999–2000.

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are the official gold reserves expressed in tonnes of (a) Germany, (b) France and (c) Italy; and what will be the gold reserves expressed in tonnes of the United Kingdom after the completion of the gold sales programme announced on 7 May. [97396]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 8 November 1999]: Figures on the gold holdings of other countries can be found in the IMF's International Financial Statistics. Over the medium term the Government are planning to reduce their gold holdings to around 300 tonnes.

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if the United Kingdom would continue to (a) own and (b) control its gold reserves if Britain were to join the single European currency after January 2002. [97393]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 8 November 1999]: If the United Kingdom joined stage 3 of Economic and Monetary Union the provisions of Article 31 of the Statute of the European System of Central Banks (Protocol No. 3 to the EU Treaty) would apply.

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what consultation took place with other Governments and central banks prior to the announcement on 7 May about the sale of the United Kingdom's gold reserve. [97397]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 8 November 1999]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the right hon. Member for Horsham (Mr. Maude) on 13 July 1999, Official Report, column 184.

Tax Documents

Ms Lawrence: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he plans to publish the next Tax Ready Reckoner and Tax Reliefs document; and if he will make a statement. [98160]

Dawn Primarolo: The Treasury will today be publishing a booklet containing the estimate of the effects of various illustrative tax changes on tax receipts in 2000–01 and 2001–02 (plus 2002–03 for indirect taxes) and estimates of the costs of the main tax reliefs in 1998–99 and 1999–2000. Copies are being placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Income Tax

Mr. Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer under what head voluntary contributions to HM Treasury as a supplement to income tax are classified; and how much was received under this head in the last financial year. [97493]

Dawn Primarolo: Voluntary contributions as a supplement to income tax are included in the published figures for income tax receipts. Reliable figures for this sub-category are not readily available.

Mr. Michael J. Foster: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the amount of income tax paid was per resident taxpayer in each county in England for the latest year for which data are available. [96412]

Dawn Primarolo: The latest available estimates of income taxpayer numbers and the average income and income tax liability by region and county are published in Table 3.13 of "Inland Revenue Statistics 1999" which is available in the Library of the House.

Household Incomes

Mr. Michael J. Foster: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the average gross weekly household income was for each county in England for the latest year for which data are available. [96413]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Michael J. Foster, dated 9 November 1999:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your recent question on average gross weekly household income for each county in England, for the latest available year.

The latest figures published by the ONS for household income by county are for 1995 and were published in Table 9 of "Regional Accounts 1995: part 2, Economic Trends no. 535, June 1998". Estimates for household income by region, up to 1997, were published in "Regional Accounts 1997: part 2, Economic Trends no. 551, October 1999". Both of these publications are available in the House of Commons Library. Sub-regional estimates of household income in the future will be based on different geographies, owing largely to the reorganisation of local government throughout Great Britain. The first estimates on this basis will be published in the first half of 2000, and will include data for more recent years.

The figures available relate to the income of the household sector, as defined for the purposes of national and regional accounts. In addition to private households, this includes charities, voluntary and other non-profit organisations, and quasi-corporations.

The published figures are normally presented in terms of total annual household income per head of population. The 1995 total income estimates figures, converted to weekly averages for all English counties, are given in the attached table.

Departmental Assets

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the value of (a) fixed assets, property and land and (b) moveable assets owned by the Government and its agencies (i) in the United Kingdom and (ii) in Scotland. [97296]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Office for National Statistics recently estimated the market value of United Kingdom public sector, tangible, non-financial assets at 31 December 1998 to be £483.3 billion. Of this, £450.3 billion represents land and property and £33 billion represents movable assets (including stocks). These estimates are published in the November edition of Economic Trends (pages 53–68). The figures are provisional and not yet formally part of the National Accounts but updated numbers are expected to be published in the 2000 edition of the National Accounts Blue Book. Separate figures for Scotland are not available.

In addition, the National Asset Register, published in November 1997, lists all central government owned assets by Department, including the then Scottish Office, without valuations. Departments are preparing balance sheets as part of the move to Resource Accounting and Budgeting.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Class Sizes

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many pupils in Key Stage 2 were in classes of 41 or more taught by one teacher in maintained primary schools (a) on 1 May 1997 and (b) according to the most recent available figures. [94923]

Ms Estelle Morris: We do not have information for May 1997 but in January 1997 there were 1,020 pupils in Key Stage 2 in classes of 41 or more, in January 1998 there were 2,390, and in January 1999 there were 1,690. Primary class sizes, including those at Key Stage 2, rose consistently under the previous administration from 1988 to 1998, reflecting the spending decisions and priorities of the time. Between January 1998 and January 1999, reflecting the first budget of this administration, the number of primary pupils in classes over 30 fell from 1,411,366 to 1,278,607 and new figures for Key Stage 1 will be published shortly. The proportion of children in Key Stage 2 classes over 30 fell from 40 per cent. to 39 per cent. between January 1998 and January 1999. This information was published in the statistical volume "Statistics of Education Schools in England" earlier this year, copies of which have been placed in the Library.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the local education authorities with pupils in classes of 41 or more taught by one teacher (a) in maintained secondary schools and (b) in Key Stage 2 in maintained primary schools, indicating how many such pupils there are in each case. [94926]

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) how many pupils were in classes of 41 or more taught by one teacher in maintained secondary schools (a) on 1 May 1997 and (b) according to the most recent available figures; [94925]

(2) how many pupils were in classes of 31 or more pupils taught by one teacher in maintained schools (a) on 1 May 1997 and (b) on the latest date for which figures are available. [95328]

Ms Estelle Morris: We have published the following information on numbers of pupils in maintained schools in England taught by one teacher in classes of over 31 pupils and of over 41 in the statistical volume "Statistics of Education Schools in England", copies of which have been placed in the Library. We do not have information for May 1997, so we have given in the table the position in both January 1997 and January 1998. Primary and secondary class sizes rose consistently under the previous Administration from 1988 to 1998, reflecting the spending decisions and priorities of the time. The fall in the number of pupils in large classes in 1999 follows the first budget of this Administration.

Year	Number pupils in secondary schools in classes of 41	Number pupils in classes of 31 in primary and secondary schools
1997	470	1,589,651
1998	1,630	1,693,999
1999	1,580	1,591,581

The average secondary class remains 6 smaller than the average primary class. Most secondary classes are subject related and these figures do not reflect the varied size of different sets and subject related classes. The Government, in line with Ofsted evidence and most experts, believe that they should concentrate resources on reducing infant class sizes where the numbers in classes over 30 are expected to have fallen from 477,000 in 1997 to below 200,000 in September 1999.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many pupils were taught in classes of 41 or more in nursery classes (a) on 1 May 1997 and (b) according to the most recent figures available. [94927]

Ms Estelle Morris: The information requested for May 1997 is not available. In 1999, there were a total of 309 pupils in nursery classes of 41 or more where the Annual School Census reported there was one teacher and no other adult. In all cases, they were involved in activities such as PE, games, drama, music, watching TV or listening to the radio. There were no cases of normal nursery classes with a single teacher in charge of more than 40 pupils.

The information in the following table sets out the child:adult ratio for all nursery classes with one teacher for 1997, 1998 and 1999.

Year	Child:adult ratio for all nursery classes with one teacher
1997	11.4
1998	11.3
1999	11.3

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to his letter of 27 October to the hon. Member for Hertsmere on infant class sizes, if he will break down the figure of 6,000 extra teachers according to type of school indicating the overall net change in the number of teachers taking account of teachers who leave the profession. [96771]

Ms Estelle Morris: Revenue grant is allocated to Local Education Authorities on condition that it is used to employ the additional teachers set out in their approved class size plans. It is for LEAs, in consultation with their schools, to draw up their plans and to determine exactly how they should be implemented. We do not therefore hold precise information breaking down the additional teachers by type of school, but approximately 60 per cent. of teachers will be employed in Community schools, 25 per cent. in VA schools, 2 per cent. in Foundation schools and the remainder in VC schools: broadly in line with the number of primary schools in each category.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to the answer of 3 November 1999, Official Report, column 201, on class sizes in primary schools, what factors underlay his decision to restrict the collection of data to classes for five, six and seven-year-olds. [97932]

Ms Estelle Morris: The September Class Size Count is designed specifically to monitor the implementation of our Infant Class Size Pledge. It also keeps to a minimum any data collection burden placed on schools and local education authorities at a very busy time of year for them.

Good quality monitoring information is essential to the effective implementation of the Pledge, to ensure that local education authorities are carrying out their class size plans as agreed, to enable the Government to support local education authorities effectively as they do so, to inform the allocation of funding and to help to ensure that good value for public funds is achieved. The results of the count also enable us to take further action quickly at the start of the school year to promote the implementation of the pledge, if this is necessary. Since more comprehensive information from the Annual School Census is not generally available until April, it does not serve these immediate purposes.

Partly as a result of effective monitoring of the pledge, the Government is on target to achieve its target that no 5, 6 or 7 year old should be in an infant class of more than 30 children in virtually all schools by September 2000—18 months ahead of schedule. This September, there were 181,000 children in large infant classes, as compared to 354,000 in September 1998.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when he plans to answer the questions of 21 October from the hon. Member for Hertsmere regarding nursery class sizes, secondary school class sizes of 41 or more, classes of 31 or more in maintained schools and lists of local education authorities with classes of over 41 at Key Stage 2 and secondary level. [97885]

Ms Estelle Morris: Replies to all of these questions have been given today, at columns 518-522.

Departmental Estate

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will publish a list of assets sold by his Department and their value, by item, in each year since 1991–92; and if he will estimate the value of sales planned for (a) 1999–2000 and (b) 2000–01. [95645]

Mr. Wills [holding answer 8 November 1999]: The publication of a list of assets sold by the Department and their value, by item in each year since 1991–92 cannot be supplied except at a disproportionate cost to the Department. We can however supply details of total value of asset by type from 1991–92 to 1996–97 and the latter part of 1998–99 (see Table 1). Details for 1997–98 and 1998–99 up to December 1998 were given in the reply by my hon. Friend the Member for Leeds, East (Mr. Mudie) on 23 February 1999, Official Report, columns 278–81.

The estimate of the value of sales planned for 1999–2000 and 2000–01 is shown in Table 2. Tables 1 and 2 set out the information for the Department and exclude non departmental public bodies and local education authorities.

Remploy

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the dates and venues of visits made to Remploy factories by the Parliamentary Under-Secretary. [96766]

Ms Hodge: The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Education and Employment visited the Barking Remploy factory on 26 March 1999 and the Southampton Remploy factory on 10 May 1999. When she was at Southampton the Minister also met Remploy Interwork employees at their placements. In addition she has visited the Newco factory in Central London which provides supported employment for disabled people. She also receives regular feedback from senior Employment Service officials on their factory visits.

Sex Education

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is his policy on teaching five-year-olds about homosexual practices. [97101]

Ms Estelle Morris: The Government do not believe such lessons are appropriate for five-year-olds.

Teacher Training Agency

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what analysis his Department has undertaken of the impact of decisions by the Teacher Training Agency to withdraw funding from teacher training institutions on the number of primary and secondary school teachers completing initial teacher training courses; and if he will make a statement. [97269]

Ms Estelle Morris: The Teacher Training Agency (TTA) withdraws accreditation from teacher training institutions whose quality is judged by Ofsted to be unsatisfactory. Where this happens, the training places and funding are withdrawn and reallocated to high quality providers. Therefore, there should be no reduction in the number of trainees in the system as a whole, and no impact on overall numbers of primary and secondary teachers completing initial teacher training courses. The work of the TTA in improving the quality of initial teacher training is crucial to the Government's standards agenda.

Primary Pupils (Spending)

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to his answers of 16 April 1999, Official Report, column 381, and 1 July 1999, Official Report, column 245, on primary school pupils, if he will list the money spent per primary age pupil (a) from local education authorities, (b) from central Government and (c) in total in (i) 1996–97, (ii) 1997–98 and (iii) 1998–99 for each local education authority ranked in descending order of total spend. [97646]

Ms Estelle Morris: In my reply to my hon. Friend's earlier questions to which he refers I explained that information for 1998–99 in the form in which it was requested was not yet available, and the situation is still unchanged. I will write to my hon. Friend when the figures he requests are available, and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library.

Performance-related Pay

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what appeal procedures will be available to teachers who are dissatisfied with their assessment under performance-related pay. [97937]

Ms Estelle Morris: Under the proposed arrangements for the new performance threshold, heads would assess teachers against the threshold standards. Accredited external assessors would work with heads to ensure national consistency. There will be no appeals against individual threshold decisions, but unsuccessful teachers will be able to re-apply each year.

It is envisaged that headteachers would be responsible for reviewing the outcomes of teachers' annual performance reviews, and that where governing bodies make decisions about discretionary pay awards to teachers, these would be informed by the outcome of performance reviews. The governing body would continue to have statutory responsibility for pay decisions and it is envisaged that appeals will continue to be dealt with under schools' grievance procedures.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment which measures of classroom teachers' performance in assessment for performance-related pay do not relate to attainment by pupils. [97930]

Ms Estelle Morris: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State is currently consulting on the detail of the new performance review arrangements, including the agreeing of objectives for classroom teachers. We are proposing that teacher objectives should cover pupil progress and ways of improving teachers' professional practice, including professional development. Objectives would be internal, individual and agreed with teach leaders to reflect the particular circumstances of each school. Where governing bodies make decisions about discretionary pay awards to teachers, these would be informed by the outcome of performance reviews.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is his estimate of the annual cost of administering performance-related pay. [97936]

Ms Estelle Morris: The draft Performance Management Framework builds on existing good practice in schools, reinforcing current monitoring and evaluation work, and giving headteachers and line managers the tools to manage their staff effectively. Once implemented, the new arrangements will be an integral part of the management of schools. Headteachers, in common with teachers and governors, will be supported through training and guidance in all elements of the operation of the new arrangements. £20 million will be available to schools via the Standards Fund Performance Management and Threshold Training Grant to support their individual training needs. The Government are also considering arrangements for other aspects of ensuring quality such as advisers to governing bodies on heads' review and assessors for the proposed performance threshold.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is his most recent estimate of the number of teachers who will pass through the threshold assessment for performance-related pay. [97935]

Ms Estelle Morris: It is for teachers to decide whether to apply for the performance threshold. 250,000 teachers will be eligible to apply to cross the threshold at its inception next year. An additional 20,000 teachers are expected to become eligible to apply in each subsequent year. We have no set expectations of the numbers but we have made it clear that there is no quota. Over time we expect a majority of teachers to cross the threshold.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to make additional funding available to (a) local education authorities and (b) individual schools with an above average number of teachers achieving threshold success following the implementation of performance-related pay. [97931]

Ms Estelle Morris: We will establish a Special Grant to target resources for the performance threshold separate from schools' delegated budgets. All teachers assessed as meeting the national threshold standards will gain an immediate salary increase and access to an upper pay spine. Schools will be able to draw extra funds from the Special Grant via their local education authority for each teacher promoted through the threshold to the upper pay spine.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment he has made of the effect on education spending of introducing performance-related pay over (a) the next three years, (b) the next five years and (c) the next ten years. [97934]

Ms Estelle Morris: The Government have announced an extra £1 billion to meet the costs of implementing the Green Paper proposals between 2000–01 and 2001–02. Future levels of funding are a matter for decision thereafter.

ICT

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list those firms approved as registered providers of ICT to schools under the National Grid for Learning. [97771]

Mr. Wills: [holding reply 8 November 1999]: There is no register of firms qualified to provide ICT to schools under the National Grid for Learning. There is a list of NGfL Certified Managed Service Providers who have been awarded Framework Contracts by the British Educational Communications and Technology Agency (BECTa) for the supply of managed information system services to a wide range of educational bodies. These are:

Akhter Computers Ltd.
Bull Information Systems Ltd.
Centerprise International Ltd.
Clifton Reed Consultants Ltd.
Comtec Business Systems Ltd.
EIS Kent
Elonex Plc.
Hugh Symons Group Plc.
IBM United Kingdom Ltd.
Research Machines Plc.
Apple Xemplar Education Ltd.
XMA Ltd.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the criteria used to determine which firms qualify to be registered providers of ICT in schools under the National Grid for Learning. [97772]

Mr. Wills [holding answer 8 November 1999]: There is no register of firms qualified to provide ICT to schools under the National Grid for Learning. There is a list of NGfL Certified Managed Service Providers who have been awarded Framework Contracts by the British Educational Communications and Technology Agency (BECTa) for the supply of managed information system services to a wide range of educational bodies.

The process of awarding these contracts was as follows:

Advertising

In accordance with the United Kingdom Public Services Contracts Regulations a Tender Notice was placed in the Official Journal of the European Communities.

Invitation to Tender

The criteria used to select firms to be invited to tender from amongst those submitting a Request to Participate are Economic and Financial Standing and Technical Ability.

Tendering

Suppliers submit tenders in response to a statement of requirements which includes minimum technical and service specifications.

Testing of Sample Services

Suppliers whose tenders appear to meet the minimum requirements are invited to submit Sample Services for testing.

Supplier Selection

The criteria for selection for award of a framework contract are the most Economically Advantageous Tenders in terms of Price, Quality, Aesthetics and Functionality, Technical Merit, Technical Back-up, After-sales Service, Running Costs and Delivery.

BECTa is running a competition with a view to awarding further contacts on the basis of broadly the same criteria.

Advanced Skills Teachers

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much funding has been available through the Standards Fund for the provision of advanced skills teachers in each year since its inception. [97857]

Ms Estelle Morris: Funding available through the Standards Fund for the provision of Advanced Skills Teachers was £1.3 million in 1998–99, the first year of the new grade, and £11 million in 1999–2000. These figures include both Local Education Authority and DfEE contributions.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many advanced skills teachers are paid (a) more than £36,000, (b) more than £38,000 and (c) £40,000 per annum. [97846]

Ms Estelle Morris: Salaries for Advanced Skills Teachers are determined by the relevant body in accordance with the School Teachers' Pay and Conditions Document 1999. Statistical information about the salaries of Advanced Skills Teachers is not held centrally.

Reading Ages

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the current proportion of 11-year-olds achieving a reading age appropriate to their age (a) in the last year for which figures are available and (b) two years ago in (i) England, (ii) the North West Region and (iii) Bolton. [97909]

Ms Estelle Morris: The Department does not currently collect data on pupils' reading age.

The Department collects Key Stage 2 National Curriculum test results (for pupils aged 11 years old) in English, including the results of a reading test. The expected level of attainment of 11-year-olds at the end of Key Stage 2 is level 4.

The proportion of pupils achieving level 4 or above in the Key Stage 2 English reading tests was:

in 1999: 81 per cent. for England, 81 per cent. for the North West Region and 81 per cent. for Bolton;

in 1997: 67 per cent. for England, 66 per cent. for the North West Region and 67 per cent. for Bolton.

School Inspections

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the number of school inspections carried out and the average cost of school inspections in (i) primary and (ii) secondary schools for each of the last five years. [97095]

Ms Estelle Morris [holding answer 8 November 1999]: This is a matter for Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Schools. I have asked him to write to the hon. Member and to place a copy of his letter in the Library.

Teachers' Employment Rights

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the rights to protection against unfair dismissal enjoyed by head teachers and the legislation in which those rights are enshrined. [97093]

Ms Estelle Morris [holding answer 8 November 1999]: Head teachers who have completed one year's service with their employer enjoy the same rights to protection against unfair dismissal as employees with a similar length of service in the vast majority of occupations. These rights are enshrined in the Employment Rights Act 1996. In addition head teachers, along with other school staff, enjoy a further statutory protection under the School Standards and Framework Act 1998 and the Education (School Government) (England) Regulations 1999. These provide for the governing body of a maintained school to make arrangements for giving any person whom they propose to dismiss an opportunity of making representations to a committee of governors taking the decision, and to afford an opportunity of appealing against a dismissal decision to a separate committee of governors.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment he has made of international examples of best practice with regard to teachers' employment rights; and what examples exist of teachers being subject to dismissal by bodies or individuals other than their employers. [97094]

Ms Estelle Morris [holding answer 8 November 1999]: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has made no separate assessment of international best practice with regard to teachers' employment rights. Teachers are subject to the same framework of employment rights as employees generally, and it would not be sensible to assess teachers' rights in isolation.

Teachers are community, community special and voluntary controlled schools are subject to dismissal by their local education authority on the recommendation of the school's governing body. However, governing bodies are accountable to Employment Tribunals for their decisions by virtue of the Education (Modification of Enactments Relating to Employment) Order 1999.

School Admissions

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list by local education authority (a) the number of admission appeals held to date under the current admissions regulations and (b) the current number of surplus school places; and if he will make a statement on the continuing role of local education authorities in setting school admissions policies for their areas. [97096]

Ms Estelle Morris [holding answer 8 November 1999]: The current system for dealing with admission appeals began on 1 September, when we also published statutory guidance in the new Code of Practice on School Admission Appeals. The first set of figures for appeals under this system, for the year ending August 2000, will be available in July 2001. The latest available statistics on admission appeals for 1997–98 by Local Education Authority can be found in Statistical First Release 19/1999, Admission Appeals for Maintained Primary and Secondary Schools by Local Education Authority area in England 1997–98, a copy of which is in the Library. Overall, 53,370 admission appeals were heard during the 1997–98 academic year, with 20,316 decided in favour of parents.

Surplus places figures are collected annually providing a summary of the level of surplus as at January of that year. For the position as at January 1998 I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Rochdale (Lorna Fitzsimons) on the 4 February 1999, Official Report, columns 709–14. New figures as at January 1999 will be published shortly and copies will be placed in the Library.

Under the School Standards and Framework Act 1998, the Local Education Authority is the admission authority for community and voluntary controlled schools. Foundation and voluntary aided schools are responsible for their own admissions. The Act ensures that admissions authorities consult with each other within the relevant area. Where there are disputes, these are a matter for the Schools Adjudicator rather than the Local Education Authority. The Local Education Authority is required to provide parents with a booklet setting out the details of all the admissions policies of schools in their area in order to help parents choose their preferred school.

Headteachers and Local Education Authorities are encouraged to work together in local admissions forums to discuss admission arrangements and develop a common timetable to assist parents. Many Local Education Authorities have already established Admissions Forums, and many more have plans to do so.

Infant Teachers

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many teachers were in post in infant classes in (a) January 1998 and (b) January 1999. [97757]

Ms Estelle Morris [holding answer 8 November 1999]: We do not collect information on the number of teachers in post in infant classes.

The available information relates to the number of teachers employed in all classes in maintained primary and nursery schools and is shown in the table.

January each year	Number of teachers
1999	200,400
1998	198,400

The figures are derived from the annual return about teachers in service made by local education authorities.

We have provided funding for 4,500 extra teachers from September 1999 to implement our infant class size pledge. Of this number, 1,500 had been funded from September 1998 as well.

WALES

Fireworks

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to restrict the periods of (a) display and (b) sale of fireworks to the period immediately preceding 5 November and the new Millennium. [97898]

Mr. Paul Murphy: These are matters for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Department of Trade and Industry.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Correspondence

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment for what reasons the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, the hon. Member for Barking (Ms Hodge), has not answered the letters of 5 July, 23 September and 21 October to her from the hon. Member for Totnes regarding meetings between herself and a constituent of the hon. Member for Totnes; and if she will make a statement. [97705]

Ms Hodge: I have replied to the hon. Member's letter of 5 July and his office has been in discussion with my Private Secretary regarding his other correspondence. I will write to him with further details as soon as possible.

Horse Chestnuts

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what representations he has received from local education authorities about the use of horse chestnuts in schools, in relation to the safety of children who suffer from anaphylaxis. [98007]

Jacqui Smith: The Department has not received any representations from local education authorities about the use of horse chestnuts in schools and we do not issue specific guidance about horse chestnuts. We have issued, with the Department of Health, joint guidance for schools on "Supporting Pupils with Medical Needs" which contains advice on anaphylaxis. Advice is also available on the joint DfEE and Department of Health "Wired For Health" website.

Discretionary Awards (Further Education)

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the total amount spent by each local authority on discretionary awards to support access to further education in 1997–98, 1998–99 and 1999–2000. [97547]

Mr. Wicks: Information for the academic year 1997–98, the latest year for which information is available, is shown in the following table.

Local Learning and Skills Councils

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to establish single local Learning and Skills Councils for Oxfordshire, Buckinghamshire and Milton Keynes; and if he will make a statement. [98035]

Mr. Wicks: On 28 October 1999, Official Report, column 1079, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced in the House the boundaries for the proposed Learning and Skills Councils. Across England there will be 47 local Councils, which will operate as arms of the national Council. There will be a single local Council covering Oxfordshire, Buckinghamshire and Milton Keynes.

Class Sizes

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what the cost was of collecting data on infant class sizes in September. [97844]

Ms Estelle Morris: The estimated cost of collecting data on infant class sizes in September is £70,000. This includes the cost of data collection and preparation within the Department and the costs incurred by schools and local education authorities in completing the return.

Photography

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment further to the letter of 30 September from the Minister of State for Education, if he will list the interested parties involved in consultation about the future of A-level photography; and how many consultees were in favour of abolishing A-level photography. [97933]

Mr. Wicks: Photography A-level has not been abolished. The Qualifications and Curriculum Authority recommended last year that photography should continue to be offered in the context of A-level art and design rather than as a stand-alone title because of concerns about the range, scope and demand of the existing A-level photography specification. This recommendation—which Ministers have now endorsed—followed extensive consultation with the awarding bodies, which are responsible for developing and offering the qualifications.

I understand that the QCA is currently reviewing the position of photography within the qualifications framework as a whole in consultation with a wide range of interested parties.

New Deal (Disabled People)

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many disabled people have so far obtained employment through the New Deal for Disabled People. [97751]

Ms Hodge: The New Deal for Disabled People is at the pilot stage with 22 innovative schemes and 12 personal adviser pilot areas now operational. The pilots are being brought in over time with the first pilots launched last Autumn. During September, 265 people moved into work through the pilots. Since the first innovative schemes and personal adviser pilot areas started the total number of people placed into work to the end of September 1999 is 1,177.

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is (a) expenditure to date and (b) planned expenditure over the next two years on the New Deal for Disabled People. [97775]

Ms Hodge [holding answer 8 November 1999]: £195 million (£186 million for Great Britain) has been set aside for the New Deal for Disabled People over the lifetime of this Parliament. £5 million has been allocated for innovative schemes; £24 million for 12 personal adviser pilot areas; and £1.6 million to pilot benefit changes. Pilots have started progressively over the last 15 months, and £8 million had been spent by the end of September 1999. We are actively considering what help could be provided nationally taking account of emerging findings from the pilots.

GNVQs

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what studies he has (a) commissioned and (b) considered in connection with the equivalence between GNVQs Intermediate and Advanced qualifications and their GCE counterparts. [97491]

Mr. Wicks [holding answer 8 November 1999]: No specific studies have been carried out. However, evidence from both school and college inspections carried out by Ofsted and the Further Education Funding Council and from work undertaken by the Qualifications and Curriculum Authority (QCA) confirms that GNVQ standards are broadly comparable with standards at equivalent levels of GCSE and A level. The revised GNVQ assessment regime due to be introduced from September 2000 will reinforce that equivalence by strengthening the rigour of the GNVQ at all levels.

Educational Exports

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on recent developments in the field of educational and vocational exports. [97485]

Mr. Wicks [holding answer 8 November 1999]: There have been a number of recent developments in the promotion of UK education and training exports, as part of fulfilling the Government's commitment in the Competitiveness White Paper, to the UK as a knowledge-based economy, including a programme of export promotion visits overseas by my noble Friend the Minister for Education and Employment and the three following initiatives.

The Prime Minister announced in June a strategy to attract an extra 75,000 overseas students to the UK by 2005 through stronger marketing and a better response to international students who might consider study in the UK.

Second, the Government have commissioned a review of British Training International, which was established in November 1997 to promote UK vocational education and training overseas.

Third, the Education and Training Exports Group, which reports to Ministers and brings together representatives of education and training under private sector leadership, is planning a high level conference next year to demonstrate to the leaders of British industry the ways in which education and training can be used as a marketing tool to enhance international business success.

Performance-related Pay (Shropshire)

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what the estimated cost is of performance-related pay for teachers in Shropshire in 2000–01; and how this will be funded. [98166]

Ms Estelle Morris: Teachers with the maximum nine salary points for qualifications and experience will be entitled to apply for the new performance threshold. The School Teachers' Review Body is currently considering the Government's proposal that all teachers who meet the threshold standards should receive a salary increase of up to £2,000, and have access to a new upper pay spine. There will be no quota of threshold successes at either national or local level. It is not possible therefore to give a total cost for Shropshire in advance; this will depend upon the number of teachers who pass the threshold. We will establish a Special Grant to target resources for the performance threshold separately from schools' delegated budgets. Schools will be able to draw extra funds from the Special Grant via their Local Education Authority for each teacher promoted through the threshold to the upper pay spine.

Education SSA (Shropshire)

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what percentage increase in education SSA has been set for Shropshire for the forthcoming financial year. [98164]

Ms Estelle Morris: Details of the proposed education Standard Spending Assessment for the financial year 2000–01 will be announced by the Department for the Environment, Transport and the Regions in late November.

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what the education SSA is for a pupil of (a) primary and (b) secondary school age in (i) the London borough of Southwark and (ii) Shropshire. [98163]

Ms Estelle Morris: The following table shows the primary and secondary Standard Spending Assessment (SSA) per pupil for the London borough of Southwark and Shropshire county council for 1999–2000.

1999–2000 SSA per pupil

£ per pupil

	Primary	Secondary
Southwark	3,396	4,377
Shropshire	2,220	2,837

Sports Scholarships

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) how many higher and further educational establishments run sports scholarship schemes in the United Kingdom; and if he will list them; [97990]

(2) what is his estimate of the total value in cash terms of sports scholarships in further and higher education per annum; [97991]

(3) how many students participate in sports scholarship schemes in further and higher education. [97994]

Mr. Wicks: The information is not held centrally.

Income Support

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to provide additional assistance to lone parents on income support who wish to progress to higher education. [97409]

Mr. Wicks [holding answer 9 November 1999]: The current student support system already provides help to lone parents who decide to enter higher education. Lone parents are eligible to apply for a student loan; and may receive a means tested grant towards their contribution to tuition fees, which in many cases will be the full £1,025 owed. In addition they can receive dependents' allowances, a single parent's allowance and Child Benefit, all of which are cash grants. Furthermore, lone parents remain eligible for benefits although income from student support is taken into account in assessing the amounts.

However, we recognise that we in moving to full time education some lone parents may be concerned about the additional costs of books, equipment, travel, school meals and child care. In these circumstances Access Funds and Hardship Loans, which are administered by the higher education institutions, are available. Mature students including lone parents in receipt of DSS benefits are a priority for help through Access Funds. An extra £12 million is being put into Access Funds in England this year, specifically to assist mature students, including lone parents. These now total £74.6 million, and have more than trebled since 1997–98. My Department is currently carrying out a Review of the Access Funds and Hardship Loans.

Consultants

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much his Department spent on external consultants and advisers in each of the last four financial years. [97428]

Mr. Wills: The Department spent the following sums on external consultants and advisers from its running cost budget.

1998–99: £5.211 million

1997–98: £4.543 million

1996–97: £8.216 million

1995–96: £5.072 million.

I shall write to the hon. Member shortly with the figures for consultants and advisers funded from the Department's programme provision and place a copy in the Library.

After-school Clubs

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many places in after-school and holiday clubs there were in successful New Opportunities Fund bids up to and including the October 1999 awards broken down by local authority; and what percentage of children aged five to 14 years in each area this represented. [97560]

Mr. Chris Smith: I have been asked to reply.

In the period from 26 July 1999, when the first New Opportunities Fund out of school hours child care places were announced, to the end of October 1999, NOF announced grants totalling £7.3 million for the creation of 24,649 new child care places in 333 schemes spread across 183 local authority areas throughout the UK. I have asked the Chief Executive of the New Opportunities Fund to write directly to my right hon. Friend to provide further details of the precise breakdown of these places by local authority. Copies of his letter will be placed in the Libraries of the House.

PRIME MINISTER

Rural Policy

Mr. Peter Bradley: To ask the Prime Minister what steps he is taking to ensure co-ordination of the Government's policies affecting rural areas; and if he will make a statement. [98113]

The Prime Minister: I have established a new Cabinet Committee on rural affairs. Its membership and terms of reference are as follows. In addition to the members listed, other Ministers will be invited to attend meetings as and when business requires:

Ministerial Group on Rural Affairs (MISC 8)

Composition

Minister for the Cabinet Office (Chair)

Secretary of State for the Home Department

Secretary of State for Education and Employment

Secretary of State for Health

Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport

Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food

Secretary of State for Trade and Industry

Chief Secretary, Treasury

Minister of State, Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions

Terms of Reference

"To co-ordinate the Government's policies affecting Rural Areas".

Advisory Committee on Business Appointments

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Prime Minister if he has received the second report of the Advisory Committee on Business Appointments; and if he will make a statement. [98382]

The Prime Minister: The Committee has submitted its second report to me and I have today placed copies in the Libraries of both Houses. Since 1975 the Committee has advised the Prime Minister of the day on the propriety of business appointments that Crown servants wish to take up when they leave Crown service. Following a recommendation of the Committee on Standards in Public Life, it now also provides advice directly to former Ministers on their business appointments. The Committee's second report provides an account of their work in 1998–99.

I am very grateful to all the members for giving their time so generously to this important role. I should like to thank in particular the former Chairman, the right hon. the Lord Carlisle of Bucklow QC, who served with distinction for a number of years, as did the right hon. Lord Thomson of Monifieth, General Sir Charles Huxtable and Sir Robin Ibbs. I also join all members of the Committee in paying tribute to Lord Gillmore who died in March.

Homelessness

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Prime Minister what plans he has for the appointment of an official to co-ordinate the Government's policies on combating homelessness. [97598]

The Prime Minister: In February 1999, Louise Casey, formerly Deputy Director of Shelter, was appointed as the Director of the Rough Sleepers Unit, established within the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions to co-ordinate work across Government on tackling rough sleeping in England. I set out details of the work of the Unit in my answer to my hon. Friend of 8 February 1999, Official Report, columns 35–36.

Louise Casey was selected following an open competition and was appointed on a three year fixed term contract as a member of the Senior Civil Service.

Social Exclusion Unit

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Prime Minister what proposals he has for the parliamentary scrutiny of the Social Exclusion Unit. [96788]

The Prime Minister: The Social Exclusion Unit reports to me, and questions on its remit, resourcing and way of working are addressed to me. Each of the reports produced by the Unit has an action plan and timetable, which identifies a lead Department and Minister responsible for overseeing cross Whitehall implementation. That Minister is accountable to Parliament for the success of the implementation of an individual report.

Tampere Summit

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his oral answer of 19 October 1999, Official Report, column 261, what agreement he has reached with participants at the Tampere Summit to draw up a list of action to take against secrecy and illegality in matters related to actual and suspected drug transactions. [96884]

The Prime Minister: As I said in my answer to my hon. Friend on 25 October 1999, Official Report, columns 717–18, we agreed a range of special concrete actions against money laundering at Tampere. We also agreed that drug trafficking should be one of the forms of criminality in respect of which work should be done to define common offences and penalties, in order to ensure that these crimes can be prosecuted effectively in every member state. A copy of the Presidency Conclusions, in which the actions are listed, has been placed in the Libraries of the House.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Scottish Grand Committee

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission, what budget has been allocated for Scottish Grand Committee meetings in the next session. [97654]

Mr. Kirkwood [holding answer 8 November 1999]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to her on 9 November 1999, Official Report, columns 463–64, which explains that there is no single specific budget allocated for the Scottish Grand Committee. The House's Estimates are drawn up on a financial year, not a sessional, basis. The Estimates for the current financial year (1999–2000) include provision for expenditure of £49,800 for standing committees' travel and subsistence.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Jiang Qisheng

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will arrange for a representative from the British Embassy in Beijing to be present at the trial of Jiang Qisheng. [97900]

Mr. Battle: Foreign diplomats were unable to attend the trial of Jiang Qisheng on 1 November. The court is now in recess. It is not known when the next session will be held. The Chinese authorities have not allowed diplomats to attend the trials of any dissidents.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action he is taking in respect of the decision of the Chinese Government to make Jiang Qisheng stand trial. [97899]

Mr. Battle: I personally raised Jiang Qisheng's case in my talks with the Chinese Vice Minister of Foreign Affairs and expressed our concerns about his trial and possible sentencing. I will continue to press his case.

Palestine

Mr. Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action he is taking to monitor the operation of trade agreements between the European Union and both the Palestine Authority and the PLO; what assessment he has made of the levels of co-operation given by Israel to the implementation of these agreements; and what impact such co-operation has had on Palestine's ability to trade with the EU. [97873]

Mr. Hain: The monitoring of the EC/PLO interim agreement is primarily the responsibility of the European Commission. We are concerned that the agreement should be fully recognised by the Israeli government and that the Palestinians should be able to export and import from the EU within hindrance. We participate in the EU/Israel dialogue on the Palestinian economy, which discusses how the Palestinian capacity to export and import freely can be improved. Israeli co-operation in the implementation of the EC/PLO interim agreement is a very important factor affecting the Palestinians; ability to trade with the EU.

The Philippines

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Philippines Ambassador concerning human rights abuses in Canatuan and the question of indigenous land rights in that area. [97809]

Mr. Battle: We are concerned that the rights and freedoms of indigenous people should be recognised and protected. This is why we participate in discussions on indigenous people within the UN, including the working group on the Draft Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous People. We supported resolutions on indigenous people at the Commission on Human Rights held in Geneva between 27 March and 30 April this year.

Our Embassy in Manila monitors carefully human rights related issues in the Philippines. We have recently appointed a secondee with an NGO background to our staff in Manila as part of this work. We will be following closely the Philippine Government's Commission on Human Rights investigation into the Canatuan incident.

Israel

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many permits were issued by the Israeli Government to Palestinians for travel from Gaza to (a) Israel and (b) the West Bank (i) for each of the six months preceding the opening of the Southern Safe Passage and (ii) since the opening of the Southern Safe Passage. [97978]

Mr. Hain: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary welcomed the opening of the southern safe passage on 25 October and had the opportunity to travel on the route on 26 October. The safe passage will enable thousands of Gazans to travel to the West Bank.

On the first day of operation of the safe passage, 800 people travelled from Gaza to the West Bank and 80 from West Bank to Gaza. A number of Gazans were able to leave the Gaza Strip for the first time in their lives. We do not hold the other details requested.

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many housing units in Jewish settlements on the West Bank have been demolished; and how many new housing units in Jewish settlements on the West Bank have been started since 14 October. [97976]

Mr. Hain: On 14 October, the Israeli government and Yesha Council agreed that 12 settlement outposts should be dismantled. This agreement is now being implemented. These settlement outputs are believed not to include any housing units. The Israeli government recently acknowledged that they have issued the tenders for the construction of 1,798 housing units.

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the agreement made on 14 October between the Israeli Government and the Yesha Council. [97975]

Mr. Hain: We welcome agreement by the Israeli Government and Yesha Council to dismantle some settlements outposts. The British Government's view remains that settlement activity is illegal under international law and unhelpful in curbing settlements.

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on continued house demolitions by the Israeli authorities in East Jerusalem. [97977]

Mr. Hain: We are opposed to all attempts to alter the demographics of East Jerusalem, contrary to the Fourth Geneva Convention. We therefore strongly regret the continuation of house demolitions, even though their frequency has declined in recent months. A full stop to this policy would contribute to the confidence between the parties which will be essential at this critical stage in the peace process.

International Criminal Court

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans the Government have to use Article 124 to opt out of the jurisdiction of the International Criminal Court when it ratifies the International Criminal Court Statute. [97882]

Mr. Hain: We have no plans to use Article 124 of the International Criminal Court Statute to opt out of the Court's jurisdiction over war crimes. We hope as few countries as possible will take advantage of this provision.

Bonded Labourers

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what estimate his Department has made of the number of bonded labourers working in (a) India, (b) Pakistan and (c) Nepal. [97997]

Mr. Hain: We are deeply concerned by all cases of bonded labour. Accurate and comprehensive figures for those employed in bonded labour in India, Pakistan and Nepal are not available.

Slavery

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action his Department is taking to enforce Article 1 of the United Nations Supplementary Convention on the Abolition of Slavery, the Slave Trade, and Institutions and Practices Similar to Slavery, 1956. [97999]

Mr. Hain: We urge all countries to ratify the international instruments on outlawing slavery, and to wipe out all forms of slavery, including bonded labour.

Working bilaterally and through organisations such as the International Labour Organisation, the Government provide practical support to those countries working to eliminate the practice of slavery. We also provide help to tackle the poverty which breeds abusive labour practices and to protect the rights of vulnerable groups, such as women and children.

Consultants

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much his Department spent on external consultants and advisers in each of the last four financial years. [97417]

Mr. Hain: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office has spent the following sums on external consultancy and advice during the last four financial years:

1995–96: £17.7 million;
1996–97: £11.8 million;
1997–98: £15.8 million;
1998–99: £14.5 million.

The bulk of FCO consulting expenditure is for technical expertise on capital projects, predominantly on estate related and information technology development at home and overseas.

DEFENCE

Zinc Cadmium Sulphide Trials

Mr. Borrow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress has been made with respect to the proposed independent review of the zinc cadmium sulphide trials carried out in the UK by the former Chemical Defence Experimental Establishment between 1953 and 1964. [98339]

Mr. Kilfoyle: Professor Peter Lachmann, President of the Academy of Medical Sciences, has agreed to lead an independent review of British trials which used zinc cadmium sulphide as an air movement tracer to assess the vulnerability of the UK to attack by biological weapons. It will concentrate on the question of whether these trials might have had harmful effects on public health. Professor Lachmann is being supported by a small team of experts to assist him. It is intended that this independent review will be completed within the next few months, and that a report will be published and a copy placed in the Library of the House.

Aldermaston

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if a decision has been reached on building the Dual Access Hydrodynamic Radiographic Test facility at Aldermaston; and if he will make a statement. [96426]

Mr. Kilfoyle: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency. I have asked the Chief Executive to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from John Howe to Mr. Alan Simpson, dated 10 November 1999:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence asking if a decision has been reached on building the DAHRT facility at the Atomic Weapons Establishment (AWE) Aldermaston and for a statement.

The UK has had a dual axis radiography capability at AWE Aldermaston since 1995. Parts of the facility were purpose built but it also incorporates older equipment and infrastructure. A feasibility study for a new, multi axis, facility is being carried out by AWE at present but no decision has yet been made on whether or not it should be built.

You used the term "DAHRT". The DARHT or Dual Axis Radiographic Hydrodynamic Test Facility is an American facility under construction at Los Alamos National Laboratory.

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what measures are to be implemented at Aldermaston to replace the practice of storing plutonium and uranium sludge in tanks on-site after 1 January 2000. [96424]

Mr. Kilfoyle: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency. I have asked the Chief Executive to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from John Howe to Mr. Alan Simpson, dated 10 November 1999:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence asking what measures are to be implemented at the Atomic Weapons Establishment Aldermaston to replace the practice of storing plutonium and uranium sludge in tanks on site after 1 January 2000. This matter falls to me for answer within my area of responsibility as Chief of Defence procurement and Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency.

In accordance with Nuclear Installation Inspectorate (NII) requirements, AWE will add no further quantities of sludge to the tanks after December 1999.

They are on course to procure plant which will meet the further NII requirement that wastes currently accumulated should be recovered, treated and stored in immobilised form suitable for long term retention. The NII have set a date of 1 April 2003 for the first tank to be treated, and may well set further targets.

In the meantime and with the NII's agreement, existing holdings of sludges can either remain safely in the tanks, which are bunded and whose integrity is regularly monitored or, in the case of future arisings, can be held within the processing plant.

Friend or Foe System

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has made of the cost of upgrading the Identification Friend or Foe Mk Xa systems to the system Mk XII standard; and how many systems will undergo this upgrade. [97137]

Mr. Kilfoyle: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency. I have asked the Chief Executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from John Howe to Mr. Mike Hancock, dated 10 November 1999:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence on what estimate he has made of the cost of upgrading the Identification Friend or Foe MKXa systems to the system MK XII standard; and how many systems will undergo this upgrade. This matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief of Defence Procurement and Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency.

The competition to select an equipment supplier for the Successor Identification Friend or Foe programme is currently underway. Consequently, it could prejudice the Department's negotiating position if the estimated cost of upgrading the Identification Friend or Foe MKXa systems to the system MKXII standard were revealed. This information is therefore withheld in accordance with exception 7 to the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

The number of the systems to be upgraded is likely to be in the order of 1000 transponders and 600 interrogators for some forty platform types.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many successor identification Friend or Foe system contracts have been awarded; and what is the total value of these contracts. [97136]

Mr. Kilfoyle: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency. I have asked the Chief Executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from John Howe to Mr. Mike Hancock, dated 10 November 1999:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence on the number and value of the Successor Identification Friend or Foe system contracts. This matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief of Defence Procurement and Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency.

Sixty two contracts have been awarded to study the fitting of a Successor Identification Friend or Foe system to a number of platforms. Separately, a contract has been placed for the development, production and installation of a Successor Identification Friend or Foe system on Tornado F3 aircraft fleet. The total value of these contracts amounts to £92M, of which approximately 75% is for Tornado F3 and the remaining 25% for the study work.

Mr. Rapson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make it his policy to purchase the Raytheon Systems Ltd. successor identification Friend or Foe system; and what representations he has received with regard to this technology. [97213]

Mr. Kilfoyle: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency. I have asked the Chief Executive to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from John Howe to Mr. Syd Rapson, dated 10 November 1999:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence on whether he will make it his policy to purchase the Raytheon Systems Ltd Successor Identification Friend or Foe system; and what representation he has received with regard to this technology. This matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief of Defence Procurement and Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency.

We have received bids from Raytheon Systems Ltd and Marconi Avionics into the Successor Identification Friend or Foe equipment supplier competition. The bids are currently being assessed and I am therefore unable to comment further at this stage. However, I can assure you that all the relevant factors will be taken into account in selecting a preferred bidder.

Defence Evaluation Research Agency

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has received on the Defence Evaluation Research Agency public-private partnership. [97237]

Mr. Hoon [holding answer 5 November 1999]: A number of organisations and individuals, including representatives from academia, industry, local government, trade unions, DERA staff, and our international collaborative partners, have responded to the consultation document on the DERA public-private partnership (PPP) published by the Ministry of Defence in May. In addition, there have been a number of formal and informal representations.

As I announced on 26 October 1999, Official Report, column 768, work is continuing on a PPP solution for DERA and key stakeholders will continue to be consulted as this work is taken forward.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what developments there have been in the joint MOD-industry sub-group investigating the Defence Evaluation Research Agency public-private partnership. [97236]

Mr. Hoon [holding answer 5 November 1999]: The National Defence Industries Council sub-group on the DERA public-private partnership was formed to provide a mechanism to enable the Ministry of Defence and industry to understand each other's positions on key issues. Both sides have agreed that the sub-group achieved its remit in the two meetings that were held in July. Further meetings will be arranged if issues arise in the continuing work which warrant specific senior level discussion or resolution. Consultation with industry and others is continuing as we take forward work on the DERA PPP.

Trigat Missiles

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the cost of replacing the Milan 1 ATGW systems with the medium range Trigat missiles. [97875]

Mr. Kilfoyle: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency. I have asked the Chief Executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from John Howe to Mr. Mike Hancock, dated 10 November 1999:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the Medium Range (MR) TRIGAT Anti-Tank Guided Weapon Programme. This matter falls to me for answer within the responsibility as Chief of Defence Procurement and Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency.

The MR TRIGAT programme is planned to replace the Milan Anti-Tank Guided Weapons System. The cost of this replacement programme was published in the Major Project Report 1998 as £806 Million; this cost is still in line with our current estimates.

Hawk Aircraft (India)

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assistance his Department is giving to British Aerospace in connection with its bid to sell Hawk aircraft to India. [95055]

Mr. Hoon [holding answer 2 November 1999]: British Aerospace has been offering Hawk aircraft for sale to the Indian Government for a number of years, in response to an Indian Air Force requirement for an advanced jet training aircraft. During this period, the Company has received Government advice and support, co-ordinated by the Defence Export Services Organisation in the Ministry of Defence, whose role it is to provide such assistance to UK industry in accordance with the Government's policy on defence exports.

Young Personnel

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has received in the last six months on the deployment of under 18-year-old service personnel in combat. [97133]

Mr. Spellar: In the past 6 months there have been 9 parliamentary questions, 70 parliamentary inquiries and an Early Day Motion related to the deployment of personnel who are aged under 18. My Department has also received 85 letters from members of the public on the topic in the same period.

Naval Nuclear Material

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the annual cost of storing Royal Navy nuclear material at BNFL Sellafield. [97643]

Mr. Kilfoyle: Spent submarine reactor fuel cores represent the only significant Royal Navy nuclear material stored at BNFL Sellafield. At today's prices, the cost of BNFL's storage service in the years 1992 to 1998 has been £0.7m, £1.2m, £1.7m, £2.8m, £2.4m, £1.5m and £1.7m respectively. The annual cost has varied with the amount of spent fuel deposited and routine examination of the spent fuel in 1995 and 1996 to ensure its integrity.

Service Posts (Women)

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence from which posts in (a) the Army, (b) the RAF and (c) the Royal Navy women are excluded; what percentage of overall service posts this represents; and if he will make a statement. [97677]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 8 November 1999]: The three Services are wholly committed to maximising career opportunities for women in the Armed Forces. 73 per cent. of posts in the Naval Service, 70 per cent. of posts in the Army and 96 per cent. of posts in the RAF are open to women. In the Naval Service women are excluded from the Royal Marine Commandos; in the Army posts in the Infantry and Royal Armoured Corps (including the Household Cavalry) are closed to women; and in the RAF women cannot serve in the RAF Regiment. Additionally in the Royal Navy, women cannot serve in submarines or as mine clearance divers for medical reasons.

Pensions and Compensation Reviews

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when (a) his Department's pensions review and (b) his Department's compensation review will be (i) completed, (ii) presented to ministers and (iii) published; and if he will make a statement. [97851]

Mr. Spellar: I am currently considering proposals from the joint MOD and DSS compensation review. The Armed Forces Pension Review is currently in progress and I expect to receive proposals next year.

SA80

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to review the effectiveness of the SA80 weapon; and if he will make a statement. [94783]

Mr. Kilfoyle [holding answer 20 October 1999]: It is our practice to keep the effectiveness of weapon systems under continual review. SA80 is an effective weapon system and is planned to remain in service well into the next century. We are, however, currently investigating potential improvements to the SA80 and I expect to receive recommendations in due course.

Consultants

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much his Department spent on external consultants and advisers in each of the last four financial years. [97418]

Mr. Kilfoyle: My Department's spending on external consultants over the last four financial years is as follows:

Year	£ million
1998–99	175.6
1997–98	148.1
1996–97	136.7
1995–96	150.8

Details of expenditure are submitted annually to the Cabinet Office Efficiency and Effectiveness Group and placed in the Library of the House.

We employ a number of individuals in an advisory capacity. Many of these are consultants whose costs will be included in the figures given in the table. We do not hold figures centrally on others employed as advisers and the information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Bonded Labour

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what action her Department is taking to end the practice of bonded labour. [97998]

Clare Short: The Government made clear their commitment to core labour standards in the White Paper "Eliminating World Poverty". Elimination of all forms of forced or compulsory labour is one of the four core standards established by the International Labour Organisation. We are committed to the promotion of these standards both in the UK and overseas.

We are currently undertaking a strategic review of our approach to the implementation of core labour standards. It will be published later this year. However my Department is already addressing the issue at several levels. At the international level, we are a strong supporter of the International Labour Organisation (ILO). Its Declaration and Fundamental principles on the Rights at Work (1998) and Convention on the Worst Forms of Child Labour (1999) both outlaw bonded labour and offer key international standards and monitoring mechanisms. The focus of our support to date has been primarily on the issue of child labour and the UK is currently the second largest funder of the ILO's International Programme for the Elimination of Child Labour (IPEC).

Trade Agreements

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will review the effects of existing trade agreements on developing countries, with particular focus on smaller communities and their environment, before the WTO Seattle Conference in November. [97889]

Clare Short: Work by the WTO and the World Bank suggests that the gains to developing countries from the Uruguay Round will have been as large, or larger, relative to income, as the benefits to developed countries. The gains by small states from trade agreements and the effects on their environment vary greatly according to their differing patterns of production and the extent to which they benefit from trade preference schemes.

Initial studies on the possible effects of the new Round identify the potential for considerable benefits for developing countries in agriculture and manufacturing. With regard to the environmental effect of the forthcoming Round, the Government strong support the European Union's Sustainability Impact Assessment. The objectives are to develop a methodology for sustainability impact assessment and to use that methodology to make a broad qualitative assessment of the Round's sustainability impact. The Government will continue to liaise with both the European Commission and the consultants in order to contribute to, and learn from, this work.

At country and regional level, DFID is working with the ILO, national governments, NGOs, trade unions and civil society organisations to promote workers rights. For example in south-east Asia we are supporting the ILO's programme to tackle trafficking in women and children across the region. Women and children are often tied to the commercial sex industry in conditions of bonded labour. We have also provided funds for Christian Aid's programme on bonded Child Labour in India.

We are also funding Anti-Slavery International to provide support to six countries to ratify the Convention on the Worst Forms of Child Labour. Anti-Slavery International has considerable expert knowledge on the issue of bonded child labour.

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what plans she has to (a) review market access for developing countries and (b) assess the impact of zero tariffs for agricultural and textile exports from developing to developed countries. [97892]

Clare Short: We are continuing to work within the EU for the best possible access to EU markets for developing countries, in support of our efforts to integrate them into the multilateral trading system. The UK and EU are already committed to providing duty free access for essentially all exports from Least Developed Countries by the end of the next round of multilateral trade negotiations.

My Department is in the process of assessing the effects of further trade liberalisation in agriculture and textiles, including improved market access and reductions in tariffs. Within the context of the next round of trade negotiations, to be launched at Seattle later this month, we will be pushing for reductions in tariff barriers, especially in areas where there are tariff peaks, as for textiles, footwear and leather, and where tariffs escalate as for processed agricultural products.

Consultants

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much her Department spent on external consultants and advisers in each of the last four financial years. [97422]

Clare Short: In the last four financial years our spending on external consultants and advisers was as follows:

Year	£ million
1995–96	1.2
1996–97	0.82
1997–98	1.79
1998–99	1.83

Water Consumption (West Bank and Gaza)

Mr. Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what estimates she has made of per capita water consumption by (a) Israelis and (b) Palestinians in the West Bank and Gaza. [97874]

Clare Short: Recent and accurate information on water usage in the West Bank and Gaza is not readily available.

Most water is used for irrigation. A UN report from 1990 indicates that total annual capita consumption for Palestinians in the West Bank was 139 cubic metres, compared to that for settlers of 1,143 cubic metres. Figures for Gaza were 172 cubic metres for Palestinians and 2,326 cubic metres for settlers. Annual per capita consumption in Israel was 411 cubic metres.

India

Mr. Sarwar: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what aid programmes her Department is supporting in India in the current financial year; at what cost; and what was the comparable figure for 1998–99. [97583]

Clare Short: Our programme in India is increasingly focused on working with the states of Andhra Pradesh, Madhya Pradesh, Orissa and West Bengal towards the goal of poverty elimination. The bilateral programme includes activities in rural development, water and sanitation, urban poverty, education, health, governance and empowerment, energy and emergency humanitarian assistance as well as assistance through non-governmental organisations. We also help indirectly through contributions to the European Commission and other multilateral organisations.

DFID spending for India in the current financial year is expected to be in the region of £100 million. The provisional figure for the 1998–99 out-turn for our India programme is £83.9 million, although this does not capture all DFID spending for India. The final figure for all DFID spending for India during the last financial year will be published in our next Departmental Report.

Pakistan (Women's Human Rights)

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent representations she has received on women's human rights in Pakistan; and if she will make a statement. [97816].

Clare Short: We regularly receive such representations from human rights' groups and from individuals. We take every opportunity to ensure that the Pakistan authorities are aware of our concerns, and in particular about discrimination against women. We take account of gender equality issues as a matter of course in our bilateral development assistance, which has focused upon reducing poverty and increasing basic rights and access to essential services—especially for women and girls.

World Trade Organisation

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will take steps to ensure that Government procurement, competition policy and investment are addressed at the WTO Seattle Conference. [97896]

Mr. Byers: I have been asked to reply.

Government procurement, competition policy and investment are three of the UK's and EU's priorities for the new comprehensive round of trade negotiations which we hope will be launched at the WTO Seattle Conference. We are pressing hard for these subjects along with our other priorities, including agriculture, services, industrial tariffs and regulatory issues, to be included in the new Round agenda.

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what her policy is on making the WTO subject to greater scrutiny and accountability; and what plans she has to suggest such changes at the WTO Seattle Conference. [97893]

Mr. Byers: I have been asked to reply.

Increasing the transparency of the operations of the WTO, including through High Level Meetings and derestriction of documents, is a high priority for the UK and the WTO. The UK and EU are pushing for decisions to be taken on WTO transparency at the WTO Seattle Conference. At the same time, however, we believe that there is an equal if not greater responsibility on member state Governments to improve communication on trade issues, since it is Governments who make and decide the rules and policies of the WTO in Geneva. This includes dialogue with interest groups and consultation with Parliament. The UK has been working hard at national level to do more in this area and we will continue to do so in the future.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many cases of people incorrectly claiming Incapacity Benefit instead of the long-term unemployed benefit have been identified (a) this year and (b) in each of the last three years. [97268]

Mr. Bayley: Entitlement to Incapacity Benefit depends upon a person meeting the requirements of either the Own Occupation Test or the All Work Test. For those in recent employment, the Own Occupation Test applies; this requires a medical certificate confirming that the person is unable to perform their usual job. After six months for these claimants, and from the outset for those not in recent employment, the All Work Test applies; this determines whether the person reaches a set level of physical and/or mental incapacity. People who do not satisfy the relevant test but nevertheless have a degree of mental or physical incapacity can claim Jobseeker's Allowance as unemployed and restrict their availability in any way providing the restrictions are reasonable in the light of their physical or mental condition.

The number of people disallowed Incapacity Benefit because they did not satisfy the relevant test is set out in the table. It should be noted that people can also fail to satisfy the All Work Test because they do not return the questionnaire issued to claimants or because they fail to attend for medical examination. Data for 1998–99 are not yet available.

Number of Incapacity Benefit claims terminated because the claimant did not satisfy the Own Occupation Test or All Work Test

	Did not satisfy the Own Occupation Test	Did not satisfy the All Work Test
1995–96	1,300	52,700
1996–97	1,200	94,700
1997–98	1,600	86,300

Note:
Figures are taken from a 1 per cent. sample of Incapacity Benefit recipients

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many women have claimed (a) Incapacity Benefit and (b) Severe Disablement Allowance (i) this year and (ii) in each of the last three years. [97266]

Mr. Bayley: Information split by gender is not available on the number of claims made for Incapacity Benefit and Severe Disablement Allowance, some of which will not result in an award of benefit.

The number of spells of benefit commencing in each of the last three years for which information is available is set out in the table; data for 1998–99 are not yet available.

Spells commencing in the period	Incapacity Benefit	Severe Disablement Allowance
13 April 1995–31 March 1996	320,700	19,900
1 April 1996–31 March 1997	329,800	19,500
1 April 1997–31 March 1998	325,100	14,200

Note:
Figures are taken from a 1 per cent. sample of claimants

Child Support

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will seek to amend the Child Support Acts so that the provision of false information to the Agency relating to income and declared and undeclared earnings is treated as fraud and a criminal offence under the Acts. [97713]

Angela Eagle: As the White Paper "A new contract for welfare: Children's Rights and Parents' Responsibilities" indicated, when legislation for a reformed child support scheme is introduced, we plan to include new criminal penalties for supplying false information in relation to child support and failing to supply information when required to do so. Any person who is subject to the new offence will be liable to a fine of up to £1,000 on conviction.

Pensioners (Overseas)

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many British citizens living overseas who retired before 1979 were in receipt of frozen pensions in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available. [97745]

Mr. Rooker: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is on overseas pensioners who retired prior to 1979 for individual years from 1994. This information is in the table.

Overseas retirement pension recipients living in frozen rate countries reaching state pension age before 1979

	Total
1994	81,600
1995	76,800
1996	71,500
1997	65,300
1998	59,100
1999	51,100

Notes:

1. Numbers are rounded to the nearest hundred.
2. Information has been supplied using a 5 per cent. sample from the Pensions Strategy Computer System (PSCS).
3. The figures supplied are for the number of people reaching state pension age before 1979. They do not indicate whether the people received Retirement Pension in the year of reaching that age.

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many British citizens living overseas and in receipt of frozen pensions retired (a) before 1979, (b) between 1979 and 1992 and (c) since 1992. [97744]

Mr. Rooker: The information is in the table.

Overseas retirement pension recipients living in frozen rate countries reaching state pension age

	Total
Before 1979	51,100
1979–92	260,500
Since 1992	140,200

Notes:

1. Numbers are rounded to the nearest hundred.
2. Information is based on a 5 per cent. sample of the Pensions Strategy Computer System (PSCS).
3. The table shows the number of people who reached state pension age in a given year. It does not indicate whether the people actually received their retirement pension in the year of reaching state pension age.

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what criteria are used to determine the countries in which United Kingdom state pensions are uprated in line with inflation; and what proposals he has to amend those criteria. [97897]

Mr. Rooker: UK State Pensions have been payable in certain countries outside the UK since 1929—initially in HM Dominions and then, between 1948–1955, in a small number of European countries. In 1955 Retirement Pensions and widows benefits became payable worldwide. However, upratings were not normally payable.

Over time, the UK has concluded reciprocal social security agreements with some 30 countries. Although most provide for payment of upratings, that is not the primary purpose of such agreements. They are intended mainly to provide a measure of co-ordination between social security schemes for people moving between the UK and the other country during their working lives.

A major consideration in deciding whether to enter into an agreement is the extent to which the advantages to be gained outweigh the cost of negotiating and administering the agreement. Most of the UK's reciprocal social security agreements are over 25 years old. The last to come into force which provides for upratings was in 1992 (with Barbados) and fulfilled a commitment given in the 1970s.

We have no plans to change the current arrangements for uprating UK pensions abroad.

Jobseeker's Allowance (Fraud)

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what number and percentage of Jobseeker's Allowance claimants have been proved to be claiming fraudulently in each of the last five years; and what savings have been made in each of these years as a result of benefit withdrawal in such cases. [97881]

Angela Eagle: The information is in the table.

Number of Jobseeker's Allowance fraud cases and savings made following benefit withdrawal

	Total number of fraud cases detected	Percentage of average case load over the period	Savings
October 1996-March 1997	15,626	0.8	33,885,344
1997–98	161,512	10.4	556,097,856
1998–99	191,829	14.2	1,054,260,736

Notes:

1. JSA was introduced in October 1996.
2. The savings column figures are the weekly benefit paid to the fraudulent claimants multiplied by 32, the estimated average length of time a claim to benefit would have lasted had the fraud not been detected.

Benefit Fraud (Bolton)

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the level of benefit fraud in the Bolton area; and what targets have been set for the anti-fraud team in Bolton. [97908]

Mr. Rooker: The Benefits Agency (BA) does not keep details of the levels of benefit fraud for specific towns. However, a programme of Area Benefit Reviews (ABRs) are undertaken to measure incidence and customer fraud and error in Income Support (IS) and Income-Based Jobseekers Allowance (JSA)(IB).

Figures for Greater Manchester, the Area Directorate in which Bolton is situated, indicate that the extent of fraud and customer error is around 10.1 per cent. of IS and JSA (IB) programme expenditure.

We outlined our strategy for tackling fraud and error within the system in "Safeguarding Social Security". A copy of this is available in the Library.

Teams situated in all Area Directorates will be working towards achieving the target and their progress will be measured by a set of Programme Protection Indicators, which will inform whether resources and activities are being targeted efficiently.

Local Authorities have different monetary targets in the form of weekly savings for Housing and Council Tax Benefits. For 1999–2000, Bolton Borough Council's target is to save £688,019 through securer, more accurate benefit payments and investigating cases of alleged fraud.

Disability Living Allowance (West Midlands)

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people in the West Midlands are currently on the waiting list for the consideration of appeals against unsuccessful claims for disability living allowance; and if he will make a statement. [97801]

Mr. Bayley: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is as follows.

The number of Disability Living Allowance appeals awaiting hearing in the area handled by the Birmingham office of the Independent Tribunal Service/The Appeals Service (ITS/TAS) was 1,421 at the end of October 1999, the latest period for which figures are available. In addition the Disability Benefits Centre in the Midlands, which covers the West Midlands Area, has 70 cases being prepared for referral to the ITS/TAS.

The Appeals Service remains committed to improving the service it offers to the users of its service and has put in place measures systematically to tackle its oldest cases while ensuring that waiting times for newer appeals are reduced. These measures have seen outstanding loads nationally (for all appeals) fall from 138,827 at the beginning of the current financial year to 68,850 at the end of September, the latest period for which national figures are available.

Child Statistics

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many children were living in households in each decile of income up to half average income for each year since the data were collected, broken down by (a) whether the children live in (i) one and (ii) two parent families and (b) by the economic status of the parents. [97912]

Notes:
1. All figures are estimates and are taken from the Households Below Average Income (HBAI) data sets. The current series is based on the Family Resources Survey (FRS) and is available for years 1994–95 to 1997–98 and covers Great Britain but not Northern Ireland. Information is also provided for 1979 from the previous HBAI series which was based on the Family Expenditure Survey and covered the United Kingdom. The two series are not strictly comparable due to changes in definition.
2. The figures presented will be subject to sampling error. Figures for children are sensitive to the choice of equivalence scale.
3. Figures may not sum due to rounding. The results for children according to the number of parents in the family exclude a small number of children who live with pensioners. These children are included in the breakdown by economic type.
4. The income measure used is weekly net (disposable) equivalised household income (that is to say income that is adjusted to reflect The composition of the household). It is standard HBAI practice to give results for income both before and after housing costs, in order to allow for the effect of variations in housing costs between households. Results are also provided including and excluding the self-employed, reflecting the inherent uncertainty of income measures for the self-employed.
5. Three deciles are shown because in 1997–98 the half average point After Housing Costs lies in the third decile. The Before Housing Costs half average in 1997–98 lies in the second decile. Results for the bottom decile should be treated with caution as evidence suggests that income data for these households may be subject to measurement error.

Family Credit (Pensions)

Caroline Flint: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people in receipt of family credit have (a) private and (b) occupational pension arrangements. [98023]

Angela Eagle: It is estimated that around 1 in 10 working people in receipt of Working Families Tax Credit have a personal pension. Around 1 in 15 have an occupational pension.

Pensioners

Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what progress he is making towards co-ordinating departmental policy towards financial support for pensioners. [96800]

Mr. Rooker: In June 1998, the Prime Minister set up the Inter-Ministerial Group for Older People to make sure that the needs of older people are better understood and that action to help them is effectively co-ordinated across Government. The Group meets regularly to discuss and synchronize our programme of help for older people. The Group has already undertaken an audit of cross government initiatives to identify those that effect older people.

At present, the Group is focusing on three key areas—productive ageing, health and care and consultation and involvement.

As part of the consultation process, members of the Inter-Ministerial Group are taking part in a series of "listening to older people" events. These are being organised with non-governmental organisations supporting the UN Year of Older Persons.

The listening events, alongside other research the Group has commissioned, will provide information and feedback that will be invaluable in deciding priorities and helping shape the Government's policies to meet them.

Minimum Income Guarantee (Pensioners)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when the proposed new measures to trace pensioners entitled to the minimum income guarantee will be introduced; and for what reason the measures were not taken in April. [97510]

Mr. Rooker: The national programme to encourage pensioners to claim their entitlement is being developed to take account of results from the large scale evaluation of the Pilot take-up initiatives which will be published later this year. We will present our plans for the national programme in due course.

Benefits Uprating

Gillian Merron: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will set out the new rates of benefit proposed from April 2000. [98350]

Mr. Darling: The information requested is set out in the schedule. The Annual uprating of benefits will take place in the first full week of the tax year. In 2000, this will be the week beginning 10 April. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland proposes to introduce similar changes for Northern Ireland.

The weekly rate of the increase or allowance is reduced by the differential (less the £3.50 from April 2000) between the rate of ChB payable for the oldest eligible child and that payable for a subsequent child.

Mr. Ian McCartney: We have set targets in the Modernising Government White Paper that by the year 2004–05, 3.2 per cent. of the Senior Civil Service will be from ethnic minority backgrounds—double the current figure. We will report on the progress we have made against these targets next year.

10. Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office if she will make a statement on progress towards meeting targets for recruitment of ethnic minorities into the Civil Service. [96790]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The Modernising Government White Paper firmly establishes our commitment to achieving diversity in the Civil Service.

Departments will propose targets for ethnic minority recruitment by December 1999 and I will report on the progress next year.

Modernising Government

11. Mr. Miller: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office when progress has been made in improving liaison between Government services as set out in the "Modernising Government" White Paper. [96791]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The Government are determined to improve their handling of correspondence from hon. Members. We have already set a new standard for replying to correspondence and are actively seeking out and promoting examples of good practice in correspondence handling across all Departments and agencies. A table detailing the performance of individual Departments was published by my predecessor, my right hon. Friend the Member for Copeland (Dr. Cunningham) in June.

Marjorie Mowlam: I refer the hon. Member to my answer to the right hon. Member for South-West Surrey (Mrs. Bottomley) today, Official Report, column 1118.

Ministerial Memoirs

23. Mr. Burns: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what plans she has to change the Cabinet Office rules governing the publication of ministerial memoirs. [96804]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The Ministerial Code requires Ministers to conform to the principles set out in the Radcliffe Report of 1976 if, after leaving office, they publish books drawing on their experience in government. The same principles have been applied by successive administrations and the Government have no plans to change them.

24. Mr. Shaw: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what she is doing to warn young people about the dangers of ecstasy. [96805]

HOME DEPARTMENT

Crime and Disorder Act 1998

Mr. Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to ensure that police forces and local authorities use the powers available to them under the Crime and Disorder Act 1998. [97868]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The use of powers under the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 is a matter for local authorities, the police and the courts. I am, however, keen to promote their full use where appropriate. Guidance has already been issued on all aspects of the Act, and last month my right hon. Friend, the Home Secretary, wrote to all local authority Chief Executives encouraging them to take proper advantage of the Act's new powers to deal with unruly and anti-social behaviour. This letter was copied to all Chief Officers of Police.

Corruption (Illegal Drugs)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the number of cases of corruption involving (a) police, (b) prison and (c) customs officers which have involved illegal drugs in each of the last five years. [97509]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Information is held centrally only on the number of police officers convicted of offences of corruption. The total for each of the last five years is shown in the table. The figures held centrally do not indicate those cases which involved drugs:

Year	Number
1994	2
1995–96	1
1996–97	5
1997–98	1
1998–99	2

In the case of the Prison Service, centrally held records (which are not necessarily complete) show that since December 1993, two prison staff have been dismissed and one member of staff resigned, following allegations that they have been involved in supplying or procuring illegal drugs.

I understand from Her Majesty's Customs and Excise that one officer resigned in 1996, one was dismissed this year and another officer is currently suspended following the investigation of cases of drug related corruption.

Consultants

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much his Department spent on external consultants and advisers in each of the last four financial years. [97424]

Mr. Straw: Expenditure on external consultants and advisers in each of the last four financial years by my Department was as follows:

Year	£
1995–96	10,200,000
1996–97	11,804,984
1997–98	7,627,016
1998–99	4,588,445

Prison Management

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what evaluation his Department's assessors made of the proposals for prison regimes of the separate bidders for the contract to manage HMP Doncaster; and if he will make a statement. [97728]

Mr. Boateng: The evaluation of the operational proposals was based on two Prison Service objectives:

To protect the public by holding those committed by the courts in a safe, decent and healthy environment:

to run a secure and orderly prison;

to treat people fairly, openly and correctly in our work;

to provide decent conditions of care; and to manage all resources effectively.

To reduce crime by providing constructive regimes which address offending behaviour in custody and after release.

Each of these two objectives is underpinned by more detailed criteria. Each bid was scored against these criteria and all exceeded the minimum operational requirements.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information relating to the competitive tendering process for the management of prison contracts is made publicly available; and if he will make a statement. [97732]

Mr. Boateng: In each competition for the management of a prison, invitations to tender are issued in which bidders are given guidance on what needs to be covered in their bids and how the competition thereafter will be run. These documents are publicly available.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what costs will be incurred, and who will be responsible for them, as a result of the transfer of the management of HMP Buckley Hall from Group 4 to the Prison Service; and if he will make a statement. [97735]

Mr. Boateng: The start up costs to the Prison Service identified in the bid for Buckley Hall are estimated to be £450,000. They will form part of the overall contract price.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on his plans to market-test prisons which fail to meet performance standards; and if he will make a statement. [97737]

Mr. Boateng: The Prison Service is developing the criteria to be used to identify which failing prisons should be market tested. I have asked them to report to me on this in January.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish the bid evaluation documents relating to the competitive tendering process for (a) HMP Doncaster and (b) HMP Buckley Hall; and if he will make a statement. [97726]

Mr. Boateng: The bid evaluation documents for both Doncaster and Buckley Hall prisons contain commercially sensitive information and are treated as commercial in confidence; therefore, they cannot be published.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what overall evaluation his Department's assessors made of the separate bids for the contract to manage HMP Doncaster; and if he will make a statement; [97729]

(2) what the criteria are for evaluating bids for the management of prisons; and if he will make a statement. [97730]

Mr. Boateng: Bids for the management of prisons are assessed on the criteria of deliverability, cost and quality. Deliverability is assessed in terms of financial robustness and operational effectiveness. Cost, expressed in terms of net present value, and quality are then considered. In evaluating proposals, assessors look for evidence that bidders have clear and feasible plans for meeting the requirements and that staff numbers and mix are compatible with the design and regime of the establishment.

All the bids for the management of Doncaster prison, from the in-house bid team, Premier Prison Services and Group 4, were judged by the evaluation panel to exceed the minimum requirements.

The marking system was based on the two Prison Service objectives and their five functions. Each function was broken down into sections, or secondary criteria, and a list of key criteria was devised for each section which sets out the main points to be addressed in order for the requirements to be met. Bidders' responses were marked on a scale of 0 to 6 according to the quality of their responses in how they met the requirements of each of the key criteria.

Premier Prison Services' bid was assessed as best fulfilling these criteria to win the contract for Doncaster prison.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the reason is for extending the period of new private prison contracts to 10 years from the previous limit of five years; and if he will make a statement. [97734]

Mr. Boateng: Bids were invited for 5 years and ten years. The ten year option offered better value for money for both Buckley Hall and Doncaster prisons.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish the results of HMP Doncaster and HMP Buckley Hall on key performance indicators in each of the last five years for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [97727]

Mr. Boateng: The key performance indicator (KPI) results for Doncaster and Buckley Hall prisons are given in the tables. Figures are only available since April 1996.

KPI results for overcrowding, cost per place and staff training are excluded from this analysis. The overcrowding KPI is formulated in terms of overall Prison Service capacity and population levels and is, therefore, not applicable to individual prisons. Cost per place figures for private prisons are not calculated on a basis comparable with the Prison Service KPI and private prisons are not required to provide information on staff training levels.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information is considered commercially confidential by his Department in relation to the competitive tendering process for private prison contracts; and if he will make a statement. [97733]

Mr. Boateng: The bids made in the competition, in particular any financial information, are commercially confidential as is any subsequent documentation directly referring to the bids.

When the contract or service level agreement is signed the details of the winning bid, including price, are put in the public domain.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if the financial penalties which can be imposed on the managers of prisons are capped; and if he will make a statement. [97736]

Mr. Boateng: The contracts between the Prison Service and the private companies managing prisons all contain a cap on the penalties that can be imposed on the contractor. In the case of the successful bid for Doncaster prison, the cap is 5 per cent. of the annual contract value.

Financial penalties can be imposed for three reasons:

failure to meet performance measures in the contract, for which there is a cap of 5 per cent. of the contract price;

failure to provide an available place for which 100 per cent. of the payment due is deducted; and doubling cells in excess of the permitted level for which there are different deductions in different contracts.

The first type of penalty applies both to prisons built by the Prison Service and then contracted out, and to those designed, constructed, managed and financed by the contractor (DCMF). The second and third penalties apply only to DCMF contracts.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if (a) Ministers and (b) Prison Service managers can overrule the assessment of those evaluating the bids for contracts to manage prisons; and if he will make a statement. [97731]

Mr. Boateng: Bids are considered by an evaluation panel comprised of senior Prison Service managers. Recommendations of the panel are put to the Prison Service Management Board, which may challenge or overrule these recommendations. The final decision rests with the Director General, to whom such decisions are delegated under the Prison Service Agency Framework Document.

Police Recruitment

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what powers are available to his Department to ring-fence funding for the recruitment of police officers; and if he will make a statement. [97739]

Mr. Charles Clarke: For 2000–01, grant for this purpose will be paid, following a challenge fund exercise, using the provisions of the Appropriation Act 1999. The bidding guidance to forces will make it clear that, under the challenge fund, grant will be allocated on the basis that it will be used only for recruitment over and above the number forces would otherwise have recruited over the next three years.

Crime Fighting Fund

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if the new Crime Fighting Fund will be ring-fenced for (a) the recruitment of new police officers and (b) general front-line policing responsibilities; and if he will make a statement. [97738]

Mr. Straw: Money will be made available through the Crime Fighting Fund to recruit 5,000 more police officers over and above the number forces would otherwise have recruited over the next three years commencing in April 2000. £35 million will be ring-fenced for this purpose in year 1 with further sums being made available in years 2 and 3. The money will be ring-fenced for front-line policing. It is standard practice for newly trained recruits to be put on uniformed patrol.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how the Crime Fighting Fund will be distributed between police forces; and if he will make a statement. [97740]

Mr. Straw: Forces will be invited to submit bids to the Home Office for a share of the money. We are currently preparing guidance setting out the criteria which forces will need to meet to benefit from the Fund. We will be discussing our proposals with the Association of Chief Police Officers and the Association of Police Authorities before formally inviting bids from forces. I refer the hon. member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Ryedale (Mr. Greenway) on 4 November 1999, Official Report, column 298.

Mounted Police

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police authorities in England and Wales use horse-mounted police officers as part of their regular complement. [98076]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Fourteen: Avon and Somerset, City of London, Cleveland, Greater Manchester, Humberside, Lancashire, Merseyside, Metropolitan, Northumbria, Nottinghamshire, South Yorkshire, Staffordshire, Thames Valley and West Yorkshire.

Staffordshire Police Force

Mr. Stevenson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) police officers and (b) civilian staff were employed in Staffordshire Police Force in each year since 1979. [97767]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Information on police officer and civilian support staff strength is collected at the end of March and September. The figures for the period requested are set out in the table; all figures are for full-time equivalents.

	Total Officer Strength [1]	Total Civilian Strength [2]

The powers of my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary to set police establishment levels for each force were removed under the Police and Magistrates' Courts Act 1994. It is for the chief officer to determine staffing requirements within the overall resources available. This year, Staffordshire Police Authority has set a budget that will allow the force to spend up to £122.2 million—an increase of £3.3 million or 2.7 per cent. over 1998–99. This increase, along with the two per cent. efficiency improvements that have been set, should be sufficient for the force to maintain levels of service.

Future staffing levels are for the Chief Constable to determine within the overall resources available. However, the Government are making available additional resources, in a new ring-fenced Crime Fighting Fund, to enable the police to recruit 5,000 officers, over and above those that had otherwise planned to recruit over the next three years. Staffordshire Police will be able to apply for a share of this funding.

Female Prisoners

Mr. Alan Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many female prisoners are currently being held in United Kingdom jails; and what was the average proportion of sentence served by female prisoners in the most recent year for which figures are available. [97718]

Mr. Boateng: The number of females held in Prison Service establishments in England and Wales on Friday 29 October was 3,405.

The average proportion of sentence served on release for female prisoners released during 1998 was 53 per cent. This includes time served on remand.

Information about prisons and prisoners in Scotland is a matter for my right hon. Friend the First Minister of the Scottish Executive and in Northern Ireland for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

Metropolitan Police

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the number of (a) police officers and (b) civilian employees employed in the Hillingdon Division of the Metropolitan Police for the years 1993 to 1998 inclusive. [97616]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis has provided the following information:

Hillingdon Division

	Police	Civil Staff
1993–94	[1]—	106
1994–95	424	119
1995–96	423	122
1996–97	435	120
1997–98	386	100
1998–99	399	109

[1] In 1994–95 Hillingdon Division was part of 6 Area. The Metropolitan Police District was then restructured into five Areas. 6 Area records of police officer deployment are no longer available.

Mr. Cleppison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers were serving in the Barnet and Hertsmere division of the Metropolitan Police (a) on 1 May 1997 and (b) according to the most recent figures available. [97298]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis tells me that the information requested is not available for 1 May 1997, but that information is held for 1 July 1997, when 277 police officers were serving in the Barnet and Hertsmere division.

Barnet and Hertsmere has now been combined with the Golders Green and West Hendon divisions within the Metropolitan Police. Information about police numbers for these three divisions is therefore now held as one. The number of police officers serving in Barnet Borough on 1 November 1999 was 681.

Graffiti

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many of the reparation orders made under the provisions of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 were imposed in respect of offences relating to graffiti; and if he will make a statement; [97277]

(2) what assessment his Department has made of the use of (a) reparation orders made by the courts under the provisions of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 and (b) reparation orders imposed in respect of offences relating to graffiti; and if he will make a statement. [97276]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Pilots of the reparation order under the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 began in five areas in September 1998 and will run for 18 months. 829 reparation orders had been made in the pilot areas by the end of September 1999, the latest date for which figures are readily available. Information has not been collected centrally on the offences for which reparation orders have been imposed. However, the pilots are being evaluated by a team led by Sheffield University, one of whose reports is expected to analyse the relevant offences.

Non-custodial Sentences

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish a breakdown of the offences for which (a) anti-social behaviour orders, (b) sex offender orders, (c) parenting orders, (d) child safety orders, (e) reparation orders, (f) drug treatment and testing orders and (g) action plan orders, have been made to date under the provisions of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998. [97361]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The anti-social behaviour order, sex offender order and child safety order under the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 are not criminal penalties. They are preventative in nature and are made on application, in the case of the anti-social behaviour order and sex offender order, to the magistrates' court acting in its civil capacity and, in the case of the child safety order, to the family proceedings court. However, breach of an anti-social behaviour order or sex offender order does constitute an offence.

A parenting order can follow a parental school attendance conviction under the Education Act 1996, as well as offences by children and young people or the making of an anti-social behaviour order, sex offender order or child safety order in respect of them. Piloting began in nine areas in September 1998 and 122 orders had been made there in all proceedings by the end of September 1999.

Piloting of the drug treatment and testing order began in three areas in October 1998. 144 orders had been made there by the end of October 1999. The relevant offences included theft, burglary, possession of class A drugs with intent to supply, receiving and handling stolen goods, criminal damage, possession of an offensive weapon, bail offences and driving offences.

Piloting of the reparation order, in five areas, and of the action plan order, in four areas, began in September 1998. 829 reparation orders and 490 action plan orders had been made there by the end of September 1999. Information has not been collected centrally on the offences for which the orders have been imposed. However, the pilots are being evaluated by a team led by Sheffield University, one of whose reports is expected to analyse the relevant offences.

Peacekeeping

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions his Department has had concerning the implications for future British involvement in peacekeeping operations of ratification of the International Criminal Court. [97517]

Mrs. Roche: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given by the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office, the hon. Member for Neath (Mr. Hain) on 8 November 1999, Official Report, column 409.

Police Manpower

Mr. Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what were (a) the total police strength, (b) the total number of officers available for ordinary duty and (c) the total number of constables for (i) each of the police forces in England and Wales and (ii) England and Wales as a whole on 31 March 1979 and on 31 March in each subsequent year to date. [97231]

Mr. Charles Clarke [holding answer 4 November 1999]: Information in the form requested is readily available only for the years 1991 to 1999. Tables containing this information have been placed in the Library. The figures in the tables exclude all secondments (including National Criminal Intelligence Service, National Crime Squad, Central Services and Inter-Force units).

I will write to the hon. Member with information for the earlier years as soon as it is available.

Vulnerable Witnesses

Ms Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidance he has issued in respect of evidence in criminal trials from vulnerable witnesses in accordance with the Youth Justice and Criminal Evidence Act 1999. [97374]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Explanatory notes were published to accompany the Youth Justice and Criminal Evidence Act 1999. The Government intend to issue comprehensive guidance for the purpose of implementing all the recommendations relating to vulnerable witnesses in the "Speaking up for Justice" report, including the measures in Part II of the Youth Justice and Criminal Evidence Act 1999. The Government's implementation programme for all these measures will be published shortly.

Ms Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he intends to implement sections 40 and 41 of the Youth Justice and Criminal Evidence Act 1999. [97371]

Mr. Charles Clarke: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Lancaster and Wyre (Mr. Dawson) on 8 November 1999, Official Report, column 421.

Probation Service (Computers)

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has, at what cost, to upgrade the software used by the Probation Service; and if he will publish a detailed list of errors in and omissions from the specifications of the original software. [97549]

Mr. Boateng: The Probation Service uses a variety of software packages including e-mail, word processing, other office automation products and a national case management system. Because of plans to modernise both the Probation Service's structure and ways of working, and as new possibilities have arisen from recent technology, we have also decided to re-develop the national case management system. This work is in its planning stages and work to estimate likely costs has not been completed.

The software has been subject to change and enhancements over the past few years. The rollout of the current version of the Case Management System is nearing completion. Bespoke software of any degree of complexity often contains some bugs, even after thorough testing. The list of outstanding faults on the Case Management System changes rapidly as the Home Office, Probation Services and the Contractor work together to reduce the number of errors. The error list falls under the definition of Confidential Information in the contract with our suppliers and, therefore, cannot be published.

Corpus Juris

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Buckingham (Mr. Bercow) of 26 October 1999, Official Report, column 802, for what reason the information sought is not available. [97566]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Following the reply to the hon. Member for Buckingham (Mr. Bercow) on 26 October 1999, Official Report, column 802, it has come to my attention that Mireille Delmas-Marty, one of the authors of the corpus juris report, is chair of the Comité de Surveillance of OLAF (Office pour la Lutte Anti-Fraude).

However, in order to obtain further information about official European Community positions held, if any, it would be necessary to make inquiries of the European Commission, or of the individuals themselves. We have seen no need to make such inquiries, but it is of course open to the hon. Member to do so.

Released Prisoners

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to require that (a) local authority social services and (b) local police are informed when prisoners with a record of convictions involving the sexual abuse of minors are released. [97969]

Mr. Boateng: Under existing arrangements, prison governors are required to inform local social services departments and the probation service in advance of the release of any prisoner who has been convicted of, or has been previously convicted of, any sexual or violent offence against children or young persons under the age of 18 years listed in Schedule One of the Children and Young Persons Act 1933.

On the release of a prisoner who is required to register with the police under the Sex Offenders Act 1997, the prison informs the police for the area to which the prisoner is to be discharged, or, if this is uncertain, the police for the area of the prison establishment.

The Prison Service will be undertaking shortly a comprehensive review of its current procedures for informing other agencies of the release of prisoners, to ensure that it is able to fully support other agencies in their responsibilities for managing the risk that certain prisoners may pose to the public on release from prison.

Stop and Search

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he has taken to implement Recommendation 63, regarding stop and search provisions, in the Macpherson report. [97810]

Mr. Charles Clarke: My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary published his Action Plan in March as the Government's response to the Macpherson Report. On the report's recommendations on stop and search, the Action Plan said that pilot projects would be established to test the practical implications of Recommendation 61 of the report (that all "stops" and "stops and searches" should be recorded and a copy of the record given to the person stopped). The Action Plan said that Recommendation 63 (that Police Authorities be given the duty to undertake publicity campaigns to ensure that the public is aware of "stop and search" provisions) would need to be considered further in the light of the pilot projects.

The Steering Group which my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary chairs to oversee and audit the implementation of the Action Plan has approved proposals for the pilots (to be run in Hounslow and Greenwich in the Metropolitan Police Service, and in Leicestershire, West Yorkshire and Suffolk). Piloting will have begun on all sites by later this month and will run until the end of March 2000. Decisions will be taken on any new recording requirements and further consideration given to Recommendation 63 in the light of the evaluation of the pilot projects.

Immigration and Asylum Seekers

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to ensure that illegal immigrants and bogus asylum seekers do not remain in the UK. [97891]

Mrs. Roche: The Government have made clear their commitment to remove from the United Kingdom those persons who have entered illegally and those whose asylum claims have been refused and who do not otherwise qualify to remain.

The Immigration Service has instituted a range of measures to achieve our commitment including the establishment of a specialist documentation unit to liaise with issuing authorities and the deployment of a dedicated absconder tracing team.

The Immigration and Asylum Bill currently before Parliament contains further measures aimed at ensuring that those who have no lawful basis to remain here do not do so.

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the total cost in each of the last 10 years of (a) welfare benefits, (b) medical and (c) education for illegal immigrants and asylum seekers in the UK. [97890]

Mrs. Roche: This information is not available. For information about the amount paid in social security benefits to asylum seekers in the last six years, I refer to the reply given by the Under-Secretary of State for Social Security, my hon. Friend the Member for City of York (Mr. Bayley) to the hon. Member for Aylesbury (Mr. Liddington) on 2 November 1999, Official Report, columns 154–55.

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proposals he has for the speedy clearing of the backlog of asylum applications. [97888]

Mrs. Roche: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Woking (Mr. Malins) on 1 November 1999, Official Report, column 58.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Portadown Attack

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many Royal Ulster Constabulary officers comprised the inquiry team into the murder of Robert Hamill. [95357]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 26 October 1999]: The RUC have advised that the size of the team investigating the murder of Robert Hamill varied as the investigation necessitated. It consisted of up to 28 officers, with appropriate supporting staff.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many hours elapsed between the assaults on Robert Hamill and Gregory Girvan in Portadown town centre on 27 April 1997 and the attendance of Royal Ulster Constabulary scenes of crime officers at the location of the attack. [95355]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 26 October 1999]: The RUC have advised that Scenes of Crime Officers were at the scene of the incident eight hours after the assault, though there were other officers at the scene before then.

Postgraduate Awards

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what proportion of students enrolled in higher education institutions in (a) Derry and (b) Belfast benefit from Department of Education Northern Ireland awards for taught postgraduate study in computer science/I.T. [97031]

Mr. McFall: The Department of Education for Northern Ireland's awards for taught postgraduate study are tenable only at the Queen's University of Belfast and the University of Ulster. The 1999–2000 full-time postgraduate enrolment position in Londonderry and Belfast is as follows:

Higher education institution	Number of post graduate students	Number of DENI taught postgraduate awards

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what proportions of Department of Education Northern Ireland taught postgraduate awards are allocated to each subject area. [97032]

Mr. McFall: For the 1999–2000 academic year, the Department of Education for Northern Ireland (DENI) made available to the University of Ulster (UU) and Queen's University of Belfast (QUB), by faculty, the following numbers of taught postgraduate awards:

Millennium Compliance

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what languages other than English have been used in advertising designed to convey the Government's message about Year 2000 compliance to ethnic minority communities. [97279]

Mr. Ingram: Northern Ireland, like the rest of the United Kingdom, has relied on the publicity material produced by Action 2000 to convey the message about Year 2000 compliance. Government Departments in Northern Ireland have produced little or no publicity material about the Year 2000 compliance issue.

Substance Abuse

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) statutory and (b) voluntary bodies there are in Northern Ireland which deal with substance abuse and rehabilitation; and if he will make a statement. [97455]

Mr. George Howarth: The Department of Health and Social Services is aware of 17 statutory and 34 voluntary organisations working in this area. These figures exclude organisations the primary focus of which is not substance misuse but which nevertheless may encounter such problems in the course of their work.

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much money is spent per annum in Northern Ireland on substance abuse rehabilitation by (a) statutory and (b) voluntary bodies; and if he will make a statement. [97456]

Mr. George Howarth: This information is not available in the form requested. However, a 1999 report on reducing alcohol related harm in Northern Ireland estimated that annual expenditure by Health and Social Services Boards and HSS Trusts on alcohol addiction treatment services was £2.9 million. Similarly, a consultancy report, commissioned to inform the new "Drugs Strategy for Northern Ireland", estimated that Boards and Trusts spend £1.4 million annually on drug services.

The Department of Health and Social Services awarded grants totalling almost £230,000 in 1998–99 to voluntary organisations involved in combating substance misuse.

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what indicators are used by (a) statutory and (b) voluntary bodies in Northern Ireland to measure the success of programmes working with substance abuse and rehabilitation; and if he will make a statement. [97457]

Mr. George Howarth: No common standards or indicators are in place to assess the effectiveness of substance abuse programmes undertaken by the many statutory and voluntary organisations engaged in tackling the problem. However, a number of organisations take steps to assess such programmes ranging from client questionnaires to multi-disciplinary team evaluations. Funding of voluntary organisations by Government Departments is conditional upon the outcome of a rigorous evaluation programme every three years.

The new "Drug Strategy for Northern Ireland", published in August, sets out a series of objectives and outcomes in respect of four key areas. The Government will, in due course, publish specific plans as to how these objectives and outcomes will be met but organisations will be held accountable for progress through the drug structures and the action planning process. The new alcohol strategy due for publication in March 2000 will also include specific objectives and outcomes.

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what level of co-operation there is between (a) statutory and (b) voluntary organisations working in Northern Ireland on substance misuse and rehabilitation programmes; and if he will make a statement. [97458]

Mr. George Howarth: Structures are in place to ensure co-operation both within and between the statutory and voluntary sectors to tackle substance misuse. The Central Co-ordinating Group for Action Against Drugs, chaired by my right hon. Friend the Minister of State, Northern Ireland Office, comprises representative from Government Departments and their agencies, together with advisers from the police, Prison Service and Customs and Excise. Drug Co-ordination Teams exist in each Health and Social Services Board areas. These include representatives from a wide range of statutory and voluntary sector organisations, and are responsible for developing local action plans to address local needs.

In addition, health professionals from each Health Board area work together on the Northern Ireland Committee on Drug Misuse. The Committee, which also includes voluntary sector representation, advises the Department on measures to combat the illicit drug problem.

A Drug Information Exchange Group, under the auspices of the Health Promotion Agency for Northern Ireland, also provides a forum for co-operation and information sharing. A separate forum will be established shortly on alcohol misuse.

Following a recent review of alcohol policy in Northern Ireland, the Department of Health and Social Services intends to publish a new strategy in March 2000. The strategy will include recommendations about structures to facilitate improved co-operation.

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much money is ring-fenced by local health boards in Northern Ireland for substance abuse rehabilitation schemes; and if he will make a statement. [97459]

Mr. George Howarth: This information is not available in the form requested. However, during 1999–2000, expected expenditure to be deployed on alcohol/addiction services by each Health and Social Services Board is set out in the following table:

Expected spend on alcohol/addiction service in 1999–2000

Health and Social Services Board	£000
Northern	715
Southern	505

Social Services Personnel

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish the recorded assaults on social services personnel during the course of their work in each of the last two years for which figures are available. [97275]

Mr. George Howarth: Information on recorded assaults on social services personnel is not collected centrally. However, I would refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply I gave to the right hon. Member for Strangford (Mr. Taylor) on 19 October 1999, Official Report, column 463.

Prisoner Releases

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the offences for which prisoners released under the accelerated prisoner release scheme have been (a) arrested and (b) charged. [97704]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 8 November 1999]: Seven persons released under the terms of the Northern Ireland (Sentences) Act 1998 have subsequently been arrested in connection with the following offences: grievous bodily harm with intent, actual bodily harm, assault, breach of the peace, affray, criminal damage, theft, handling stolen goods, armed robbery, possession of controlled substances, assault on police, and conspiracy to murder.

Concerning the question of charges, I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 2 November 1999, Official Report, column 134.

New Buildings (Capital Expenditure)

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what items of capital expenditure on new buildings for Government Departments in Northern Ireland are planned for the current and next three years (a) in the grounds of the Stormont Estate and (b) elsewhere in Belfast; and what is the estimated cost of each such building. [97779]

Mr. George Howarth [holding answer 9 November 1999]: Whilst there are no plans for expenditure on new buildings, major works are planned for buildings in the government office estate as set out in the following table:

	1999–2000	2000–01	2001–02	2002–03

Castle Buildings	1,403	1,007	—	—

In the event of devolution it may be necessary to acquire or fit out premises to provide additional accommodation for the new Departmental structures.

Prisoner Statistics

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many persons claiming affiliation to each terrorist organisation were in prison in Northern Ireland on (a) 1 January and (b) 1 November; and, of those remaining, how many he estimates will be in prison on 1 January 2000. [97824]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 9 November 1999]: Information is held, for management purposes, in relation to the perceived paramilitary association of prisoners in HMP Maze, where links are clearly defined. Information for HMP Magilligan, HMP Maghaberry, and HM YOC is not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Table A sets out the population of HMP Maze according to perceived paramilitary association at 1 January and 1 November 1999.

Table B sets out the equivalent future estimate at 1 January 2000. Figures at 1 January do not take account of those who may benefit from any of the temporary release schemes currently operated by the NIPS.

Correspondence

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will place in the Library a copy of the reply received by his predecessor to her letter, with annexe, to the Minister for Foreign Affairs of the Irish Republic, sent in the second week of July and deposited in the Library on 13 July. [97780]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 9 November 1999]: The document deposited in the Library on 13 July was a draft letter from my predecessor, my right hon. Friend the Member for Redcar (Marjorie Mowlam), to the Irish Minister for Foreign Affairs. This letter, with its associated annexe and in parallel with the domestic legislation which was at that time being considered by the House, was intended to give effect to the fail-safe arrangements envisaged under the Way Forward proposals set out by the British and Irish Governments on 2 July. In the event, those proposals were not implemented and the letter was not sent.

Roadway Arches

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what level of public liability insurance indemnifying his Department against claims in respect of injury was required in each successful application for arches over roadways made to the road service in Northern Ireland under Article 73 of the Roads (NI) Order 1993 between 1 and 15 June; [97759]

(2) how many applications were made to the road service in Northern Ireland under Article 73 of the Roads (NI) Order 1993 between 1 and 15 June for arches over roadways; how many such applications were (a) refused and (b) granted; and if he will list them; [97758]

(3) how many arches over roadways were erected between 1 and 15 June in respect of which no applications had been made to the road service in Northern Ireland under Article 73 of the Roads (NI) Order 1993; and what prosecutions have taken place for breach of Article 73 of the Roads (NI) Order 1993. [97760]

Mr. George Howarth: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the Roads Service under its chief executive, Mr. Colin James. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from G. P. Fraser to Mr. Jeremy Corbyn, dated 9 November 1999:

The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland has asked our Chief Executive to respond to your three recently tabled Parliamentary Questions about the erection of arches over roads. In the absence of our Chief Executive, I am replying.

First, as regards your question about public liability insurance, the Department of the Environment requires all successful applicants, who make requests to Roads Service to erect arches over roads under Article 73 of the Roads (Northern Ireland) Order 1993, to have public liability insurance of £5M. This level of insurance is required regardless of when applications are made.

Secondly, as to the number of such applications made to Roads Service between 1 and 15 June 1999, only one application was received. The application, which was for an arch at Main Street, Glenvay, was granted.

Finally, Roads Service has no record of the number of arches that were erected over roads between 1 and 15 June 1999 for which no applications were made under Article 73 of the 1993 Order. No prosecutions have taken place for breaches of Article 73.

I hope you find this information helpful.

Consultants

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much his Department spent on external consultants and advisers in each of the last four financial years. [97426]

Mr. Ingram: The amount spent on external consultants and advisers by Northern Ireland Department and the Northern Ireland Office in each of the last four financial years is as follows:

1995–96: £13,496,067

1996–97: £10,781,752

1997–98: £10,855,484

1998–99: £11,290,736.

Terrorist-related Offences

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, pursuant to his answer of 2 November 1999, Official Report, column 135, concerning prisoners released under the terms of the Northern Ireland (Sentences) Act 1998, what constitutes a terrorist-related offence; if such offences relate to crimes committed in (a) mainland Britain and (b) the Republic of Ireland; and if he will make a statement. [97778]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 8 November 1999]: As I said in my original answer, the offences were all committed in Northern Ireland. They did not involve the use of violence for political ends, including any use of violence for the purpose of putting the public or any section of the public in fear, and so I do not consider them to be terrorist related.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Highways (Spending)

Mr. Cash: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the levels of spending on highways per head of population in (a) Staffordshire and (b) each other county of England (i) in the current year and (ii) in each of the last three years. [94012]

Mr. Hill: The tables showing capital and current spending figures for the current year and the last three years, where these are available, have been placed in the Library of the House. Both tables include Staffordshire.

Driving Theory Test

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to amend the driving theory test to promote greater understanding of the reasons for road traffic laws. [96639]

Mr. Hill: The test already addresses road traffic regulations. The question bank is reviewed annually, with new questions introduced to help ensure that learner drivers develop satisfactory knowledge and understanding of the theory of safe driving.

Road Accidents

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many accidents have been recorded so far in 1999 involving motorcycles; and how many of these were also recorded in the category signifying the presence of oil or diesel on the road surface at the site of the accident. [96973]

Mr. Hill: Data on the presence of oil or diesel on the road at the site of injury accidents involving motorcyclists have been collected for the first time this year. Early indications are that the number of accidents involving motorcycles where oil or diesel was present is a very small proportion of the overall motorcycle accident figure. Full data will be available when "Road Accidents Great Britain 1999" is published in September 2000.

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many accidents have been recorded so far in 1999; and how many of these have been recorded in the category signifying the presence of oil and diesel on the road surface at the site of the accidents. [96999]

Mr. Hill: Data on the presence of oil or diesel on the road at the site of injury accidents have been collected for the first time this year. Early indications are that the number of accidents where oil or diesel was present is a very small proportion of the overall accident figure. Full data will be available when "Road Accidents Great Britain 1999" is published in September 2000.

Water Companies (Compulsory Purchases)

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what powers he has to grant an extension of time beyond an original deadline to a water company to permit submission of its statement of case and list of documents in relation to an application for compulsory purchase. [97542]

Mr. Mullin: Rule 19 of the Compulsory Purchase By Non-Ministerial Acquiring Authorities (Inquiry Procedure) Rules 1990 enables the Secretary of State to allow an extension of time when it is reasonable to do so.

Railway Industry (Millennium Compliance)

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what reports he has received from Railtrack plc as regards their preparation for the year 2000 and the millennium bug; and if he will make a statement; [97272]

(2) what reports the railway industry has submitted to him on end-to-end validation of its computer systems for the year 2000; and if he will place copies of such reports in the Library; [97301]

(3) if Railtrack has reported to him on the completion of its end-to-end validation of its computer systems in respect of the year 2000 millennium bug; and if he will make a statement. [97300]

Mr. Hill: The railway industry, led by Railtrack, has for more than two years been undertaking a systematic programme of work aimed at ensuring the Year 2000 compliance of all systems needed for safety and business continuity.

Millennium bug readiness in the railway industry, including Railtrack, has been independently assessed by the Health and Safety Executive's HM Railway Inspectorate in respect of safety critical systems, and by the Office of the Rail Regulator (ORR) in respect of business continuity systems.

ORR has received regular reports from both Railtrack and the industry body, the Rail Millennium Programme Office (RMPO), on the compliance status of the industry. These reports cover the status of all elements of the compliance programme including cross-industry systems, supplier certification statements, and the remediation programme.

Industry desk-top exercises have been conducted between Railtrack, train operators, London Underground and the British Transport Police to test working arrangements for the Millennium night whilst Railtrack have conducted Business Confidence Demonstrations to test the "rollover" of systems. ORR has attended as observer at selected desk-top exercises and is being advised on the outcome of the Business Confidence Demonstrations.

My Department receives regular reports on progress made by the railway industry towards millennium compliance and the position is reported by ORR at meetings of the National Infrastructure Forum, organised by Action 2000. At the National Infrastructure Forum on 20–21 October the overall assessment of rail safety critical systems and business continuity systems was 100 per cent. "blue" i.e. indicating that the assessment has identified no risk of material disruption. A copy of the ORR report has been placed in the Library of the House.

Emission Levels

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what the consent levels are for emissions from the Edmonton and Lewisham incinerators for (a) carbon monoxide, (b) hydrogen chloride, (c) nitrogen dioxide, (d) particulates and (e) sulphur dioxide. [97448]

Mr. Hill: Both incinerators are authorised under Part I Environmental Protection Act 1990. The following table shows the emission limits for the substances requested for each plant.

Substance	The Edmonton incinerator (incinerators 1–5 and the clinical waste incinerator) Emission limit 95 per cent. hourly mean[1] mg/m[3]	The SELCHP (Lewisham) Municipal incinerator Emission limit 95 per cent. hourly mean[1] mg/m[3]
Carbon Monoxide	100	80
Hydrogen Chloride	30	30
Oxides of nitrogen[2] expressed as NO_2	350	350
Particulates	30	20
Sulphur Dioxide	300	80

[1] For continuous monitoring the limits will be considered to be complied with if, in any 24-hour period, 95 per cent. of hourly average results are within these limits and no individual hourly average is greater than 1.5 times the relevant limit. For the Edmonton plant the limits are also for a single test, whether carried out manually or by instruments.

[2] There is no specific limit for nitrogen dioxide. A condition is used to limit all Oxides of Nitrogen as if they were nitrogen dioxide.

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many unauthorised emissions, by types and quantities, there have been from the (a) Edmonton and (b) Lewisham incinerators since January 1996; and if he will make a statement. [97449]

Mr. Hill: The following tables give a summary of the total number of reported unauthorised emissions by substances for each plant since 1996. Further details can be found on the public register.

For both plants the releases would typically occur over a 2 to 4 hour period within a 24-hour reporting period.

The Agency considered all the reported unauthorised emissions from the Lewisham plant and was satisfied that no serious effect to the environment or harm to human health occurred as a result of the breaches. Following the hydrogen chloride breaches in 1996 and 1997 at Lewisham, the operator installed new abatement equipment. This has resulted in a decline in breaches.

The Agency has now required the use of a continuous monitor to control emissions from the Edmonton plant and prevent further breaches.

Private Hire Vehicles

Mr. John M. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what actions he plans to take following the judgment of the Divisional Court on 15 October in the case of Murtagh and Carter and Bromsgrove District Council concerning the licensing of private hire vehicles and cross boundary operation; and if he will make a statement. [97274]

Mr. Hill: My Department is aware of this case, which we understand may be subject to appeal; in the circumstances, it would be inappropriate for me to comment.

Sewer Overflows

Mr. Truswell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to issue guidance to water companies regarding the provision of public warning notices at watercourses subject to contamination from combined sewer overflows. [97387]

Mr. Mullin: The provision of public warning notices at watercourses is a matter for local Public Health Authorities in consultation, as necessary, with the Environment Agency.

Mr. Truswell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to deal with the contamination of watercourses by effluent from combined sewage overflows. [97388]

Mr. Mullin: The Secretary of State's guidance to the Director General of OFWAT on the environmental and quality requirements to be placed on the companies during the period from 2000–05, issued on 1 March, included proposals for a substantial programme of improvements to combined sewer overflows. Priority was given to tackling failures to meet mandatory water quality standards and to reducing aesthetic problems resulting from unsanitary and unsightly debris left when combined sewer overflows operate. The Director General will announce his determinations of price limits on 25 November.

Rail Passenger Partnership Fund

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is the funding available for the current financial year in respect of the Rail Passenger Partnership Fund. [97568]

Mr. Hill: £20 million has been made available for the current financial year in respect of the Rail Passenger Partnership fund and the Infrastructure Investment Fund.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will report on the progress of successful bids under the Rail Passenger Partnership Fund indicating in each case the location and amount granted. [97569]

Mr. Hill: A decision on the first group of bids for Rail Passenger Partnership funding is likely to be announced by the shadow Strategic Rail Authority towards the end of 1999 or early in the New Year.

Caldon Low Line

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the eligibility of proposals to provide for the opportunity to retain an option of securing rail passenger services following the reopening of the Caldon Low line for freight. [97570]

Mr. Hill: To encourage investment in the rail passenger network we have provided the Franchising Director with £105 million of additional funding to be distributed over the next three years through the Rail Passenger Partnership (RPP) scheme. Sponsors of new passenger services on the Caldon Low Line which are not self-supporting could be eligible to apply for RPP funding. The Franchising Director would consider bids against his "Planning Criteria" which require that they should be consistent with our Integrated Transport White Paper and represent value for money.

Electoral Review (North Yorkshire County Council)

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to ensure that the Boundary Commission completes a review of North Yorkshire County Council Divisions in time for the May 2001 county council elections. [97551]

Ms Beverley Hughes: The independent Local Government Commission for England decides the timing of electoral reviews within its periodic electoral review programme having regard to the Government's plans for implementing the Commission's recommendations. My right hon. Friend the Minister for Local Government and the Regions announced our current plans on 27 July 1999, Official Report, column 356.

On this basis the Commission has scheduled the review of North Yorkshire County Council divisions to begin in the financial year 2001–02, with a view to the review being implemented on the normal election day in 2005.

Landfill Sites

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what research his Department has undertaken into emissions from landfill sites. [97620]

Mr. Hill: DETR has commissioned two projects on estimating methane emissions from landfill sites, the first being "An estimate of methane emissions from UK landfill sites based on direct flux measurements at representative sites", published in November 1997. The results underpinned a second project to develop a methodology for estimating UK emissions from landfill and to offer projections to 2012, published in March 1999.

Salisbury Transport Study

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what was (a) the cost of the Salisbury Transport Study led by the Government Office of the South West and (b) the fee paid to its consultants W. S. Atkins. [97611]

Mr. Hill: The overall cost of the Study, which is due for completion March 2000, is estimated at £400,000, excluding VAT. The sum of fees paid to date to W. S. Atkins is £250,000.

Road Workers (Deaths)

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many people were killed in the last year for which figures are available while working on (a) road construction, (b) road repair and maintenance and (c) road cleaning. [97702]

Mr. Meacher: The number of fatal injuries to workers (employees and self-employed) reported to the Health and Safety Executive (HSE) in 1998–99 is:

(a) road construction—5

(b) road repair and maintenance—1

(c) road cleaning—0

(These figures based on the HSE's provisional data for 1 April 1998 to 31 March 1999).

Driving Tests (Waiting Times)

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what regional variations there are in the waiting times for driving tests and retests; and if he will make a statement. [97701]

Mr. Hill: Driving tests, including retests, can be obtained in the Driving Standards Agency's five operational areas as follows:

5 weeks in Scotland: 6 weeks in Wales and Western England; 6 weeks in Northern England; 5 weeks in Midlands and Eastern England, and 9 weeks in London and the South East.

Local Authority Housing Stock

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list those local authorities which have disposed of their entire housing stock since 1 May 1997; and if he will make a statement. [97622]

Mr. Mullin: Seventeen local authorities have disposed of their entire housing stock since 1 May 1997. Details are as follows:

South Oxfordshire DC
Eden DC
LB Bexley
Congleton DC
Kerrier DC
West Somerset DC
Tewkesbury DC
Rother DC
West Devon BC
South Somerset DC
East Lindsey DC
South Hams DC
Telford and Wrekin DC
Worthing DC
Bath and North East Somerset Council
Allerdale DC
West Lindsey DC.

Lorry Drivers' Dispute (Claims)

Miss Geraldine Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if all eligible claims relating to the most recent French lorry drivers' dispute have been settled. [97652]

Mr. Hill: We understand that nearly all eligible claims arising from the French lorry drivers' dispute in 1996 have now been settled by the French authorities. Claimants are under no obligation to inform the Government of the outcome of their case and so precise details on settlements are not available. We continue to work with the French authorities to seek resolution of the handful of remaining cases.

Planning Obligations

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the implications of the High Court decision in Jelson Ltd. v. Derby City Council for (a) the lawfulness of planning obligations requiring developers to transfer land to registered social landlords and the number of such planning obligations affected, (b) local planning authority practice and (c) Government guidance, with particular reference to Environment Circular 6/98 on affordable housing. [97754]

Ms Beverley Hughes: The Government do not comment on High Court Decisions.

The Government's planning policy on affordable housing is set out in Planning Policy Guidance note 3: Housing and amplified in Circular 6/98: Planning and Affordable Housing. The policy aims to ensure that large new housing developments incorporate a reasonable mix and balance of house types and sizes to cater for a range of housing need. It enables local planning authorities to negotiate the inclusion of an element of affordable housing in suitable housing proposals.

The policy is not affected by this decision, neither should local authority practice be affected, provided it is consistent with our policy.

Planning Applications

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what was the average time taken by his Department to decide planning applications which have been called in in the last 12 months for which figures are available; and what targets he has set on the length of time taken to determine such planning applications. [97910]

Ms Beverley Hughes: The average time taken to decide planning applications called in by the Secretary of State in the 12 months to the end of September 1999 was 27 weeks from the date of call-in. The Secretary of State aims to issue 80 per cent. of decisions within 13 weeks of receipt of the Inspector's report and 100 per cent. of decisions within 20 weeks.

Speed Limits

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has (1) to increase the speed limit on motorways; [97946]

(2) to reduce the speed limit in built-up residential areas. [97945]

Mr. Hill: My Department is currently reviewing speed management policy. The issue of speed limits for all types of road is being considered within the review which is due to report by the end of the year.

Water Industry

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he last met leaders of the water industry; and what matters were discussed. [97902]

Mr. Mullin: Ministers of my Department meet water company representatives from time to time and discuss matters of mutual interest. Water UK, the industry association, has requested a meeting with my right hon. Friend the Minister for the Environment, which is being arranged.

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of current levels of investment in the water industry. [97903]

Mr. Mullin: The Director General of Water Services publishes an annual "Report on the financial performance and capital investment of the water companies in England and Wales", a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of Ofwat's efforts to ensure that water companies are able to finance the proper execution of their functions. [97947]

Mr. Mullin: This is a matter for the Director General of Water Services.

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps he has taken to ensure that the funding criteria applied to water companies will ensure satisfactory levels of future investment. [97948]

Mr. Mullin: The Director General of Water Services has a statutory duty to secure that companies are able to finance the proper carrying out of their functions. The Secretary of State has issued guidance to the Director General on the environmental and quality objectives to be achieved by the water industry between 2000 and 2005.

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the impact upon employment levels of planned future reductions in the price of water. [97949]

Mr. Mullin: I refer the hon. Member to my answer on 27 October 1999, Official Report, columns 871–72, to my hon. Friend the Member for Plymouth, Sutton (Mrs. Gilroy).

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the impact of water price reductions upon the provision of subsidised bill payment facilities. [98012]

Mr. Mullin: The determination of price limits for water companies is a matter for the Director General of Water Services. The Government believe that it is possible to deliver an ambitious environmental programme and offer reductions in customers' bills.

Under the Water Industry Act 1999, the Director General will become responsible for approving companies' charging arrangements, set out in their charges schemes; and the Secretary of State may provide guidance. The Secretary of State has published draft guidance to the Director General on the exercise of this responsibility, which proposes that water companies should offer a range of payment options at no extra cost to the customers who use them.

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the impact of proposed reductions in charges for water on (a) water company operations, (b) sewage treatment activities and (c) water company investment. [98140]

Mr. Mullin: This is a matter for the Director General of Water Services, who has a statutory duty to ensure that companies are able to finance the proper carrying out of their functions.

M4 Bus Lane

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the future of the M4 bus lane. [97773]

Mr. Hill [holding answer 8 November 1999]: The M4 Bus lane is being monitored by the Transport Research Laboratory. Their reports on the first three months of operation show that all vehicles are benefiting from reduced journey times during morning and evening peak periods. Subsequent monitoring shows that benefits, similar to those achieved during the first three months of operation, are continuing to be achieved. Decisions on the future of the bus lane will be taken once sufficient operational experience has been gathered and comparable before and after monitoring data have been analysed.

Leasehold

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the numbers of leasehold (a) properties and (b) households for each local authority area. [97804]

Mr. Mullin: Estimates of the number of leasehold households can be made from the Survey of English Housing down to Government Office Region level as shown in the following table. It is not possible to make estimates for individual local authorities from this source owing to limits of sample size.

Number of leasehold households by Government office region, 1997–98 to 1998–99

	Thousand
North East	63
North West	540
Yorks & Humber	120
East Midlands	35
West Midlands	137
Eastern	125
London	433
South East	212
South West	107
England	1,772

Notes:

1 Estimates from the Survey of English Housing, using data from the 1997–98 and 1998–99 surveys

2 Like all estimates from sample surveys, these figures are subject to sampling variability

Road Users (Drugs)

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what discussions he has had with his Cabinet colleagues on the possible introduction and use of a reacting portable device for drug testing of road users; and if he will make a statement. [97927]

Mr. Hill: Driving while unfit through drugs is an offence and we are therefore working with the police and the Home Office on the development of recognition techniques and screening devices to help them enforce the law more effectively. When suitable equipment is available we would want the police to have the power to require suspected drivers to give samples for screening. This would need primary legislation.

Mine Water Discharges

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the locations in north Staffordshire where he is monitoring contamination of surface waters by discharges of mine water; and if he will list those which (a) have and (b) do not have discharge consents. [97799]

Mr. Mullin: The Environment Agency monitors the following sites:

Berry Hill Trentmill Road downstream at NGR SJ89264668

Berry Hill Austin Street upstream at NGR SJ89004645

Berry Hill Govan Road—pool at rear NGR SJ89654570

Silverdale Colliery—Silverbrook at NGR SJ82124667

Apedale Road—Lyme Brook at NGR SJ82554895

Cophurst Quarry—Lightwood at NGR SJ92404100

Cockster Brook adjacent to A50 trunk road NGR SJ89904370

Norton Green—Caldon Canal north of the Engine Lock at NGR SJ90205160

Norton Green—Caldon Canal south of the Engine Lock at NGR SJ90005140

Harecastle Tunnel—Trent and Mersey Canal.

Apart from the Harecastle Tunnel and Norton Green discharges, these emissions are intermittent, minor, or recent, and there is no proven relationship with any specific colliery. Monitoring has been instigated to assess the impact on receiving waters, and the only consented discharge to date is from Silverdale Colliery.

The Environment Agency continues to work closely with the Coal Authority to identify relevant sites.

Newsprint (Recycling)

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he received a copy of the report from the Newspaper Publishers Association on targets for the recycled content of newsprint; if he will make a statement; and if he will place a copy of the report in the Library. [97685]

Mr. Mullin [holding answer 9 November 1999]: My right hon. Friend the Minister of State for the Environment received a copy of the Newspaper Publishers Association's Report in June 1999. However, since the Report was written by the Newspaper Publishers Association, it is for them to decide whether they wish to make it more widely available.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what recent advice he has received from industry representatives concerning the maximum achievable recycled content of newsprint; and if he will make a statement. [97684]

Mr. Mullin [holding answer 9 November 1999]: Following receipt of the Newspaper Publishers Association's Report in June 1999, my right hon. Friend the Minister of State for the Environment asked officials to discuss some of the issues further with the Newspaper Publishers Association. He is now awaiting further advice from the Association.

Newspaper Publishers Association

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he met representatives of the Newspaper Publishers Association in the last 12 months. [97686]

Mr. Mullin [holding answer 9 November 1999]: My right hon. Friend the Minister of State for the Environment met representatives of the Newspaper Publishers Association in March of this year and in October in 1998.

Gatwick

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the recommendation in the SERPLAN report relating to the area around Gatwick Airport and Crawley. [97829]

Mr. Raynsford: SERPLAN submitted its Draft Regional Planning Guidance in December 1998. This was subject to a public Examination in Summer 1999. The Panel Report recommends an Area of Plan Led Expansion in the Crawley-Gatwick area. The Panel's Report, and all representations on the Draft RPG, are being considered with a view to full public consultation on the Secretary of State's proposed changes to the Draft RPG early in the New Year.

Education SSA

Mr. Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the fairness of the allocation to Nottinghamshire County Council of education Standard Spending Assessment. [97870]

Ms Beverley Hughes: We have sought to improve the fairness of the Standard Spending Assessments over the last two years. But we want to see whether there is a better way of determining the distribution of revenue support grant that is simpler, more stable, more robust, and fairer than the present arrangements for SSAs. We are pursuing this in the review described in the White Paper "Modern Local Government—In touch with the People".

Single Regeneration Budget

Caroline Flint: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the funds received from the Single Regeneration Budget by organisations (a) within the Doncaster Borough and (b) within Dearne Valley in each of the last five years. [98029]

Ms Beverley Hughes: The amount of single regeneration budget (SRB) claimed for each of the Partnerships in Doncaster and the Dearne Valley including estimates for the current financial year is as follows.

£ million

Partnership/SRB scheme	1995–96	1996–97	1997–98	1998–99	1999–2000 est.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if the DVLC is millennium compliant for all of its operations; and if he will make a statement. [98036]

Mr. Hill: Following the replacement of the vehicle registration and licensing system in October, all DVLA's mission critical operations are Year 2000 compliant.

Driving Instructor Tests

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the extent of delays by the Driving Standards Agency in arranging approved driving instructor tests. [98070]

Mr. Hill: The Driving Standards Agency monitors the waiting times for tests for approved driving instructors against a national 5 week target. Extra examiners are being deployed in the London area so this target can be delivered.

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received about waiting times in arranging approved driving instructor tests for members of the armed forces preparing for resettlement. [98071]

Mr. Hill: The Driving Standards Agency has received no such representations.

Rented Accommodation

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to include guidance in the modernised planning regime on the need for affordable rented accommodation; and if he will make a statement. [98054]

Ms Beverley Hughes: The Government's planning policy on affordable housing is set out in Planning Policy Guidance note 3: Housing and in Circular 6/98: Planning and Affordable Housing. In March this year, we issued a consultation draft revision of PPG3. We are currently finalising this revised guidance and expect to publish shortly.

Housing Green Paper

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when the Housing Green Paper will be published; and if he will make a statement. [98053]

Mr. Mullin: We intend to publish a Housing Policy Green Paper in due course. The Green Paper will build on our achievements in housing to ensure that everyone is offered the opportunity of a decent home and so promote social cohesion, well-being and self-dependence.

National Countryside Access Forum

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the members of local forums set up to oversee the National Countryside Access Forum; what are the terms of reference of these forums; and if he will make a statement. [98104]

Mr. Mullin: Local access forums have not been established yet. As explained in "Access to the countryside in England and Wales: The Government's Framework for Action", which was published in March, the Countryside Agency and the Countryside Council for Wales have been asked to draw up good practice guidelines on the membership, role and operations of the forums, and to ensure effective geographical coverage. The National Countryside Access Forum for England is advising the Countryside Agency on the guidelines.

Greenfield Land

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what estimate he has made of the total amount of greenfield land in respect of which (1) developers have been granted options, broken down by regions; [98065]

(2) planning permission for new development has been granted, broken down by region; [98066]

(3) applications for planning permission are currently pending, broken down by region. [98067]

Ms Beverley Hughes: This information is not available centrally.

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he plans to publish statistics for new development on (a) greenfield and (b) brownfield sites. [98063]

Ms Beverley Hughes: Estimates of the proportion of new development on previously developed land are published annually in the statistical Bulletin series "Land Use Change in England". The next edition, issue number 14, will be published shortly.

Social Landlord Tenants (Discount)

Ms Rosie Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what proposals he has to adjust the right to acquire discount which is available to some registered social landlord tenants. [98272]

Mr. Raynsford: I will lay before Parliament tomorrow The Housing (Right to Acquire) (Discount) (Amendment) Order 1999 No. 3028. Subject to Parliamentary approval, it will come into force on 2 December.

The Right to Acquire scheme gives eligible tenants of registered social landlords the statutory right to buy the home they currently rent, with the help of a discount of between £9,000 and £16,000 depending on the area in which they live. The change will limit that discount to 50 per cent. of the value of the property where that is less than the flat rate discount for the area.

Under the current arrangements, tenants in areas where property values are very low could purchase for a very low or nominal sum. This was not the original intention of the scheme, and does not represent a fair contribution from the purchaser towards the cost of acquiring the property.

The change will bring the Right to Acquire more into line with the Right to Buy and offer better value for money for the taxpayer. It will also help protect some registered social landlords whose financial position could be adversely affected if a substantial number of eligible tenants of low value properties were to exercise their Right to Acquire.

We are also considering the introduction of a "cost floor" to the Right to Acquire which would be similar to that which operates under the Right to Buy scheme. This would limit the discount available to some tenants whose homes have recently been acquired, built or improved while ensuring that registered social landlords recover the amount they have invested in the property. However, the issues are complex and require further examination before we decide whether to go ahead.

Housing Capital Resources

Kali Mountford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he intends to announce the results of his Department's review of the needs indices used in the allocation of housing capital resources to local authorities and registered social landlords. [98270]

Mr. Raynsford: I am pleased to be able to announce the conclusion of the review today. There was broad support for nearly all the proposals set out in a consultation paper, which received over a hundred responses. Two key changes to the needs indices to be used for the 2000–01 allocations are: inclusion of data on statutory homelessness in the New Provision Indictor; and increasing the share of the private sector stock condition indicator within the Generalised Needs Index. The second of these reflects the move to the single plot for housing capital when resources for private sector renewal will no longer be allocated separately. A summary of the responses to the consultation on this issue is available in the House Library together with tables showing the effect of these changes for each local authority. Members can view individual responses in my Department's Library.

Regional Development Agencies

Mr. Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if the regional development agencies have prepared annual accounts and reports for 1998–99; and if he will make a statement. [98271]

Ms Beverley Hughes: The Regional Development Agencies' annual reports and accounts for 1998–99 have been published today. Copies have been placed in the Library. These cover the preparatory period prior to the launch of the RDAs on 1 April 1999. The Government welcome the progress made by Agencies and their commitment to improving the economy, skills and competitiveness of the regions. The Agencies are producing real benefits for their regions.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what progress has been made on reviewing the local government finance system. [98338]

Ms Armstrong: The July 1998 White Paper "Modern Local Government—In Touch With The People" announced that central Government, in partnership with local government, would investigate ways of distributing revenue support grant that were simpler, more stable, more robust and fairer than the present arrangements.

Alternative approaches to grant distribution are currently being developed by a working group of civil servants and local government officers, which reports to the Central Local Partnership.

The White Paper also announced that work would be commissioned to simplify the system of local government capital finance. PricewaterhouseCoopers (PwC) have now completed their research into two key areas:

(i) prudential indicators for regulating local authorities' capital expenditure; and

(ii) a non-statutory framework for the prudent repayment of local authority debt.

Taken together, the PwC reports propose a move from the present complex system of statutory controls to a new system with a greater emphasis on self-assessment and adherence to professional codes. My Department has not yet had time to fully consider the implications of the reports, but welcomes them as substantial contributions to the review.

Copies of executive summaries of the PwC research are being sent to every local authority in England and placed on the DETR's website and in the House of Commons Library. The full reports will be published shortly. As with the revenue grant distribution review, the proposed reforms will be considered by a joint working group of civil servants and local government officers reporting to the Central Local Partnership.

In order to allow for proper consideration of the options being considered by the RGD Review Group, PwC's work and the linkages between them, we therefore intend to issue the previously announced Green Paper on local government finance in summer, rather than spring 2000.

Scottish Executive (Concordat)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he expects his Department to publish a concordat with the Scottish Executive. [98360]

Ms Armstrong: The Department has now reached agreement with the Scottish Executive on the terms of a concordat between them. This will be published on 11 November, when copies will be placed in the House Library. The concordat will also be made available on the Department's website.

High Buildings (London)

Mr. Gareth R. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the London Planning Advisory Committee's advice on high buildings and strategic views in London. [98359]

Mr. Raynsford: The London Planning Advisory Committee's strategic planning advice on high buildings and strategic views in London was submitted to the Government earlier this year. It follows up the proposal in Strategic Guidance for London Planning Authorities (RPG3, 1996), to review policy in this area, and builds upon research jointly commissioned by LPAC, the Government Office for London, English Heritage, the City of London and others.

The Government welcome this advice, which will provide an important input to the development of the Mayor for London's Spatial Development Strategy, under the proposed new arrangements for strategic planning in the capital. The Government do not propose to issue supplementary planning guidance in the meantime, but will take account of the advice in exercising their planning responsibilities in the capital. Planning authorities in London should also take account of the advice in the interim in preparing or reviewing their Unitary Development Plans and in the exercise of their development control functions.

The advice provides a useful assessment of the role, value and impact of high buildings in London. It also provides helpful and detailed policy advice on the assessment of high buildings, which should help to ensure that future decisions on such proposals are better informed.

The Government note in particular the findings that:

there is some demand for new high buildings, both for office and residential accommodation;

there is at present, however, no economic imperative in terms of unmet demand or evidence that the competitive position of London is under threat through lack of new high buildings, though this situation needs to be kept under review;

the existing character of London is highly valued; there is no need or desire for a radical change in the city's skyline in order to sustain or enhance London's image and status as a world city; research did not reveal widespread general opposition to new high buildings. However, their location, height and appearance need to be carefully considered; individual high buildings can have a significant negative effect on the urban environment if poorly designed or located.

The Government therefore broadly endorse the principles set out in LPAC's advice, and consider in particular that local planning authorities in London should:

consult the Mayor, adjacent authorities and others on all applications for new buildings above the thresholds set out in the advice. (These thresholds will be replicated in the Order defining applications of potential strategic importance on which the Mayor is to be consulted); identify in their unitary development plans (UDPs) any areas or locations that are considered particularly suitable for high buildings, taking account of the local context (including clustering of high buildings), potential impacts on particularly sensitive areas or views, and sustainable development objectives such as the need to ensure high levels of public transport accessibility; indicate in UDPs the criteria against which they will assess any proposals for high buildings in these areas, consistent with those in the advice;

take account of the criteria set out in the advice when assessing proposals for new high buildings, including the potential impact on particularly sensitive areas and views, and in particular require that:

they contribute positively to a point of civic or visual significance (including a cluster);

they are of outstanding architectural quality;

applications are accompanied by a design statement and analysis of the urban design context.

The Government note LPAC's advice that the existing arrangements for protecting designated strategic views across the capital are generally considered to have operated successfully. It therefore reaffirms the existing guidance to local planning authorities to protect and enhance these views, and agrees that boroughs should also adopt policies to identify and protect important local views, prospects and panoramas. The Government intend to transfer responsibility for protecting strategic views to the Mayor under the new planning arrangements to apply in the capital. They do not for the present intend to designate any additional views, and do not believe that a convincing case has been made for the two additional views suggested for consideration in the advice.

The Government believe that LPAC's advice represents a balanced and pragmatic approach to the issue of high buildings in the capital which should help to ensure that London's needs can be met without compromising its unique character and urban quality. In particular, pending any policies that the Mayor may wish to develop in his or her Spatial Development Strategy, it should assist planning authorities and developers alike in ensuring that any new high buildings are directed to the most appropriate locations and are of the highest possible design quality.

New Deal (Communities)

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when an announcement will be made about a second round of the New Deal for Communities programme. [98048]

Ms Armstrong: I am delighted to announce today that 22 new areas are being invited to bid for funding under the second round of the New Deal for Communities programme. The eligible areas are:

London:

Islington, Lambeth, Haringey, Lewisham, Hammersmith and Fulham, Brent

North West:

Knowsley, Salford, Rochdale, Oldham

North East:

Hartlepool, Sunderland

Yorkshire and the Humber:

Sheffield, Doncaster

West Midlands:

Birmingham, Wolverhampton, Walsall, Coventry

South West:

Plymouth

East Midlands:

Derby

South East:

Southampton

East:

Luton.

In each area we are inviting community based partnerships to form, and take responsibility for, the regeneration of one neighbourhood of between 1,000–4,000 households. We trust that the communities, service providers and businesses will seize this opportunity to transform some of the most deprived neighbourhoods in the country.

Copies of the bidding guidance for round 2 of the New Deal for Communities programme have been placed in the Library of the House.

I am also pleased to announce the approval of the first of the long-term Delivery Plans developed by our pathfinder partnerships, 17 of whom began work last year. The partnership for Beswick and Openshaw in East Manchester have developed a robust strategy that promises to deliver real and lasting change for the area and its community. I am delighted to announce that we have today offered that partnership the funding they need to implement their strategy for change.

WALES

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Walter: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list for 1999–2000, 2000–01 and 2001–02, the departmental expenditure limits of the Wales Office (a) as they were before the negotiation of Objective 1 status for West Wales and the Valleys and (b) as they are now; what amounts are available to meet that expenditure from (i) the block grant, (ii) local authority credit approvals, (iii) European Union grants broken down by programme and (iv) the private sector element of matched funding. [97699]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The Departmental Expenditure Limit of the former Welsh Office (excluding Welfare to Work expenditure) was set at the last Comprehensive Spending Review as:

	£ million
1999–2000	7,097
2000–01	7,498
2001–02	7,888

There have been no changes arising from the negotiation of Objective 1 status for West Wales and the Valleys. This is a matter for the next spending review.

The allocation of funds within the block is a matter for The National Assembly for Wales.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Ministerial Visit (China)

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will make a statement on the outcome of his visit to China earlier this year. [97979]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 9 November 1999]: I visited China earlier this year, from 27 April to 6 May. I was accompanied by a delegation of leading figures from the UK television, music and film industries.

The objectives of the visit were: to create among UK creative industries an improved understanding of China and its way of doing business, to outline to the Chinese what the UK could offer; and to raise the issue of piracy and encourage the Chinese authorities to maintain their efforts to tackle this problem.

The visit produced some positive outcomes which officials from my Department are taking forward in collaboration with the appropriate contacts from the business community. These include:

agreement from State Administration for Radio Film and TV to proceed with the idea of National Film and Television School (NFTS) student scholarships under which 4–6 top Chinese students will be given a bursary to attend a one-year NFTS training school; agreement on developing ideas for greater exchange of television product between China and the UK; commitment by the Ministry of Culture to expanding the cultural exchange programme between China and the UK; possibility of running a festival of films produced by the Xian film studios; agreement to the British Phonographic Industry (BPI) providing a training programme for National Copyright Association of China (NCAC) officials on how to deal with piracy;

the development of greater understanding of and commitment to the creative industries agenda by both the British Embassy and British Council staff in China;

a number of specific business deals initiated or concluded by BBC Worldwide and other companies represented on the visit; and a greater appreciation of the benefits of a joint political/business approach to doing business in China—and an awareness of cultural events which also provide a business spin-off.

TV Programmes (Watershed)

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport at what time in the morning the watershed period before which programmes unsuitable for family viewing are discouraged, ends. [97592]

Janet Anderson [holding answer 8 November 1999]: Under the terms of the watershed agreement the hours between 9.00pm and 5.30am are recognised as being a time at which programmes are aimed towards an adult rather than a family audience.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment he has made of the suitability for screening prior to the 9.00 p.m. watershed of programmes of United States origin depicting extensive use of firearms. [97588]

Janet Anderson [holding answer 8 November 1999]: Responsibility for these matters rests with the broadcasters and regulators. The regulators are independent of the Government and accountable for safeguarding the public interest in broadcasting. They maintain wide ranging guidelines on the standards which should be observed, including the 9.00 p.m. watershed. These guidelines apply to programmes regardless of genre or country of origin.

Quality, Efficiency and Standards Team

Ms Kingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when the Quality, Efficiency and Standards Team will publish its work plan. [98337]

Mr. Chris Smith: The Quality, Efficiency and Standards Team (QUEST) has been set up to identify, evaluate and promote good practice across the cultural sector. It works independently of the Department and reports directly to me. After wide consultation, QUEST has now decided on its initial projects. Details of these are set out in QUESTS's work plan, copies of which have been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Millennium Dome

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if construction work on each of the zones in the Millennium Dome will be completed by 31 December. [97774]

Janet Anderson [holding answer 8 November 1999]: Progress on the Millennium Dome remains on time and on budget. The construction and development phases for the Dome are nearing completion and the transition to exhibit fit-out is in full flow. All zones will be complete by 31 December.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will make a statement on the use of the Millennium Dome site after the closure of the exhibition. [95177]

Janet Anderson [holding answer 25 October 1999]: The Government is committed to identifying a sustainable, viable use for the Dome after the Millennium Experience ends and launched a competition for that purpose on 4 March 1999. The competition is proceeding well and we are pleased with the level of interest that has been shown. Bidders have now provided their outline proposals and we hope to be able to select a final shortlist by the end of the year. Obviously, for commercial reasons, the identities of the bidders will remain confidential. The outcome of the competition will be announced in the summer of 2000.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will make a statement on security arrangements at the Millennium Dome. [95120]

Janet Anderson [holding answer 25 October 1999]: The New Millennium Experience Company has regular discussions with the Metropolitan Police about all aspects of security. By definition, it would not be helpful to reveal the detail of those discussions or of the security arrangements implemented as a result. I am satisfied that those arrangements are both robust and comprehensive.

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what policy towards the employment of people with disabilities he has asked the operators of the Millennium Dome to follow. [95082]

Janet Anderson: The New Millennium Experience Company (NMEC) has an equal opportunities employment policy. To ensure that people with disabilities have equal access to vacancies, NMEC is working with Manpower, the Employment Service and a number of specialist agencies. All applicants with a disability are offered an initial interview. They, like all other applicants for vacancies, are assessed on their ability to perform particular jobs to an acceptable standard. Where an individual fails an initial or any subsequent interview, constructive follow-up advice is offered.

Tourism

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment he has made of the factors contributing to the fall in the number of people employed in the tourism industry in England between December 1997 and December 1998; and if he will make a statement. [97988]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 9 November 1999]: Data from the Annual Employment Survey suggest that the number of employee jobs in tourism-related industries (TRI) in England rose by some 8,000 to 1.35 million between December 1997 and December 1998.

On the other hand, Labour Force Survey data suggest that, over the year to December 1998, the number of self-employment jobs fell by 17,000 to 130,000. My Department has asked the Office for National Statistics for their assessment of the reasons for this trend.

The latest figures, for the year to June 1999, show an increase in employee jobs in all TRI sectors and a reduction in the number of self-employed jobs.

Consultants

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much his Department spent on external consultants and advisers in each of the last four financial years. [97425]

Mr. Chris Smith: The expenditure information requested is given in the following table:

Year	£
1995–96	304,632
1996–97	448,931
1997–98	589,149
1998–99	381,634

Museums, Libraries and Archives Council

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will break down the total cost of establishing the Museums, Libraries and Archives Council. [97992]

Mr. Alan Howarth: £350,000 has been allocated to cover the costs associated with the establishment of the Museums, Libraries and Archives Council (MLAC) in this year and next. Costs are likely to include items such as legal fees, consultancy advice, the remuneration of the Chairman and Chief Executive until next April, travel and publications.

Films

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what his policy is on providing funding for films made and produced outside the South-East of England. [97297]

Janet Anderson: The Government is keen to develop the film industry and film culture throughout the UK and, where public support for film production is concerned, firm guidelines exist to encourage participation by people living and working outside the South-East. The British Film Institute and the Arts Council of England have co-financed projects with Regional Arts Boards, Regional Media Development Agencies and the Arts Councils of Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland. The Film Council will also have a responsibility to ensure wide access to its production funds when it commences operation next year.

Lottery support for film production is also channelled through the Arts Councils of Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland, all of which have remits to encourage the production of films which contribute to their respective indigenous film industries. This support will continue after the creation of the Film Council.

Television Regulation

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) if he will make a statement on his policy towards the future regulation of programme output on (a) BBC1 and (b) ITV; [97591]

(2) what plans he has to improve regulation of satellite television providers. [97589]

Janet Anderson [holding answer 8 November 1999]: Regulation of programme output on BBC One is a matter for the BBC's Board of Governors and on ITV and satellite broadcasters for the Independent Television Commission. The ITC are currently conducting an audit of regulatory burdens on commercial broadcasters. My Department and the DTI are separately about to undertake a fundamental reassessment of broadcasting and communications regulation with a view to possible major legislation early in the next Parliament.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions he has had with the Home Office since 1 August regarding the impact of asylum seekers in seaside holiday resorts. [95909]

Janet Anderson [holding answer 2 November 1999]: Officials in my Department have had a number of discussions with the Home Office on this important subject. Government policy will take proper account of the potential impact on seaside resorts and the availability of support networks locally when placing asylum seekers in available accommodation in these areas.

Sports Coverage (Terrestrial Transmission)

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what developments there have been in the transmission on terrestrial television channels of major sporting events in the last five years; what representations his Department has received on this subject; and if he will make a statement. [97436]

Janet Anderson: The four terrestrial television channels which are available to over 99 per cent. of UK viewers have continued to offer high quality coverage of events across a wide range of sports over the last five years. Channel 5, which is available to 75 per cent. of UK viewers, has also offered extensive sports coverage since March 1997. Coverage of a number of major sporting occasions must be made available to the BBC, Channel 3 or Channel 4 under Part IV of the Broadcasting Act 1996. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced a revised and extended list of such protected events on 25 June 1998, taking account of the recommendations made to him by the independent Advisory Group chaired by Lord Gordon of Strathblane.

My right hon. Friend has received 2,948 representations on the subject of sports coverage on terrestrial television channels since May 1997, including 375 from hon. Members.

Olympic Games

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what his policy is towards holding the Olympic Games in the United Kingdom. [97985]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 9 November 1999]: The Government are committed to supporting a viable Olympic bid at the earliest opportunity. The British Olympic Association, who have responsibility for UK bids for the Olympic Games, is carrying out a series of feasibility studies on a London based bid and will report to me before the end of the year.

Pirate CDs and Videos (China)

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what agreement he has reached with the Chinese authorities regarding the trade in illegal copies of compact discs and videos. [97987]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 9 November 1999]: During my visit to China and Hong Kong earlier this year, I raised with the appropriate authorities both in Beijing and Hong Kong the issue of trade in illegal copying of CDs and videos. We agreed that such trade is not beneficial to the development of a healthy domestic or international market and that it infringed intellectual property rights, and I encouraged them to maintain and intensify their efforts to enforce their domestic legislation in this area.

Accommodation Rating

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will make a statement on the level of industry participation in the new harmonised accommodation rating scheme for England. [97476]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 5 November 1999]: Almost 49 per cent. of serviced accommodation providers in England have now signed up to the new standardised ratings being run by the English Tourism Council, the AA and RAC that were introduced in September.

This is an encouraging start, but we want more providers to sign up to the new schemes since we believe this will help drive up quality standards in accordance with the aims of "Tomorrow's Tourism". The ETC are responsible for encouraging and measuring take-up of the schemes and also identifying how it can be increased.

Millennium Commission

Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much funding the Millennium Commission has currently allocated for flagship capital projects where the Commission contribution is £10 million or more in (a) London, (b) Birmingham, (c) Manchester, (d) Salford, (e) Liverpool, (f) Sheffield, (g) Newcastle, (h) Leeds and (i) Bristol. [97638]

Mr. Chris Smith: This is a matter for the Millennium Commission. I will reply to my hon. Friend in my capacity as Chairman of the Commission, and place copies of my reply in the Libraries of the House.

SCOTLAND

Consultants

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much his Department spent on external consultants and advisers in each of the last four financial years. [97414]

Dr. Reid: Expenditure on external consultants and advisers over the last four financial years by The Scottish Office, including its Executive Agencies and associated departments, is estimated as follows:

	£ million
1996–97	3.0
1997–98	2.5
1998–99	2.1
1999–2000	0.9

Figures for the current financial year do not include spending from 1 July onwards by the Scottish Executive, which is now a matter for the Scottish Parliament.

Meat Exports and Imports

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent talks he has held with European Commission officials regarding meat exports and imports. [97928]

Dr. Reid: None.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Community Charge Non-payment

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many people were refused legal aid in cases of non-payment of community charge. [97721]

Mr. Lock: Since 1 January 1999, the Legal Aid Board has refused 47 applications for Assistance By Way Of Representation (ABWOR) in respect of fine defaulters on the basis that they failed to meet the legal merits test. A total of 126 applications have been granted during the same period. It is not possible to break down how many of these refusals related to community charge (Council tax) cases as the information is not recorded at that level of detail.

Under the Legal Aid Act 1988, civil legal aid is not available for representation in the magistrates court for non-payment of community charge (now Council tax since 1993). Where a debtor appears before a magistrates court for failing to pay Council tax or to obey an order of the court and is at risk of imprisonment, legal representation may be provided by the court duty solicitor under paragraph 50(2)(b) of the Legal Aid Board's Duty Solicitor Arrangements 1997.

In complex cases, where advance preparation may be required, a solicitor may apply for an adjournment in order to apply to the Legal Aid Board for ABWOR under Regulation 7(4) Legal Advice and Assistance (Scope) (Amendment) Regulations 1997.

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what assessment he has made of the implications of the ruling by the European Court of Human Rights in the case of Mr. Kevin Perks and seven other community charge protesters that their rights had been violated by refusal to grant them legal aid. [97719]

Jane Kennedy: The decision of the European Court of Human Rights in the case of Perks and Others v. The United Kingdom is consistent with the leading case of Benham v. UK. Since that case, and since the events which gave rise to the application made by Mr. Kevin Perks and others, the law has been changed so that legal aid is now available as required by Article 6 of the European Convention on Human Rights. The Government have noted that none of the eight applicants succeeded in their claim that Article 5 of the Convention had been breached and that only one of the applicants was awarded damages for the breach of Article 6. The Government considers that the judgment of the Court of Human Rights provides useful confirmation and clarification in relation to these issues.

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if it is the Government's intention to appeal against the ruling by the European Court of Human Rights in the case of Mr. Kevin Perks and seven other community charge protesters. [97720]

Jane Kennedy: It is not possible to appeal against the ruling of the European Court of Human Rights in this case.

Consultants

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how much the Lord Chancellor's Department spent on external consultants and advisers in each of the last four financial years. [97419]

Mr. Lock: The information requested is as follows:

	LCD	Agencies	Total
1995–96	1,295,260	419,000	1,714,260
1996–97	452,948	1,741,793	2,194,741
1997–98	377,522	2,276,779	2,654,301
1998–99	827,891	3,065,635	3,893,526

Crown Court Trials

Maria Eagle: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what percentage of defendants who elect at committal for a Crown court trial (a) in the Liverpool magistrates court and (b) in England and Wales subsequently plead guilty. [97887]

Mr. Charles Clarke: I have been asked to reply.

Although statistics on pleas in the Crown court are collected centrally, these do not record whether the defendant elected trial or was directed by magistrates. In England and Wales, the Crown Prosecution Service statistics for 1998 show that 18,500 defendants elected trial in 1998 in addition to 47,185 either-way cases directed to the Crown court by magistrates. During the same period, 76 per cent. of all defendants in either-way cases pleaded guilty before the commencement of the Crown court trial.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Small Business

Gillian Merron: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement about the new measures he is planning to introduce to support the growth of smaller businesses in selected areas, as announced in the White Paper, "Building the Knowledge-Driven Economy". [98159]

Mr. Byers: I intend to allocate £45 million over three years for a new Enterprise Grant scheme for SMEs. This will complement the new assistance being made available in this sector for venture capital under the Enterprise Fund.

Support will be targeted at growth SMEs in tiers 1, 2 and 3 of the proposed new Assisted Areas map currently under discussion with the European Commission and due to come in to effect on 1 January 2000. It will provide SMEs with the opportunity of a selective grant of up to 15 per cent. of fixed capital investment on projects of up to £500,000, with a ceiling of £75,000 on the maximum assistance. The scheme will replace grants at this level currently available under Regional Selective Assistance in the English regions. The priorities for support will reflect RDA economic strategies for the region.

The scheme is subject to approval from the European Commission.

Consumer Interests

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what guidance he has given to the Office of Fair Trading to ensure that the interests of the consumer are reflected in its operating policy. [97500]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 9 November 1999]: The Director General of Fair Trading is independent of Government. His functions are defined by various statutes, notably the Fair Trading Act 1973.

As part of his response to the White Paper "Modern Markets: Confident Consumers", he is carrying out a fundamental review of his consumer affairs functions. The review will cover his objectives, his powers and liaison and co-ordination with other government departments and enforcement agencies. The Director General expects to complete his review early next year, and I look forward to seeing his conclusions.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he is taking to ensure that the interests of consumers are addressed within Government. [97506]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 9 November 1999]: Our White Paper "Modern Markets: Confident Consumers" (Cm 4410) sets out a comprehensive strategy to ensure that the needs of consumers are addressed by Government. We are committed to strengthening the institutional framework for consumer protection. We are also developing new mechanisms to ensure that consumer interests are properly represented in policy-making, including a new advisory committee, which I shall chair.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make it his policy to ensure that all Government decisions are subject to a consumer impact assessment. [97507]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 9 November 1999]: The current system of regulatory impact assessments already requires an assessment of the benefits of proposals to consumers, as well as the regulatory costs to businesses and enforcement agencies. I see no need for a new and separate consumer impact assessment.

Credit Agreements

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has to review (a) the Consumer Credit Act 1974 and (b) the Estate Agents Act 1979. [97503]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 9 November 1999]: Last July I announced in the Government's White Paper "Modern Markets: Confident Consumers", my plans to review the effectiveness of the extortionate credit bargain and consumer credit licensing provisions of the Consumer Credit Act 1974. These reviews are now under way. I also invited consumer and business groups to send me their views on how the Act can be improved and I will consider carefully any responses I receive.

The Director General of Fair Trading has a duty to keep under review the working and enforcement of the Estate Agents Act 1979.

Trading Standards

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the effect of differences in financial commitment by local authorities on the application of trading standards rules. [97499]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 9 November 1999]: The Consumer White Paper (Chapter 7) recognises that some trading standards services, particularly in small authorities, face budgetary pressures, and reviews the consequences, including inconsistent enforcement of trading rules. The White Paper contains a number of proposals for addressing this issue.

European State Aid

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to his answer of 25 October 1999, Official Report, column 656, for what reason approved State aid to the sectors listed is not broken down by country by the Commission; and if he will estimate the figures for each sector in each country. [97228]

Mrs. Liddell: Although the Commission surveys on State aid contain information on assistance to each sector across the EU, this information is not broken down by country. UK officials are discussing with the Commission ways in which the publication of data on State aid might be improved.

The detailed information is not therefore available in the form requested.

Toys (Phthalates)

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if Dr. Julian Braybrook, of the Laboratory of the Government Chemist, chaired an Expert Committee on phthalates in toys, set up by the Weinberg Group; and if he will make a statement. [97462]

Dr. Howells: Dr. Braybrook chaired an independent scientific committee convened by the Weinberg Group. The remit of the committee, which met only once, was to comment on the initial opinion of the EU Committee on Toxicity, Ecotoxicity and the Environment.

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what response he has made to the statement made by the European Union Scientific Committee on Toxicity, Ecotoxicity and the Environment on 28 September on the adequacy of the tests developed by the Laboratory of the Government Scientist, for toys containing phthalates; and if he will make a statement. [97464]

Dr. Howells: My Department wrote to the Commission expressing disappointment that the Scientific Committee on Toxicity, Ecotoxicity and the Environment (SCTEE) could not accept the test developed by the LGC in its current form and concern that the Commission had not encouraged further discussion to address the points raised by the SCTEE. Many of the points raised in the SCTEE opinion could have been addressed in discussions between the LGC and the SCTEE before any final views were published. We believed, and continue to believe, that by working together it should be possible to establish a test which could be used for enforcement purposes across Europe, and which would have relevance beyond the safety of phthalates alone.

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what role the Laboratory of the Government Chemist has played in relation to phthalates in toys and in (a) advising and (b) representing the Government on this issue; and if he will make a statement. [97460]

Dr. Howells: LGC, a privatised and independent laboratory, was contracted to act in an advisory capacity to my Department on matters related to the migration behaviour of phthalates. An LGC scientist has attended certain meetings when technical issues in respect of phthalates were discussed. LGC has also been commissioned by my Department to develop a migration test to measure leaching levels from toys mouthed by children, and to test products currently on the UK market. LGC has also been funded by my Department to participate in work undertaken by both the European Commission and by the so called Dutch "consensus group".

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans the Government have to ensure that British children are not exposed to phthalates in toys and to support the temporary ban proposed by the European Commissioner for Health and Consumer Protection; and if he will make a statement. [97465]

Dr. Howells: All the scientific evidence to date has shown that phthalates can be safely used and our research shows that toys sold in the UK are safe. However, it is important to reach a Community solution, particularly in the interests of consistency in consumer safety so that consumers across Europe do not remain confused and concerned. In the light of this, if the Commission does adopt the draft proposal currently under discussion, I would be willing to accept a ban on phthalates in toys intended to be mouthed. Regarding a ban through emergency measures under the General Product Safety Directive, this would be the first time that such measures were used to ban a product. The measures are there to be used where risk is serious and immediate, and given the scientific evidence regarding phthalates, their use in this case would, in our view, be inappropriate.

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if Dr. Julian Baybrook, of the Laboratory of the Government Chemist, wrote on behalf of the Weinberg Group Experts' Committee to all European Commissioners against an emergency ban on toys containing phthalates; and if he will make a statement. [97463]

Dr. Howells: No. Dr. Braybrook did not write to European Commissioners, nor to any other bodies, regarding an emergency ban.

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if Dr. Julian Braybrook, of the Laboratory of the Government Chemist, participated as a UK Government delegate in the European Commission's Emergencies Committee meeting on 14 July 1998; and if he will make a statement. [97461]

Dr. Howells: Dr. Braybrook attended a meeting of the Emergencies Committee on 14 September, at the request of the Commission, to present the migration test devised by the LGC. He has attended other meetings as scientific adviser to the UK delegation.

Commonwealth Partnership for Technology

Mr. Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he will be taking to promote the work of the Commonwealth Partnership for Technology at the Commonwealth Heads of Government Meeting in Durban on 9 to 11 November. [97245]

Mr. Byers: The Commonwealth Partnership for Technology Management's Report "CPTM into the New Millennium" is on the Agenda of the Commonwealth Heads of Government Meeting in Durban from 12–15 November. The Department of Trade and Industry has promoted the useful work which the CPTM has undertaken since its inception in 1995. I endorse the call made by the Commonwealth Secretary General to Governments to support the continuation of its activities.

RDX Explosives

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to his answer of 26 May 1999, Official Report, column 201, on RDX explosives, what export licences have been issued since May for explosives containing RDX; and how many applications are currently pending. [97114]

Dr. Howells: I will write to the hon. Member as soon as possible, and place a copy of that letter in the Library of the House.

Energy Consumption

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will rank the sectors of the economy according to their percentage consumption of the UK's total energy, indicating the percentages in each case; and if he will make a statement. [97630]

Mrs. Liddell: The percentage of total UK energy consumed by each sector, in 1998, was as follows:

Sector	Percentage
Transport	34
Domestic	29
Industry	22
Services	14

The Government are committed to promoting the more efficient use of energy in all sectors of the economy, as part of their policy to encourage sustainable development. A draft Climate Change Programme, to be issued around the turn of the year, will set out a draft programme, for public consultation, about how the Government should move towards their goals for the reduction of greenhouse gases. The Government aim to present a balanced, equitable programme which engages all sectors of the economy and society in their efforts to reduce greenhouse gas emissions.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which sector of the economy he has identified as the fastest-growing consumer of energy; and if he will make a statement. [97629]

Mrs. Liddell: Since 1990, energy consumption has increased fastest in the transport, domestic and service sectors. The increases in energy consumption, by sector, between 1990 and 1998, were as follows:

Transport—up 10 per cent.

Domestic—up 13 per cent.

Services—up 13 per cent.

Industry—down 10 per cent.

Energy consumption fluctuates from one year to another, in particular with differences in temperature and the state of the economy.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the increase in energy use between 1990 and 1998 by (i) industry, (ii) the domestic sector, (iii) transport, (iv) consumer and (v) other; and if he will make a statement. [97631]

Mrs. Liddell: Energy consumption by sector between 1990 and 1998 was as follows:

Thousand tonnes of oil equivalent

	Industry	Domestic	Transport	Services	All final users
1990	38,658	40,758	48,635	19,217	147,268
1991	38,257	44,769	47,963	20,819	151,818
1992	36,535	44,067	49,355	20,959	151,916
1993	36,440	45,549	50,024	20,733	152,746
1994	35,167	43,947	50,253	20,638	150,005
1995	34,553	42,689	50,238	21,303	148,783
1996	35,817	48,118	52,212	22,349	158,496
1997	34,672	44,855	52,986	22,007	154,520
1998	34,966	46,041	53,567	21,674	156,247

DTI's Digest of UK Energy Statistics 1999

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which sectors of industry he has assessed as having substantial opportunities to reduce their energy consumption; and if he will make a statement. [97624]

Mrs. Liddell: Analysis carried out by the Energy Technology Support Unit (ETSU) indicates that there is significant scope for cost-effective energy saving measures across a wide range of industrial sectors.

Kyoto Targets

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the ability of small and medium-sized enterprises to make the necessary investment to reduce their energy usage to meet Kyoto requirements; and if he will make a statement. [97633]

Mrs. Liddell: Small and medium-sized enterprises (SMEs) account for around one third of business emissions of greenhouse gases. The Government's initial proposals for the Climate Change Levy reflect Lord Marshall's conclusion that there may be scope for significant improvements in energy efficiency from this sector. The Government are seeking to design and implement the Climate Change Levy in a way that maximises environmental benefits whilst safeguarding the competitiveness of business of all sizes. The Government have previously announced that £50 million per annum of anticipated revenues from the levy will be used for purposes which include the provision of energy efficiency advice for SMEs.

E-commerce

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of forthcoming EU directives on electronic commerce; and if he will make a statement. [97960]

Ms Hewitt: The draft Directive on Electronic Commerce aims to provide a stable and transparent framework within which businesses and consumers will have increased legal certainty as regards their rights and responsibilities. Other legislative initiatives which are intended to remove barriers to e-commerce in the EU include the draft Copyright Directive, the Distance Selling Directive, the draft Distance Selling of Financial Services Directive and the E-Signatures Directive. The Government will continue to ensure that a coherent overall approach to the regulation of e-commerce in the EU is maintained, and is characterised by flexibility and an appropriate balance between the interests of all those affected.

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what reports he has received that the RSA-155 e-commerce code has been broken by the Dutch National Research Institute for Mathematics and Computer Science; and if he will make a statement. [97942]

Ms Hewitt: I have not received any specific reports on this matter. The Department is, however, aware of the work of Dutch National Research Institute, and that of other academics, in the factorising of a single 512 bit RSA key over a seven month period. This, of course, does not mean that the RSA algorithm itself is insecure.

Organic Food Producers

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what support the Government will give to British organic food producers at the Bio Fach trade fair in February 2000; and if he will make a statement. [97941]

Mr. Byers: My Department, through British Trade International, has invited the Soil Association to recruit a group of exhibitors at this edition of Bio Fach. In line with normal procedure, if the Association has by 15 December 1999 provided British Trade International with details of a minimum of 10 UK-based businesses who wish to exhibit as part of a supported group, we will pay to those businesses that are eligible grants covering 60 per cent. of their space and construction costs, up to a maximum of £2,300 per business. British Trade International requires the Association to canvass businesses based in any part of the UK who are exporting from the UK—whether or not they are its members. Whether any of those recruited are organic food producers is a matter for the Association, not for British Trade International.

Objective 2 Funding

Dr. Palmer: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received about the non-inclusion of Beeston Rylands, Nottingham, under Objective 2. [97970]

Mr. Byers: My Department has received representations from the Greater Nottingham Partnership about the non-inclusion of Beeston Rylands, Nottingham, since submitting our proposals to the European Commission for the new Objective 2 areas for 2000 to 2006. As part of the domestic consultation, we received representations from Greater Nottingham Partnership and Broxtowe Borough Council supporting the case for Beeston Rylands.

My hon. Friend has also raised the issue with me personally. We are considering the points raised.

Mr. Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received regarding the exclusion of Netherfield within the Gedling Borough Council area from the Objective 2 map for European funding; and if he will make a statement. [97869]

Mr. Byers: My Department has received five representations regarding the exclusion of Netherfield within the Gedling Borough Council area from the proposals submitted to the European Commission for the new Objective 2 areas for 2000–06.

Two of the representations were from my hon. Friend, who has also raised the issue with me personally.

We are considering the points raised.

Coal Industry

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he last met representatives of the opencast coal mining industry; and what issues were discussed. [R] [97683]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 9 November 1999]: I have met RJB, the largest opencast producer, the mining unions and MPs from mining constituencies to discuss the range of issues affecting the coal industry. I have also indicated my readiness to meet the Confederation of United Kingdom Coal Producers to address issues of particular concern that would benefit from discussion at Ministerial level. I would expect these to include opencast issues.

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent discussions he has had with owners of power stations about their long-term purchases of coal produced in the UK; and if he will make a statement. [R] [97678]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 9 November 1999]: Decisions about the source of coal purchased for electricity generation are a matter for the generators themselves. I have not discussed long-term purchases of coal with the owners of any UK power stations. My officials have regular contacts with all the generators covering most aspects of their business.

I have recently approved on competition grounds the sale of three coal-fired power stations and in that context I have had to consider competition issues relating to long term coal contracts.

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Inoustry if he will make a statement on the future of the Scottish coal industry. [R] [97676]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 9 November 1999]: The Government's views on the future of the coal industry were set out in the White Paper on the Conclusions of the Review of Energy Sources for Power Generation. Further detailed information about the industry and its future were provided in the Department of Trade and Industry's publication "Prospects for Coal Production in England, Scotland and Wales". We will continue to work to maintain fair competition which will enable the Scottish coal industry to compete.

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what steps have been taken by HM Government to encourage the transfer of opencast coal production from road to rail; what percentage of coal produced is transported by rail; and what reports he has received regarding the efficiency of the rail services provided to the industry; [R] [97679]

(2) if he will seek reports from the rail regulation authorities about the efficiency of service provided to the opencast coal industry; and if he will make a statement. [R] [97681]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 9 November 1999]: Transport policy is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions. His Department publishes statistics on coal movements by rail, but these do not distinguish between coal sources or methods of production. I have been made aware of concerns about the quality of rail services provided to the coal industry, and I understand that the industry has now made a formal complaint to the Office of the Rail Regulator. I have asked to be kept closely informed of the progress of the Regulator's investigation.

IT Projects

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the information technology projects currently being undertaken by his Department and agencies responsible to his Department, indicating the (a) start date, (b) planned completion date, (c) expected completion date, (d) planned cost and (e) estimated cost; and if he will make a statement. [98042]

Ms Hewitt: Central records are not maintained in the form necessary to answer this question particularly in respect of the Department's Executive Agencies which exercise delegated authorities for their own IT strategies. I have asked my officials to gather the necessary information, and will write to the hon. Member as soon as possible and place a copy of that letter in the Library of the House.

Internet Access

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what plans he has to encourage flat-rate pricing to reduce the cost of access to the internet; [97995]

(2) what steps are being taken to reduce the cost of access to the internet through flat-rate pricing. [97971]

Ms Hewitt: The Government are committed to ensuring the wide availability of fast and affordable internet access and believe that competition is the best way to deliver this. We want to see operators responding to these competitive pressures by offering a broader range of internet tariff options to allow heavy e-commerce users and light users to choose the optimum package for their usage profile. There are no regulatory barriers to prevent operators from including unmetered tariffs in this range of tariff options. I have discussed these points with Oftel, BT and the Campaign for Unmetered Telecommunications and will continue to encourage operators to respond positively so that the cost of internet access can be reduced.

Objective 1 Funding

Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the cross-department co-ordination of plans for EU Objective 1 matched funding. [96779]

Mr. Caborn: Objective 1 programmes for the new Structural Funds period 2000–06 have been prepared by the area partnerships. Responsibility for identifying match funding is a matter for those in the area who will make applications for projects to the programmes. The draft programmes should therefore include a realistic assessment of the opportunities to deliver effective projects, including the availability of match funding.

EU Regulations

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list changes since 1 May 1997 to United Kingdom law in areas covered by his Department's responsibilities which have been directly legislated by EU Regulations; and if he will list these regulations. [97950]

Mrs. Liddell: The Department does not collect this information in this form. All Explanatory Memoranda for EU Regulations covering the DTI's areas of responsibilities are available in the House of Commons Library, and the six-monthly "Command Paper of RIAs'" (Regulatory Impact Assessments), also available in the Library of the House, lists all EMs with a major impact on the UK.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what procedures his Department has to ensure that British industry is not put at a competitive disadvantage compared with industry in other EU member states from the timing and implementation of EU directives. [97951]

Mrs. Liddell: Consultation with UK business is a key priority for the DTI, both when taking forward negotiation of EU directives and, once they are agreed, in deciding how to implement them. Such consultation concerns both the substance of any directives and the timing of the implementation. The "Guide to Better European Legislation", issued by my right hon. Friend the Minister for the Cabinet Office and made available to all MPs, is the key source of advice for officials dealing with EC legislation and this sets out the requirements for the completion of regulatory impact assessments to identify the likely impact of any legislative proposal, and offers practical advice on implementing EC legislation in an effective, timely and proportionate manner. We support initiatives to improve regulation such as SLIM (Simpler Legislation in the Internal Market), aimed at simplifying the business environment, and the Business Test Panel, aimed at improving consultation with business on the likely impact of selected legislative proposals.

Diminished Lung Function

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what progress has been made in establishing procedures to compensate sufferers of diminished lung function from the former mining industry; how much compensation has been paid to date; and if he will make a statement. [97814]

Mrs. Liddell: We signed the Handling Agreement with the solicitors representing the miners, which sets out the procedures for settling 100,000+ expected respiratory disease claims on 24 September. As at 31 October we had made bereavement awards, and interim and expedited payments totalling some £39 million.

We have developed a programme of screening spirometry to prioritise claimants proceeding through to the next stage of the process and to make interim or expedited offers where possible. 70 per cent. of the 43,000 live claimants identified in May have now been invited to screening spirometry throughout the UK. We expect to complete virtually all of the spirometry by early next year.

On 5 October the contract to deliver the full Medical Assessment Process was awarded to Healthcall. The first full medical assessments should begin in the next month.

Vibration White Finger

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what progress has been made in establishing procedures to compensate sufferers of vibration white finger from the former mining industry; how much compensation has been paid to date; and if he will make a statement. [97815]

Mrs. Liddell: We signed the Handling Agreement with the solicitors representing the miners, which sets out the procedures for settling the 50,000+ expected VWF claims on 22 January. As at 31 October we had made interim and general damage payments totalling some £45 million.

I announced in July that we had awarded a contract to Sema Group for the delivery of the medical assessment process. Tests began in September, six centres are now open, and they plan to have 12 centres in operation across the mining regions by January.

EU Copyright Directive

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what consultation he has had with the higher education sector about the implications of the EU Copyright Directive; and if he will make a statement. [97750]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 8 November 1999]: We have consulted a number of organisations in the educational field on the draft EC Directive on copyright and related rights in the Information Society, including bodies representing the higher education sector such as the Committee of Vice-Chancellors and Principals of the Universities of the United Kingdom and the Standing Conference of National and University Libraries. We have received many submissions from individual institutions in the sector as well as from representative bodies, and we fully appreciate their concerns about the draft Directive, particularly as regards its provisions on exceptions to rights for the benefit of users of copyright material. From the outset, we have seen these provisions as unnecessarily prescriptive and restrictive, and we are continuing to press strongly for greater flexibility in the Directive in order to allow a fair and reasonable balance to be maintained between the interests of rights owners and those of educational and other users.

Lord Archer

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) which inspectors previously assigned to investigate the case of share dealing in Anglia TV by Lord Archer of Weston-super-Mare are involved in the present investigation; [97383]

(2) when he expects to receive the results of the further investigation into the allegations of insider dealing by Lord Archer of Weston Super Mare in respect of shares in Anglia TV. [97253]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 4 November 1999]: Solicitors representing Lord Archer have provided details to "The Economist" of Lord Archer's transactions involving shares in Anglia TV and the reason why he purchased them. I have drawn this information to the attention of my Permanent Secretary. He will decide what action, if any, should be taken.

Departmental Inspectors

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what restrictions apply to the public disclosure of information on the nature of the interview, by persons interviewed by his Department's inspectors in connection with an investigation under section 177 of the Financial Services Act 1986. [97363]

Mr. Byers: Inspectors appointed under Section 177 of the Financial Services Act 1986 are independent and are masters of their own procedures. The Department published in 1990 general guidance in the Investigation Handbook ISBN 0–11–515260–1 and Section 179–180 of the FSA restricts disclosure subject to a gateway regime. Common law duties of confidentiality may also apply.

Nuclear Fuel

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what quantities of reprocessed uranium have been exported to the United States since 1969; under what treaty arrangements such uranium was sent; and when such transfers took place. [96468]

Mrs. Liddell: This is an operational matter for BNFL and UKAEA respectively. I have asked the Chair of those companies to write to my hon. Friend setting out details of any such exports and will arrange for a copy of these letters to be placed in the Library of the House.

Mortgages

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what proposals he has to discourage the mis-selling of mortgages. [95818]

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the outcome of his meeting with mortgage lenders on Friday 29 October. [97504]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 28 October 1999]: On 29 October I held a mortgage summit with the major mortgage lenders, consumer groups and regulators to discuss what can be done to tackle consumers' concerns about mortgages. It was a constructive meeting. We addressed consumer concerns about redemption penalties, endowment mortgages, tying in of insurance and other products and when lenders credit the payments borrowers make. As a result I was able to announce that there is broad agreement that consumers should be given a cash figure about the level of penalty if they redeem a mortgage early. I have asked the summit players to meet me again before Christmas with detailed proposals to meet consumer concerns.

I am taking early action to ensure that consumers are able to make informed choices to get the right deal. I will be laying regulations later this month that will provide a standard method for calculating the Annual Percentage Rate (APR), and for the APR to show the total cost of the mortgage loan over its entire life.

TREASURY

Tax Incentives

Ms Lawrence: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what tax measures to improve productivity the Government intend to introduce in the next Finance Bill. [98114]

Mr. Timms: The Chancellor's Pre-Budget Statement yesterday set out the details of the Government's intention to make the capital gains tax (CGT) taper relief for business assets more generous.

The Pre-Budget Statement included a range of tax measures to promote enterprise and productivity, which will be contained in the 2000 Finance Bill.

Inland Revenue Press Releases including details of the following measures: Employee Management Incentives; employee share ownership; corporate venturing; and the research and development tax credit, are being issued today. Copies will be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Civil List

Mr. Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to review the persons eligible for support under the Civil List. [97494]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 9 November 1999]: None. The Members of the Royal Family who receive moneys are prescribed in the Civil List Acts.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the amount each member of the Royal Family would have received under the Civil List in each year from 1991 had the 1991 figure been increased each year by the rate of inflation. [97498]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 9 November 1999]: Details of payments under the Civil List arrangements will be provided in the Royal Trustees Report, which is due to be made by next October. Since 1 April 1993 the Queen has voluntarily reimbursed the annuities paid to Members of the Royal Family except those to Queen Elizabeth, The Queen Mother and The Duke of Edinburgh.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what plans he has to review the arrangements relating to the Civil List; [97495]

(2) what assessment he has made of the appropriateness of the level of financial support provided by 1991 Civil List arrangements. [97496]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 9 November 1999]: Under the provisions of the Civil List Act 1972, the Royal Trustees (the Prime Minister, the Chancellor of the Exchequer and the Keeper of the Privy Purse) are due to report on the financial provisions of the Civil List by October next year. The report and its recommendations will be laid before the House of Commons.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if moneys allocated to the Civil List by the 1991 arrangement which remain unspent at the end of the 10-year period will be returned to the Treasury. [97497]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 9 November 1999]: Under the provisions of the Civil List Act 1972, unspent sums remain available to meet expenditure in future years as Parliament determined and will be taken into account by the Royal Trustees in preparing their Report.

Kuwait (Gold Reserves)

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on what date the Bank of England agreed to act as the depository for the Central Bank of Kuwait to lend part or all of its official gold reserves to the market. [97675]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 9 November 1999]: This is a routine commercial arrangement between the Bank of England and the Central Bank of Kuwait. As with all such arrangements, details are commercially confidential.

Computers (Taxation)

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he intends introducing changes to the tax rules that will allow employees to make use of workplace computers for personal use without being liable for their taxation as a benefit in kind. [97913]

Dawn Primarolo: An exemption from employee benefits tax for the personal use of a computer supplied by the employer has already been introduced in Section 45 Finance Act 1999. It took effect from 6 April 1999 and effectively exempts computer equipment of up to £2,500 in value; where the value is higher only the excess over £2,500 remains taxable.

Drownings

Mr. Evans: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many children between the ages of five and 18 years have drowned in the UK this year; and how many drowned in the years (a) 1995, (b) 1996, (c) 1997 and (d) 1998. [97607]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Nigel Evans, dated 10 November 1999:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your recent question asking how many children between the ages of five and 18 years have drowned in the UK this year; and how many drowned in the years (a) 1995, (b) 1996, (c) 1997 and (d) 1998.

Figures for this year are not yet available.

The information requested for years 1995 to 1998 is given in the table below.

Drowning deaths, for ages 5 to 18, United Kingdom, 1995–1998

	1995	1996	1997	1998
Males	42	48	36	27
Females	7	9	6	5
Total	49	57	42	32

Infant Deaths

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the annual number of sudden infant deaths. [97714]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Peter Bottomley, dated 10 November 1999:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your recent parliamentary question on the number of sudden infant deaths.

In 1998, the latest year for which provisional figures are available, 284 sudden infant deaths occurred in England and Wales.

Climate Change Levy

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will assess the advantages and disadvantages of rebating part of the climate change levy for energy-intensive industries. [97708]

Mr. Timms: Our aim has been to design the climate change levy in a way that maximises its environmental effectiveness whilst protecting competitiveness of UK firms. As indicated in the Pre-Budget Report, by increasing the environmental effectiveness of the levy, it has been possible to deliver bigger carbon savings whilst reducing the overall size of the levy from £1.75 billion to £1 billion. The Government is also offering an 80 per cent. discount from the levy for those energy-intensive sectors signing energy efficiency agreements which meet the Government's criteria. This discount will help protect the competitiveness of the industries concerned, whilst ensuring that all firms face some incentive to save energy at the margin. The carbon savings arising from the negotiated agreements will also make a significant contribution to meeting the Government's legally binding Kyoto target for reducing greenhouse gas emissions.

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will assess the advantages and disadvantages of exempting key industrial proce[illegible]n the climate change levy, with particular refer[illegible] blast furnaces and electrolysis. [97706]

Mr. Timms: I refer my hon. Friend to the Pre-Budget Report issued by the Chancellor of the Exchequer on 9 November 1999, Official Report, columns 883-906, which sets out the Government's policy in respect of the exemption from Climate Change Levy on both electrolysis and coke used in blast furnaces.

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he intends the climate change levy on liquified petroleum gas to be fully balanced by excise duties on hydrocarbon oils. [96898]

Mr. Timms: The rate of excise duty on fuel oil and gas oil is already higher than the illustrative rates of climate change levy shown in the Customs and Excise consultation document issued on 9 March.

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer for what reasons he intends to exempt kerosene from the climate change levy. [96897]

Mr. Timms: Climate change levy is not being charged on kerosene or other hydrocarbon oils because they are already within the scope of an existing taxation regime. In the existing regime, however, kerosene is charged at a nil rate because it is heavily used in central heating systems by domestic consumers. For social policy reasons, the Government has made it clear that it does not wish to increase taxation on domestic fuels.

Electrolytic Processes

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he is taking to implement the draft European Energy Products Directive, Article 13, in granting exemptions to electrolytic processes; and if he will make a statement. [97628]

Mr. Timms: The draft European Energy Products Directive was proposed in March 1997 and is currently under discussion in the relevant technical working group of the European Council. Progress has been slow and a number of issues remain to be resolved. Until such time as adoption of the proposal is agreed member states are free to implement national energy tax policies as they see fit and there are currently no plans for formal adoption of any part of the proposal.

Gold Sales

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received from governors of central banks in Europe over the limiting of gold sales. [97561]

Miss Melanie Johnson: None.

EU Budget

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Ludlow (Mr. Gill) of 2 November 1999, Official Report, column 168, on the EU Budget, if he will convert into sterling, the figures contained in his answer. [97806]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The information requested is set out in the following tables. The amounts shown in sterling have been converted from European Currency Units using the annual average exchange rate for 1997 quoted by the Bank of England.

Notes:

1. The Court of Auditors uses ecu figures, the unit of account for the EC Budget.
2. Gross contribution figures are after account has been taken of the UK's abatement (including corrections in respect of earlier years) and for adjustments to VAT and GNP-based contributions in respect of earlier years.
3. Receipts figures include European Commission payments made direct to the member state's private sector.
4. The Court of Auditors Report odes not allocate all Community spending to the member states so that the receipts figures in the table may not represent the full amount of expenditure by the Commission in each member state. Consequently the figures for net contributions/net benefits in the table are likely only to be indicative of the amount of member states' net positions. For example, if all administrative expenditure were allocated to the country in which is it paid, the net position of Belgium and Luxembourg would be substantially improved.
5. Figures converted from ECU using the annual average exchange rate (1.4510) for 1997 quoted by the Bank of England.

Treasury Building

Mr. Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the improvements to the Treasury building to be achieved through the proposed PFI scheme. [97596]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 8 November 1999]: Extensive structural and remedial work is required to preserve and improve this important and historic Grade II* listed building, and to secure its future for at least the next 35 years. This will be its first major refurbishment in almost 100 years. The safety systems require major updating, as do all the other services. The deal will provide modern, efficient, serviced office accommodation for the Treasury to meet its business needs as it approached the 21st Century, and represents good value for money for the taxpayer. Payment to Exchequer Partnership plc(EP) for the serviced accommodation will only be on delivery. If any of the accommodation is at any time unavailable, or services are not delivered to previously specified standards, then EP will suffer financial penalties. EP are required to ensure that the building is to be comparable with current best practice in respect of environmental standards, and to comply full with the Government's "green" policies, particularly energy targets.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much has been spent on (a) maintaining, (b) decorating and (c) otherwise improving the Treasury building since 1 May 1997. [97595]

Miss Melanie Johnson: [holding answer 8 November 1999]: Given the forthcoming PFI refurbishment project, spending in recent years has been confined to essential maintenance work, and to meeting health and safety requirements.

Figures for the last four complete financial years are as follows:

	Maintenance	[1]Decoration
1995–96	[2]1,725,000	—
1996–97	633,000	—
1997–98	1,117,000	—
1998–99	869,000	47,000

[1] Decorating costs incurred by HMT prior to 1998–99 were not separately recorded and are included in the maintenance figures. Decorating costs incurred by other occupiers of the building are not available

[2] Includes works service charge levied by Property Holdings (now PACE) to cover major maintenance work. This charge was discontinued from 1996–97 when HMT took over responsibility for running the building

The money has been spent on a variety of measures, principally planned preventive maintenance on the mechanical, electrical and plumbing systems; renewing parts of the electricity distribution system; prevention of water penetration; strengthening of basement vaults and fees to our facilities management company. No other improvements have been made to the building in recent years.

Money Laundering

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the problems posed by anonymous numbered bank accounts in dealing with large-scale purveyors of drugs and the financing of the provision of chemical precursors to those who process coca leaves and other raw materials for drugs. [96885]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Anonymous bank accounts, and other forms of excessive bank secrecy, provide an opportunity for criminals—including drug traffickers—to launder the proceeds of their crimes, to prevent law enforcement authorities from tracing criminal assets. The National Criminal Intelligence Service and the Financial Action Task Force (FATF, the leading international anti-money laundering body) confirm that anonymous numbered bank accounts remain one of the tools used by money launderers.

The Government is committed to furthering international efforts to ensure that banking secrecy is not abused to benefit those who trade in illegal drugs. The FATF's international standards on money laundering call on all states to prohibit the use of anonymous accounts. All FATF members, aside from Austria, have done so. The UK Government are actively supporting a variety of initiatives through, for example, the EU, the UN and the G7/8, as well as through bilateral relations with other countries, and through our relationship with the Crown Dependencies and Overseas Territories, to ensure that the FATF's anti-money laundering standards are applied throughout the world. The Financial Services and Markets Bill provides new powers and responsibilities to the Financial Services Authority to combat money laundering in the UK.

Consultants

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much his Department spent on external consultants and advisers in each of the last four financial years. [97415]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Treasury has spent the following amounts on consultants and advisers since 1996–97.

Year	£
1996–97	923,662
1997–98	976,971
1998–99	1,757,400
1999–2000 to date	1,053,758

The increase in consultancies in 1998–99 is mainly the result of the transfer to the Treasury of DTI's Insurance Directorate and the creation of the Debt Management Office (which combined accounted for approximately £950,000).

Tourist Tax

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to introduce a tourist tax on popular tourist attractions. [98034]

Mr. Timms: The Government have no such plans.

EMU and EU (Public Opinion)

Mr. Cash: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what opinion research the Treasury has commissioned on attitudes to economic and monetary union and the European Union; which polling organisations have been awarded contracts for such research; when such contracts were awarded; and what the costs of such contracts have been. [97769]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Treasury has commissioned no such research.

HEALTH

Nurses

Mr. Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many nurses returned to employment in the National Health Service (a) in the first two quarters of 1997, (b) in the first two quarters of 1998 and (c) in the first two quarters of 1999. [93132]

Mr. Denham: Since our national recruitment campaign began on 1 February 1999, until 30 September 1999, 2,030 nurses returned to employment in the National Health Service.

We do not hold figures centrally on the number of nurses who returned to employment in the NHS in 1997 and 1998. Information about the number of nurses joining the NHS is available from the annual survey conducted by the Office of Manpower Economics, on behalf of the Review Body for Nursing Staff, Midwives, Health Visitors and Professions Allied to Medicine. The results from the March 1998 survey are in the sixteenth review body report which is available in the Library.

2,327 nurses were on return to practice courses or booked on to forthcoming return to practice courses.

Medical Accidents

Mr. Geraint Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to set targets for the NHS for the reduction in the number of avoidable medical accidents. [93652]

Ms Stuart: It is, of course, important that patients should feel confident that they can rely on the National Health Service to provide the best care and treatment possible. We are committed to improving clinical standards across the board, and that is what our reforms of the National Health Service, including the introduction of clinical governance and the new statutory duty of quality, are doing. One of the aims is that, as standards are driven up, so medical accidents will be reduced.

Continuing Care Beds

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to establish national eligibility criteria for continuing care beds in NHS hospitals. [95558]

Mr. Denham: We are reviewing continuing care policy and guidance and will announce the outcome of our review next year.

Generic Drugs

Mr. Peter Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what data his Department has collated from the English health authorities as to the impact on their drugs budgets of the recent shortages and rising prices of generic drugs over the last 12 months; and if he will publish such information as he has received; [96171]

(2) what assessment he has made of the anticipated impact on the NHS drugs budget of (a) the shortage and (b) rising prices of generic drugs over the last 12 months; and if he will make a statement. [96172]

Mr. Denham: Our best estimate is that the combined effect on this year's drugs budget of price increases and the need to dispense more expensive drugs when cheaper generics are in short supply is of the order of £160 million, around 0.5 per cent. of the total resources allocated to health authorities this year. While the National Health Service should be able to cope with such pressures, it is clear that the arrangements for the supply of generic medicines which have served the NHS well for many years have failed us this year. We have taken action on three fronts. First, we are seeking to improve the situation in the short term by making changes to the present arrangements—for example the rules which determine for the purposes of paying pharmacies whether a generic is in short supply. Second, we asked the Office of Fair Trading in August to investigate whether the current situation raises any competition issues. Third, we are setting up a fundamental review of the current arrangements to see whether there are alternative ways of supplying the NHS with generics which would better ensure consistency of supply at reasonable prices.

Insulin Pens

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement about the prescribing of pen needles and disposable pens for insulin-dependent diabetics. [R] [96030]

Mr. Denham: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Hendon (Mr. Dismore) and the hon. Member for Christchurch (Mr. Chope) on 25 October 1999, Official Report, column 747.

Thyroxine

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list (a) for each of the last five years the amount the NHS has paid, and (b) the amount it expects to pay in this financial year, for the drug thyroxine; what the unit price was, or is, in each of those years; and what reasons underlay the changes. [96445]

Mr. Denham: The data requested are shown in the tables.

The amount which the National Health Service pays for any medicine depends on the total quantity prescribed and the price. In the case of thyroxine, the quantity prescribed generically has increased in recent years and during this one. As regards price, the price which the NHS pays for thyroxine, as for other generic medicines, is based on prices which are set by competition in the market place. It is not controlled by government. There has been a spate of shortages of generic medicines during 1999 which have led to price rises, some of which have been dramatic. The increases in the prices of thyroxine tablets have been at the upper end of this range.

The total cost of thyroxine for the rest of the financial year will depend on price and volume trends in the coming months.

Barnet Psychiatric Building

Sir Sydney Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the decision to replace the Barnet psychiatric building with a modern in-patient psychiatric unit will be implemented. [96628]

Mr. Hutton: Barnet Healthcare National Health Service Trust, in conjunction with Barnet Health Authority, is working to identify its preferred option for the future provision of mental health services in the east of the borough. Once this process is complete and the support of local commissioners has been obtained a business case will be submitted to the NHS Executive.

Primary Care Groups

Sir Peter Emery: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what additional funds he plans to give to primary care groups for prescribing. [96649]

Mr. Denham: There are no plans to increase the unified allocations for health authorities for 1999–2000. No decisions have yet been taken about health authority allocations for 2000–01.

Xenotransplantations

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the risks to human health from xenotransplantations; and if he will make a statement. [96644]

Ms Stuart: Xenotransplantation offers a possible solution to the current shortage of organs and tissue for transplantation. The Government, advised by the United Kingdom Xenotransplantation Interim Regulatory Authority, believes that a cautious, step by step, approach to the exploration of this technology is the right way to proceed. Evidence about the safety of xenotransplantation is kept under constant review by the UKXIRA, which offers advice to the Government on all xenotransplantation issues. Safety remains of paramount importance. Any clinical trial in xenotransplantation involving humans will be allowed to take place only when we are fully satisfied that the risk associated with the particular xenotransplantation procedure involved in the trial is acceptable.

Osteoporosis

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the risks of taking oral corticosteroids for osteoporosis; and if he will make a statement. [96660]

Ms Stuart: It is known that prolonged use of corticosteroids is an important risk factor in the development of osteoporosis.

The Royal College of Physicians' evidence based "Clinical guidelines for prevention and treatment of osteoporosis" highlight this fact, as does the quick reference primary care guide issued by the Department. These documents recommend preventive strategies to help doctors with patients who present with this, and a range of other known risk factors.

In addition the National Osteoporosis Society have also published guidance on "The prevention and management of corticosteroid induced osteoporosis". This is also a useful resource for doctors and members of the public alike.

Continence Services

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was for each category of continence product purchased by the NHS National Suppliers Trust in the year from February 1998 to January 1999 (a) the number of items purchased, (b) the total costs and (c) the percentage change in the number purchased from the previous year; and what estimate he has made of the proportion this represents of the total of such products, by category or overall, that are purchased by the NHS. [96078]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 1 November 1999]: Information from the National Health Service Supplies Authority is shown in the table. The information relates only to those products that the NHS obtains from NHS Supplies. It is estimated that NHS Supplies' sales represent around 50 per cent. of the total market, with about 30 per cent. of products being provided direct from a supplier to a patient's home and about 20 per cent. direct from supplier to an NHS trust.

NHS Hearing Tests

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the waiting time is for an NHS hearing test in each health authority. [97221]

Mr. Denham: The information requested is not available centrally.

Territorial Army

Mr. Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) which NHS hospitals employ doctors who are also members of the Territorial Army or reserve forces; and how many such doctors each of these hospitals employ; [97242]

(2) how many NHS doctors are also reservists or members of the Territorial Army. [97243]

Mr. Denham: There are currently 440 doctors in the United Kingdom volunteer reserve medical forces. The further information requested is not available.

NHS Staff

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish the results of the most recent NHS hospital and community health services recruitment, retention and vacancy survey, broken down by NHS region. [97270]

Mr. Denham: The detailed results, including an analysis by National Health Service region, of the recruitment, retention and vacancies survey will be published shortly.

Long-term Care

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to conclude his review of long-term care; and if he will make a statement. [97553]

Mr. Hutton: The Royal Commission on Long Term Care was asked to examine the options for funding long-term care, including residential care for elderly people. We are carefully considering the Royal Commission's proposals, the divergences of view within the Royal Commission and the comments that have been made by various organisations and individuals. We will make an announcement in due course.

Midwifery

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received on the Iceni Team Midwifery Group in Colchester; and if he will make a statement. [97447]

Mr. Denham: We have received a significant amount of correspondence on this subject. The matter was also raised in an Adjournment Debate on Friday 5 November.

There will be no change to existing maternity services in north east Essex unless and until this has been determined by the outcome of a full and open consultation which will be led by North Essex Health Authority.

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many team midwifery groups have been disbanded in each of the last three years for which figures are available, indicating the reasons given in each case; and if he will make a statement. [97452]

Mr. Denham: Information on the number of team midwifery groups is not available centrally.

Local Authority Care

Ms Shipley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the total level of resources he spent in the (a) current and (b) previous financial year to support 16 and 17-year-olds leaving local authority care. [97304]

Mr. Hutton: Gross expenditure by local authorities in England on all children who have left local authority care was £23 million for 1997–98, the latest year for which information is available.

In addition, certain 16 and 17-year-olds leaving care are, like their peers, eligible for benefits. There are no centrally collected statistics on the benefits paid to 16 and 17-year-old care leavers.

Ms Shipley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the total level of resources he spent in the (a) current and (b) previous financial year to support 16 and 17-year-olds in local authority care. [97302]

Mr. Hutton: Information on the total level of resources to support 16 and 17-year-olds looked after by local authorities is not held centrally. Statistics for 1997–98, the latest year available, show that gross expenditure of £969 million was spent on all children looked after by local authorities in England. Provisional statistics on the numbers of children looked after by local authorities in England at 31 March show that for all age groups there were 55,300 children of whom 9,000 were 16 years and over.

In addition, certain 16 and 17-year-olds in local authority care (such as lone parents and disabled children) are, like their peers in the community, eligible for benefits. There are no centrally held statistics on the number of 16 and 17-year-olds who fall into these categories.

School Nurses

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what reduction there has been in the numbers of school nurses, broken down by health authority, over the last three years. [97443]

Mr. Denham: School nurses employed by National Health Service hospital and community health services have not been identified separately from other community nursing staff within the non-medical censuses conducted by the Department after 1994. Figures for 1995 onwards are not therefore available centrally.

Residential Care

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what representations he has received regarding the length of the consultation period on the national required standards for residential coma care; and if he will make a statement; [97367]

(2) if he will extend the period of consultation on the national required standards for residential and nursing homes; [97366]

(3) when Hampshire Coma Association can expect a response to its letter to the Minister of State of 6 October. [97360]

Mr. Hutton: I assume that the letter of 6 October referred to is the one from Mr. Ronnie Cairnduff of the Hampshire Care Homes Association. I replied to Mr. Cairnduff on 29 October and I hope that by now he will have received my letter.

On 8 September the Department published the consultation document "Fit for the Future?". About 1,500 copies were distributed to a wide range of representative organisations and individuals for consultation nationally. The document is also immediately accessible on the internet.

To date the Department has received fewer than a dozen letters suggesting that the formal consultation period should be extended.

We currently have no plans to extend the formal consultation period. However, the development of national standards will not be completed overnight and comments received on "Fit for the Future?" within a reasonable length of time after the end of the formal consultation period on 3 December, will be considered.

Medication (Patient Packs)

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish guidelines explaining why all medications need now to be in patient packs. [97479]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 5 November 1999]: There is no legal or National Health Service requirement for medicines to be supplied in patient packs. European Commission Directive 92/27 on medicines labelling and leaflets requires that medicines are supplied to patients with a detailed label and patient information leaflet containing a standard but extensive minimum set of information.

Uniform Business Rate

Mr. Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 2 November 1999, Official Report, column 101, if he has made a provisional estimate of the aggregate increase in uniform business rates payable by NHS trusts and health authorities in England as a result of the 2000 rating revaluation. [97765]

Mr. Denham: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave on 2 November 1999, Official Report, column 101.

GP Referrals

Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action is being taken to reduce the time between patients with non-life threatening conditions being referred by their general practitioners and their appointments with specialist consultants. [97650]

Mr. Denham: On 6 September, following a top level meeting of National Health Service staff and health ministers at Downing Street, my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister announced a package of measures to tackle waiting times to see a consultant. These included the extension of the National Booked Admissions Programme, tough new monitoring of outpatient performance and an additional £30 million to improve outpatient services. This money will go direct to the NHS to tackle problem areas locally—providing extra outpatient clinics, employing additional staff and investing in new medical equipment.

Correspondence

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will reply to the letter of 28 September from Mr. R. Wright, a constituent. [97604]

Ms Stuart: An official at South West Regional Office of the National Health Service Executive replied on behalf of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State to Mr. Wright on 5 November.

Health Service Expenditure

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the expenditure per head (a) in England, (b) in each English health region and (c) in each English health authority area on health services estimated for the current financial year and for the previous two financial years. [97967]

Mr. Denham: Information requested for the previous two financial years is shown in the table.

Comparative information on the current financial year is not available.

Dereford Hospital

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement regarding his plans to investigate waiting list management at Dereford Hospital. [97826]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 9 November 1999]: Plymouth Hospitals National Health Service Trust failed to report 4 over-18-month waiters to the NHS Executive in June. The South West Regional Office of the NHS Executive have investigated how this occurred and, together with the National Patient Access Team, are reviewing Plymouth Hospitals NHS Trust's waiting list management systems to ensure there is no recurrence.

Since June 1999 Plymouth Hospitals NHS Trust has made changes in management including the appointment of a new clinical director and directorate manager for cardiac services together with the appointment of a new central waiting list manager. The Trust has revised its administrative procedures and is introducing a new patient administration computer system. In addition the Trust is making changes to the way the cardiac service is delivered, including improving staffing levels to increase intensive bed capacity and changes in clinical practice for the timing of pre operative assessments and admissions.

Arachnoiditis

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the services available on the NHS for arachnoiditis sufferers. [97411]

Mr. Hutton: Arachnoiditis sufferers should have access to any service offering investigation, care or treatment, according to individual clinical need. They will have access to local chronic pain relief services which are available in almost all acute hospitals. Additional pain relief may be provided to day case patients either as ordinary admission or to those requiring special facilities such as physiotherapy, psychotherapy or radiology.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the total number of people in the United Kingdom suffering from arachnoiditis. [97410]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested is not available centrally. Statistics held by the Department of Health reflect only diagnostic information collected on in-patients attending National Health Service hospitals in England. In 1997 there were 2,200 cases diagnosed with arachnoiditis admitted to hospital in England[1]. The Department cannot determine the prevalence of arachnoiditis from these statistics.

Mr. Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research his Department has commissioned or evaluated into arachnoiditis; and what plans he has to introduce a compensation scheme for people who developed arachnoiditis following the administration to them of myodil lumbar myelography. [97996]

Mr. Hutton: Neither the Department of Health nor the Medical Research Council have directly commissioned or evaluated research into arachnoiditis.

The Department has no plans to introduce a compensation scheme for people suffering from arachnoiditis.

Depo-medrone and Kenalog

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance he has issued to health authorities on the use of (a) Depo-medrone and (b) Kenalog. [97412]

Mr. Hutton: No guidance has been issued to health authorities on the use of Depo-medrone and Kenalog.

Nursing Homes

Mr. Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions he has had or plans to have with the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions to ensure that planning permissions given to new nursing homes take account of the impact such consents have on local medical services. [97867]

Mr. Hutton: We believe that the supervision of nursing homes is best done through the regulation of homes. General planning legislation is not appropriate for this purpose as it does not always differentiate residential and nursing homes from other dwellings where their impact on land-use is regarded as broadly similar. Therefore, we have not had, nor do we have any plans to have, discussions with the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions on this issue.

Currently, nursing homes are regulated by Part II of the Registered Homes Act 1984. Under the Act local health authorities are responsible for registering independent nursing homes. Applicants must provide the health authority with details of the arrangements they intend to make, or have made, for their residents to receive medical services either under National Health Service arrangements or otherwise. In considering the application, the local health authority will take into account the impact on local medical services of registering the home along with all the other considerations.

Consultants

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much his Department spent on external consultants and advisers in each of the last four financial years. [97421]

Ms Stuart: Expenditure by the Department is:

Year	Spend £ million
1995–96	18.504
1996–97	[1]14.518
1997–98	[1]11.848
1998–99	[1]7.181

In-patient Waiting Lists

Mr. Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the in-patient waiting list figures announced monthly by his Department include patients on the Booked List who have been given a date for treatment, but have not yet received it. [98008]

Mr. Denham: Yes. Patients who are given a booked date for their treatment are included in the waiting list figures, until they are admitted.

Glyphosate

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what studies his Department has undertaken into possible effects of glyphosate on human health; and if he will make a statement. [94829]

Ms Quin: I have been asked to reply.

All pesticides used in this country, including glyphosate, must be approved by Ministers. Approval is granted only following thorough scientific evaluation of the risk that the pesticide might pose to people, wildlife and to the wider environment. Only if this evaluation shows that there is no unacceptable risk will approval be granted. All pesticides are subject to routine review and will be reviewed at any time if doubts are raised concerning their safety.

Glyphosate is currently being reviewed by the EU Commission as part of a programme to review all agricultural pesticides currently on the market in the EU. The German authorities were nominated by the Commission to evaluate the data and research studies submitted by companies and prepare a report. This report includes the possible effects of glyphosate on human health. The UK is playing an active part in this work and will ensure that the same rigorous standards are applied in this review as are applied in the UK to pesticide approvals.

Additionally, we have urgently sought the studies allegedly linking glyphosate exposure and an increased risk of non-Hodgkin's lymphoma. These studies have also been passed to the German authorities and will be taken into account in the risk assessment process for the EU review of glyphosate. If we conclude that approved uses involve unacceptable risks, we will not hesitate to act.

Epilepsy

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance his Department issues aimed at increasing awareness of the recognition and treatment of epilepsy in (a) schools and colleges and (b) the workplace. [97468]

Jacqui Smith: I have been asked to reply.

The Department for Education and Employment and the Department of Health have jointly produced "Supporting Pupils with Medical Needs", a good practice guide for schools. This includes specific reference to epilepsy, its medication and control. "Wired for Health" (www.wiredforhealth.gov.uk), the website of the Government's Healthy Schools Programme, also provides information on epilepsy through a link to the British Epilepsy Association's website. This is primarily for schools and colleges but has a wider audience including other workplaces.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Beef Exports

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will send a copy of the latest scientific report approving the safety of British beef to those countries which continue to ban British beef. [97743]

Ms Quin: Ministers and officials will certainly draw the attention of those countries which currently do not accept UK beef imports to the Scientific Steering Committee's clear advice on the safety of UK beef exports. The report is available through the internet.

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list those members of the Commonwealth which (a) have lifted their ban on British beef and (b) continue to ban British beef. [97741]

Ms Quin: We have approached a number of third countries, where a potential market has been identified, for their agreement to import British beef under the Date-based Export Scheme. So far, of those third countries that are Members of the Commonwealth, Mauritius and Cyprus have agreed, in principal, that they will allow the import of British beef under the Scheme while Malta and Singapore have said that, at present, they will continue not to admit British beef. The other countries are still considering their positions. South Africa still has an import ban in place, but has said that this will be kept under review in the light of developments in the EU.

Mr. Field: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many pounds of (a) beef and (b) beef products have been exported each week to each of the European Union member states since the ban on exporting British beef to those states was lifted. [97055]

Ms Quin: The information requested is not yet available. I will write to my right hon. Friend when it is available. However he may wish to note that Official Overseas Trade Statistics do not separately identify exports of British beef from that of non-UK origin. In respect of exports of British beef, I refer my right hon. Friend to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Burnley (Mr. Pike) on 21 October 1999, Official Report, columns 570–71.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list those countries which continue to operate a ban on British beef imports. [96295]

Ms Quin [holding answer 29 October 1999]: Among the EU member states only France and Germany still have import bans. We have approached a number of third countries, including the USA, where a potential market has been identified for their agreement to import British beef under the Date-based Export Scheme. To date, four of those countries, Malta, Russia, Singapore and Switzerland, have said that, at present, they will continue not to admit British beef under the Scheme. Most of the other countries are still considering their positions. South Africa has an import ban in place, but has said that this will be kept under review in the light of developments in the EU.

Bovine Tuberculosis

Mr. Paice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food in how many bovine TB triplet study areas badger culling has (a) begun and (b) been suspended; and how many study areas he expects to commence in 1999. [96067]

Ms Quin [holding answer 1 November 1999]: Five triplets have been announced so far, two in 1998 and three in 1999. Culling has taken place in two of them. Operations are temporarily suspended in two others. We expect to announce one more before the end of 1999.

Common Agricultural Policy

Mr. Todd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what the cost per claim was in 1998–99 in each of his Department's regional service centres for each of the Common Agricultural Policy schemes administered by them. [97707]

Ms Quin: The direct cost per claim (in £) of staff administration for 1998–99 at each of the Ministry's Regional Service Centres (RSCs) for each of the major CAP schemes administered by them was as follows.

Regional Service Centre	[1]AAPS	[2]BSPS	[3]SCPS	[4]SAPS	[5]HLCA	[6]CSS	[7]ESA

Note:
Cambridge and Reading offices do not process HLCA claims.

The amount of work involved in processing a claim or agreement varies according to its value and complexity. The claims processed by each Regional Service Centre will reflect the type of farming activity in its area. Where the farm businesses in a region are bigger than the average for the country as a whole, the number of hectares or animals in a claim for a particular scheme will be higher than the average. This will in turn entail longer field inspections and computer checks on more parcels of land. The figures should not therefore be used as a direct comparison of the efficiency of the nine RSCs. MAFF is currently developing efficiency measures for CAP administration by its Regional Organisation for the financial year 2000–01.

Pet Travel Scheme

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if the pet travel scheme to be introduced next year will apply to the Channel Islands. [95655]

Ms Quin: There are already no controls on the movement of pet animals between the Channel Islands and Great Britain. We have no plans to introduce any. The Channel Islands have their own quarantine regulations. Whether the Channel Island authorities introduce a pet travel scheme for animals entering the islands direct from abroad is therefore a matter for those authorities.

Nuts

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to restrict the usage of nuts and nut oils in foodstuffs, (a) in general and (b) in cases where the product is specifically marketed at young children. [96532]

Ms Quin: Young children may exhibit allergies to a range of foods such as milk, eggs, and peanuts (allergies to other nuts are much less common in childhood), but as these are among the foods that provide good nutrition for the majority of children it would be counterproductive to restrict these for children in general. The mainstay of policy on potentially severe allergens such as peanuts and 'tree nuts' (hazel nuts, Brazil nuts, etc.) has been to encourage better awareness of the problem, and in order to safeguard against exposure to foods that may cause reactions.

Nut oils are not normally used in foods for young children and experiments funded by the Ministry have shown that the refined oils that are used in food manufacture are very unlikely to cause a problem even for allergic individuals.

Meat Hygiene Service

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received regarding (a) the proposed rise in the hourly charge of the Meat Hygiene Service and (b) the need to increase the number of veterinary surgeons employed in slaughterhouses in order to meet EU protocols. [96247]

Ms Quin: My Department has received several hundred representations from Members of Parliament, Members of the European Parliament, industry organisations, individual meat plant operators, farmers, consumers and others about the impact of (a) proposals to increase Meat Hygiene Service (MHS) inspection charges, and (b) increased veterinary supervision in meat plants in line with EU requirements.

The Government has listened to these concerns about the future of the slaughtering sector. That is why, as my right hon. Friend the Minister announced in September, the Government has further deferred the introduction of charges for MHS supervision of Specified Risk Material controls until at least April 2002. This represents a saving of some £22 million per year to the industry. Moreover, low throughput slaughterhouses will not be required to have full-time supervision by a vet during post-mortem inspection. The MHS is now reviewing its levels of inspections in individual low throughput premises.

We are also carrying out an Efficiency Review of the MHS under an external chairman and in full consultation with the industry. The results will appear early in the New Year. Furthermore, the Government has set up the Meat Industry Red Tape Working Group (the Pooley Group) to advise on how charges and legislation can be adapted to help the industry.

In addition, the Government has sent a copy of the MLC report on meat inspection charges in other Member States to the EU Food Safety Commissioner David Byrne, and urged the Commission to investigate the way in which meat inspection charges are levied in other Member States. In particular, we have urged the Commission to investigate the allegations of subsidy in Italy and non-collection of charges in Spain.

Specified Risk Material

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received on the consequences that transferring the costs of operating specified risk material controls from public funds to industry will have on the agriculture industry. [96250]

Ms Quin: My Ministerial colleagues and I have received a considerable number of representations on the impact of charges for the specified risk material controls on the agriculture and slaughterhouse industry over the past 12 months.

It was in response to these representations that we decided to defer the introduction of these charges initially for the current financial year and subsequently, as my right hon. Friend the Minister announced on 20 September, until 2002–03 at the earliest.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much funding has been given to farmers in England and Wales to alleviate the added costs of enforcing the controls on specified risk material in each of the past two years; and what funding will be provided in the current financial year. [96246]

Ms Quin: The costs of enforcing the specified risk material controls have been, and will continue to be, borne by the Government during this period. Enforcement of these controls has not therefore given rise to any added costs to farmers.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the costs of enforcing the specified risk material controls in the UK relative to those of equivalent systems in other EU states. [96262]

Ms Quin: The costs of supervising and enforcing the specified risk material (SRM) controls in the UK in the 1998–99 financial year was £17 million.

No-EU-wide SRM controls are in force and individual Member States operate national controls where it is deemed necessary. Such information as is available on the costs in other EU Member States is contained in a report on meat inspection charges and other enforcement costs published in September 1999 by the Meat and Livestock Commission. A copy has been placed in the Library of the House.

BSE

Mr. Neil Turner: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many new cases of BSE were reported (a) in the UK and (b) by other member countries of the EU in (i) 1998 and (ii) 1997. [96679]

Ms Quin: Numbers of confirmed cases of BSE by year of report for the UK are as follows:

	1997	1998
United Kingdom	4,335	3,197

We do not have data for other Member States by year of report. The following figures, by date of confirmation, were reported to the Commission by Member States. The information was supplied by the Commission.

Member state	1997	1998
Belgium	1	6
France	6	18
Germany	[1]2
Ireland	77	79
Luxembourg	1
Netherlands	2	2
Portugal	30	104

[1] Germany has reported no homebred cases of BSE.

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what progress has been made towards developing a test for BSE in live animals; and what plans the Government have for implementing such a test. [97227]

Ms Quin: There are, as yet, no validated tests for the diagnosis of either BSE or scrapie in live animals. One test, developed in the USA, appears promising with respect to the diagnosis of scrapie in sheep and chronic wasting disease in elk during the pre-clinical stage of infection and while animals are alive. Scientists at the Veterinary Laboratories Agency (VLA) are collaborating with their American counterparts to introduce this technology to the VLA where it will be evaluated for use to detect scrapie infected sheep. Although BSE in cattle appears to behave quite differently from scrapie in sheep in terms of tissue distribution, attempts will be made to evaluate the potential for the use of this test for BSE in cattle as well.

We have no knowledge of any other test that has been proven to have the necessary sensitivity and specificity for use on live animals.

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many new BSE cases were notified in each month from January to August, broken down by region. [96487]

Ms Quin [holding answer 29 October 1999]: The following tables give figures for suspect BSE cases reported in the first eight months of 1999 by region for England and in the first six months of 1999 for Scotland and Wales. It must be noted that BSE has not been confirmed in all of these cases.

Labelling

Mr. Dobbin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to improve the labelling of food products and farm produce. [96682]

Ms Quin: The Government are committed to promoting informed consumer choice. We are pressing for improvements in Labelling rules, at EU level, including full disclosure of major allergens and mandatory, user-friendly nutrition labelling. At a national level we have recently published revised draft guidance notes aimed at ensuring that origin indications on foods are clear and not misleading. In the longer term, we will be seeking changes to labelling rules at European and International level to ensure that information given to consumers about the origin of the foods is clear and unambiguous.

Sheep

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will estimate the size of the sheep flock in England and Wales (a) at present and (b) in each of the last five years. [95748]

Ms Quin: The figures for the sheep breeding flock and for all sheep and lambs in England and Wales are shown in the table for the period from June 1994 to June 1999:

	June 1994	June 1995	June 1996	June 1997	June 1998	June 1999

[2] Up to 1994, the figures relate to ewes kept for breeding, including draft and cast ewes and two-tooth ewes put, or to be put, to the ram. From 1995, the figures relate to ewes and shearlings that have produced lambs in the last year (whether intended for further breeding or slaughter) and female sheep (one year and over) put, or to be put, to the ram.

Agricultural Wages Board

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he plans to begin consultation on the future of the Agricultural Wages Board; and if he will make a statement. [97381]

Ms Quin: During the passage of the National Minimum Wage Act 1998 the Government confirmed its plans to review the Agricultural Wages Board in late 1999. We intend to issue a consultation paper before the end of the year.

Meat and Livestock Commission (Wales)

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the practicability of setting up a separate meat and livestock commission in Wales answerable to the National Assembly. [97812]

Ms Quin: None; we know that the Meat and Livestock Commission (MLC) is very conscious of the needs of its Welsh levy payers when drawing up its plans. A Welsh Council of the MLC has now been established in response to Devolution. During the recent quinnquennial review of the MLC there was no pressure from Welsh farmers for a separate MLC type body in Wales.

Milk Marque

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food which successor organisation to Milk Marque, farmers in Shrewsbury and Atcham will be able to join on 1 April 2000; and if he will make a statement. [97939]

Ms Quin: That is a matter for Milk Marque. My understanding is that, initially, the allocation of existing members milk contracts in Shrewsbury and Atcham will be dependent on their district code. This means that some members will be assigned to the North and others to the Central successor bodies. After 1 April 2000 they will be able to seek to join any of the successor bodies.

Pigs (Welfare)

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received as a result of his campaign to ensure that public authorities take account of animal welfare when purchasing pork and pork products. [97911]

Ms Quin: A number of local authorities and central purchasing organisations have responded to my right hon. Friend the Minister's letter informing them of the welfare and quality standards of British pig production. Most have been positive and where appropriate they have been put in contact with the Meat and Livestock Commission to obtain further information.

Organic Milk

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what percentage of household milk sold in England in the last year for which figures are available was organic; and if he will make a statement. [97938]

Ms Quin: No figures are available for liquid milk separately, but estimates produced by the organic sector itself indicate that organic dairy products had a retail value of £54 million in 1998–99. This represents around 1 per cent. of total retail sales of dairy products that year.

Mr. McWalter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has for using a single co-operative to market organic milk after 31 March 2000. [97850]

Ms Quin: None. The marketing of milk is a matter for the industry itself. There is already one co-operative marketing organic milk in England.

Heritage Seed Library

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assistance is being provided by his Department to the Heritage Seed Library at Ryton. [97808]

Ms Quin: This Department supplies no assistance to the Heritage Seed Library at Ryton. However, duplicates of much of the material held by the Heritage Seed Library are held in the Vegetable Gene Bank which is maintained by Horticulture Research International at Wellesbourne and the John Innes Pisum Collection which is maintained by the John Innes Centre for Plant Science Research at Norwich. Both these collections receive assistance from my Department.

Meat Hygiene Appeals Tribunal

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received on the review of the Meat Hygiene Appeals Tribunal; and if he will make a statement. [97794]

Ms Quin [holding answer 8 November 1999]: The review is in progress and interested organisations and others have been invited to comment by 29 November 1999. Seven representations have been received so far.

Slaughterhouses

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he first received advice from the EU that full-time veterinary inspection in low-throughput slaughterhouses was not necessary. [97541]

Ms Quin: The advice from the Commission on the requirements for veterinary supervision in low throughput slaughterhouses and cutting plants that full-time veterinary ante-mortem inspection in low throughput slaughterhouses was necessary but full-time veterinary post-mortem inspection in low throughput slaughterhouses was not necessary was received on 17 May in a letter dated 5 May 1999.

Sand Eels

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what discussions he held on the conservation of sand eels at the October Fisheries Council. [97574]

Mr. Morley: The conservation of sand eels was not on the agenda of the October Fisheries Council. I have had discussions with the Danish Minister and the Commissioner, and expect a Commission proposal addressing the issue shortly.

Integrated Administration and Control System

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much money was recovered from surveys made through the Integrated Administration and Control System farm inspections in (a) 1996–97, (b) 1997–98 and (c) 1998–99. [97694]

Ms Quin [holding answer 9 November 1999]: Complete data on the amounts recovered are not available. However, under European Community regulations aggregations are made of the value of all irregularities amounting to euro4000 (£2,844) and above which are detected through IACS field inspections and subsequently recovered. The value of these recoveries in the UK financial years specified by the hon. Member are set out in the following table. It should be noted that recovery procedures for the more recent irregularities are still in their early stages, so the amounts recovered are likely to increase substantially.

	Total value of irregularities recovered
1996–97	308
1997–98	315
1998–99	432

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if his officials will rely on Ordnance Survey maps for calculating land area when completing Integrated Administration and Control System forms. [97692]

Ms Quin [holding answer 9 November 1999]: Under European Community regulations farmers can use field area information taken from Ordnance Survey (OS) maps in their IACS area aid applications. This information is acceptable, provided that the fields concerned are fully utilised for the purpose of the aid scheme under which the claim is made. However, if the field contains an ineligible feature, such as a pond, or a road, or a storage area for straw bales, then the farmer should deduct the area of this feature from the OS area.

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the cost of a farm inspection programme under the Integrated Administration and Control System in total per year; and what is the cost per farm inspected. [97693]

Ms Quin [holding answer 9 November 1999]: The information requested relating to the 1998 inspection programme is currently being compiled. I will write to the hon. Member when it is available.

Egg Labelling

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to improve the descriptions of eggs for sale in terms of the rearing system used. [97501]

Ms Quin [holding answer 9 November 1999]: EC Egg Marketing rules cover the use of 'Special Marketing Terms' for eggs for sale in terms of the rearing system used. The European Commission is due to review these terms following the adoption of the Directive on the Welfare of Laying Hens this summer. We await proposals from the Commission. Once negotiations begin we will be seeking to ensure the rules reflect the high welfare standards we have in the UK.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will prohibit the description farm fresh eggs from being used to describe those originating from battery systems. [97502]

Ms Quin [holding answer 9 November 1999]: Under the EC Egg Marketing Regulations the term 'fresh' is reserved for eggs of Grade A quality, which is the highest standard of freshness and cleanliness laid down. It may be used to describe eggs produced under any system, including battery systems. The word 'farm' is not considered to be misleading, as nearly all eggs are produced on farms of one kind or another.

Florence Agreement (Export Ban)

Mr. Evans: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the legal status of the Florence Agreement in respect of dairy calves of the export ban on live cattle. [98017]

Ms Quin: The Florence Agreement is the conclusion of an informal Council of Minister meeting and, as such, has no legislative status. Nevertheless, the Agreement provides an important framework for the lifting of the export ban on a step by step basis. The lifting of the ban in respect of live cattle is foreseen as one of the stages of the Florence Agreement but it is too early to say when exports of live cattle might resume.

Cattle Ear Tags

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans his Department has to replace the current large MAFF-specified cattle ear tags with more durable, smaller, stronger tags containing a microchip. [97691]

Ms Quin [holding answer 9 November 1999]: The specifications for the large distance readable cattle ear tags are laid down in EU legislation and there are no proposals to amend these requirements. We are aware that there is concern over the loss rates of plastic cattle ear tags experienced by some farmers and we are currently investigating the reasons for this.

A European Union funded programme of trials into the various forms of electronic identification for cattle and other livestock is currently underway. After these trials have been completed the European Commission is expected to propose an EU wide standard. In the meantime, farmers can voluntarily use electronic identification but this does not replace the requirement for the large distance readable tag.

Intervention Board

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how the Intervention Board performed against its targets for 1998–99. [98368]

Mr. Nick Brown: The Intervention Board's performance against its key targets in 1998–99 was as follows:

	Target	Performance
Percentage of claims processed within deadlines	99.0	99.4
Percentage of claims processed correctly	98.5	98.9
Cumulative running cost efficiency gains (percentage)	2.5	5.3
Improvement in index of productivity (percentage)	4.0	5.9
Ratio of disallowance to EAGGF funds handled (percentage)	0.40	0.03
To maintain expenditure within vote provision, cash and running cost limits		Achieved
New value for money savings in procurement of goods and services (percentage)	7.0	9.3
Yield: cost ratio of anti-fraud activities	3.0:1.0	2.9:1.0

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Departmental Vehicles

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what is the total number of vehicles used by his Department and its agencies fuelled by (a) petrol, (b) diesel and (c) liquid petroleum gas; and what plans he has to increase the rate of conversion of those vehicles to liquid petroleum gas. [98204]

Jane Kennedy: In total, The Lord Chancellor's Department uses 40 petrol fuelled vehicles (including four from the Government Car Service) and 594 diesel fuelled vehicles. The Department does not use any liquid petroleum gas vehicles.

We continue to keep abreast of developments in the use of liquid petroleum gas but the availability of this fuel is currently still prohibitive.

Decisions on fuel conversion will be made in light of the best environmental advice available and in accordance with our Green Transport Plan.

Departmental Waste

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what plans he has to set targets for the recycling of waste (a) paper, (b) cardboard, (c) glass, (d) metal, (e) plastic and (f) other products created by his Department and its agencies; and if he will make a statement. [98227]

Mr. Lock: My Department's approach to waste management is based on recovery, reduce and re-use as the preferred options for minimising waste sent to landfill. This should help us to achieve the Green Ministers' target for Government Departments of recovering a minimum of 40 per cent. of total office waste, with at least 25 per cent. of that recovery coming from recycling or composting, in 2000–01. Our own corporate target is to establish a baseline figure for the amount of waste produced by the end of March 2000. We have no set individual targets for paper, cardboard, glass, metal, plastic or other materials. Our associate bodies have been encouraged to adopt the target I have set as Green Minister.

Criminal Justice (Review)

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what plans he has for a comprehensive review of the Criminal Justice System; and if he will make a statement. [98102]

Jane Kennedy: My noble and learned Friend the Lord Chancellor is considering the desirability of a major review of the criminal courts and will make an announcement in due course.

General Commissioners of Taxation

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what his Department's procedure is for appointing General Commissioners of Taxation; and for what period his committee on appointments of General Commissioners of Taxation has been without a chairman. [98101]

Mr. Lock: The procedure for the appointment of General Commissioners of Income Tax is set out in the Lord Chancellor's Directions for Advisory Committees on General Commissioners of Income Tax, a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House. Mr. Hugh Wyatt, the Lord-Lieutenant of West Sussex, became the Chairman of the local Advisory Committee on 1 September 1999 in succession to Mr. Nigel Ventham who retired on that day.

Magistrates Courts (London)

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what the cost was of the reorganisation of London's magistrates courts, pursuant to the Access to Justice Act 1999; and how many permanent jobs will be (a) lost or (b) created within the court service by virtue of the reorganisation. [98139]

Jane Kennedy: The reorganisation of the Magistrates Courts Committees in London is still at an early stage of implementation. It is therefore not possible to provide a costing at this stage. Issues such as redundancy or the creation of new posts will be for the new Greater London Magistrates Courts Authority to determine.

Immigration and Nationality (Legal Aid)

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many legal aid franchises for the provision of advice in immigration and nationality cases have been created in the North East Region; and how many cases it is estimated these franchises will take up. [97968]

Mr. Lock: There are currently 26 solicitors' offices within the North East Region covered by the Legal Aid Board's Newcastle and Leeds area offices that either hold a legal aid franchise for immigration or are in the process of obtaining one. These solicitors' offices submitted bills for 1,150 immigration advice and assistance cases in the 12 month period 1 June 1998 to 31 May 1999. Additionally, there is a Not-for-Profit advice agency that holds an immigration franchise in the Leeds area, and is contracted to provide 1,100 hours case work per annum. The proposed contract awards for next year have not yet been agreed, but will be sent to contractors shortly.

Judicial Appointments

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will identify, for each of the last three years, (a) the 10 sets of chambers with the highest number of judicial appointments, (b) the number of appointments from those chambers broken down by reference to judicial rank and (c) the total number of judicial appointments in each year, broken down by judicial rank. [97961]

Mr. Lock: The following details have been obtained about appointments to the Circuit Bench and above. Details of appointments below Circuit Bench level would require extensive searching through individual records and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

In 1996–97 there were two appointments from the chambers of Mr. Anthony Boswood QC at Fountain Court, London (one High Court Judge and One Circuit Judge) and two each from the chambers of Mr. Guy Boney QC at 3 Pump Court, London, the chambers of Mr. Keith Armitage QC at 8 King Street, Manchester and the chambers of Mr. James Stewart QC and Mr. Robert Smith QC at Park Court Chambers Leeds (all to the Circuit Bench).

In 1997–98 there were two appointments from the chambers of Mr. David Crigman QC at 1 Fountain Court, Birmingham (one to the High Court and one to the Circuit Bench); and two each from the chambers of Mr. Bruce Blair QC at 1 Mitre Court, London and the chambers of Mr. Stephen Riordan QC at 25–27 Castle Street, Liverpool (all to the Circuit Bench).

In 1998–99 there were two appointments to the Circuit Bench from the chambers of Mr. James Townend QC at 1 King's Bench Walk, London.

No other chambers has had more than one member appointed to the Circuit Bench or above in any one of the last three years.

Details of the number of judicial appointments in the past three years is set out in the following table:

	1996–97	1997–98	1998–99
High Court Judges	8	8	7
Circuit Judges	22	34	15
Recorders	87	37	99

District Judges (including Family Division)	18	38	43
Deputy District Judges (including Family Division)	45	63	100
Stipendiary Magistrates	2	5	7
Acting Stipendiary Magistrates	0	33	66

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Overseas Aid

Mr. Peter Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list the percentage changes made in (a) the overall overseas aid package and (b) in overseas aid per country in each of the years 1990 to 1997. [96177]

Clare Short: As agreed with my hon. Friend, the information is given in the following table, by region, for the 20 largest recipients of British development assistance and Belize. The largest recipients have been identified according to expenditure in 1997–98, the most recent year for which figures are available.

Mr. Peter Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list for each year from 1990 to 1997 those countries receiving British overseas aid ranked according to (a) benefit per capita of population and (b) average income per capita. [96176]

Clare Short: Tables showing this information by region, for the 20 largest recipients of British development assistance and Belize have been placed in the Library. The largest recipients have been identified according to expenditure in 1997–98, the most recent year for which figures are available.

Mr. Peter Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what countries were beneficiaries of UK overseas aid and by what amounts for each year from 1990 to 1997. [96175]

Clare Short: As agreed with my hon. Friend, the information is given in the following table, by region, for the 20 largest recipients of British development assistance and Belize. The countries have been ranked according to expenditure in 1997–98, the most recent year for which figures are available.

Ukraine

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what have been the levels of spending of the Know How Fund in each year in the Ukraine; and if she will make a statement. [98001]

Clare Short: Recent expenditure for DFID's bilateral programme for Ukraine (Know How Fund) has been as follows:

Year	£ million
1996–97	9.814
1997–98	8.873
1998–99[1]	8.744

[1] This figure is provisional, pending publication of Statistics on International Development

In line with our Country Strategy Paper of October 1998, which reflects the White Paper on International Development, DFID bilateral assistance pays particular attention to the social, governance and environmental aspects of the transition.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Fuel Poverty

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what research the Buildings Research Establishment has carried out on health costs resulting from fuel poverty and inadequate housing; and if he will place copies of the research in the Library. [93736]

Mr. Meacher: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Road Schemes

Mr. Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) which road schemes satisfied the initial sift criteria announced on 22 March; [95869]

(2) what the criteria are for undertaking the study in greater depth to determine whether practicable and cost-effective mitigation can be provided for road schemes that meet the initial sift criteria; and what is the timescale for the study. [95870]

Mr. Hill: The criteria for taking forward studies in greater depth of locations where concerns had been expressed about levels of noise are as stated in the answer to my hon. Friend's question on 22 March 1999, Official Report, columns 50–51. The timing of the studies is an operational matter for the Highways Agency and I have asked the Chief Executive to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Jonathan Shaw, dated 11 November 1999:

You recently asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions which road schemes satisfied the initial sift criteria announced on 22 March and for clarification of the criteria for undertaking the study in greater depth to determine whether practicable and cost-effective mitigation can be provided for road schemes that meet the initial sift criteria and the timescale for these studies.

The criteria for undertaking detailed studies are as announced to Parliament on 22 March. The majority of studies are expected to be completed by the end of this year. In cases where a road surface has recently been or is about to be replaced in order to meet an operational need, we use a quieter surface wherever possible, which normally provides substantial relief of the problem. In these cases, detailed studies have been deferred for three years in order to better target the available resources.

The attached list shows the locations where previous concerns about noise had been expressed which were found to satisfy the criteria announced on 22 March. Locations where studies have been deferred because of the use of quiet surfacing have been marked with an asterisk.

I trust that this information is helpful, although I must point out that the order of appearance of a location on the list does not in any way indicate its priority nor imply that mitigation measures will be provided in every case following the detailed studies.

Water Industry

Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps he is taking to ensure that all the environmental benefits he asked the water regulator to ensure were included in the forthcoming price review will happen. [96873]

Mr. Meacher: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Birmingham Northern Relief Road

Dr. Tony Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he expects to release those parts of the Birmingham Northern Relief Road Concession Agreement with Midland Expressway Ltd. that he is obliged to release; and when he will make available those parts whose release is optional. [96882]

Mr. Hill: A decision will be reached very soon on what is to be released in response to applications for disclosure.

Road Maintenance Condition Survey

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what changes he anticipates in the defects indices for each category of road when the National Road Maintenance Condition Survey is next published. [97069]

Mr. Hill [holding answer 2 November 1999]: It would be unwise to make an estimate from a single year. However, in view of the increases in maintenance funding that the Government have provided, I would expect that over the next few years the deteriorating trend in the published indices will start to be reversed.

Road Network (Maintenance)

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when the Highways Agency will achieve a position of steady state maintenance on the bridges and other structures on the motorway and trunk road network in England; and what he expects will be the annual expenditure requirement to maintain that position once it is achieved. [97068]

Mr. Hill [holding answer 2 November 1999]: The Highways Agency has an ongoing programme of works to ensure all structures are safe and serviceable. The underlying maintenance regime already reflects a steady state position for the Highways Agency's bridges and other structures. In addition, there are programmes of targeted works from time to time to address safety and other issues. Currently there is still a small backlog of maintenance being tackled for rehabilitation of some of the older structures that do not fully meet modern standards.

Climate Change Levy

Mr. Dobbin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the impact of the climate change levy on British aerospace companies. [98325]

Mr. Meacher: I will write to my hon. Friend.

MOX Production

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what quantities of plutonium contaminated waste have been created to date in the production of MOX fuel for export at Sellafield; and what arrangements exist for the storage or disposal of plutonium contaminated radioactive wastes from MOX production. [97453]

Mrs. Liddell: I have been asked to reply.

Details of total plutonium contaminated waste arisings at Sellafield to date are provided in the 1998 UK Radioactive Waste Inventory which was published in July 1999. I understand from BNFL that, to date, around 80 200-litre drums of plutonium contaminated material can be attributed to the operation of the MOX Demonstration Facility at Sellafield. It is not possible to identify how much of this total amount is attributable to the production of MOX for export.

I understand that plutonium contaminated material at Sellafield will be compacted, and then encapsulated, prior to storage and ultimate disposal in an intermediate level waste facility. The latter will be subject to a consultation which my right hon. Friend the Minister for the Environment announced on 25 October.

Motorways

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what estimate he has made of the proportion of car owners who use motorways less than once a month; and what proportion never use motorways. [97907]

Mr. Hill: The main source of information on travel patterns of car drivers, and others, is the National Travel Survey which does not identify use by road type. For the general population, the 1997 Road User Satisfaction Study, commissioned by the Highways Agency, showed that 22 per cent. of respondents had not used a motorway in the previous year and a further 34 per cent. had used a motorway less than once a month.

In terms of total car traffic, measured in vehicle miles, around 17 per cent. was on motorways in 1998.

Departmental Asset Sales

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the assets sold by his Department and their value broken down by item, in each year from 1991–92 to 1998–99 together with an estimate of the value of asset sales planned for 1999–2000 and 2000–01. [95809]

Mr. Prescott [holding answer 26 October 1999]: The following table sets out the proceeds for the Department and its agencies. Assets have not been specified item by item as this information could not be provided without incurring disproportionate cost. The list excludes non-departmental public bodies, Public Corporations and Nationalised Industries. Details of the proceeds received from privatisation and paid into the Consolidated Fund are given separately.

GM Crops

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what new distances he will prescribe for the buffer zones surrounding genetically modified crops; if he will give his reasons for the change; when a further review will take place; and if he will make a statement. [96776]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 1 November 1999]: Recent information from studies about the dispersal of pollen has been referred to ACRE, and it will, if necessary, be taken into account in future advice.

I am aware of the concerns expressed by some, especially organic farmers, regarding the spread of GM pollen. I have consulted other organisations including the Soil Association, and I am considering their responses.

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his press release of 5 November concerning GM crops, what commercial benefits the consent holder for GM crops subject to the voluntary agreement will be permitted to seek; if the crops may be given to farmers to feed to animals; what steps he is taking to ensure that such crops do not enter the human food chain; and if he will make a statement. [98108]

Mr. Meacher: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his press release of 5 November, concerning GM crops, if he will list the plantings of farm-scale trials of GM crops subject to the voluntary agreement which he expects to agree between now and 2002, indicating the crops to be planted, when they are to be planted, what acreage is required for each, what separation distances will be used for each and how long after harvest he estimates the environmental effects of each crop will be completely evaluated. [98109]

Mr. Meacher: GM fodder maize and spring and winter oil seed rape, all modified for herbicide tolerance, are the three crops currently in the farm-scale evaluations. Subject to the advice of the independent Scientific Steering Committee, a fourth crop, herbicide tolerant beet (sugar/fodder), may be included in the farm-scale evaluations from next year. Plantings for the farm-scale evaluations are limited to 20–25 fields per crop per year, each field being 5–10 ha in size (approx. 13–25 acres), subject to the advice and requirements of the Scientific Steering Committee. Plantings covered by this agreement will take place during the three years 2000, 2001 and 2002. Separation distances are defined by the terms of the individual consents and the SCIMAC guidelines, and are currently 50 m for oil seed rape and maize, and 200 m for registered organic crops. The Government will ask the Scientific Steering Committee to review data from the farm-scale evaluations and provide recommendations/advice by end-October 2002. For winter oil seed rape, for which the third year harvest will be summer 2003, the Government will ask the Scientific Steering Committee to complete analysis and reporting of results in time for Autumn 2003 plantings to take place should the null hypothesis be confirmed.

London Underground (Safety)

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will place in the Library weekly reports on signals passed at danger on the London Underground. [97085]

Mr. Hill [holding answer 2 November 1999]: Safety is, and must remain, at the heart of London Underground Ltd.'s (LUL) operations. LUL continuously monitors safety performance, including signals passed at danger (SPADs) and reports such incidents to HMRI.

The hon. Member will wish to be aware that all LUL trains have a form of Automatic Train Protection (ATP) which has been in operation for many years. Although SPADs do occur on the Underground, trains are brought to a safe halt because of the ATP system.

I will arrange for LUL to place in the Commons Library a monthly report on SPADs on the Underground.

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what estimate he has made of the number of (a) deaths and (b) injuries attributable to accidents involving drivers using mobile telephones. [97573]

Mr. Hill: There is international research which has found that the distraction may impact on safety. We therefore strongly discourage the use of mobile phones while driving. However, on the basis of current UK data it is not possible to estimate the number of deaths and injuries attributable solely to the use of mobile phones while driving.

Buildings Regulations (Access)

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to make Part M of the Building Regulations more accessible to people with a disability. [97368]

Ms Beverley Hughes: The Approved Document for Part M of the Building Regulations is published by The Stationary Office. My Department had already drawn their attention to the need to make this publication accessible to people with disabilities. They are endeavouring to obtain the source material in alternative formats to meet the needs of disabled people.

Driving Tests (Waiting Times)

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what the average waiting time is for (a) a driving test and (b) a driving retest; what the average waiting times were five years ago; and if he will make a statement. [97700]

Mr. Hill: In measuring waiting times for a driving test, the Driving Standards Agency does not differentiate between those who are presenting themselves for their first test or for a further attempt. Driving tests can now be obtained nationally in around 6 weeks. This compares with an annual national average waiting time of 6.6 weeks for the year 1994–95.

Local Transport Plans

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he plans to announce the allocation for provisional local transport plans for 2000–01; and if he will make a statement. [97710]

Mr. Hill [holding answer 8 November 1999]: We are currently assessing the provisional local transport plans submitted in July. The local transport capital settlement will be announced in December.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 2 November 1999, Official Report, column 85, concerning major road schemes, if he will estimate the capital cost of each of the schemes listed and provide a total figure. [97709]

Mr. Hill [holding answer 8 November 1999]: Based on the finance forms contained within the provisional local transport plans, the total gross capital cost of the schemes is £812.4 million.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what were the total amounts of the bids made by local authorities in their provisional local transport plans for the years 2000–01 and 2001–02 for projected local transport capital expenditure on (a) maintenance of principal highways, (b) maintenance, assessment and strengthening of bridges, (c) individual schemes costing more than £5 million and (d) individual schemes and groups of related schemes costing less than £5 million; and if he will list the total cash bid for each authority for each year. [97703]

Mr. Hill [holding answer 8 November 1999]: I refer the hon. Member to my answer of 2 November 1999, Official Report, column 84. The total cash bid for each authority for each year may be derived from the information already in the House of Commons Library.

Smoke Alarms

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what schemes his Department operates to assist pensioners to install smoke alarms in their homes; and if he will make a statement. [97963]

Mr. Meacher: This Department does not currently operate specific programmes for the installation of smoke alarms. However the New Home Energy Efficiency Scheme (HEES) will include the provision of a smoke alarm in the homes of low-income over-60s households where a central heating system is installed. The installations will begin in June 2000 and it is expected that about 55,000 central heating systems will be installed by 2002.

Part I of the Housing Grants, Construction and Regeneration Act 1996 also allows for local authorities to provide grants towards the cost of fire precaution works. Home repair assistance may be available to people who are elderly, disabled, infirm or in receipt of income related benefit for works of up to £2,000.

Since 1992, Building Regulations have required all new dwellings in England and Wales to have a smoke alarm installed. This move, together with the Government's wider publicity and educational efforts, has helped to raise smoke alarm ownership to the current level of 82 per cent. of all households.

First Aid Regulations

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to review the First Aid at Work Regulations with particular regard to the use and administration of medication for sufferers of (a) anaphylaxis, (b) diabetes and (c) other medical conditions. [97805]

Mr. Meacher: We have no plans to review the Health and Safety (First-Aid) Regulations 1981 specifically in respect of the use and administration of medication for sufferers of (a) anaphylaxis, (b) diabetes and (c) other medical conditions.

However, the Health and Safety Executive will shortly be commencing a general review and evaluation of the implementation and effectiveness of the Regulations.

M18

Caroline Flint: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is the daily volume of traffic on the M18; what is the capacity of the motorway; and what is the projected traffic volume for 2000, 2005 and 2010. [98026]

Mr. Hill [holding answer 10 November 1999]: As this is an operational matter for the Highways Agency, I have asked the Chief Executive, Mr. Peter Nutt, to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Peter Nutt to Caroline Flint, dated 11 November 1999:

The Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question. You asked "What is the daily volume of traffic on the M18; what is the capacity of the motorway, and what is the projected traffic volume for 2000, 2005 and 2010".

The attached table shows the Daily Traffic Volumes, the Motorway Capacity and the projected traffic volumes for the years 2000, 2005 and 2010.

I trust the information meets your requirements.

Environment Agency (Staff Mileage)

Mr. Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what car mileage was travelled on official business by staff of the Environment Agency in (a) 1996–97 and (b) 1997–98; and if he will make a statement. [98084]

Mr. Mullin: The information is as follows:

(a) 54.37 million miles

(b) 55.00 million miles.

These figures update those in the Environment Agency's annual Environmental Report published in September 1999. The comparable figure for 1998–99 is 52.58 million.

Driving Licences

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what estimate he has made of the number of people who regularly take a motor vehicle on the public highway without a valid driving licence. [98039]

Mr. Hill [holding answer 10 November 1999]: It is not possible to give a precise estimate on the extent of unlicensed driving. In order to get more comprehensive and reliable information on this subject, the DETR has just let a 2½ year contract to study this area and to examine the implications. A recent report from the Automobile Association estimated that there may be around 800,000 people driving without a valid licence.

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what format will be used for the new photographic driving licence; what information is stored on this licence; what plans he has to introduce further information onto the driving licence; and if he will make a statement. [98358]

Mr. Hill: Photocard driving licences have been issued by the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency since July 1998. The format of the licence is set out in the 2nd EC Directive on driving licences and contains: the driver's photograph, signature, categories of driving entitlement; name, address and date of birth; and the EC flag containing the UK symbol. There are no plans to add any further information to the licence.

Vehicle Documents

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many road vehicles in use in the UK (a) do not have an up-to-date road tax disc, (b) are not registered in the name of the present keeper of the vehicle and have not been so for more than one month and (c) do not have valid insurance. [98038]

Mr. Hill [holding answer 10 November 1999]: The DETR has recently carried out its latest large scale survey of Vehicle Excise Duty (VED) evasion across the UK for all vehicle tax classes, the results of which will be published early next year. The last major survey in 1994 estimated that around 1.5 million vehicles in Great Britain did not have an up to date tax disc.

We are committed to tackling the problem of VED evasion and have introduced a number of measures to end this, including a national scheme to wheel-clamp and impound unlicensed vehicles seen on a public road.

The Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency (DVLA) holds details of the registered keeper of vehicles within its vehicle record database. At the end of June 1999, there were 327,640 cases out of some 28 million where the DVLA did not have the details of the registered keeper of a licensed vehicle. It is not possible to tell the number of cases for which this has been so for more than one month without running a prohibitively expensive scan of the database.

The DETR does not have information on the number of vehicles which do not have valid insurance.

Cables

Mr. Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) how many representations his Department has received from local authorities asking for greater powers to enforce high standards of work when companies are laying cables in residential areas; [98124]

(2) what measures are in place to prevent cable-laying companies causing disruption in residential areas. [98125]

Mr. Hill: The Department has received many letters, from Members of Parliament and others, about cable activities. However, since the last General Election only one representation has been received from a local authority.

In residential areas and elsewhere, cable-laying in the street is subject to the New Roads and Street Works Act 1991. Undertakers must give advance notice of works and co-operate with the local highway authority. Failure to do so can attract penalties. There is a duty to avoid unnecessary delay or obstruction of the street, and the street authority can direct the timing of street works in order to avoid or reduce traffic disruption, and restrict street works activity for a period of twelve months following the completion of highway works.

On 13 October the Government went out to consultation to honour the commitment in last year's Integrated Transport White Paper to consult on options for an incentive system, with penalties, to minimise disruption to road users, and to encourage improved co-ordination of street works. Copies of the consultation document were placed in the Library of the House.

Polegate Bypass

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what is the total amount of compensation paid following the cancellation of the Polegate bypass project; [98068]

(2) when work on the Polegate bypass will begin. [98064]

Mr. Hill: I have asked the Chief Executive of the Highways Agency, Mr. Peter Nutt to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Nutt to Mr. Nigel Waterson, dated 11 November 1999:

The Parliamentary Under Secretary of State, Keith Hill, has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions about the Polegate Bypass.

Tenders for this scheme were invited on 10th November. This should allow us to award the contract next spring, ahead of the previously announced programme.

The overall levels of compensation are close to being finalised with those who submitted tenders for the cancelled Weald and Downland DBFO Project, which included the Polegate Bypass scheme among others. Interim on-account payments totalling £5m (including VAT) have been made. The Polegate Bypass scheme is in the Government's Targeted Plan of Improvements.

Driving (Drugs)

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what discussion he has held with the Anti-drugs Co-ordinator on the dangers of taking (a) illicit and (b) prescription drugs and driving. [98117]

Mr. Hill: Ministers and officials in the Department meet their opposite numbers in other Government Departments, including the UK Anti-Drugs Co-ordination Unit, to discuss a range of topics. Those include the policy and research work to deal with those who drive whilst impaired through drugs. My noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary who is responsible for road safety matters will be meeting the Co-ordinator in December.

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment she has made of the report, "Ecstasy Use in Northern Ireland: a Qualitative Study", with particular reference to its conclusions on drugs and driving. [98118]

Mr. Hill: The Department has noted the conclusions of the Report. We have our own research programme into the effects of drugs on driving and are considering further research. We will also consider how best to publicise the risks of driving whilst under the influence of drugs, both medicinal and illegal.

Departmental Vehicles

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is the total number of vehicles used by his Department and its agencies fuelled by (a) petrol, (b) diesel and (c) liquid petroleum gas; and what plans he has to increase the rate of conversion of those vehicles to liquid petroleum gas. [98207]

Ms Beverley Hughes: My Department does not keep a central record of vehicles used and their fuel type. Property managers are asked to take account of environmental performance when hiring or buying vehicles.

The Department has prepared guidance for Government Departments on choosing greener vehicles, which is now available on the Department's website, along with other advice, including DETR's guide to New Car Fuel Consumption and Emission figures.

Departmental Waste

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to set targets for the recycling of waste (a) paper, (b) cardboard, (c) glass, (d) metal, (e) plastic and (f) other products created by his Department and its agencies; and if he will make a statement. [98223]

Ms Beverley Hughes: My Department's approach to waste management is based on the three "R"s: with "Recovery" (i.e. recycling, composting and energy recovery) following "Reduce" and "Re-use" as the preferred options for reducing waste sent to landfill. This should help us to achieve the Green Ministers' target for Government Departments of recovering a minimum of 40 per cent. of total office waste, with at least 25 per cent. of that recovery coming from recycling or composting, in 2000–01; and our own corporate target which is to increase the amount recovered and recycled by 10 per cent. each year to achieve 70 per cent. recovery or recycling in 2003–04. The Department has not set individual targets for paper, cardboard, glass, metal, plastic and other materials although work is underway on setting a target for paper.

Cytotoxic Drugs

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to the letter of 3 November from the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Lord Whitty, to the hon. Member for Linlithgow, reference P/W/28454/99, concerning cytotoxic drugs, when he expects the report on NHS ward staff handling such drugs to be (a) completed and (b) published. [98146]

Mr. Meacher: The research referred to, entitled "Occupational Exposure of Health Workers to Cytotoxic Drugs: A Ward-Based Study", has been completed. A draft of the report is currently being considered within the Health and Safety Executive (HSE).

The final report should be submitted to Health and Safety Commission's Health Services Advisory Committee before the end of the year. I will ensure that a copy is then placed in the Library of the House. HSE is also discussing with the co-author how the report should best be published.

Duneland Habitats

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to letter AM/15632/99 of 15 June from his Department to the hon.

Member for Linlithgow, what was the result of the September meeting of the member states of the Atlantic Biogeographical Region on sand dunes; and what action has been taken to protect duneland habitats. [98280]

Mr. Mullin: The UK's series of 340 candidate Special Areas of Conservation (SACs) was considered with those of seven other member states at a scientific seminar in Kilkee on 6–8 September 1999. The meeting indicated that a number of habitat features, including four sand dune types, were insufficiently represented in the UK and other member state's SAC series. Duneland habitats are already afforded protection through their status as designated nationally or internationally important sites (SSSIs, candidate SACs, Ramsar sites and Special Protection Areas etc.). Furthermore, as part of the UK Biodiversity Action Plan, a priority habitat action plan for coastal sand dunes was published on 25 October.

Sensitive Species

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to the letter of 3 November from the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State my hon. Friend the Member for Sunderland, South (Mr. Mullin) to the hon. Member for Linlithgow, reference CM/20311/99, if he will make a statement on progress at the Conference of the Parties at the Bonn Convention in respect of sensitive species, with particular reference to dolphins, turtles and albatross. [98145]

Mr. Mullin: The proceedings of the sixth Conference of the Parties to the Bonn Convention began on Wednesday and will continue until Tuesday of next week. It is too early at present to say how these discussions are going.

Eurocontrol

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if it is the Government's policy to support the European Union's application to joint Eurocontrol; and if he will make a statement. [98153]

Mr. Mullin: The Government support Community membership of Eurocontrol because it is the most appropriate way for the Community to exercise its competence and express its views with regard to air traffic management in Europe.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the impact of a formal relationship between the European Union and Eurocontrol on sovereignty over UK air space. [98155]

Mr. Mullin: Negotiations are under way for Community membership of Eurocontrol. The terms of the Accession Protocol have not yet been agreed, but there will be no direct impact on UK's sovereignty over its airspace.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans the Government have to give decisions of Eurocontrol direct applicability and direct effect in the United Kingdom. [98154]

Mr. Mullin: Eurocontrol is currently undertaking a legal assessment of the feasibility of its decisions being directly applicable within member states. The UK is participating in this work and the Government will consider carefully the results of this study.

M4 Bus Lane

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what plans his Department has to extend the use of the M4 bus lane to include high-occupancy vehicles; and what measures he plans to implement to ensure compliance with this rule; [98184]

(2) how many (a) buses, (b) taxis and (c) bus services use the M4 bus lane; and what were the equivalent figures for the same stretch of road prior to the bus lanes existence; [98185]

(3) what assessment he has made of the effect of the M4 bus lane on traffic flow and journey times on the M4 (a) between the M25 intersection and the start of the bus lane and (b) before the M25 intersection at (i) rush hour and (ii) off-peak periods; and if he will publish the recent report submitted by the Road Transport Laboratory; [98182]

(4) what plans he has to introduce variable speed limits on the M4 between the M25 intersection and the Chiswick terminus; [98183]

(5) what estimates he has made of (a) the number of passengers carried in the M4 bus lane and (b) the number of people who have changed their journey routes to avoid the M4 since the bus lane was established. [98186]

Mr. Hill: As this is an operational matter for the Highways Agency, I have asked the Chief Executive, Mr. Peter Nutt, to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Nutt to Mr. Bernard Jenkin, dated 11 November 1999:

The Parliamentary Under Secretary of State, Keith Hill, has asked me to answer your recent Parliamentary Questions about the M4 Bus Lane and the recent report compiled by the Road Transport Laboratory. I have been asked to reply as this is an operational matter for the Highways Agency.

Independent monitoring of the M4 Bus Lane pilot scheme by the Transport Research Laboratory is provided in regular detailed reports. I am arranging for a copy of the report on the first three months of operation to be placed in the Library of the House and I enclose a copy for your personal use. In addition, a summary of the findings during this initial period has been published in a leaflet that has been distributed widely. A copy of this leaflet has been placed in the Library of the House.

The full report shows the effect on the journey time between junction 4 and the start of the elevated section to be:

Minutes

Time of day (weekday)	Average time saved per vehicle
	Buses and taxis	Other vehicles
06.30–09.30	4.5	2.6
09.30–17.30	−0.8	−0.7
17.30–20.30	3.2	1.6
20.30–06.30	−1.5	−1.3

The monitoring during months four and five show similar results. Information is not available for the length of the M4 to the west of junction 4.

Use of the bus lane varies from day to day and week to week. The highest measured flows were in the week commencing 18 October when Paddington Station was closed and averaged approximately 5000 vehicles per day. Measured peak hour flows were 60 buses and coaches, 10 minibuses and 370 taxis. The previous highest flow during a week was 4,300 vehicles per day. During the week commencing 25 October (the half term week for many schools) the average daily flow was approximately 4,000 vehicles, of which 500 were buses or coaches, 90 were minibuses and 3,400 were taxis. In this week the typical peak hour flow included 35 buses or coaches, 8 minibuses and 220 taxis.

Comprehensive traffic count data by vehicle type is not available for the period prior to the bus lane. Estimates based on sample counts before the bus lane was installed indicate hourly flows at peak times of up to 50 buses, coaches and minibuses and up to 350 taxis.

Surveys carried out by the Transport Research Laboratory show that the average occupancy of buses and coaches to be 15, taxis to be 2.5 and other vehicles to be 1.2, all including the driver.

The surveys have found no evidence that drivers have changed their journey routes to avoid the M4 since the bus lane was opened. The surveys have revealed that the observed maximum traffic flows on the elevated section of the M4 has increased by 10 per cent. since the opening of the Bus Lane.

We are continuing to evaluate this pilot project but there are no plans at present to introduce variable speed limits or allow high-occupancy vehicles to use the bus lane.

Drivers' Blood Alcohol Level

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if it is the Government's policy to lower the permitted blood alcohol level for driving; and if he will make a statement. [98149]

Mr. Hill: We have consulted on a package of measures to combat drinking and driving, including the possibility of lowering the permitted blood alcohol level to 50mg per 100ml. An announcement will be made as part of the forthcoming publication of our road safety strategy.

Vehicle Inspectorate

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what provision has been made to protect against loss to public funds as a result of (a) failure and (b) overrun of (i) time and (ii) cost for the new computer system for the Vehicle Inspectorate; [98244]

(2) if the Government will require guarantees that the new computer system for the Vehicle Inspectorate will work before awarding a contract. [98243]

Mr. Prescott: The Vehicle Inspectorate is confident from the negotiations which have taken place over the last 18 months that the contract for the computerised MOT service is robust and deliverable. The contract contains a number of safeguards building on the experience gained from other major projects. The project was awarded "significant" status in March 1998 by HM Treasury and there has been input throughout the procurement process from the Treasury Private Finance Initiative Taskforce. An independent review of the contract will be undertaken during the preferred bidding stage to provide a further level of assurance. The Vehicle Inspectorate will ensure that, should the service be unavailable for any reason on the expected service commencement date, MOT testing will be able to continue.

M4 Accident

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what assessment he has made of the causes of the fatal accident and fire on the M4 in Berkshire on 1 November; [98347]

(2) what estimate he has made of the cost to (a) public funds, (b) private individuals and (c) the private sector arising from delays resulting from the accident which closed the M4 in Berkshire on 1 November. [98348]

Mr. Hill: We would not like to make an assessment prejudging the Coroners verdict and this would, in any case, be a matter for the police.

The information needed to make a reasonable estimate of the costs arising from the accident is not available.

HGVs (Safety)

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to amend the law to improve the safety of supplementary fuel tanks on heavy goods vehicles; and if he will make a statement. [98371]

Mr. Hill: All fuel tanks, including supplementary ones, fitted to motor vehicles must comply with the requirements of the Road Vehicles (Construction & Use) Regulations 1986. These specify that fuel tanks must be constructed and maintained so as to be reasonably secure from damage and so that the leakage of liquid or vapour is adequately prevented. There are currently no plans to amend these regulations but any future changes would be best made through amendments to the European Directive on fuel tanks.

Private Hire Vehicles

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to allow the Countryside Agency to make grants from the Rural Transport Development Fund to enable private hire vehicles to comply with the legislation relating to disability discrimination; and if he will make a statement. [98363]

Mr. Hill: Private hire vehicles are not required to comply with any of the relevant provisions of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995. The Rural Transport Development Fund makes grants in respect of a wide range of transport projects including contributions towards the cost of adaptation of vehicles or purchase of accessible vehicles in rural areas. Applications are considered on their merits.

Rail Subsidies

Mr. Stevenson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will estimate the proportion which Government subsidies to (a) train operating companies and (b) Railtrack in (i) 1996, (ii) 1997, (iii) 1998 and (iv) the current year formed or will form of those companies' profits. [98331]

Mr. Hill: Government subsidies are paid, not to Railtrack, but to train operating companies (TOCs) in the form of Support for Passenger Rail Services (SPRS) paid by the Franchising Director and grants paid by Passenger Transport Executives (PTEs). Those subsidies are not hypothecated to cover particular types of expenditure, so they cannot be directly identified as the source of payments made by TOCs to Railtrack.

The table provides details, for 1996–97, 1997–98, 1998–99 and 1999–2000, of SPRS and PTE payments to TOCs, of access charges paid by TOCs to Railtrack, and of Railtrack's profits. Details of TOC profits for those years are not readily available.

National Air Traffic Services

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many respondents to his consultation paper, "A Public-Private Partnership for National Air Traffic Services Ltd.", requested confidentiality for their comments; and what were the names of those individuals or organisations whose response to the document was in confidence. [98170]

Mr. Prescott: In accordance with Exemption 14 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information, I am unable to provide the names of those persons and organisations who requested confidentiality, as these details were given and received in confidence.

Rat Infestations

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to include questions in the 2001 English House Condition Survey on rat infestations associated with dwellings; and who will be responsible for processing and analysing the data. [98380]

Mr. Mullin: As with the 1996 survey, the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food have requested that a module of questions on rat and mice infestation is included in the 2001 EHCS. Assuming the module is included, this Department will manage the processing of the module as part of the data processing of the whole data set and MAFF will then be responsible for analysing the rodent data.

Local Government Funding

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he or any of his Ministers last met representatives of Hammersmith and Fulham borough council to discuss central Government funding and the standard spending assessment for that council; and who was present at that meeting. [98289]

Ms Beverley Hughes: There have been no recent meetings arranged to discuss the funding of Hammersmith and Fulham borough council involving Ministers and representatives from that authority.

Cyclists

Mr. Flight: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps he is taking to raise awareness amongst cyclists of the need to obey the Highway Code; and if he will make a statement. [98344]

Mr. Hill: The Department and local authorities actively work to ensure that cyclists are aware of the need to obey the Highway Code.

The Code itself was re-issued in February. It applies equally to all road users. For the first time, it brings together the rules applying to vulnerable road users, including cyclists, in specific sections at the beginning of the Code. This made the Code easier to read and assimilate.

The Driving Standards Agency promotes the Highway Code and seeks opportunities for specific road users to be targeted. The Agency has recently published the "Road Code", which is aimed at young road-users and builds on the Highway Code. Its message includes a section on cycling. The Department is also involved in other initiatives which support the principles of the Code. For example, on 22 October we issued a "Cycle Smart" comic and poster using Disney's "Recess" gang characters to promote the rules of cycling.

Local Authority Road Safety Officers make use of the cycle training for both children and adults to stress the need for cyclists to obey the Highway Code. About a third of children receive this training and this ensures that they grow up to be careful and considerate road users of all modes of transport. Every child who undertakes cycle training receives a copy of the "Highway Code for Young Road Users".

Ellington Colliery

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what measures of (a) regional and (b) regeneration assistance he proposes to deal with the anticipated job losses from the closure of Ellington Colliery, Northumberland. [98387]

Ms Armstrong: I will write to the right hon. Member.

Radon

Mr. Tony Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what guidance there is on the protection of new dwellings from radon; and if he will make a statement. [98390]

Ms Beverley Hughes: BRE have today published a revised version of BR 211 "Radon: Guidance on Protective Measures for New Dwellings", which updates previously published guidance, details measures that must be incorporated in new buildings and defines the geographical areas where radon protection is necessary. The Approved Document to Part C of the Building Regulations 1991 refers to the BRE document as a source of advice on where radon protection may be needed and what new measures are appropriate.

In addition to Cornwall and Devon and parts of Somerset, Northamptonshire and Derbyshire—which were covered in previous guidance—the new guidance identifies new areas where radon protection will be needed. These are parts of the Yorkshire Dales; parts of Wales and the Welsh Border; South Oxfordshire; parts of the Midlands adjacent to the currently delineated areas in Derbyshire; Northamptonshire; parts of Gloucestershire, the Lake District and Northumberland. There are also a few scattered areas in south-east England where these measures need to be applied.

As well as the maps based on NRPB data, BR 211 contains a second set of maps based on the assessment of geological radon potential which has been prepared by the British Geological Survey. These maps show grid squares that are underlain, completely or in part, by geological units that potentially exceed the action level for either basic or full protection. The guidance explains how the two sets of maps should be used to determine the level of protection needed.

Copies of BR 211 have been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Taxi Fares (Millennium)

Mr. Efford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he has reached a decision on what fares London taxi drivers can charge over the Millennium celebrations. [98402]

Mr. Hill: I intend to take forward a statutory instrument so that from 8.00 pm on 31 December 1999 until 6.00 am on 1 January 2000 London taxi fares, including any extra charges to the standard tariff, should be double the total amount shown on the meter, up to a total metered fare of £25. For total metered fares of over £25, there should be added a flat rate supplement of £25 to the total metered fare. The normal supplement of £3 for New Year's Eve will not apply. Details of all these arrangements must be displayed in the vehicle.

In reaching this decision I have taken account of representations from the London taxi trade, and the interests of the travelling public, both in having taxis available to them, and in having fares which are not unreasonable on this unique occasion. I believe these rates represent a sensible balance between making it worthwhile for drivers to work that night and protecting consumers from exorbitant charges.

Aviation Policy

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he intends to publish (a) the consultation paper and (b) the White Paper on aviation policy. [98408]

Mr. Hill: I will write to the hon. Member.

National Forest Company

Mr. David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he will report on the National Forest Company's progress in creating the National Forest in the East Midlands. [98411]

Mr. Mullin: I have arranged for copies of the National Forest Company's Annual Report and its Accounts for 1998–99 to be placed in the House Libraries.

Maritime Traffic

Mr. Prosser: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) how many incidents there were involving breaches of the Channel traffic separation scheme and collision prevention regulations in each year from 1988 to the present; and what were the names and flags of the ships involved; [98415]

(2) how many prosecutions have been brought in respect of infringements of the Channel traffic separation scheme or collision prevention regulations in each year from 1988 to the present; and what were the names and flags of the ships involved; [98416]

(3) how many collisions there were in the Channel in each year from 1988 to the present; and what were the names and flags of the ships involved; [98417]

(4) what percentage of foreign-flagged ships visiting the UK were inspected in UK ports under port state control arrangements in each year from 1988 to the present; what was the ratio of inspections to detentions in each of these years; and what was the percentage of inspected ships found with deficiencies in each of these years. [98418]

Mr. Hill: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Pollution Charges

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) on what dates integrated pollution prevention and control charges will come into effect in each of the other EU member states; [98431]

(2) what assessment he has made of the level of integrated pollution prevention and control charges levied in other EU member states. [98432]

Mr. Hill: I will write to the hon. Member.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Millennium Compliance

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the President of the Council what means she has used to target small shopkeepers from the Asian community to ensure they are Year 2000 compliant. [97278]

Ms Hewitt: I have been asked to reply.

All small companies, in whatever sector or community, have been a target for Action 2000's "Act now!" Campaign, which has included a multimedia campaign offering an Action Pack of Helpsheets obtainable by contacting a free Action Line and website. Poster campaigns in July of 1998 and through 1999 were directed at all business communities. A "Last Chance Guide" was mailed to all UK businesses with 1–249 staff in September 1999 and a London regional campaign provided opportunities for Asian businesses to exchange experiences with others.

Specific initiatives which focused more directly on the Asian community have included the London business channel review in July 1998 which established contact with Asian Business Initiative, Asian Business Network and the Brick Lane Business Association. Paid advertising has been placed in Asian media and, since 1998, an on-going dialogue has been established with an Asian publishing group offering interviews and free articles by the Action 2000 Press Office about the need to achieve Year 2000 compliancy.

Brick is not being used on the project.

Lighting—there are various types of light fittings which form part of a much larger package for the provision of design and installation of electrical services within the building.

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Chairman of the Accommodation and Works Committee what is the estimated cost per square metre of office space for Portcullis House. [96724]

Sir Sydney Chapman [holding answer 3 November 1999]: As an extension to the facilities provided in the Palace of Westminster, Portcullis House provides much more than office space. Of the six main floors, four are to be used for offices with the actual office space taking up less than a third of the total floor area. Based on the current forecast, the estimated capital cost of the building, including the office space, is £6,200 per square metre (excluding VAT).

Mrs. Beckett: I shall write to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

Mr. Fisher: To ask the President of the Council if she will make a statement about the implementation of paragraph (5) of the new clause in Lords Amendment No. 1 to the House of Lords Bill; and if she will specify the standing order referred to in that clause. [98423]

Mrs. Beckett: I shall write to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

(2) if he will make a statement on his contribution to the Bilderberg Conference at Turnberry. [94137]

Mr. Hoon: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Oral Statements

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list (a) the reports published by his Department and its associated bodies, (b) the reports received from bodies set up by his Department, (c) the decisions his Department has taken and (d) events in the UK and elsewhere, since 27 July, which satisfied the criteria he uses for deciding whether to apply to make oral statements to the House when the House is sitting. [93973]

Mr. Spellar: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

School of Electrical and Mechanical Engineers

Maria Eagle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the quality of the training provided to recruits from the Royal Electrical and Mechanical Engineers at the School of Electrical and Mechanical Engineers, Borden; and if he will make a statement. [95673]

Mr. Spellar: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Maria Eagle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence in respect of training of recruits at the School of Electrical and Mechanical Engineers, Borden (a) how many recruits are waiting for their courses to start and (b) how many have had their training suspended prior to completion and at what cost to his Department. [95674]

Mr. Spellar: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Spellar: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Performance Targets

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list all performance targets set for his Department, agencies and non-departmental public bodies since May 1997, other than those listed in Public Service Agreements 1999–2002 [Cm 4181], stating in each case (a) the target to be reached and (b) the date by which it was to be reached. [94981]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 1 November 1999]: My Department has set out the key performance targets on which it will be judged in its Public Service Agreement (PSA), and the measures of success it will use in the Output and Performance Analyses (OPA) published in March this year. These high-level targets are set out in an internal classified Departmental Plan and are cascaded through the Department down a hierarchy of subordinate Plans for each Service and for each subordinate budgetary unit; these lower level plans include additional and more detailed targets to supplement and amplify PSA targets. Listing these operational targets would be inappropriate and disproportionate in terms of resources.

A list of targets and target dates for Agencies up to March 1999 can be found in the Next Steps Report. Since March this year, key targets for individual Defence Agencies for 1999–2000 have been announced to Parliament. I shall write to the hon. Member with the details.

Performance targets and objectives have been set, or are in the process of being set, for those executive Non-Departmental Public Bodies for which my Department is responsible. Where targets have already been agreed, they are published in the respective Body's plans.

Mr. Spellar: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Kilfoyle: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

UK's Nuclear Forces

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has received calling for the United Kingdom's nuclear forces no longer to be in a state of continuous alert; and if he will make a statement. [97129]

Mr. Hoon: We have received a number of representations from organisations and members of the public about our nuclear deterrent, including its alert status. The Strategic Defence Review (SDR) announced that submarines on patrol are at a reduced day-to-day alert state reflecting improved strategic conditions. We maintain only one submarine on patrol at a time, its missiles are not targeted and are at several days "notice to fire". We also considered other more radical de-alerting measures in the SDR, such as taking submarines off deterrent patrol and removing warheads from their missiles and storing them separately ashore. We concluded that neither, in current circumstances, is compatible with maintaining a credible minimum deterrent with a submarine-based nuclear system.

Armed Forces (Pay)

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to introduce a common pay scale for the armed forces. [97354]

Mr. Spellar: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Landing Platform Docks

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the current figure is for slippage in respect of the landing platform docks; what the expected date of delivery is for each vessel, taking into account present slippage; what the expected date of delivery is, taking into account recovery of slippage; and if he will make a statement. [97753]

Mr. Kilfoyle: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Nancekuke Defence Establishment

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the impact of work carried out at his Department's establishment at Nancekuke in Cornwall on the health of the local population. [97645]

Mr. Kilfoyle: The establishment at Nancekuke, now RAF Portreath, was known as the Process and Research Division of the Chemical Experimental Establishment, Porton Down, from 1951 until it was closed in 1980 and the site returned to the RAF.

The Chemical and Biological Defence Sector of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency is now aware of any assessment of the health of the local population. However, a report in 1970 by the Registrar General showed that, up to 1969, the mortality of persons who had been employed at Nancekuke was rather less than the average for England and Wales as a whole, possibly due to regional differences in climate and social conditions.

BVRAAM

Mr. Page: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he has received binding assurances that all relevant technologies and source codes would be transferred to the United Kingdom if it acquired a United States BVRAAM. [97711]

Mr. Hoon: Assurances concerning the necessary transfer of relevant technologies and source code are the subject of discussions with Raytheon Systems Limited and the United States Department of Defense. Should the UK choose a US solution to its BVRAAM competition, the conclusion of these discussions would be incorporated in a contract with Raytheon and in a Memorandum of Understanding with the United States Department of Defense.

Iraq

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the approximate weight of ordnance dropped on Iraq by allied planes in 1999; and if he will make a statement. [97634]

Mr. Hoon: I will write to the right hon. and learned Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Porton Down

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment at Porton Down has ever been a secret germ warfare base. [97610]

Mr. Kilfoyle: An experimental establishment was first set up at Porton Down in 1916 in direct response to the use of chemical warfare in World War I against the allied forces. At that time, the remit was for both defensive and retaliatory capabilities. Since the late 1950s, the work has been entirely concerned with the defence of the UK and our Armed Forces against the threat posed by both chemical and biological warfare agents.

Though the past 83 years have seen many organisation changes at the site, Porton Down remains home to the UK's centre of expertise in chemical and biological defence matters and is now the Chemical Biological Defence Sector (CBD) of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency (DERA).

Whilst there have been, and still are, aspects of the work which are necessarily classified in the interests of national security, CBD and its predecessor establishments have always sought to encourage their scientists to publish the results of their work in open literature and to inform interested parties, including the media, about their work through activities such as open days, visits and conferences.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has received opposing the work of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency's Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment at Porton

Down from (a) members of the public, (b) non-Governmental organisations, (c) charities and pressure groups and (d) hon. Members since May 1997; if he will make it his policy to close the establishment; and when he will visit CBD Porton Down to meet the scientific and industrial staff. [97642]

Mr. Kilfoyle: Since May 1997, there have been no representations opposing overall the work of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency's (DERA) Chemical and Biological Defence Sector at Porton Down (CBD). Letters from members of the public, Members of Parliament and other organisations have focused only on specific programmes and on some areas of work at CBD's predecessor establishments.

As made clear by the previous Secretary of State in the Ministry of Defence paper 'Defending Against the Threat from Biological and Chemical Weapons' announced on 21 July 1999, Official Report, columns 534–35, CBD Porton Down will continue to play a vital part in the Government's response to the proliferation of these weapons.

My noble Friend the Minister of State for Defence Procurement hopes to be able to visit CBD in the near future, as part of a programme of visits to DERA sites.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the occasions on which (a) Ministers, (b) officials and (c) agency staff have (i) corresponded with, (ii) met and (iii) spoken to Mr. Rob Evans about the chemical and biological defence establishment at Porton Down. [97644]

Mr. Spellar: Since May 1997, staff at the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency have responded to some 15 written requests from Mr. Rob Evans for lists of titles, copies of technical papers and other information about work at the Chemical and Biological Defence Sector (CBD) of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency (DERA) or its predecessor establishments.

Mr. Evans has spoken to DERA Press Office staff on several occasions during 1998 and once this year to date. I am advised that he may have attended a DERA exhibition in Dorset in September 1997 and may have visited the Porton site as part of a group visit.

Mr. Evans has also written on a number of occasions to officials in other branches of the MOD about matters that are linked to CBD Porton Down.

I am not aware of any direct contact between Mr. Evans and MOD Ministers in the period of this Government.

Trigat Missiles

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what safeguards he has put in place to ensure that the medium range Trigat missiles will be completed before the Milan 1 ATGW systems expire. [97876]

Mr. Kilfoyle: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Bright Star 99

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many UK troops took part in the Bright Star 99 exercise; at what cost; and if he will make a statement. [97879]

Mr. Spellar: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Royal Hospital Haslar

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many orthopaedic surgeons are in post at Royal Hospital Haslar; what is the waiting time for an appointment for (a) a local civilian and (b) a serving member of HM forces; and how many (i) service men and (ii) civilians are on (1) the waiting list and (2) the pending list. [97853]

Mr. Spellar: Royal Hospital Haslar has six orthopaedic surgeons in post, of whom four are service men and two are civilian locums.

There is not a separate waiting list for civilian patients and for patients of HM forces. Equally, both may be seen by service or NHS consultants. Waiting times for first routine orthopaedic outpatient appointments are five weeks for the Fracture Clinic and seven to ten months for the General Clinic. The number of service personnel on the waiting list for their initial outpatient attendance is 271. The number on the pending list is 351. The number of civilians on the waiting list for their initial outpatient attendance is 143. The number on the pending list is 287. A system is in place, based on operational readiness state, that enables service personnel to receive their first outpatient appointment more quickly.

Warminster Training Centre

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many (a) servicemen and women and (b) civilians are (i) resident or (ii) visiting for work at the Warminster Training Centre; and how many physicians and other trained medical staff provide (1) 24-hour cover and (2) working day cover; [97856]

(2) how many (a) physiotherapists and (b) osteopaths are (i) resident at or (ii) visitors to the Warminster Training Centre; and if he will make a statement about medical support at Warminster Training Centre. [97852]

Mr. Spellar: 1,644 Servicemen and women and 944 civilians are employed at the Warminster Training Centre, none of whom is resident within the perimeter. In addition, up to 1,000 servicemen and women may be visiting, or on course at, the Training Centre at any time, some of whom may be accommodated in any of the two Officers' Messes, the Warrant Officers' Mess, the Sergeants' Mess or the Corporals' Mess.

Medical support to Warminster Training Centre consists of a Primary Care Practice, which is a designated Army Training Practice and provides the following service:

Working day and 24 hour medical cover by:—

a Senior Medical Officer (Lt Col) and a Regimental Medical Officer (Captain);

two civilian locums who between them provide nine nights per month cover and three sessions (1.5 days) in total each week.

A Community Psychiatric Nurse who visits for two sessions (one day) in total each week;

a non-residential physiotherapist contracted for 11 hours each week who, with effect from 29 November, will be replaced by a full time military physiotherapist;

six Regimental Medical Assistants and three Combat Medical Technicians of the 1st Battalion The Devon and Dorset Regiment; and a full time Health Visitor from Wiltshire Health Authority.

There are no osteopaths employed at, or visiting, the Centre.

In addition, a Dental Centre adjoins the Practice and consists of one civilian Practitioner, two civilian auxiliaries and one military Dental Nurse. All provide working day and 24 hour cover. Secondary medical care is provided by the Defence Secondary Care Agency and by the National Health Service Hospitals at Bath, Salisbury and Warminster.

Departmental Research

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the titles of research studies, audits and surveys (a) being undertaken and (b) commissioned by his Department for completion within (i) 1999 and (ii) 2000, indicating in each case when the results are due to be published. [98015]

Mr. Kilfoyle: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

IT Projects

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the information technology projects being undertaken by his Department and agencies responsible to his Department including the (a) start date, (b) planned completion date, (c) expected completion date, (d) planned cost and (e) estimated cost; and if he will make a statement. [98014]

Mr. Spellar: This information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Reports

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the titles of official departmental reports being prepared for publication in (a) 1999 and (b) 2000, indicating in each case the planned date for publication. [98016]

Mr. Spellar: Under current plans, the following are the official departmental reports being prepared by the Ministry of Defence for publication in 1999 and 2000, and their planned dates for publication:

The Defence White Paper 1999 (December 1999)

Ministry of Defence Performance Report 1998–99 (December 1999)

The Government's Expenditure Plans 2000–01 to 2001–02: Ministry of Defence (spring 2000)

The Defence White Paper 2000 (during 2000)

The Annual Report of Defence Activity 1999–2000 (July 2000)

Ministry of Defence Performance Report 1999–2000 (autumn 2000)

Ministry of Defence Departmental Investment Strategy 2001–02 to 2003–04 (autumn 2000).

RAF Locking

Mr. Cotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has made of the efficiency savings made as a result of the closure of RAF Locking and the transfer of personnel to RAF Cosford. [98123]

Mr. Spellar: Efficiencies arising from the transfer of RAF training activities from RAF Locking to RAF Cosford are in the region of £6 million annually. These are derived largely from reduced manpower and operating costs.

Mr. Cotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) civilian and (b) military personnel were made redundant following the closure of RAF Locking. [98122]

Mr. Spellar: There have been 35 civilian redundancies as a result of the transfer of RAF training activities from RAF Locking to RAF Cosford. Alternative employment is being sought for a further four civilians. No military staff redundancies are involved.

Cadets

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list those schools in the United Kingdom which run (a) Army, (b) Royal Navy and (c) Royal Air Force cadet training centres, indicating which are comprehensive schools. [98189]

Mr. Spellar: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Colchester Garrison

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions his Department held with English Heritage in respect of proposed developments and disposals of buildings at Colchester Garrison. [98161]

Mr. Spellar: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Departmental Waste

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to set targets for the recycling of waste (a) paper, (b) cardboard, (c) glass, (d) metal, (e) plastic and (f) other products created by his Department and its agencies; and if he will make a statement. [98221]

Mr. Kilfoyle: MOD is implementing a corporate Environmental Management System (EMS) based on ISO 14001 principles which will develop policies and set objectives to reduce the environmental impact of the activities of the Department and its agencies. An integral part of the EMS will be a waste management system to measure baselines for waste streams to enable recycling targets to be set. The framework of the corporate EMS will be produced by March 2000, and the EMS will be implemented by March 2001. Current MOD guidance on recycling is detailed in JSP 418, a copy of which is available in the House of Commons Library.

North Oxfordshire Consortium

Mr. Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when Cherwell District Council will receive a reply to the letter sent to the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State earlier this year concerning the joint venture agreement between his Department and the North Oxfordshire Consortium. [98044]

Mr. Kilfoyle: I have replied today.

Departmental Vehicles

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the total number of vehicles used by his Department and its agencies fuelled by (a) petrol, (b) diesel and (c) liquid petroleum gas; and what plans he has to increase the rate of conversion of those vehicles to liquid petroleum gas. [98209]

Mr. Kilfoyle: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Military Emergencies

Mr. Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what meetings he has had with health authority managers regarding the use of NHS personnel in a military emergency; and if he will make a statement. [98316]

Mr. Spellar: I recently met with my noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Health, Lord Hunt, and the Director of the NHS Executive South East Region. Our discussions covered a range of issues of common interest. Officials in my Department and at the Department of Health are working closely together on the implications for the NHS of deploying substantial numbers of medical Reservists on military operations and possible requirements for the NHS to treat significant numbers of casualties returned to the UK in the event of a major overseas conflict. Current Defence planning does not include the call up of civilians other than members of the Volunteer Reserves Forces or former Regular personnel with a Reserve liability.

Territorial Army

Mr. Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the adequacy of the medical services of the Territorial Army. [98314]

Mr. Spellar: The Territorial Army (TA) medical services provide excellent medical care. The Strategic Defence Review (SDR) placed increased importance on the use of medical reserves and recommended an additional 2,000 personnel for the TA medical services. Currently, they have a manning shortfall of some 40 per cent. against the post-SDR requirement. Urgent measures are being taken to address this shortfall, including a major recruiting campaign which was launched on 23 September 1999.

Mr. Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to reorganise the career structure of the Territorial Army Medical Service. [98315]

Mr. Spellar: We have no plans to reorganize the career structure of the Army Medical Services Territorial Army (AMS TA) although its expansion, as a result of the Strategic Defence Review, will provide increased career opportunities. The Terms and Conditions of Service of the AMS TA are constantly monitored with a view to making appropriate and reasonable changes in support of recruitment and retention.

Remembrance Day

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the involvement of the Gurkhas in the Remembrance Day commemorations. [98328]

Mr. Spellar: As in every year since 1920, the Armed Forces will take part in the annual cenotaph ceremony on Remembrance Day. Each Service will be represented by their Chiefs of Staff and troops currently on ceremonial duties. This year the Army presence will include one officer and two soldiers from the Gurkhas currently serving in this country.

Kosovo

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Serbs, Roma, Bosniaks and other minorities have been abducted in Kosovo since the K-FOR occupation; and how many have been rescued. [96102]

Mr. Vaz: I have been asked to reply.

I will write to my hon. Friend shortly.

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) churches and (b) other historic buildings have been destroyed since the K-FOR occupation of Kosovo. [96103]

Mr. Vaz: I have been asked to reply.

We do not have confirmed figures of damage or destruction of churches and other historical buildings. Unconfirmed reports suggest that up to 40 may have been destroyed.

K-FOR now, if possible, guard patrimonial sites around the clock. 285 soldiers are on permanent guard at 35 Serbian churches or patrimonial sites. We recognise the importance of these sites to the Serb community and hope that the steps taken by K-FOR, and the improving deployment of an international police service, will stop further damage.

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many murders have been committed against each of the minorities in Kosovo since the K-FOR occupation; [96100]

(2) how many Serbs, Roma, Bosniaks and other minorities have left Kosovo since the K-FOR occupation, [96099]

Mr. Vaz: I will write to my hon. Friend shortly.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his oral answer of 8 November 1999, Official Report, column 679, concerning night patrols by the Irish Guards in Kosovo, when the hon. Member for Linlithgow will receive the letter promised. [98137]

Mr. Hoon: Following the announcement by my predecessor on 19 July 1999, Official Report, column 783, the Irish Guards battle group withdrew from Kosovo in October. However, while they were in Kosovo, the Irish Guards were not the only unit to undertake night patrols. Night patrolling is a routine operation for KFOR troops.

Procurement

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 8 November 1999, Official Report, column 681, on heavy lift aircraft, if he has re-opened the competition for interim strategic lift capability which was terminated by the Minister for Defence Procurement on 4 August. [98330]

Mr. Kilfoyle: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Bowman Project

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to complete his review of the in-service date of the Bowman project. [98046]

Mr. Kilfoyle: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Strategic Airlift Programme

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish in the Official Report the text of the letter from the Chief of Defence Procurement of 23 August to the hon. Member for Ruislip-Northwood about the short-term strategic airlift programme. [98389]

Mr. Kilfoyle: The text of the letter follows. In addition, the hon. Member may wish to refer to the answer given on 8 November 1999, Official Report, column 404, by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence to my hon. Friend the Member for Leyton and Wanstead (Mr. Cohen) which elaborates on the answer given in the Chief of Defence Procurement's letter of 23 August.

Letter from Sir Robert Walmsley to Mr. John Wilkinson, dated 23 August 1999:

I am writing in response to your letter of 28 July to the Secretary of State for Defence about the Short Term Strategic Airlift programme. The matter falls to me for answer within my responsibility as the Chief of Defence Procurement and Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency.

You will no doubt be aware of the announcement made by Minister of State for Defence Procurement, that following a review of the tenders the Department concluded that none of the bids offered an acceptable solution at an affordable price. I attach a copy of the press release.

My team is now exploring with industry other options that may satisfy our urgent need for additional airlift in the short-term. We will be reviewing a range of possibilities, including more assured spot charter of Antonov 124.

Gulf War Veterans

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what (a) studies and (b) tests he proposes to commission concerning the effects on Gulf War veterans of depleted uranium weapons a[illegible]nour. [98354]

Mr. Spellar: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Petroleum

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to his answer of 16 February 1999, Official Report, column 664, concerning petrol prices and petrol taxation in member countries of the European Union, if he will update those figures. [98107]

Mrs. Liddell: The latest figures for unleaded petrol prices are for mid-September 1999. The information requested is as follows:

	Average price (pence per litre)
	Total	Of which: taxes	% of tax
United Kingdom	73.0	58.1	79.5
Austria	54.6	35.8	65.7
Belgium	60.3	43.2	71.7
Denmark	63.6	45.5	71.6
Finland	68.4	48.5	70.9
France	63.9	49.0	76.7
Germany	60.1	42.7	70.9
Greece	43.6	26.3	60.3
Ireland	50.5	33.2	65.8

Portugal	51.9	33.9	65.4
Spain	47.6	30.6	64.2
Sweden	65.3	46.2	70.9

Comparisons between these figures and those for December 1998, published in the answer of 16 February 1999, Official Report, column 664, are affected by exchange rate movements over the period.

Mrs. Browning: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many complaints were received from petrol retailers by the Director General of Fair Trading in (a) 1998 and (b) the first six months of 1999 concerning their contracts with petroleum suppliers; and what action was taken in response to such complaints. [98178]

Dr. Howells: This is a matter for the Director General of Fair Trading.

The Office of Fair Trading has advised that they received approximately 57 complaints from 40 retailers concerning their contracts with petroleum suppliers in 1998, and approximately 15 complaints from 11 retailers in the first six months of 1999. No formal action was taken as a result of the complaints, as the Office of Fair Trading did not consider that any of the complaints raised competition issues.

Mrs. Browning: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the terms of reference are for the Director General of Fair Trading's review of petrol undertakings; when the review will be completed; and if he will make a statement. [98233]

Dr. Howells: The Director General of Fair Trading has a duty under section 2 of the Fair Trading Act 1973 to keep under review the carrying on of commercial activities in the United Kingdom.

Pursuant to these duties, he is reviewing the informal undertakings given in 1966 by petrol wholesalers to establish whether there is a case for removing, altering or retaining the remaining undertakings.

The timing of this review is a matter for the Director General of Fair Trading.

Mrs. Browning: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what guidance he has given to the oil industry concerning the disposal of any stocks of leaded petrol that may remain on 31 December. [98177]

Mr. Hill: I have been asked to reply.

No specific guidance has been given, as the disposal of leaded petrol stocks by 31 December 1999 is a matter for oil companies to manage under existing controls. Stocks have, however, already been depleted substantially by the changeover to lead replacement petrol (LRP), encouraged by the lower duty rate of LRP relative to leaded petrol that came into effect from 1 October 1999. An ongoing amount of leaded petrol, up to a limit of 0.5 per cent. of total annual petrol sales, may also to be sold after 31 December 1999 under the terms of directive 98/70/EC. Regulations specifying the conditions under which this derogation will apply—and which implement the directive requirements generally—will be laid very shortly.

Mrs. Browning: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what reports he has received in 1999 of smuggled petroleum products being offered to petrol filling stations. [98179]

Mr. Byers: My Office has received representations from a number of oil companies and trade associations in 1999 concerning the smuggling of petroleum products into Northern Ireland. Information given as a result of these representations has been passed to the Northern Ireland Office and Her Majesty's Customs and Excise.

Mrs. Browning: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many petrol filling stations in the UK closed in (a) 1998 and (b) the first six months of 1999. [98180]

Mr. Byers: In 1998, 1,066 petrol filling stations closed in the UK. Figures for the first six months of 1999, are not yet available.

Internal Market Council

Mrs. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what was the outcome of the Internal Market Council held in Luxembourg on 28 October. [98398]

Mrs. Liddell: I represented the UK at the Internal Market Council in Luxembourg on 28 October.

The Council held an open debate on the integration of sustainable development and the single market and approved a report to be presented to the Helsinki Council in December. It adopted a resolution on standardisation, laying down a set of principles for future work on standards, and on mutual recognition, setting out the direction of future work to make mutual recognition of rules, qualifications and standards more effective. The Council reached a Common Position by qualified majority on the chocolate directive, with Belgium and the Netherlands voting against and Luxembourg abstaining. There was no decision on the proposed Directive on Artists' Resale Rights, with a blocking minority of the UK, Austria, Ireland, Luxembourg, the Netherlands and Denmark opposed to the proposal. The Presidency, in response to calls from other member states, will continue its efforts to find a compromise solution.

Over lunch, the Council discussed the Commission's consultative communication on a New Strategy for the Single Market which sets out four strategic objectives. There was general support for the draft strategy and agreement that it should be closely linked to the Cardiff economic reform process. There was also a brief discussion of Council rationalisation, with some member states expressing particular interest in combining the Internal Market and Industry Councils.

The Presidency reported that with regard to the Takeovers Directive the UK and Spain were continuing their discussions of the issue of communications between Gibraltar competent authorities and counterparts in other member states, and it hoped that agreement could be reached by the December IMC.

The Commission reported briefly on SLIM (Simpler Legislation in the Internal Market), the Business Test Panel and BEST (Business Environment Simplification Taskforce) and said that it would present its evaluation of SLIM at the 7 December IMC. The UK introduced a joint paper which we had agreed with the Netherlands, Denmark, and Austria on resolving weaknesses in the SLIM system.

The Council took note of a Green Paper launching a review of the Product Liability Directive and a progress report on negotiations on the directives on preserved milk and sugar.

Departmental Property Leases

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if his Department will publish statistical information indicating the percentage reduction negotiated by his departmental officials for commercial property as against the original rent demanded by landlords. [98309]

Mr. Byers: While my Department has had success in achieving reductions to landlords' original demands, publishing such detail would prejudice the future negotiating position both of my Department and other public bodies.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what arrangements exist to ensure that representatives of his Department, when negotiating leases on commercial property for use by his Department secure the best possible terms. [98306]

Mr. Byers: Since April 1996 when my Department assumed direct responsibility for the management of its estate, we have always used professional property and legal advisers to ensure we secure best value leases that meet the Department's operating needs.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will investigate occasions when his Department has failed to negotiate lower rents for commercial property where lower rents are available for similar property used by quangos and private sector operators. [98310]

Mr. Byers: Yes, if such occasions are drawn to my attention.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will investigate the effect of increases in commercial rents paid by his Department on similar properties the tenants of which are quangos or private sector organisations. [98308]

Mr. Byers: When conducting rent reviews on our properties, my Department consults the Property Advisers to the Civil Estate (PACE) with the aim of ensuring that our negotiations will not have an adverse effect on other Government Departments and public bodies.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what monitoring arrangements exist to ensure that rents paid by his Department for office accommodation in the regions are comparable to those paid by the private sector and quangos. [98307]

Mr. Byers: Since April 1996 when my Department assumed direct responsibility for the management of its estate throughout the United Kingdom, my Department has always taken advice from the Property Advisers to the Civil Estate (PACE) and its own commercial property advisers on rent reviews and new lets to ensure that our costs reflect local market conditions.

Departmental Waste

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has to set targets for the recycling of waste (a) paper, (b) cardboard, (c) glass, (d) metal, (e) plastic and (f) other products created by his Department and its agencies; and if he will make a statement. [98230]

Mr. Byers: My Department and its agencies already have targets in the majority of offices for recycling paper, cardboard and toner cartridges.

We continue to explore other potential areas for recycling.

World Trade Organisation

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many members of his Department are deployed in the United Kingdom's mission to the WTO in Geneva; and what are (i) the personnel costs and (ii) the office costs of maintaining them. [98235]

Mr. Byers: The information is not available in the form requested.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions he has had with developing countries about the forthcoming WTO Seattle Round. [98236]

Mr. Byers: DTI Ministers and officials frequently meet representatives of developing countries and set out the UK's support for the launch at Seattle of a comprehensive new Round of trade negotiations, including a clear development agenda responding to the needs of developing countries, particularly the least developed. This week the Minister for Trade is speaking about the new Round to a business and government audience at the Commonwealth Business Forum in Johannesburg.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many people will be in the UK's official delegation to the forthcoming Seattle Ministerial Meeting of the WTO; how many of those will be (a) Government officials, (b) Ministers and (c) others; and what the estimated cost is of the UK's participation in the meeting. [98238]

Mr. Byers: The exact composition of the UK Delegation has yet to be determined. I will write to my hon. Friend with the answer shortly.

Departmental Vehicles

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the total number of vehicles used by his Department and its agencies fuelled by (a) petrol, (b) diesel and (c) liquid petroleum gas; and what plans he has to increase the rate of conversion of those vehicles to liquid petroleum gas. [98202]

Mr. Byers: The total number of vehicles used my Department and its Agencies fuelled by petrol, diesel and liquid petroleum gas are 86, 134 and 0 (zero) respectively. As liquid petroleum gas becomes more generally available, my Department and its Agencies will consider their positions on the utilisation of liquid petroleum gas as a fuel.

Inward Investment

Mr. Dobbin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much inward investment has taken place in the (a) Middleton and (b) Heywood areas since 1 May 1997. [98254]

Mr. Byers: According to the records of the North West Development Agency there have been 5 overseas companies that have invested in the areas since 1 May 1997 as follows:

Rika International of Japan—located in Chadderton

Voith Sulzer Paper Technology of Germany—located in Middleton

P & M Vacuum Services Ltd of the USA—located in Heywood

Digital Projection International of Canada—located in Rochdale.

There is one further USA company located in Middleton which has requested anonymity.

Caroline Flint: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what has been the volume of inward investment in the Doncaster area for each of the last five years; and how many companies have made such investments. [98028]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 10 November 1999]: The figures in the table are taken from information given by companies to the Government Office for Yorkshire and the Humber or the Regional Development Agency at the time of the announcement of a decision to invest in the UK. They are based on the best estimate of jobs created/safeguarded by an investment in its initial three years. There is no requirement on companies to notify their decision to invest and therefore these figures are not comprehensive nor do they take account of subsequent developments.

Doncaster Travel to work area

Year	Number of project	Number of new jobs	Number of safeguarded jobs
1994–95	6	86	158
1995–96	5	102	730

Departmental Expenditure Limits

Mr. Fallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to his answer of 5 November 1999, Official Report, columns 336–37, for what reasons £8 million is being transferred from the Reserve to the Post Office for Horizon re-negotiation costs; and what the reason is for the re-negotiation. [98136]

Mr. Alan Johnson: The payment of £8 million reimbursed the Post Office for additional costs incurred in the negotiations with ICL earlier this year. This was to cover the ongoing costs of the contractor while further work on the merits of the various options was carried out.

EU Structural Funds

Caroline Flint: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the amounts of money received under European Union programmes (a) within the Doncaster Borough and (b) within Dearne Valley for each year since 1979 to the most recent available date. [98025]

Mr. Byers: It is not possible to provide information on European Regional Development Fund projects approved before 1990 as this information is not available at District level.

The table shows the ERDF approved each year in Doncaster, Dearne Valley and the South Yorkshire sub-region.

The Objective 2 Programme for ERDF funding was not signed until February 1994 and consequently there was no spend in that year.

It is not possible to provide information on European Social Fund projects from 1990–97 as this information is not available at district level. Records prior to 1989 are held at the EC in Brussels.

European Social Fund (ESF) figures are as follows for 1998–99:

The Doncaster area received £11.42 million in ESF grants.

Dearne Valley received £8.856 million in ESF grants.

National Minimum Wage

Caroline Flint: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many calls have been received by the Minimum Wage Hotline (a) nationally and (b) from the Yorkshire and the Humberside Region since it was opened. [98024]

Mr. Alan Johnson [holding answer 10 November 1999]: Since the introduction of the national minimum wage on 1 April 1999, the National Minimum Wage Helpline has dealt with some 90,000 calls. There are no figures for individual regions, as most enquiries are dealt with over the telephone without the need to take such details.

Caroline Flint: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many employers have been found to be in contravention of national minimum wage legislation since its inception. [98037]

Mr. Alan Johnson [holding answer 10 November 1999]: Since the introduction of the national minimum wage on 1 April 1999, National Minimum Wage Compliance Officers have received some 3,200 complaints concerning workers being paid less than the minimum wage. Following investigations, officers found that, in around 50 per cent. of the cases, employers were not complying with the legislation. Action is taken in every case where underpayment is detected.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much his Department spent on external consultants and advisers in each of the last four financial years. [97420]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 10 November 1999]: The value of contracts let centrally to external consultants and advisers for 1997–98 was £0.94 million and for 1998–99 was £0.64 million.

For information on contracts let centrally in 1995–96 and 1996–97, I refer to the answer given to the hon. Member for Gordon (Mr. Bruce) on 19 February 1998, Official Report, column 816.

The above information does not include contracts let by the Department's Executive Agencies, and I have asked the respective Chief Executives to reply separately to this question.

Letter from Ian Jones to Mr. Don Foster, dated 11 November 1999:

You tabled a Parliamentary Question on 3 November to the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry about expenditure on external consultants and advisors in each of the last four financial years. I have been asked to reply in respect of the Employment Tribunals Service (ETS) which is an executive agency of the DTI.

The Service spent £3k on consultants in 1997–98 and £117k in 1998–99. Expenditure in years before 1997–98, when the Service was established as an agency, will be included in the figures given by the DTI. The increase in expenditure last year was largely a result of our use of IT consultants in developing a longer term IT strategy for the Service.

Greenhouse Gas Emissions

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what penalties will be applied to the United Kingdom if it fails to meet the legally binding Kyoto greenhouse gas emission targets; and if he will make a statement. [97626]

Mr. Meacher: I have been asked to reply.

My right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister and I have recently returned from the Fifth Conference of the Parties to the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change. The issue of the development of a compliance system for the Kyoto Protocol was one of the key points of discussion at that meeting.

The UK, along with other EU member states, believes that there should be a strong, robust and comprehensive system of compliance for ensuring Parties meet their emissions reductions targets and other commitments undertaken under the Kyoto Protocol. The detailed design of the compliance system for the Protocol, including a full range of actions for failure to meet the Kyoto targets, is still being discussed.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the likely effect on carbon dioxide emissions of the conversion of oil to gas; and if he will make a statement. [97627]

Mrs. Liddell: No such assessment has been made. Compared with the combustion of oil, the combustion of natural gas to meet a particular energy demand usually produces lower emissions of carbon dioxide, due to its lower carbon content.

Working Time Regulations

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has to revise the Working Time Regulations. [97817]

Mr. Alan Johnson: Draft regulations to amend the Working Time Regulations, in respect of the requirement to keep records for workers who have opted out of the working time limit and extending the scope of the unmeasured working time exemption, were laid before Parliament on 19 October. They have now been debated in both Houses and will be made shortly.

There is no proposal to revise any other part of the Working Time Regulations at this time.

Trade Barriers (Wood Products)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the impact on the world's forests of steps to reduce and eliminate tariff and non-tariff barriers to the trade in wood products. [98072]

Mr. Byers: With UK support, the European Commission is currently undertaking a Sustainability Impact Assessment of the new Round of trade negotiations within the WTO which are due to be launched at the third Ministerial meeting in Seattle (30 November to 3 December). This study will consider the range of possible sustainability impacts in trade sectors likely to be affected by the Round, including forest products, and will be used to help inform the UK and EU position on this issue.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received on the impact on the world's forests of steps to reduce and eliminate tariff and non-tariff barriers to the trade in wood products. [98073]

Mr. Byers: The Department has issued a consultation document on UK priorities for tariff reductions in the new Round of multilateral trade negotiations. Replies have been received from a number of interested parties including those concerned with forest preservation and those representing trade in forestry products.

Parental Leave

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what advice he received from the European Commission when he discussed with it excluding parents of children under five years old but born before 15 December 1999 from the new rights to parental leave; and what legal advice he obtained on the subject. [98241]

Mr. Byers: The Government's discussions with the European Commission cover a wide range of issues. In discussing the extension of the Parental Leave Directive to the UK, we agreed to implement it by 15 December this year, which we are doing through the Maternity and Parental Leave Regulations, in line with our legal advice.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he has discussed excluding parents of children aged under five years but born before 15 December 1999 from the new right to parental leave with the European Commission. [98096]

Mr. Alan Johnson: The Parental Leave Directive is based on a Social Chapter agreement which was concluded by the Social Partners. The Directive was adopted by the other member states in June 1996, before the UK opted in to the Social Chapter. The UK Government were not therefore able to influence the discussions and negotiations which led to the conclusion of this Directive. As incoming Government in 1997, we undertook to implement the Directive by 15 December 1999.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he took legal advice about excluding parents of children aged under five years but born before 15 December 1999 from the new right to parental leave; and what advice he was given. [98090]

Mr. Alan Johnson: The Government are implementing the Parental Leave Directive in accordance with legal advice. The Directive is required to be implemented by 15 December this year.

Consumer Affairs Council

Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the outcome was of the Consumer Affairs Council held in Brussels on 8 November; and if he will make a statement. [98157]

Dr. Howells: The Council debated the proposed Directive on the Distance Marketing of Financial Services. It was agreed that further work would be needed in order to prepare for a common position. The Council also held an open debate on Services of General Interest. The Commission agreed to look at all the options expressed during the debate. Portugal undertook to take this work forward as a priority under their forthcoming Presidency.

Other matters covered included reports from the Commission on the implementation and enforcement of both the Timeshare and Package Travel Directives, information from the Presidency on the outcome of the Tampere Special European Council on Citizens access to justice and on the recently held European Food 2000 seminar.

Miners

Mr. Alasdair Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the total amount which has been paid in compensation to ex-miners in Scotland with chronic bronchitis and emphysema; and how much of this is made up of interim payments. [98341]

Mrs. Liddell: The Department has made payments totalling some £2.6 million to ex-miners in Scotland, of which some £2.4 million is made up of interim payments to those ex-miners and their widows who are in receipt of Industrial Injuries Disablement Benefit for Chronic Bronchitis and Emphysema.

Mr. Alasdair Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many ex-miners in Scotland have completed spirometry tests; and of those how many are currently in receipt of industrial injuries benefits. [98342]

Mrs. Liddell: A total of 2,240 ex-miners have completed Spirometry tests at one of the four centres established in Scotland, with a further 1,200 invited to attend. The Department does not hold any figures for the number of claimants in receipt of industrial Injuries Disablement Benefit.

Mr. Alasdair Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many claims he has received from ex-miners in Scotland for compensation related to chronic bronchitis and emphysema. [98340]

Mrs. Liddell: The Department's claim handlers have received some 6,900 claims from ex-miners in Scotland.

Anglia TV Shares

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the cost was of his Department's investigations into the alleged insider dealing by Lord Archer of Weston-super-Mare in respect of Anglia TV shares. [97209]

Dr. Howells: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to him by the then Minister for Competition and Consumer Affairs, my hon. Friend the Member for Edinburgh, South (Mr. Griffiths), on 29 June 1998, Official Report, column 50.

Multinationals

Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what measures the Government propose to take to enhance the competitive environment in the UK for divisions of multinational companies to stimulate them to continue to make major investments in the UK, with particular reference to those operating in the ice-cream industry. [97752]

Dr. Howells: This Government aim to ensure that the UK is an economy where both indigenous and overseas-owned companies can thrive and compete effectively in world markets. This can only be achieved by maintaining macro-economic stability, and fair and open markets which promote competition. In addition, as detailed in our Competitiveness White Paper launched in December last year, we are actively pursuing a wide range of measures designed to promote the UK as a leading knowledge driven economy.

The UK's strong position as an environment for business continues to be demonstrated by our record levels of inward investment success. We are the market leader for inward investment in Europe, with over 30 per cent. of the total, and second only to the US in terms of inward investment stock.

Telecommunications Masts

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what proposals he has to fund research in respect of the possible long-term effects of prolonged exposure to extremely low-intensity radiation from telecommunication masts; and if he will make a statement. [98103]

Ms Hewitt: The Government will be responding to all the recommendations and conclusions of the Science and Technology Committee Report, including those on research.

Vibration White Finger

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will establish a vibration white finger test centre in North Staffordshire; and if he will make a statement. [97800]

Mrs. Liddell: There are currently seven centres in operation, including a centre in Barnsley which opened this week, and we expect a total of twelve centres to be up and running during January 2000. The locations for this initial tranche of centres were determined by balancing the geographic distribution of claimants against the availability of the medical resource needed to undertake the testing. We are assessing the options for opening further centres early next year. I recognise the very strong claims for a centre to serve the North Staffordshire miners, and would certainly hope that we will be able to open a centre in the North Staffordshire area early next year.

E-commerce

Mr. Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent assessment he has made of the impact of telecommunication costs on the development of e-commerce; and if he will make a statement. [98394]

Ms Hewitt: The Cabinet Office's report e-commerce@its.best.co.uk (http://www.cabinet-office.gov.uk/innovations) provides a useful analysis of the issue of access costs. It confirms that the structure and level of tariffs affects on-line behaviour and that some UK tariffs are disadvantageous, but concludes that action is being taken. It recommends that telecoms operators be encouraged to offer a wider range of tariff options.

The Government are committed to ensuring the wide availability of fast and affordable Internet access and believe that competition is the best way to deliver this. The Government want to see operators responding to competitive pressures by offering a broader range of Internet tariff options to allow heavy e-commerce users and light users to choose the optimum package for their usage profile.

Telecommunications

Mr. Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what reports he has received of variations in the costs of maintaining and operating the telecommunication infrastructure in different parts of the United Kingdom; and what assessment he has made of the economic impact of such variations. [98395]

Ms Hewitt: OFTEL, the UK's independent telecommunications regulator, carried out a thorough study of the cost of providing a universal telecommunications service throughout the United Kingdom in 1997. This included consideration of the costs of serving areas of the country which would be uneconomic on a normal commercial basis. OFTEL issued a further consultation on universal service in July this year which considered whether the conclusions of the 1997 study were still valid. The consultation period on this document closed on 29 October. OFTEL intend to publish their conclusions early next year.

Mr. Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what (a) advice and (b) guidance he has issued to the regulator regarding telecommunication charges; and if he will make a statement. [98396]

Ms Hewitt: Telecommunication charges are crucial to the development of e-commerce in the UK. I discussed this issue when I met with the Director General of Telecommunications on 28 October. However, OFTEL is an independent regulator and it would not be appropriate for me to give him guidance on such issues.

Mr. Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the relationship between the cost of high speed telecommunication and data links and the location of disaster recovery centres; and if he will make a statement. [98397]

Ms Hewitt: I will write to my hon. Friend shortly and place a copy in the Libraries of the House.

Ellington Colliery

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what forms of assistance his Department proposes to make available to deal with the planned closure of Ellington Colliery. [98386]

Mrs. Liddell: The Government have asked John Bridge, Chairman of the North East Regional Development Agency, to take the lead in establishing a small Study Team to look at the wider implications of the closure announcement for South East Northumberland.

Working against the framework of the Regional Economic Strategy, which was recently published by the development agency, this team will undertake a rapid analysis of the situation and develop a comprehensive plan for South East Northumberland.

Together with Local Partners, Government Office North East and Central Government, the team's objective will be to provide me with an urgent report before Christmas on the future strategy for this area.

This Government have implemented a wide ranging programme to regenerate the economies and communities affected by pit closures under the previous administration. That programme already applies to the area around Ellington, which suffered from previous job losses in the coalfields. In the light of the Study Team's report, we will consider what more needs to be done.

Industry Council

Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what was the outcome of the Industry Council held in Brussels on 9 November; and if he will make a statement. [98300]

Mrs. Liddell: I represented the UK at the EU Industry Council held on 9 November.

The Council agreed its report to the Helsinki European Council on the integration of industry and sustainable development policy. There was also a discussion of Kyoto targets, where there was general agreement that more effective co-ordination was needed on how to take account of industry's concerns in the implementation of Kyoto targets.

The Council had a debate on competitiveness, which focused on the need for structural change and adaptability in European industry, the importance of SMEs and the role of information and communication technologies in growth and competitiveness.

The Commission presented its first market monitoring report on the world shipbuilding market which highlighted both the serious situation in the market and further clear evidence of unfair pricing by Korea. The Council with strong support from the UK emphasised its serious concern at the situation and unfair pricing from Korea and in its conclusions made clear its determination to tackle such unfair trade practices and agreed further action to this end. The Council called on the Commission and the Presidency to re-engage Korea in bilateral consultations with a view to halting the unfair competition and in parallel urged Industry, member states and the Commission to seek more detailed evidence in order to take appropriate action under the WTO. The Council also emphasised the need to continue to ensure that the conditions of the IMF rescue package were fully respected. The Council ended its conclusions by welcoming the Commission's determination to continue to pursue its obligations under the EU shipbuilding regime and to report on developments as soon as possible.

The new Commission's enterprise policy was set out and focused on promoting entrepreneurship and innovation in Europe, stimulating the growth of SMEs, tackling red tape, addressing failures in the provision of risk capital and promoting an inclusive and cohesive Information Society. The Commission stated that it wanted to see a new innovation policy process which would involve assessing the existing situation in Europe, identifying specific priorities and actions and reporting on measures taken by member states.

A number of delegations stressed the importance of investment in intangibles, particularly the knowledge base, training and life-long learning; the increased use of information technology; and the consolidation of Councils. On the latter, there was support from a number of member states for a more focused approach to competitiveness issues and for merger of the Industry Internal Market Councils as a first step. The Presidency was encouraged to settle issues at the Helsinki European Council.

The Commission also presented its: Communication on the competitiveness of the forest based and related industries; Communication on the competitiveness of the steel industry; Report on the monitoring of aid for steel; Action Plan on the competitiveness of the construction industry; and gave a progress report on the public consultation on it's competition policy modernisation proposals. The Danish delegation introduced a paper on state aid policy which highlighted the damage state aid caused to the Single Market.

The Council also adopted conclusions on the competitiveness of the forest-based and related industries.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Loyalist Hit List

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) on what date the RUC received information that led to a south Belfast woman being told on 15 May that her name had been discovered on a Loyalist hit list; how many other names were on this list; how many of these individuals have been notified; on what dates the individuals were notified; what conclusions have been reached so far as to the perpetrators of this threat; and what is the present stage of the police investigation; [94482]

(2) on what date the RUC received information that names and personal details of a number of Catholics in the Belfast area had been discovered on a Loyalist hit list; how many other names were on this list; how many of these individuals have been notified; on what dates the individuals were notified; what conclusions have been reached so far as to the perpetrators of this threat; and what is the present stage of the police investigation; [94480]

(3) on what date the RUC received information that led to Mr. Gerard Rice being told on 17 May that his name, address and details about his car had been discovered on a loyalist death list; how many other names were on this list; how many of those individuals have been notified; on what dates the individuals were notified; what conclusions have been reached so far as on perpetrators of the threat; and what is the present stage of the police investigation; [94484]

(4) what steps the RUC took following information passed on to a community worker in the Ardoyne area on 6 May that her name had been discovered on a Loyalist death list; how many other names were on this list; how many of these individuals have been notified; what conclusions have been reached so far as to the perpetrators of this threat; and what is the present stage of the police investigation. [94475]

Mr. Ingram: As a person has been charged with possession of documents useful to terrorists I am unable to give a detailed response. However, I can confirm that the RUC seized material in February including personal details of more than 150 persons.

There was no indication that an attack was imminent or actively being planned; it was assessed that the details were being collated. The list was then fully researched for accuracy and currency. If at any stage there had been any reason to fear imminent attacks, immediate steps would have been taken. The research having been completed, all persons were notified between May and August.

I understand the RUC informed a community worker in the Ardoyne area of Belfast on 14 May, not 6 May.

Caffrey's Bar

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how many (i) service and (ii) police personnel were on duty and patrolling the Falls road, Belfast in the vicinity of Caffrey's bar (a) from 10 am to 11 pm on 20 May, (b) on 20 April and (c) on 20 March; and what was the time of the last patrol before midnight on 20 May; [94629]

(2) what steps the RUC took following a grenade attack outside of Caffrey's pub in the early morning of 21 May; what damage and injuries were caused in the course of this attack; what conclusions have been reached so far as to the perpetrator of the attack and what is the present stage of the police investigation; [94488]

(3) how many surveillance cameras cover (a) the Falls road, Belfast in the vicinity of Caffrey's bar and (b) the Broadway road and M1 roundabout; if the cameras were functional from 10 pm on 20 May to 2 am on 21 May; if the cameras were monitored through those hours; what action was taken following the grenade-bomb attack on Caffrey's bar; at what time was radio contact made with the RUC concerning the incident; and when a request was received from the RUC to remove and examine the surveillance recording; [94628]

(4) (a) at what time police were notified of a grenade-bomb attack on Caffrey's bar on the Falls road, Belfast in the early hours of 21 May, (b) at what time the police arrived on the scene and (c) what efforts were made to pursue, find and trace the owner of the get-away car. [94630]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 19 October 1999]: The Army were not on patrol during the periods given. It is not possible to be specific as to when a particular patrol may have been in the vicinity of a particular building. As an arterial route, the Falls road is used by many police vehicles during the course of a normal day.

The scene was preserved by police between 0105 and 0418 hours. A full investigation was initiated. Two persons received minor shrapnel wounds to legs and arms and further injuries of shock and hearing difficulties were reported later. Damage was caused to three windows of Caffrey's bar and one to the Red Devil bar on the opposite side of the road. It is believed that the attack was carried out by a Loyalist group although no claim of responsibility has been made. The investigation is continuing.

I understand the RUC operate no cameras in the area. However, as part of their investigation they viewed video tapes from the military observation post at Broadway Tower. They proved not to be useful.

The police were notified at 0035 hours on 21 May but were unable to gain access because of a large and hostile crowd. Police gained access at 0105 hours. The getaway vehicle was initially reported as a white car, later as a particular make with a registration number. Nearby loyalist areas were checked with negative results. The vehicle was recovered a number of days later in the York road area of Belfast. It had been purchased with cash from a car dealer in Bangor some two days before the incident by persons using false names.

Car Theft

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland at what time on 17 May 1974 the police first received and logged the reported theft or hijacking in Belfast of (a) an Austin 1800, registration number HOI 2487, (b) a Hillman Avenger, registration number DIA 4063, (c) a Ford Escort, registration number 1385 WZ, and, in Portadown, (d) a Hillman Minx registration number 6583 OZ. [93527]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 19 October 1999]: Given the passage of time, many documents from this period have not been retained. The RUC have however traced a composite paper prepared for the general information of senior officers at the time. This is a summary of the day and does not contain all the information requested but records the following:

> An Austin 1800, registration number HOI 2487 was hi-jacked at Richmond Street, Belfast at 0830 hours on Friday 17 May 1974. It was reported to police at 1520 hours.
> A Hillman Avenger, registration number DOI 4063 was stolen from Torrens Road, Belfast at 1000 hours. It was reported to police at 1630 hours.

Information on the two remaining cars cannot for the present be traced.

Explosive Device (Garvaghy Road)

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps the RUC took following reports of an explosive device being thrown from a car travelling in the Garvaghy road area of Portadown on 16 May; what conclusions have been reached so far as to the perpetrators of the attack; and at what stage is the police investigation. [94483]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 19 October 1999]: Police investigated this incident which was reported at 2333 hours by a person whose given name and address do not exist. The area was checked at 2339 hours with no sign of damage. At 0019 hours a mobile support unit extensively checked the area without result. At 0145 hours they again checked the area and spoke with a person who, while allegedly knowing the names of witnesses, refused to give details other than that a device had been thrown from a red Peugeot car. A further search was undertaken at first light but found nothing to support the allegation. A local resident suggested that the noise had come from the park itself and may have been a firework. In the absence of any witnesses, injury, damage, physical or forensic evidence the conclusion reached was that the explosion may have been a firework. Further investigation is therefore held pending additional information being received.

[94477]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 19 October 1999]: The dates given in four of the questions appear to be inaccurate. These incidents have all been thoroughly investigated by the police. They include a range of assaults and damage to property.

For several of these incidents the police have not established a definitive motive, but in most cases the motive is believed to have been sectarian and in some instances they were probably perpetrated by paramilitaries.

I understand in relation to the incidents raised, 22 people were arrested and released without charge, one person was convicted of assault and sentenced to six months' imprisonment and criminal proceedings are pending against another individual. Some investigations are still ongoing and others remain open but are subject to additional information becoming available.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list in date order for each of the past five years, arson attacks on churches of each denomination stating in each case (a) a description of the damage to church property and estimated cost of repairs, (b) his conclusions on the perceived community affiliation of the perpetrators and (c) the arrests made, charges brought, successful prosecutions and sentences awarded. [95380]

Mr. Ingram: There have been 172 recorded attacks on churches and church property during the years 1994 to 1998, details of which have been placed in the Library of the House. The remaining information is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps the RUC took following (1) a call for assistance to be given to a 15 year-old boy being assaulted on Garvaghy road, Portadown on 28 July; where and how many police vehicles of what type were in the vicinity; where the vehicles were positioned in relation to the scene of the assault; what assistance was given; what injuries were sustained by the victim; what record exists of similar incidents in that area; what bearing controversial parades have on these actions; what conclusions he has reached so far on the number and community affiliation of the perpetrators; and what is the present stage of the investigation; [95396]

(5) the report of an assault in the Stewartstown road in front of Woodbourne RUC station on the night of 24–25 July; how long it took for police to arrive on the scene; what injuries were sustained by the victim; what record exists of similar incidents in that area; what bearing controversial parades have on these actions; what conclusions he has reached so far on the number and community affiliation of the perpetrators; and what is the present stage of the investigation; [95394]

(6) the report of an attack on the Tullintrain Orange Hall just outside of Derry City on 14 July; how long it took for police to arrive on the scene; what is his estimate of the damage to property; what record exists of similar incidents in that area; what bearing controversial parades have on these actions; what conclusions he has reached so far on the number and community affiliation of the perpetrators; and what is the present stage of the investigation; [95377]

[95385]

Mr. Ingram: The dates given in several of the questions appear to be inaccurate. These incidents have all been thoroughly investigated by the police, except the suggested attack on St. Coleman's Church in Hillsborough since the RUC have no record of such an incident on or around 11 July.

The incidents listed include a range of assaults, arson and pipe bomb attacks, robbery and assault, a paramilitary attack and in some instances no injuries or damage were sustained.

The time taken for the RUC to arrive at the scene in the incidents requested is as follows:

Following the discovery of a pipe bomb outside a home in Ballycastle on 8 July the incident was reported at 1027 hours and the police attended the scene at 1037 hours.

An arson attack on a Mission Hall in Tobermore, Co. Londonderry was reported to the RUC at 0735 hours, they arrived on the scene at 0740 hours on 4 July.

The RUC received a report following the discovery of a pipe bomb outside a GAA club in Dungannon at 0725 hours on 23 July. Two possible sites were checked and police arrived at the scene of the second at 0742 hours.

The incident on the Stewartstown road is alleged to have occurred at 0130 hours on 24 July, it was reported to police at 1410 hours.

Police took approximately 25 minutes to arrive at the scene of the attack on Tullintrain Orange Hall on 14 July.

The discovery of an explosive device at the Royal Mail Sorting Office in Larne, Co. Antrim was reported at 0640 hours, police attended the scene at 0648 hours.

The incident at the Waterside area of Londonderry was reported at 0445 hours, the police arrived at the scene at 0458 hours on 29 July.

On 11 July at 0021 hours police received a report of an arson attack on St. Patrick's Church, Derriaghy, they attended the scene at 0049 hours. On the same date at 0328 hours a report was received that St. Patrick's Church, Lisburn had been attacked. The police arrived some minutes later.

On 7 June the RUC received a report at 0812 hours following the discovery of a pipe bomb in the grounds of St. Mary's Primary School, Ballymena. They arrived at the scene at 0815 hours.

Police responded within minutes to a report of an arson attack in North Belfast on 7 July.

Police received a report of an assault in Ballymoney at 2339 hours on 15 July. They attended the scene at 2341 hours.

At 0430 hours on 4 July police received a report of an attack on Warrenpoint Orange Hall, they attended the scene at approximately 0434 hours.

At 0324 hours on 8 July police received a report following an attack on a shop in Carrickfergus, they arrived on the scene at 0330 hours.

A report was received at 0750 hours on 16 June of the discovery of a pipe bomb in the grounds of St. Mary's Primary School, Newtownbutler. The RUC attended at 0813 hours. The school had not opened. The police operation terminated at 1240 hours.

With regard to some of the incidents it is possible that parades may have contributed to heightened tensions in that area, in other incidents parades are thought not to have had any bearing.

In some of these incidents the police have not established a motive or reached a conclusion as to the perpetrators. Other incidents are believed to have been sectarian, and some were probably carried out by paramilitaries.

I understand that proceedings are pending against six people. In respect of one incident a file was forwarded to the DPP, however the suspect was subsequently found dead (no crime is suspected), and the police are not seeking anyone else in respect of this offence. In the other cases investigations are either ongoing or they remain open but are dependent on further information becoming available.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) pipe bomb and (b) petrol attacks took place in (i) Nationalist and (ii) Loyalist areas over the weekend of Friday 3 June to Sunday 5 June; in each case, how long it took for police to arrive on the scene; what damage was caused; what injuries were sustained by the victims; what conclusions he has reached so far on the community affiliation of the perpetrators; and what is the present stage of the investigation. [95391]

Mr. Ingram: There were six bombing incidents during the weekend of 4–6 June as follows:

4 June at Castlewellan Road, Hilltown. Reported at 2336 hours. Police attended the scene at 2355 hours. Windows damaged. No injuries. Perpetrators believed to be Loyalist. Investigation continuing.

5 June at Clandeboye Gardens, Belfast. Reported at 0044 hours. Police attended the scene at 0053 hours. No damage. No injuries. Perpetrators believed to be Loyalist. Investigation continuing.

5 June at Corcrain Drive, Portadown. Reported at 0053 hours. Police attended the scene at 0056 hours. Fatal injuries. Perpetrators believed to be Loyalist. Murder investigation continuing.

5 June at Westland Road, Portadown. Following up inquiries into the attack at Corcrain Drive, police discovered the scene of another blast at 0109 hours. A lounge window was broken. No injuries. Perpetrators believed to be Loyalist. Investigation continuing.

6 June at Acacia Avenue, Belfast. Reported at 1329 hours. Police attended the scene at 1357 hours. Minor damage caused to brickwork below a living room window. No injuries. Perpetrators believed to be Loyalist. Investigation continuing.

There were four petrol bomb attacks during the same period as follows:

5 June at Windsor Avenue, Lurgan. Police vehicle attacked. No damage. No injuries. No offender identified.

5 June at Windsor Avenue, Lurgan. At 1652 hours police reported petrol bombs being thrown in a car park. A car was damaged. There were no injuries. It is believed that the perpetrators were from a Nationalist background. No one was identified.

5 June at Lisnahull Park, Dungannon. The injured party reported at 1303 hours on 11 June that a petrol bomb had been thrown at her home on 5 June. Police attended the scene at 1405 hours. A week had elapsed and damage appeared restricted to scorch marks to an area of pavement and to a wall. No injuries were reported. Perpetrators or their community affiliation are unknown. Investigation continuing.

6 June at Campbell Walk/Levin Road, Lurgan. A police unit was attacked. No damage. No injuries. No one was identified.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps the RUC took following the report of attacks on residential properties in the Markets area of Belfast on 8 July; how long it took for police to arrive on the scene; what is his estimate of the damage to property; what record exists of similar incidents in that area; what bearing controversial parades have on these actions; what conclusions he has reached so far on the number and community affiliation of the perpetrators; and what is the present stage of the investigation. [95384]

Mr. Ingram: There are no records of such attacks on or around 8 July.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps the RUC took (1) following reports of intimidation of Mr. James McCarry by masked men outside his home in Ballycastle, County Antrim on 17 June; how long it took for police to arrive on the scene; what damage was done and what injuries were caused; what conclusions he has reached so far on the community affiliation of the perpetrators; and what is the present stage of the investigation; [95386]

(2) following an early morning petrol bomb attack on 2 June at a home on Moorlough Road, Strabane, County Tyrone; how long it took for police to arrive on the scene; what damage was caused; what injuries were sustained by the victims; what conclusions he has reached so far on the community affiliation of the perpetrators; and what is the present stage of the investigation; [95389]

(3) following a reported attack in the Brompton Park Estate in North Belfast on 26 June; how long it took for police to arrive on the scene; what damage was caused; what injuries were sustained by the victims; what conclusions he has reached so far on the community affiliation of the perpetrators; and what is the present stage of the investigation; [95387]

(4) on 1 June following an attack on two men when a stolen car mounted the pavement outside the Royal Bar at Sandy Row in South Belfast; how long it took for police to arrive on the scene; what injuries were sustained by the victims; what conclusions he has reached so far on the community affiliation of the perpetrators; and what is the present stage of the investigation; [95388]

(5) following an early morning blast bomb attack on 5 June at the home of Elizabeth O'Neill in Portadown; how long it took police to arrive on the scene; what damage was caused; what injuries were sustained by the victims; what conclusions he has reached so far on the community affiliation of the perpetrators; and what is the present stage of the investigation. [95390]

Mr. Ingram: The dates given in two of the questions appear to be inaccurate. These incidents have all been thoroughly investigated by the police. They include assault, intimidation, damage to property and, most seriously, the murder of Mrs. Elizabeth O'Neill during the course of an attack on her home in Portadown on 5 June.

The time taken for the RUC to arrive at the scene in the incidents requested is as follows:

The RUC received a report at 2219 hours on 16 June regarding an incident in Ballycastle, Co. Antrim, they arrived on the scene at 2226 hours.

The RUC received a report in respect of a petrol bombing at a home in Moorlough road, Strabane at 0232 hours on 1 June, they arrived on the scene at 0240 hours.

A number of emergency calls were made on the morning of 26 June, the first was received at 0450 hours and the police arrived at the scene at approximately 0454 hours. A number of further calls were received and units from other areas attended a series of incidents involving groups of Catholics and Protestants in the Brompton Park Estate area of Belfast.

An alleged assault in the Sandy Row area of Belfast was reported to the RUC at 2203 hours on 1 June, they arrived at the scene at 2205 hours.

The incident involving the attack on the home and murder of Elizabeth O'Neill was reported at 0053 hours on 5 June, police attended the scene at 0056 hours.

In respect of these incidents the police have either not established a definitive motive or they believe the motive to have been sectarian. Police believe the attack on the home and murder of Elizabeth O'Neill to have been carried out by a Loyalist grouping.

I understand, in relation to the incidents raised, a file in respect of two people has been sent to the DPP, the murder investigation is still ongoing and the other investigations remain open but are subject to additional information becoming available.

GM Crops

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many trials of genetically engineered crops are taking place in Northern Ireland; how many applications to proceed with trials of genetically modified crops have been submitted for approval in Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement on co-operation between Northern Ireland and the Republic of Ireland on the issue of genetically-modified crops. [93837]

Mr. George Howarth: The Department of the Environment in Northern Ireland is a Competent Authority within the United Kingdom for carrying out the regulatory requirements of EU Directive 90/220/EC to control the deliberate release into the environment of genetically modified organisms.

In 1996 the Department received the only application so far for a release consent in Northern Ireland from the Department of Agriculture (Northern Ireland) to carry out a small field trial on potatoes. This application, which was approved, was dealt with through the regulatory system and papers about it are available for viewing in a statutory public register, which is held by the Department of the Environment's Environmental Policy Division in River House, 48 High Street, Belfast BT1 2AW.

There are currently no trials of genetically engineered crops taking place in Northern Ireland.

In the Department's capacity as a Competent Authority, it liaises, along with other UK Competent Authorities, with all EU member states, including the Republic of Ireland, at Competent Authority meetings. Liaison with the Republic of Ireland authority has otherwise been as required.

Pellet Guns

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is his estimate of the number of (a) legal and (b) illegal ball-bearing pellet guns in circulation; how many reports of incidents involving the use of these weapons have been received by the (i) police and (ii) other agencies in each of the last five years. [95426]

Mr. Ingram: I assume that my hon. Friend is referring to low powered airguns or CO2 guns rather than conventional air weapons.

As those that fire plastic pellets are not, in most cases, considered to be lethal barrelled firearms and do not require firearms certificates, the numbers in circulation are not known.

As regards incidents of misuse of these kinds of guns, for instance with ball-bearings, the information is not held centrally by the police and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Illegal Parades

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the date, location and perceived political or community affiliation of each illegal parade that took place from March to September; on which occasions files were later sent from the police to the Director of Public Prosecutions; in each instance how many prosecutions and on what charges were initiated; what was the result of each prosecution; for each illegal parade where no prosecutions followed, what reasons were given for a failure to prosecute; what other actions were taken to ensure future compliance with the law; and if he will make a statement on the community balance of the prosecution decision-making process over this period. [95372]

Accelerated Prisoner Release

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many prisoners released under the accelerated prisoner release scheme have since been arrested in connection with terrorist-related offences. [97747]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 8 November 1999]: While offences are under investigation it is not always clear whether they are terrorist related.

In none of the cases where prisoners released under the scheme have since been arrested is there conclusive evidence to confirm the offence was terrorist related.

Suckler Calves

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the average price paid in (a) September and (b) October, in 1999, 1998, 1997, 1996, 1995, 1990 and 1985 in (i) cash and (ii) real terms, for suckler calves in the principal markets for such stock in Northern Ireland. Demilitarisation and Normalisation Programmes

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress has been made concerning the demilitarisation and normalisation programme since June 1998; and if he will make a statement. [97762]

Mr. Ingram: The Government are committed to the objective of as early a return as possible to normal security arrangements in Northern Ireland, consistent with the level of threat.

Major progress has already been made. Since the Good Friday Agreement, routine military patrolling has been reduced by two thirds. Three battalions have been returned to Great Britain. There are now under 15,000 service personnel on operational duties in Northern Ireland, fewer than at any time since 1970. In large parts of the Province the police patrol without any military assistance. Since April 1998 11 military bases have been demolished and a further seven installations have been closed.

Compensation Awards

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the average compensation award made to (a) victims and (b) relatives of victims of paramilitary violence for each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [98362]

Mr. Ingram: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Compensation Agency under its Chief Executive, Mr. Denis Stanley. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from D.A. Stanley to Mr. Laurence Robertson, dated 10 November 1999:

The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland has asked me to reply to your recent Question about criminal injuries compensation in Northern Ireland.

The Compensation Agency cannot provide information about the cost of compensation stemming specifically from paramilitary violence as there is often no way of ascertaining the motives of a victim's assailants unless a prosecution follows. In many cases where the assailant(s) are unknown, or where no prosecution has taken place, the Agency could only speculate about the perpetrator's motives and consequently figures provided on that basis would be very unreliable.

I am sorry that I cannot be more helpful.

PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

Millennium Compliance

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the President of the Council what languages other than English have been used in advertising designed to convey the Government's message about year 2000 compliance to ethnic minority communities. [98424]

(4) if he will list by unit of delivery the number and percentage of those who have left the New Deal for 18–24 year olds before taking up one of the options. [95089]

Ms Jowell: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what percentage of people leaving the new deal for 18 to 24 year olds had by the end of August returned to the new deal or jobseeker's allowance (a) within 13 weeks, (b) within 26 weeks and (c) within 52 weeks. [98187]

Ms Jowell: I will write to my right hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

University for Industry

Mr. Hilary Benn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if the proposed Learning and Skills Council will have any responsibility for funding students learning with the University for Industry. [98143]

Mr. Wicks: The Learning and Skills Council will be responsible for funding all post-16 education and training apart from work-based training for adults, which will be the responsibility of the Employment Service. Funding for University for Industry students is being considered in the context of developing the proposals set out in "Learning to Succeed" and the Government's spending review next year.

Mr. Hilary Benn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what discussions he has had with the Further Education Funding Council about the funding of persons studying with the University for Industry. [98141]

Mr. Wicks: The Department is in regular contact with the Further Education Funding Council about such funding. Following guidance from the Secretary of State, the Council has earmarked £20.25 million to support Ufl learners from within its total grant-in-aid for 2000–01. Discussions are underway between the Department, the Council and Ufl Ltd. on funding Ufl learners from 2001–02 onwards.

Mr. Wicks: The finalised specifications for the new GCE Advanced Subsidiary and Advanced level qualifications and the new General National Vocational Qualifications to be introduced for teaching from September 2000 will be available to schools and colleges in January 2000. Draft versions of the AS and A level specifications are already available on the awarding bodies' websites.

Grammar Schools

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the grammar schools visited by himself or his Ministers since May 1997, identifying the Minister in each case. [98144]

Ms Estelle Morris: In the course of their work, Ministers visit around 300 schools each year, some of which are grammar schools. Visits are based on invitations received. We do not have a breakdown of visits by type of school.

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what the average unit of resource derived from public funds and authorised tuition fees, where applicable, was for a full-time equivalent student at a higher education institution in England for the past three academic years; and what figure is projected for the current year. [98240]

Mr. Wicks: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy in the Library.

"Learning to Succeed"

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what measures he is taking to maintain morale and staff retention and to give advice and assistance to those employed by organisations likely to be affected by proposals in "Learning to Succeed" (Cm. 4392); with particular reference to (a) the Further Education Funding Council, (b) training and enterprise councils; and (c) the training standards council; and if he will make a statement. [98099]

Mr. Wicks: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Trainee Teachers

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what studies he has made into differences in the course drop-out rate for trainee teachers according to (a) whether they are on Bachelor or Postgraduate Certificate of Education courses, (b) their gender, (c) their ethnic origin and (d) whether or not they are disabled; and if he will make a statement. [98100]

Ms Estelle Morris: The proportion of those who start initial teacher training courses who do not gain qualified teacher status is estimated to be 29 per cent. for undergraduate courses and 13 per cent. for postgraduate courses, based on those gaining qualified teacher status from October 1997 to September 1998.

Information on gender, ethnic origin and disabled status is not available.

The Initial Teacher Training performance profiles, published by the Teacher Training Agency in September 1999, show the percentage of final year trainees in 1997–98 who had gained qualified teacher status by 31 July 1998, split by postgraduate and undergraduate trainees. For primary initial teacher training 90 per cent. of final year undergraduates and 85 per cent. of final year postgraduates gained qualified teacher training. Figures for secondary initial teacher training are given for individual subjects. These figures do not take into account drop-out during earlier years of the course, which mainly applies to undergraduate trainees, or of those who gained qualified teacher status after 31 July 1998.

Computer Rental

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when he intends to introduce the scheme to provide for the low cost rental of computers to low income families. [97914]

Mr. Wills [holding answer 10 November 1999]: The initiative to offer subsidised recycled computers at low personal cost to low-income learners and families will begin operating in Spring 2000 on a pilot basis. The prospectus inviting responses from interested organisations wishing to participate will be issued later this month.

(2) what assessment he has made of the comparative administration costs associated with (a) New Deal trainees and (b) FEFC-funded students in further education colleges; [97904]

(3) what guidance he has issued to the Employment Service in respect of the exceptional circumstances in which New Deal trainees taking the full-time education option can progress to Level 3 courses. [97905]

Ms Jowell: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Advanced Skills Teachers

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate he has made of the number of advanced skills teachers who will be in post in each of the next five years. [97845]

Ms Estelle Morris: Estimates have not been made for each of the next five years, but it is planned to expand the number of advanced skills teachers to about 10,000 in the longer term.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many advanced skills teachers are currently in post; and if he will give a breakdown of the number of advanced skills teachers in (a) each local education authority and (b) each education action zone in (i) primary and (ii) secondary schools. [97847]

Ms Estelle Morris: The information is not yet available. Detailed information for January 2000 is being collected from local authorities and should be available by April 2000.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the average pay of advanced skills teachers. [97848]

Ms Estelle Morris: This information is not held centrally at present.

Sure Start

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) for what Sure Start areas incidences of low birthweight and teenage pregnancy have been selection criteria; [95541]

(2) what geographical size of area can apply for Sure Start funding; [95514]

(3) how the areas applying for Sure Start funds are assessed against each of the three selection criteria; and what weight is given to each of the three criteria in the selection process. [95513]

Yvette Cooper: I have been asked to reply.

The 60 areas of the country invited to develop a Sure Start programme in the first round were selected because they scored highly on an index of local deprivation, already had existing local projects which demonstrated many of the key aspects of Sure Start, and provided an opportunity for Sure Start to develop in a range of different settings. Local partners decided on the Sure Start catchment area within their district.

Guidance on the choice of area, including its size, is in the booklet, "Sure Start: a guide for trailblazers" which is available in the Library. Becoming a Sure Start programme is not a competitive process, and no further assessment is made centrally provided the catchment area chosen is consistent with the guidance.

Incidences of low birthweight and teenage pregnancy were factors in the criteria for selection of all 60 areas since, along with the index of local deprivation, these are factors which point to areas where children's needs are pressing.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list for each of the Start Trailblazers, how many new child care places for children aged 0–5 years will be created in (a) playgroups, (b) child minders and (c) nurseries as part of the Sure Start Programme. [95170]

Yvette Cooper: I have been asked to reply.

The information requested is not currently available. However, we will get regular data from programmes once they are running on the total number of children and families helped against milestones set in their delivery plans. The 60 trailblazer programmes are producing delivery plans for approval for Ministers. Each programme is required to ensure access to good quality play, learning and child care for young children.

Disability (Yorkshire and Humberside)

Caroline Flint: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what proportion of people employed by each local authority in Yorkshire and Humberside are registered disabled. [98032]

Ms Hodge: The information requested is not available because there is no longer any requirement for disabled people to register as disabled. Those parts of the Disabled Persons (Employment) Act 1944 which were about registration were repealed when the employment provisions of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 came into force on 2 December 1996.

Teacher Pensions (Shropshire)

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what the estimated increase is in the cost of teachers' pensions in Shropshire for 2000–01 compared with 1999–2000; and how this will be funded. [98165]

Mr. Wicks: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my reply in the Library.

Kent Education Business Partnership

Mr. Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has for the future funding of the Kent Education Business Partnership; and if he will make a statement. [98083]

Ms Estelle Morris: We are working closely with the National Education Business Partnership Network and others to determine how best to ensure a smooth transition period for Education Business Partnerships prior to the introduction of the Learning and Skills Council. Many EBPs, including Kent, carry out excellent work. This work will be further enhanced by the additional funding for enterprise skills in schools announced in the Pre Budget Report on 9 November.

Ms Estelle Morris: At the end of September 1999 the number of staff in the Unit was 204. The running cost budget for the Unit in the current year is £5.9 million.

Action Zones

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what is the total amount of matched funding which has been pledged by business in the first year of the operation of Round Two Education Action Zones; and what proportion of that funding will be in cash; [98284]

(2) how much of the £18 million of sponsorship for the Education Action Zone initiative which was announced on 8 November has been (a) in kind and (b) in cash. [98283]

Ms Estelle Morris: Over £6 million for Round one and £12 million for Round two Education Action Zones has been pledged for their first year of operations. Redundancies

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assistance is provided to former grant maintained schools which make staff redundant on changing to foundation school status. [98366]

Ms Estelle Morris: The costs of making teachers redundant must be met by the local education authority, except in so far as an authority has good reason to deduct some or all of the cost from the school's budget share.

Bilateral Concordat

Ms Ryan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when he will be publishing the bilateral concordat between his Department and the Scottish Executive. [98410]

Mr. Blunkett: I have now concluded the concordat with my counterparts in the Scottish Executive. I am arranging for a copy to be placed in the Library.

Service Development Fund

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what sums have been allocated to the Service Development Fund for (a) 2000–01 and (b) 2001–02 indicating those allocations and expenditures made from the Service Development Fund to date. [98250]

Mr. Blunkett: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Expenditure Statistics

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the (a) planned and

(b) actual education expenditure by (a) central and (b) local government for 1996–97, 1997–98 and 1998–99, indicating the change for each year compared with the previous year in (i) cash and (ii) real terms. [98335]

Mr. Blunkett: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Spending Review

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if the decision to class student loans as Government assets was taken into account when the total additional educational expenditure announced under the Comprehensive Spending Review (Cm. 4011) was calculated. [98336]

Mr. Blunkett: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what (a) amount and (b) percentage of the extra money for education announced under the Comprehensive Spending Review (Cm. 4011) is to be expended (i) through the Standards Fund, (ii) through education standard spending assessments and (iii) otherwise. [98251]

Ms Estelle Morris: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy in the Library.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the announcements of additional expenditure on education made between May 1997 and the publication of the Comprehensive Spending Review (Cm. 4011), stating the date of the announcement and the amount announced in each case. [98253]

Mr. Blunkett: In July 1997 the Chancellor announced an additional £1.3 billion for schools in the UK (£1.1 billion for England) over the life of the Parliament, financed by the Windfall Tax, to start tackling the backlog of repairs to school buildings. At the same time, he announced that in 1998–99 an extra £1 billion would be available UK-wide for local authority current spending on schools (£835 million in England). In March 1998, he announced a further £200 million for education in England in 1998–99, of which £10 million was for Education Action Zones; £90 million for capital spending in schools to reduce infant class sizes, eliminate outside toilets and improve heating systems; £90 million to improve skills and £10 million for the University for Industry.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much of the extra money for education announced under the Comprehensive Spending Review (Cm. 4011) has been (a) allocated to and (b) spent on (i) employment and (ii) Welfare to Work programmes, for each relevant financial year. [98246]

Mr. Blunkett: None of the extra money announced for education under the Comprehensive Spending Review has been allocated to, or spent on, employment. Of the Department's total budget the following sums have been allocated to employment and Welfare to Work programmes:

£ million

	1999–2000	2000–01	2001–02
Employment	1,028	1,026	1,022
Welfare to Work[1]	86	86	86

[1] The majority of the Welfare to Work programmes are funded from the Windfall Tax levy. The Comprehensive Spending Review settlement did not include Windfall Tax levy allocations.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the announcements of extra expenditure on education since July 1998 not included in the additional money announced under the Comprehensive Spending Review (Cm. 4011), giving the dates of those announcements and amounts announced in each case. [98252]

Mr. Blunkett: The March 1999 Budget provided £400 million for England from the Capital Modernisation Fund for a network of learning centres aimed at improving standards and access to IT; £230 million across the UK from the National Lottery's New Opportunities Fund to help teachers purchase IT equipment for use at home (England's share of this was £180 million, 80 per cent.) and £49 million for schools in England to spend on books.

The November 1999 Pre-Budget Report provided £100 million PFI credits for schools; and £50 million from the windfall levy for the New Deal for Schools to repair and replace school buildings (of which England's share was £43 million).

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much of the extra money for education announced under the Comprehensive Spending Review (Cm. 4011) included (a) matched funding for standards fund and other centrally-managed projects contributed by local authorities and (b) permission to local authorities and others to increase their borrowings. [98245]

Ms Estelle Morris: Plans for the standards fund and capital allocations for 2000–01 and 2001–02 have not been finalised, so it is not possible to give a full answer to the question. In 1999–2000, English local authorities matched funding contributions to the Standards Fund were £120m higher than in 1998–99; Education Standard Spending Assessments in 1999–2000 rose by £1,100m. Credit approvals for education capital expenditure in England increased by £77m in the same period. The costs of this additional borrowing are supported through the capital financing standard spending assessment (CFSSA); the increases in CFSSA do not form part of the £19 billion.

Education Initiatives (Funding)

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to his answer of 28 June 1999, Official Report, columns 56–58, concerning education initiatives launched since May 1997, how much of each initiative's budget was (a) spent centrally and (b) distributed in grants in financial years (i) 1997–98 and (ii) 1998–99. [98327]

Mr. Blunkett: The programmes listed in my right hon. Friend's response of 28 June are all specific grants distributed by my Department. None of these funds were spent centrally.

Socially Excluded Young People

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what arrangements he will make to ensure that personal advisers to socially excluded young people are (a) suitably qualified, (b) monitored in their activities and (c) offered a career structure. [94749]

Ms Jowell: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Departmental Vehicles

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the total number of vehicles used by his Department and its agencies fuelled by (a) petrol, (b) diesel and (c) liquid petroleum gas; and what plans he has to increase the rate of conversion of those vehicles to liquid petroleum gas. [98208]

Mr. Wills: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Departmental Waste

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to set targets for the recycling of waste (a) paper, (b) cardboard, (c) glass, (d) metal, (e) plastic and (f) other products created by his Department and its agencies; and if he will make a statement. [98222]

Mr. Wills: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Class Sizes

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to his answers of 27 July 1999, Official Report, column 185, and 29 October 1999, Official Report, column 1009, concerning class sizes, when he now plans to write to the hon. Member for Hertsmere. [98237]

Ms Estelle Morris: I replied to the hon. Member, as promised, on 4 November. Copies of my letter have also been placed in the Library.

Mr. Tony Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what measures he is taking to reduce class sizes in Northampton South. [98321]

Ms Estelle Morris: Our pledge is to reduce all infant class sizes to 30 or below by September 2001 at the latest. The number of children in large infant classes in Northamptonshire Local Education Authority has already been reduced from 5,773 in January 1998 to 2,749 in September 1999, reflecting a national fall from 485,000 to 181,000 over the same period. Northamptonshire LEA's approved Infant Class Size Plan will reduce infant class sizes to 30 or less in virtually all schools by September 2000. We have already provided revenue funding amounting to £363,000 for 24 teachers and capital funding of £1.25 million for 15 new classrooms to enable Northamptonshire to carry out its plan. We will shortly agree further funding so that the Authority can implement in full next year.

New Deal (North-west)

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many people have benefited from the New Deals in (a) the north-west and (b) Lancashire. [97612]

Ms Jowell: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

New Deal Gateway

Ms Shipley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many young people who have been in local authority care have completed the New Deal Gateway and left for (a) unsubsidised employment, (b) subsidised employment, (c) education or training, (d) an environmental task force, (e) the voluntary sector, (f) other benefits, (g) other known destinations and (h) unknown destinations. [97303]

Ms Jowell: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Ms Shipley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many young people who have been in local authority care have entered the New Deal; and what proportion this represents of care leavers aged 18 to 24 years who are unemployed. [97305]

Ms Jowell: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

IT Projects

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the information technology projects undertaken by his Department, agencies and non-departmental public bodies, including the (a) start date, (b) planned completion date, (c) expected completion date, (d) planned cost and (e) estimated cost; and if he will make a statement. [98021]

Mr. Wills: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy in the Library.

EU Directive (Armed Forces)

Mr. Stinchcombe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps the Government have taken to implement EU Directive 94/33/EC on the protection of young people at work in relation to the safety of the working conditions of personnel under the age of 18 years in the armed services. [96589]

Mr. Spellar: I have been asked to reply.

I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

WALES

Financial Allocations

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales for what reasons an extra £35 million was allocated to his Department in addition to the block grant during the financial year 1998–99. [98020]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The £35 million was allocated to the Welsh Office as a call on the Reserve in 1998–99, to meet inescapable expenditure in that year.

Public Sector Employment

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what percentage of the work force in Wales was employed in the public sector at the latest available date. [98041]

Mr. Paul Murphy: According to the Summer 1999 Labour Force Survey, between June and August 1999 an estimated 27 per cent. of people in employment in Wales were working in the public sector.

EU Structural Funds

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with the First Secretary of the National Assembly for Wales concerning how funding approved under Objective 1 criteria is to be spent. [98193]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The content of the plan setting out the strategic priorities for use of Objective 1 funding in West Wales and the Valleys is a matter for the National Assembly for Wales and the Welsh Structural Funds partnership. The exact nature of schemes to be approved for funding will depend on projects which come forward from sponsors within the priorities set out in the plan once approved by the European Commission. However, I take a keen interest in seeking to ensure that a wide range of good quality projects come forward from a range of partners and have discussed this with the First Secretary of the National Assembly for Wales and other interested parties.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with the First Secretary of the National Assembly for Wales regarding obtaining matched funding for Objective 1 funding; and what assessment he has made of the sources this funding will come from. [98194]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The First Secretary and I meet frequently and discuss a range of issues, including Objective 1. There are many potential sources of match funding, both private and public sector, but it is a matter for regional partners and project sponsors to identify match funding for projects.

Departmental Waste

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to set targets for the recycling of waste (a) paper, (b) cardboard, (c) glass, (d) metal, (e) plastic and (f) other products created by his Department and its agencies; and if he will make a statement. [98232]

Mr. Paul Murphy: My Department's approach to waste management is based on the three "R"s, with "Recovery" (i.e. recycling, composting and energy recovery) following "Reduce" and "Re-use" as the preferred options for reducing waste sent to landfill. This should help us to achieve the Green Ministers' target for Government Departments of recovering a minimum of 40 per cent. of total office waste, with at least 25 per cent. of that recovery coming from recycling or composting, in 2000–01, as published in "Greening Government: First Annual Report of the Green Ministers Committee 1998–99".

My Department has a staff of 34 and a correspondingly small production of waste. We have, therefore, set no individual targets for paper, cardboard, glass, metal, plastic and other materials, and we do not keep formal records of waste recycled. We recycle paper as a matter of routine.

Departmental Vehicles

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the total number of vehicles used by his Department and its agencies fuelled by (a) petrol, (b) diesel and (c) liquid petroleum gas; and what plans he has to increase the rate of conversion of those vehicles to liquid petroleum gas. [98198]

Mr. Paul Murphy: This Department uses two cars from the Government Car Service which are both fuelled by petrol.

It is the policy of the Government Car Service to offer models fuelled by liquid petroleum gas when cars are due for renewal, and this matter will be considered then.

SCOTLAND

Health Service Expenditure

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the expenditure per head on health services in Scotland for the current financial year and each of the two previous financial years. [97966]

Dr. Reid: Planned net expenditure on the National Health Service in Scotland in 1999–2000 was £964 per head. Actual expenditure per head in 1997–98 and 1998–99 was £850 and £901 respectively. Responsibility for the National Health Service in Scotland is now a matter for the Scottish Executive.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the expenditure per head for each Scottish health board area estimated for the current financial year and for each of the previous two financial years. [97965]

Dr. Reid: The identifiable net cash expenditure per head of population for each Health Board in 1997–98 and 1998–99 and the planned expenditure for 1999–2000 is set out in the table.

[1] Outturn
[2] Plan

The figures do not take account of the cost of services provided on a national basis nor is it possible to differentiate between expenditure on a Health Board's own resident population and expenditure on some services provided to other Health Boards' residents. Health Board areas' weighted population figures have been used in the above calculations. The figures for 1999–2000 are not directly comparable with the earlier years because some services, such as ambulances, which were included in Health Boards' allocations in 1997–98 and 1998–99 are being met centrally in 1999–2000. Similarly the 1999–2000 figures do not take account of allocations, such as end year flexibility, which have still to be notified to Health Boards. The above figures are on a cash basis and therefore the year on year comparisons may also be distorted by capital expenditure. Responsibility for the National Health Service in Scotland is now a matter for the Scottish Executive.

Departmental Vehicles

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the total number of vehicles used by his Department and its agencies fuelled by (a) petrol, (b) diesel and (c) liquid petroleum gas; and what plans he has to increase the rate of conversion of those vehicles to liquid petroleum gas. [98200]

Dr. Reid: My Department leases 2 vehicles from the Government Car Service.

Departmental Waste

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to set targets for the recycling of waste (a) paper, (b) cardboard, (c) glass, (d) metal, (e) plastic and (f) other products created by his Department and its agencies; and if he will make a statement. [98228]

Dr. Reid: My Department's approach to waste management is based on the three "R"s: with "Recovery" (ie. recycling, composting and energy recovery) following "Reduce" and "Re-use" as the preferred options for reducing waste sent to landfill. This should help us to achieve the Green Ministers' target for Government Departments of recovering a minimum of 40 per cent. of total office waste, with at least 25 per cent. of that recovery coming from recycling or composting, in 2000–01, as published in "Greening Government; First Annual Report of the Green Ministers Committee 1998–99".

TREASURY

PSBR

15. Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the Treasury's estimate of the public sector borrowing requirement or surplus for (a) April 2000, (b) September 2000, (c) April 2001, (d) September 2001 and (e) April 2002. [97004]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The Pre-Budget Report includes annual forecasts of the surplus on current budget and public sector net borrowing. The Government do not publish monthly forecasts of these.

ISAs and PEPs

16. Mr. Loughton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many new savers have been created by the creation of ISAs. [97005]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Inland Revenue does not yet have detailed information about individuals tax free savings patterns. As my predecessor told the hon. Gentleman on 8 July, this information will be available once the Inland Revenue have analysed provider's annual returns after ISAs have been running for a full year.

Mr. Fallon: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the total value of (a) ISAs sold in the period April to September and (b) PEPs sold in the same months in 1998. [97862]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 9 November 1999]: Aggregate figures for the total amount subscribed to ISAs up to 5 October 1999 are not yet available.

Scotland

17. Ms Osborne: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his assessment of the impact of his economic policies in Scotland. [97006]

Mr. Gordon Brown: In Scotland, as in the rest of the United Kingdom, we have created a sound and credible platform for stability that will help us attain our objective of high and stable levels of growth and employment.

29. Miss Begg: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the impact of his Department's policies on the levels of employment and unemployment in Scotland. [97018]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Present policies are designed to achieve high and stable levels of growth and employment through promoting employment opportunities for all—in Scotland as well as the UK. Since the election, Scottish unemployment has fallen by 36,000 and Scottish employment has risen by 20,000, both in line with UK trends.

Exports

18. Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the change in price competitiveness of British exports since May 1997. [97007]

Miss Melanie Johnson: There is strong evidence that exporters are coping well with the continued high level of sterling. Export volumes rose strongly over the summer to their highest ever level, and latest surveys show manufacturing output in October growing for the seventh consecutive month.

Tax Burden

19. Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received regarding the national tax burden. [97008]

Dawn Primarolo: The Government have had a number of representations on this issue.

22. Mr. Fallon: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will indicate the difference between the tax burden in 1996–97 and his projection for the tax burden in 2001–02 on the basis that income tax credits are accounted for as expenditure rather than as negative taxation. [97011]

Dawn Primarolo: Total income tax credits in 1996–97 were 3 per cent. of GDP as compared to the Pre-Budget Report projection of 0.7 per cent. of GDP in 2001–02. New tax credits will be paid by the Inland Revenue through pay packets as income tax credits and will be regarded as such by families that receive them.

Working Families Tax Credit

20. Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the contribution Working Families Tax Credit is making to the alleviation of poverty in Liverpool, Riverside. [97009]

Mr. Timms: The Working Families Tax Credit tackles poverty by boosting the incomes of 1.5 million working families including the constituents of my hon. Friend, who will receive on average £24 a week more than they would have with Family Credit. The Working Families Tax Credit makes work pay and will increase employment opportunities.

31. Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many inquiries have been received by the Working Families Tax Credit response line from Wales. [97020]

Dawn Primarolo: Up to midnight on 2 November, there were just under 24,000 calls to the Working Families Tax Credit response line from callers with a Welsh post code.

32. Caroline Flint: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the impact the working families tax credit will have in increasing the financial incentives for women to work. [97021]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Working Families Tax Credit makes work pay and will improve incentives for all working families. The childcare tax credit which provides up to £105 per week towards childcare costs, will be of particular help to women who want to work.

36. Mr. Goggins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the number of children in Wythenshawe and Sale, East who will be removed from poverty as result of the Working Families Tax Credit. [97025]

Dawn Primarolo: The measures announced by the Chancellor in his last budget, including WFTC, will together lift one and a quarter million people out of poverty—800,000 of them children. There is, however, no estimate available for Wythenshawe and Sale, East.

Caroline Flint: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he will take to ensure that recipients of working families tax credit are able to make provision for a retirement pension. [98030]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 10 November 1999]: Most recipients of working families tax credit pay national insurance contributions towards entitlement for retirement pension. For those who do not, pension entitlement is safeguarded by the automatic award of national insurance credits for each week of receipt of working families tax credit.

Caroline Flint: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many calls have been received by the Working Families Tax Credit Hotline since its inception (a) nationally and (b) in the Yorkshire and the Humberside Region. [98031]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 10 November 1999]: Up to midnight last night, the telephone response line had handled just over 700,000 calls nationally. In the Tyne & Yorkshire TV region the response line had handled just over 80,000 calls.

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many new claims for Working Families Tax Credit were granted during October; how many new claims there were for family credit in each of the previous 12 months; and how many six-monthly renewals of entitlement have occurred in each of the previous 13 months; [98292]

(2) how many calls about Working Families Tax Credit have been received at the Inquiry Line; and how many have led to a claim being granted. [98295]

Dawn Primarolo: I shall write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Ms Julie Morgan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many phone calls have been made to the freephone number for information about the Working Families Tax Credit (a) in total and (b) from Wales. [98405]

Dawn Primarolo: Up to midnight last night, the telephone response line had handled just over 700,000 calls nationally. We estimate that there were around 27,000 calls from callers with a Welsh post code.

Bank of England Independence

21. Mr. Heppell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received on his policy of independence of the Bank of England. [97010]

Mr. Andrew Smith: A wide range of people and international organisations, such as the IMF and OECD, have welcomed the Chancellor's decision to grant the Bank of England operational independence to set interest rates to meet the Government's inflation target. In a recent report the Treasury Committee said:

"The Chancellor's decision to transfer day to day control of monetary policy to a politically independent Bank of England has been vindicated so far in the transparency and technical quality of the process of decision making."

The public can be confident that low inflation will be delivered in practice. This is the most important contribution monetary policy can make to achieving the Government's objective of high and stable levels of growth and employment.

28. Mr. Plaskitt: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of his policy of granting operational independence over monetary policy to the Bank of England. [97017]

Miss Melanie Johnson: A Treasury paper "the New Monetary Policy Framework", published on 19 October, concluded that the Monetary Policy Committee's record so far in meeting the Government's inflation target was a good one. Inflation has stayed close to the Government's target and is expected to remain so; interest rates peaked at half the level recorded in the previous cycle; and despite global instability last year, the UK avoided a repeat of the boom and bust seen so often in the past. The success of the new framework has also been recognised by international bodies such as the IMF and OECD.

Motoring Taxes

23. Mr. Paterson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on (a) vehicle excise duty and (b) fuel duties. [97012]

Mr. Timms: The Pre-Budget Report document published on 9 November provides the latest explanation of policy on vehicle excise fuel duties.

East Midlands

24. Mr. Reed: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has for encouraging greater economic growth in the East Midlands. [97013]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Since the election we have been putting in place a new framework of stability, employability, productivity and responsibility to deliver the Government's objectives of high and stable levels of growth and employment. This framework offers the best prospect of increased prosperity for all—both in the East Midlands and the rest of the UK.

The East Midlands Development Agency, which became operational from 1 April this year, will help to further economic development and regeneration in the East Midlands. In promoting employment, business efficiency, investment and competitiveness, the agency will work with business and the wider community towards the Government's aim of sustained economic prosperity.

HIP Countries

25. Mr. Kidney: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of whether the International Monetary Fund has adequate resources for the enhanced heavily indebted poor countries initiative. [97014]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The IMF/World Bank Annual Meetings in Washington in September reached agreement on all the elements of a financing package that will enable the Fund to make its full contribution to the HIPC Initiative.

Climate Change Levy

26. Mr. Pike: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent representations he has received on the proposed climate change levy. [97015]

Mr. Timms: My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer has received a number of representations on the climate change levy. The views expressed fed in to the further details on the design of the levy announced by the Chancellor in his Pre-Budget Report statement.

37. Mr. Illsley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on exemption from his proposed climate change levy. [97026]

Mr. Timms: The Government believe that all sectors of the economy must play their part in helping tackle the problem of climate change. So there will not be complete exemptions from the climate change levy for particular firms or sectors. In line with Lord Marshall's recommendation, the Government propose to retain an incentive for all firms to save energy at the margin. But the Government do recognise the special position of energy intensive industries and intends to offer an 80 per cent. discount to those energy intensive sectors that sign energy efficiency agreements which meet the Government's criteria.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what calculation he has made of the effects of different levels of climate change levy on enabling the UK to meet the targets for reduction in greenhouse gas emissions under the Kyoto protocol and the Government's domestic goal for reducing carbon dioxide emissions; [97722]

(2) what assessment he has made of the impact of the climate change levy assuming that all its costs are passed on to consumers; and if he will make a statement; [97623]

(3) what assessment he has made of the report by Business Strategies entitled "The Climate Change Levy—Impact on the UK Economy"; and if he will make a statement; [97625]

(4) what calculation he has made of the cost of collection and administration of the climate change levy for (a) the Government, (b) large companies and (c) small and medium sized enterprises; and if he will make a statement; [97855]

(5) what representations he has received from scientists and engineers about the effect of the climate change levy on (a) large companies and (b) small and medium sized enterprises; and if he will make a statement; [97840]

(6) if he will assess the effect the climate change levy will have on GDP, based on the assumption that industry will not be able to pass on the climate change levy to customers; and if he will make a statement; [97858]

(7) what assessment he has made of the effect the climate change levy will have on the balance of payments between the UK and the Republic of Ireland; and if he will make a statement; [97859]

(8) if he will exempt companies which make reductions in their carbon dioxide emissions commensurate with the UK's national reduction targets agreed at Kyoto from the climate change levy; and if he will make a statement; [97861]

(9) what assessment he has made of the impact the climate change levy would have on future investment in the UK; and if he will make a statement. [97854]

Mr. Timms: My hon. Friend's questions touch upon a number of issues surrounding the introduction of the climate change levy and I will write to him shortly to respond in full to the points raised. I will arrange for a copy of that letter to be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Luff: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the application of the Climate Change Levy to the horticultural industry. [98406]

Mr. Timms: The Government believe that all sectors of the economy must play their part in tackling climate change. The climate change levy is designed to be revenue neutral for the private sector as a whole, with all the revenues raised being fully recycled back to business through a cut in employers' National Insurance Contributions (NICs) and additional support for energy efficiency measures.

It is not possible to say what the exact impact of the levy on the horticultural sector will be. That will depend on a number of factors including, for example, their future energy consumption, what use they make of electricity generated from "new" renewable sources of energy and in "good quality" combined heat and power plants, and whether they take advantage of the proposed introduction of a system of enhanced capital allowances for energy saving investments. The horticulture sector will also benefit from the lower overall rates of the climate change levy announced by the Chancellor in his Pre-Budget Report statement.

Credit Unions

27. Mr. Drew: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assistance he offers to credit unions and similar organisations which provide help to those who cannot or choose not to borrow through more traditional means. [97016]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Government support the credit union ethos of encouraging people to start to save. I plan to make an announcement shortly on a number of measures designed to help credit unions.

Personal Service Companies

30. Mrs. Lait: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his policy on the taxation of personal service companies. [97019]

Dawn Primarolo: We believe that people will be able to use service companies if they wish, as long as they pay their fair share of tax and National Insurance Contributions.

Saving

33. Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what measures he has taken to encourage saving. [97022]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Government's strategy is two-fold. Firstly, it is to ensure economic stability, including low and stable inflation. High and variable inflation, such as the UK experienced in the past, discourages saving. The Government has reformed the macroeconomic framework to build a sound and credible platform of stability: inflation is close to target and expected to remain so. This will encourage savings and investment.

Supporting this is the introduction of a variety of measures. These include tax free individual savings accounts (ISAs) for short term at-need savings; pensions, especially stakeholder pensions, for planning for retirement; improved transparency and value of savings products, such as CAT standards for ISAs and pooled pensions investments (ppis); better regulation of the financial services industry through the Financial Services and Markets Bill; and raising consumer awareness, such as the Financial Services Authority's plans for comparative information on savings and investment products.

Taxation

34. Mr. Swayne: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the extra tax payable since May 1997 as a result of his Budget measures. [97023]

Dawn Primarolo: Costings of the measures in the July 1997, March 1998 and March 1999 Budgets are given in tables 2.2, 1.3 and 1.3 of the respective Financial Statement and Budget Reports.

39. Mr. Gray: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the net change to the amount of tax payable in the period 1999–2000 to 2001–02 as a result of the three Budgets since July 1997. [97028]

Dawn Primarolo: Costings of the measures in the July 1997, March 1998 and March 1999 Budgets are given in tables 2.2, 1.3 and 1.3 of the respective Financial Statement and Budget Reports.

Pesticides Tax

35. Mr. Gill: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received regarding the proposed pesticides tax. [97024]

Mr. Timms: Ninety nine responses were received in the course of the consultation exercise on the design of a tax or charge scheme for pesticides. A summary of these was published on 9 November.

Fuel Duty Escalator

38. Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the future of the fuel duty escalator. [97027]

Mr. Timms: The Government's policy on the fuel duty escalator is set out on page 121 of the 1999 Financial Statement & Budget Report.

European Central Bank

40. Mr. John Cryer: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the mechanisms of public accountability of the European Central Bank. [97029]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The EC Treaty contains several provisions designed to ensure the accountability of the European Central Bank. In accordance with Article 113(3) of the Treaty, the ECB is required to submit an annual report on the activities of the European System of Central Banks, and on the monetary policy of both the previous and current year to the European Parliament, the Council, the Commission and the European Council. The President of the ECB is required to present the report to the Council and to the European Parliament which may hold a general debate on that basis. In addition, the President of the ECB and the other members of the ECB's Executive Board may, at the request of the European Parliament or on their own initiative, be heard by the committees of the European Parliament.

"Building Trust in Statistics"

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the total cost to public funds of printing and publishing Building Trust in Statistics (Cm 4412). [98040]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Denzil Davies, dated 11 November 1999:

As the Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your recent parliamentary question on the total cost to public funds of printing and publishing Building Trust in Statistics (CM. 4412).

The cost to the ONS for printing and publishing Building Trust in Statistics was £2,059. All other printing costs fall entirely to The Stationery Office, the private sector publishers.

Import Duties

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many category-lines of duty there are on imported goods and services under the Integrated Tariff of the United Kingdom. [98162]

Dawn Primarolo: There are 15,600 commodity lines within the Integrated Tariff. Identifying how many carry positive rates of duty would be disproportionately costly. Services are not covered by the Integrated Tariff.

Land Settlement Association

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received as to the fairness and legality of the tax treatment of former tenants of the Land Settlement Association in respect of the settlement of their litigation against the Ministry of Agriculture in 1991; and if he will make a statement. [98082]

Dawn Primarolo: Representations have been made querying the raising of tax charges by the Inland Revenue in respect of out of court compensation paid by MAFF to a number of former tenants of the Land Settlement Association. It has been explained that a compensation payment received for personal hardship is not liable to income tax, but a compensation payment received for the loss of trading profits is taxable as trading income, and that the nature of a compensation payment in an out of court settlement depends on the terms of the settlement read in the light of the pleadings.

It has also been made clear that Ministers do not intervene in individual cases. The Inland Revenue's independence from Treasury Ministers in the handling of individuals' tax affairs must be scrupulously observed. Where disputes continue between taxpayers and the Revenue it is for the Appeal Commissioners and the Courts to determine how the law is to be applied.

National Insurance Fund

Mr. Love: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the deficit and surplus of the National Insurance Fund in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available. [98059]

Dawn Primarolo: The available figures for Great Britain are provided in the table.

£ million

Year	[1]Surplus/deficit
1989–90	–62
1990–91	1,485
1991–92	–3,459
1992–93	–4,897
1993–94	1,112
1994–95	2,279
1995–96	1,008
1996–97	–98
1997–98	1,871
1998–99	2,565

[1] Excess of receipts over repayments

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the loss to the National Insurance Fund in 2001–02 and 2002–03 from the reduction of employers' contributions resulting from the introduction of a levy on business use of energy in April 2001; and what proposals he has to compensate the Fund for that loss. [97618]

Mr. Timms: The Chancellor announced in the Pre-Budget Report that the employers' rate of National Insurance would be cut from 12.2 per cent. to 11.9 per cent. This change will reduce the level of the National Insurance Fund by around £1 billion in 2001–02 and in 2002–03. A Treasury Grant is used to ensure that the balances on the fund are maintained.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer to my right hon. Friend the Member for Birkenhead (Mr. Field) of 29 October 1999, Official Report, column 1031, by how much the National Insurance Fund balance at the end of each year from 1997–98 to 2001–02 inclusive exceeds the minimum level recommended by the Government Actuary. [97617]

Dawn Primarolo: Estimates for Great Britain are shown in the table.

£ million

	Fund balance[1]	Minimum level	Excess
1997–98	9,608	7,099	2,509
1998–99	12,173	7,429	4,744
1999–2000[2]	13,702	7,758	5,943

£ million

	Fund balance[1]	Minimum level	Excess
2000–01[2]	15,330	7,965	7,365
2001–02[2]	16,730	8,299	8,430

[1] At the end of the year
[2] The estimates for these years are based on the difference between forecasts of receipts and expenditure. Changes in these forecasts could have a substantial impact on the balance.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the balance of the National Insurance Fund at (a) 31 March, (b) 30 September and (c) the latest date for which information is available. [97359]

Dawn Primarolo: The balance of the National Insurance Fund (NIF) in Great Britain is estimated to be £12,173 million at 31 March 1999, rising to £13,702 million at 31 March 2000. An estimate for the balance of the NIF at September 1999 would be available only at disproportionate cost.

Independent Financial Advisers

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many independent financial advisers have applied to the pass scheme for professional indemnity insurance and have not obtained such insurance. [98078]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Pension Advisers Support System (PASS) was set up by those life offices which use independent financial advisers (IFAs) to provide help to small IFAs in the conduct of the pensions review. It is a voluntary scheme designed to improve speed of delivery of the regulatory requirements to review cases of potential pensions mis-selling.

PASS now has 2,910 members who benefit from a range of services. PASS itself does not provide professional indemnity (PI) insurance but offers members access to a panel of brokers able to assist in securing cover, and a panel of solicitors able to provide confidential advice on legal PI issues.

The PIA requires its member firms to maintain PI cover of a specified standard. While the price of that insurance has risen for some firms in the recent past, it continues to be widely available. While PIA are aware that some IFAs have had problems in finding compliant PI cover, IFAs who follow PIA's standards and guidance should be able to obtain it.

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many independent financial advisers have been prevented by the regulators from offering financial advice to the public, and for what reasons, since the start of phase 1 of the Pensions Mis-selling Review. [98077]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Since 1 April 1995, when the Personal Investment Authority (PIA) issued guidelines to the industry on Phase 1 of the review, 261 Independent Financial Adviser (IFA) firms regulated by the PIA have had their authorisation revoked, and were therefore prevented from offering investment advice to the public. The PIA can revoke firms' authorisation for a wide variety of reasons. No detailed analysis is readily available of the grounds for revocation in the case of these firms.

Financial Services Authority

Mr. Love: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent discussions he has held with the Financial Services Authority on the subject of financial exclusion; and if he will make a statement. [98057]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Financial Services Authority was represented on the Policy Action Team which examined access to financial services, whose report will be published shortly.

ECOFIN Council

Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the outcome was of the ECOFIN Council held in Brussels on 8 November; and if he will make a statement. [98156]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Paymaster General attended the Economic and Finance Council of Ministers in Brussels on 8 November.

There was a discussion of the proposed "tax package" (code of conduct on business taxation, taxation of savings and elimination of withholding taxes on cross order interest and royalty payments between companies). The United Kingdom position, set out in its paper on international bonds presented by the Chancellor of the Exchequer to the informal meeting of the Council in September, remains unchanged.

The Council agreed the detail of the funding package for HIPC (highly indebted poor countries) announced in Washington in September. A draft report on economic policy co-ordination was introduced by the chairman of the Economic and Finance Committee. This will be discussed again at the meeting on 29 November. A common statement on the introduction of euro notes and coins was agreed. The renewal of the European Investment Bank's mandate for lending to third countries was agreed, subject to a reservation by one member state. The Council took note of a Commission communication on risk capital and invited the Commission to prepare, for the Special European Council in Lisbon next March, a monitoring and benchmarking mechanism which would enable the Council to develop and implement the Risk capital Action Plan by identifying clear priorities and setting measurable objectives where appropriate. The chairman of the Economic Policy Committee (EPC) presented the joint opinions of the EPC and the Employment and Labour Market committee on the draft Guidelines for member states' employment policies for the year 2000 and on the draft Recommendations on the implementation of member states' employment policies. These will be discussed further at the joint ECOFIN/Social Affairs Council on 29 November.

Excise Duty

Mr. Gill: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the estimated annual amount of tax forgone as a consequence of the cross channel trade in (a) alcoholic drinks and (b) tobacco products. [97544]

Dawn Primarolo: HM Customs and Excise's latest estimates of the amount of revenue lost (excise duty and VAT) through legitimate cross-border shopping in 1998 and cross-Channel smuggling in 1999 were published in the table 5.1 of the Pre-Budget Report, a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House.

Middle-income Earners

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to relieve the tax burden on middle-income earners, defined as those earning between £15,000 and £29,000 per year. [97926]

Dawn Primarolo: As the Chancellor announced in his last Budget, and reaffirmed in the Pre-Budget Report, the basic rate of income tax will be cut from 23p to 22p from April 2000.

Savings Tax

Mr. Alan Campbell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment has been made of the cost of extending the 10 pence starting rate of tax to savings. [96863]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Chancellor announced in the Pre-Budget report that the starting rate of tax would apply to savings from April 1999 with a cost of £110 million. This estimate is based on the 1997–98 Survey of Personal Incomes.

Environmental Trusts

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list (a) the rules governing the local environmental trusts created under the provisions of landfill tax legislation, (b) the method or format by which nominated trustees are to be selected and (c) the common core provisions that have to exist in any trust's constitution, in particular in relation to safeguarding the trust's work from the interests of the industries contributing to the trusts. [97401]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 8 November 1999]: The Landfill Tax Regulations 1996 contain the legislative framework within which the Landfill Tax Environmental Bodies Scheme operates. Regulation 33 lays down the conditions that an environmental body has to meet in order for contributions to it to qualify for tax credits under the scheme. Regulation 33(1) precludes an environmental body from applying any of its funds for the benefit of any contributing landfill operator, and specifies that, to be eligible for approval, a body must not be controlled by one or more local authorities.

ENTRUST, the regulator for the scheme, also publishes literature detailing its requirements of prospective environmental bodies. I have asked ENTRUST to send a copy to my hon. Friend.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the membership of the regulatory body overseeing the work of environmental trusts set up under the landfill tax legislation, indicating from where the members are drawn, the duration of their office and their terms of reference. [97402]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 8 November 1999]: I am arranging for the information asked for by my hon. Friend about ENTRUST, the regulator of the landfill tax environmental bodies credit scheme, to be placed in the Library of the House.

Labour-intensive Services (VAT)

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proposals he has submitted to the European Commission for the lowering of zero rating of VAT on labour-intensive services delivered directly to the final consumer. [97391]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 5 November 1999]: Zero rating would not be permitted under the experimental scheme as the new Directive provides only for reduced rates of not less than 5 per cent. Any change to VAT coverage would be for the Chancellor to decide in the next Budget.

Mrs. Browning: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations Her Majesty's Government have made to the European Commission about Council Directive 1999/85/EC concerning reduced VAT rates on labour-intensive services. [98176]

Dawn Primarolo: The UK has made it clear to the Commission that any change to VAT rates and coverage would be for the Chancellor to decide in the next Budget.

Gold

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer in what form authority was given to the Governor of the Bank of England to sign the statement issued on 26 September by 15 European central banks entitled, Statement on Gold. [97392]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 8 November 1999]: By long-standing arrangement, the Bank acts as the Treasury's agent in managing the reserves. As is normal on such occasions the Treasury gave the Bank authority to act.

GDP (Health Spending)

Mr. Hilary Benn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the proportion of GDP spent on the NHS in each year since 1970. [96185]

Mr. Andrew Smith: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Special Advisers

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 27 July 1999, Official Report, columns 403–04, on special advisers, if he will give the cost incurred by Treasury special advisers, including travel and accommodation, for each individual occasion of official travel listed in the paper, Official Travel Overseas by Treasury Special Advisers 1997–99. [96968]

Miss Melanie Johnson: I refer the hon. Member to the answer the former Economic Secretary gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Hove (Mr. Caplin) on 27 July. Details of official travel overseas by Treasury special advisers were placed in the Library of the House on that day. The cost of overseas travel by special advisers accompanying Treasury Ministers was included in the figures in the Prime Minister's answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Stalybridge and Hyde (Mr. Pendry) on 17 June 1999, Official Report, columns 196–97.

VAT (France)

Mr. Gill: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what rate of VAT applies to (a) building repairs and (b) energy-saving materials in France. [98138]

Dawn Primarolo: France applies a standard VAT rate of 20.6 per cent. to general building repairs and the purchase of energy saving materials. There is also a reduced VAT rate of 5.5 per cent. for the repair and renovation of housing, which would include the installation of energy saving materials where they are supplied as part of such a service.

Bookmakers

Mr. Gill: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of loss of revenue consequent upon bookmakers moving their business offshore. [98011]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 10 November 1999]: No such estimate is available.

Departmental Vehicles

Mr. Claytor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the total number of vehicles used by his Department and its agencies fuelled by (a) petrol, (b) diesel and (c) liquid petroleum gas; and what plans he has to increase the rate of conversion of those vehicles to liquid petroleum gas. [98201]

Dawn Primarolo: The Treasury's cars are supplied by the Government Car and Despatch Agency (GCDA). Three of the six cars run on LPG. All new cars supplied under the GCDA contract will run on alternative fuels or will be fitted with the new technology "clean" engine which uses unleaded petrol. The contract to run the minibus, which connects our two London offices, will be renewed on 1 December and the minibus will run exclusively on low-sulphur diesel.

Office for National Statistics

The ONS uses a total of 11 cars within its Registration Inspectorate division. Of these, two are petrol and nine are diesel. There is no definite plan to convert the vehicles to liquid petroleum gas, but they are replaced every three years.

The ONS facilities management division has three diesel vans, of which one is now redundant. There are no plans for conversion as the FM services are in the process of being outsourced—this is scheduled for completion by July 2000.

HM Customs and Excise

The HMC&E have a Departmental fleet which comprises 1,894 vehicles. Obviously the number of vehicles on the fleet is subject to (minimal) daily change in that each Collection regularly dispose of, and subsequently replace, vehicles on a rolling basis. Please note that the Department has no solely liquid petroleum gas vehicles on its fleet.

The current breakdown of the fleet is given in the table.

Future Plans

A further three vehicles already on fleet are being converted for bi-fuel usage within the next two months. We have no definitive plans to convert existing petrol/diesel vehicles to bi-fuel function on a major scale. The Department is "trialling" the above number of vehicles to determine their viability in meeting both the business need and compliance in meeting "green" obligations. Furthermore, such factors as the infrastructure to ensure that such vehicles represent a realistic, user friendly alternative to petrol/diesel powered vehicles and also the question of residual values are being monitored before a large scale commitment can be given to utilising bi-fuel vehicles on a large scale

We will also be setting a target to reduce the Departmental vehicle fuel consumption by 10 per cent. in the coming year as part of the green initiative and to reduce costs.

We have recently completed a trial with an electric vehicle at Heathrow airport and will analyse the findings before deciding if this type of fuel propulsion is a viable option.

Inland Revenue

The Inland Revenue have submitted a response which includes the Valuation Office Agency, Contributions Agency, National Criminal Intelligence Agency (NCIS) and the Central Computer and Telecommunications Agency (CCTA). Their statement on future plans for PLG conversions also covers the above agencies.

Future Plans

"Both the IR pool and Private User Scheme (PUS) fleet have purchased and are currently running one LPG vehicle, plus we have been trialling them as a long term demos at various locations. We are also assessing the viability of electric vehicles. We have no definite plans for the wholesale conversion of the fleet at present. We are also monitoring the residual values of alternative fuelled vehicles as an on-going exercise before any final decisions are concluded.

We are however down sizing the fleet in terms of the vehicle engine capacities quite substantially, ensuring that the vehicles being used by our offices and individuals meet the business requirement fully. Therefore offering better value for money and a cleaner environment."

The UK Debt Management Office, Government Actuary's Department, National Savings and Royal Mint have no vehicles of their own.

Departmental Waste

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to set targets for the recycling of waste (a) paper, (b) cardboard, (c) glass, (d) metal, (e) plastic and (f) other products created by his Department and its agencies; and if he will make a statement. [98231]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Our Department's approach to waste management is to 'Reduce', 'Reuse' and 'Recover' (which includes recycling, composting and energy recovery) as the preferred options for reducing waste sent to landfill. This will help us to achieve the Green Ministers' target for Government Departments of recovering a minimum of 40 per cent. of total office waste and to reduce the proportion of controlled waste going to landfill to 60 per cent. by 2005.

IR35

Mr. Cotter: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what meetings he has had with representatives of the Professional Contractors Group to discuss IR35. [98128]

Dawn Primarolo: I have spoken with a number of people during the course of the consultation period and have received many written representations.

Give as You Earn

Dr. Godman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the cost to the Treasury of the Give as You Earn scheme since its inception; and if he will make a statement. [98000]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The cost of the tax relief under the Payroll Giving scheme since it was introduced in 1986 is £44 million, of which £7 million is the provisional cost in 1998–99. Annual costs are published in Inland Revenue Statistics.

Take-up of Payroll Giving has improved in recent years, with the annual level of donations increasing threefold in the 1990s (1990–91 to 1998–99). Donations in 1998–99 were up 11 per cent. on the previous year. Research undertaken by the Inland Revenue for the Government's review of charity taxation suggests that there is considerable potential to increase take-up further.

As a result of "Getting Britain Giving" measures announced by the Chancellor of the Exchequer in his Pre Budget Report, the Government is abolishing the £1,200 maximum limit for donations under Payroll Giving. In future, employees will be able to give as much as they like through their pay packet. In addition, charities and employers will be joining with the Inland Revenue in a campaign next summer to promote the scheme. The campaign will be backed by a time-limited supplement on Payroll Giving donations payable to charities for three years from April 2000, out of public expenditure.

Endowments

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the number of tax payers in (a) the current tax year and (b) the 1998–99 tax year who have paid extra tax as a result of increasing their endowment payments in the last 10 years of their policy; and how much revenue is involved. [98334]

Miss Melanie Johnson: I regret that no estimates are available for 1998–99 or the current tax year.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what revenue projections he has made for the tax yield from taxable additional payments in the last 10 years of endowment policies. [98332]

Miss Melanie Johnson: None.

Departmental Accommodation

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make it departmental practice where Government Departments are seeking to rent or lease property from companies registered overseas in (a) tax havens or (b) otherwise to require the landlords to provide lessees with information as to corporate structure, directors' names and United Kingdom shareholdings prior to entering into such rent or leasing arrangements. [98269]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Departmental accommodation policy is a matter for individual Departments.

Inland Revenue Staff

Mr. Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 1 November 1999, Official Report, column 47, if he will add an additional column to the Table indicating the numbers of staff at each grade transferred from the Department of Social Security to the Inland Revenue. [98349]

Dawn Primarolo: All the staff of the Contributions Agency transferred to the Inland Revenue on 1 April 1999, the numbers being as follows:

CA grade	Number	IR grade	Civil service grade
A1	2,484	E2	AA
A2	67	E1	AO
B1	2,867	E1	AO
B2	1,963	D	EO
B3	319	D	EO
C1	196	C2	HEO
C2	263	C2	HEO
C3	115	C1	SEO
D1	41	B	UG7
D2	2	B	UG7
D3	10	B	UG6
SCS	6	SCS	SCS
Total	8,333	—	—

Departmental Targets

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many targets have been agreed between his Department and (i) local authorities and (ii) other bodies apart from his own agencies and non-departmental public bodies. [98318]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Departments have set out their key performance targets in Public Service Agreements (Cm 4181), and the measures of success they will use in the Output and Performance Analysis published by the Treasury on 31 March 1999.

The Treasury has agreed shared Public Service Agreement targets with the Department of Trade and Industry, Department of Social Security and Department for Education and Employment. They are listed in the Output and Performance Analysis.

Cash Planning Total

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if the present public expenditure cash planning total for the year 2001–02 will remain unchanged when the Comprehensive Spending Review is rolled forward in 2000; and if he will make a statement. [98357]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The Spending Review in 2000 will roll forward the spending plans agreed in the Comprehensive Spending Review for a further two years. The third year of the current plans (2001–02) will become the first year of the new planning period.

Public spending classified within the control regime as Annually Managed Expenditure continues to be planned and managed on an annual basis; the level of Annually Managed Expenditure for 2001–02, and hence of Total Managed Expenditure, will be reviewed again in 2000.

Windfall Tax

Mr. Willis: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to the answer of 27 October 1999, Official Report, column 910, (1) what the total value is of the Windfall Tax reserve in the current financial year; and what it was in financial years 1997–98 and 1998–99; [98324]

(2) if he will list the amounts of, and purposes for which, expenditure from the Windfall Tax reserve has been authorised to date; and whether such expenditure (i) may be authorised by the Department for Education and Employment alone or (ii) requires the prior agreement of the Chancellor of the Exchequer. [98326]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The Windfall Tax reserve and the allocation of the Windfall Tax receipts as currently estimated are outlined in Table 4.1 of the 1999 Pre Budget Report.

Expenditure from the Windfall Tax reserve is a matter for the Chancellor of the Exchequer, as chair of the Cabinet committee EA(WW).

Primary Teachers

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many trained primary teachers are registered as unemployed. [97917]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Colin Pickthall, dated 11 November 1999:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your recent parliamentary question on trained primary teachers registered as unemployed.

In September 1999, there were 3,584 people claiming unemployment-related benefits in the United Kingdom whose usual occupation was in the primary and nursery education teaching profession. 4,058 claimants said they were seeking a job in that profession. Separate figures for primary and nursery education are not available. Nor is information available on the number of claimants who have actually trained as primary school teachers.

Mortality Rates

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the number of deaths linked with hypothermia in (a) the United Kingdom, (b) England, (c) Scotland, (d) Wales, (e) Greater London and (f) Sutton and Cheam for each of the last five years for those aged (i) 60 to 64 years, (ii) 65 to 79 years, (iii) over 80 years and (iv) all ages. [98351]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Paul Burstow, dated 11 November 1999:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your recent parliamentary question asking for the number of deaths linked with hypothermia.

Because of time constraints, figures are provided only for England and Wales.

These are given in the table.

Deaths where hypothermia was mentioned on the death certificate as the main or contributory cause of death, England & Wales, years of occurrence, 1994–1998

Year of death	All ages	0–59	60–64	65–79	80+

1997	357	52	14	98	193
1998	352	54	14	102	182

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list excess winter mortality rates in (a) the United Kingdom, (b) England, (c) Scotland, (d) Wales, (e) Greater London and (f) Sutton and Cheam for each of the last five years in terms of (i) numbers and (ii) percentages for those aged (1) 60 to 64 years, (2) 65 to 79 years, (3) over 80 years and (4) all ages. [98352]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Paul Burstow, dated 11 November 1999:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your recent parliamentary question asking for excess winter mortality rates.

Because of time constraints, figures are only provided for England and Wales and are also only available for age-groups which are slightly different from those requested.

These are given in the table below.

Excess Winter Mortality by age, England and Wales, 1993–94 to 1997–98

Year	0–64	65–74	75–84	85+	Total
1993–4	2,116	4,164	9,291	10,330	25,900
1994–5	2,200	5,487	9,703	9,905	27,295
1995–6	2,900	7,073	14,367	15,855	40,194
1996–7	3,040	6,969	17,537	20,140	47,685
1997–8	1,698	4,203	7,869	9,130	22,899

Excess winter deaths are defined as the difference between the number of deaths during the four winter months (December to March) and the average number of deaths during the preceding autumn (August to November) and the following summer (April to July).

Customs and Excise (Millennium Hours)

Mr. Baldry: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what hours Her Majesty's Customs and Excise will be working over the Christmas and New Year period 1999–2000; and if those hours differ from arrangements in previous years. [98045]

Dawn Primarolo: The Department expects to have staff on duty round the clock throughout the Christmas and Millennium holidays. The levels of staffing will be determined locally by managers who will judge the relative level of risk from smuggling or other forms of evasion. There is no reason to expect the levels of attendance at Christmas to be different from previous years except where changes to traffic or other local factors have led to changes of risk.

Special arrangements have been made for the Millennium holidays. Some 350–400 staff attendances will take place during the holidays to ensure IT and building systems are working correctly. For operational staff the numbers of staff on duty will be determined throughout the period by local managers again according to perceptions of risk and other needs. Managers will make these judgments taking into account the plans of shipping/airline companies to ensure that staffing levels are kept to the minimum necessary to meet the risk.

PRIME MINISTER

Departmental Heads of Information

Mr. Baker: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the changes of personnel holding posts within the Civil Service as departmental heads of information since 1 May 1997. [96338]

The Prime Minister: I will write to the hon. Member.

Research and Information Office

Mr. Baker: To ask the Prime Minister (1) what the anticipated annual running costs, including staff costs, are of the Research and Information Office within 10 Downing street; [96411]

(2) what is the job description of the head of the Research and Information Office within 10 Downing street. [96332]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 2 November 1999]: Bill Bush is employed as a Special Adviser to the Prime Minister under terms and conditions set out in the Model Contract for Special Advisers. Schedule 1 (part 1) of the Contract sets out the role and duties of Special Advisers. Bill Bush advises the Prime Minister on the operation and management of a single information resource at No. 10, the Research and Information Office (RIO), which provides briefing for the Prime Minister and No. 10 staff. A key part of the job is to advise on the use of the latest technology to enhance No. 10's Information Management Systems. The RIO is staffed by a mix of permanent civil servants and Special Advisers. The Private Secretary with responsibility for Parliamentary Affairs is the line manager for the permanent civil servants in the RIO. The anticipated annual running costs for the RIO, including staff costs, for 1999–2000 are £301,183.

Downing Street (Maintenance)

Mr. Baker: To ask the Prime Minister how much has been spent on (a) maintaining, (b) decorating and (c) otherwise improving 10 Downing street since 1 May 1997; how much has been spent on wallpaper; and what plans exist for future spending. [97594]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 8 November 1999]: Maintaining, decorating and otherwise improving 10 Downing street is part of a continuing programme of work. No. 10, now as in the past, is maintained to standards appropriate to its status as a Grade 1 listed building, as laid down by the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions, in consultation with Westminster City Council and English Heritage as appropriate. The building also fulfils an important representational role.

Expenditure is recorded by financial years. No distinction is made between maintaining, decorating and otherwise improving the property as projects frequently cover two or more of these categories of work. Since 2 May 1997, the recorded expenditure by the Cabinet Office for No. 10 Downing street is:

1997–98: £188,000

1998–99: £348,000

April–October 1999: £435,000.

The expenditure is mainly attributable to the refurbishment of the state rooms and converting the top floor of the building into office accommodation. Approximately £1,200 has been spent on supplies of wallpaper.

Expenditure prior to 1997–98 is recorded in respect of the Nos. 10–12 Downing street complex as a whole and it is not possible to separately identify expenditure in respect of No. 10. On this basis recorded expenditure is as follows:

1995–96: £504,700

1996–97: £1,486,775.

Plans for future years' expenditure have yet to be agreed.

Rural Development (Ministry)

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Prime Minister if he will create a ministry for rural development; and if he will make a statement. [97839]

The Prime Minister: I keep the machinery of Government regularly under review but have no plans to create a new ministry for rural development.

Balkans

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his letter of 8 November to the hon. Member for Linlithgow (a) what he has made of the number of refugees made homeless in (i) Kosovo before the ceasefire and (ii) Krajina, (b) what is his latest estimate of the number of mass murders in Kosovo, (c) what he has made of the effectiveness of sanctions in achieving democratic reform in the former Republic of Yugoslavia, (d) what support he has had from the International Committee of the Red Cross for sanctions against Serbia, (e) what requests he has received through international humanitarian organisations for exemptions from sanctions against Serbia and (f) if he will identify the western structures to which he is referring. [98273]

The Prime Minister: Although reliable figures are hard to establish, reports received from agencies on the ground, such as the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR), indicate that approximately 860,000 Kosovar Albanians were made homeless before the ceasefire. Reports also indicate that 330,000 Serb refugees left Krajina, 300,000 of whom are in the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia, and 30,000 are in Bosnia-Herzegovina.

Our estimate for the number of murders in Kosovo before KFOR entering remains at 10,000.

Sanctions are a recognised international tool for applying pressure to governments who are operating outside internationally accepted norms. This is one element of the economic and diplomatic pressure against the Milosevic regime which we hope will lead to democratic reform in Serbia. We and the European Union are working to ensure that the sanctions are properly aimed at the Milosevic regime, and not the ordinary people of Serbia. The EU visa ban and assets freeze against key members and supporters of the Milosevic regime are examples of this approach. At the same time we are working with the Serbian democratic opposition, for example on the "Energy for Democracy" Initiative.

The recent 27th International Conference of the Red Cross and Red Crescent called on the Security Council to take into account the needs of the civilian population and apply humanitarian exemptions as appropriate when applying sanctions. We and our EU partners are acting in full accordance with this approach, allowing exceptions to sanctions on humanitarian grounds.

Requests for humanitarian exemptions to the EU oil embargo have been made by the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, and were approved. Exceptions have also been made for various Non-Governmental Organisations involved in de-mining, to allow their military equipment needed for de-mining to enter Kosovo, which remains part of the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia, and so is subject to the arms embargo.

"Integration into western structures" refers in particular to the promotion of increasingly closer relations with the EU and NATO.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the total cost including travel, accommodation and subsistence allowances, and the place visited on each occasion that Lance Price, Hilary Coffman, Kate Garvey, Fiona Millar, Sally Morgan and Anji Hunter travelled abroad in an official capacity since 2 May 1997, whether accompanied by him or not. [94529]

The Prime Minister: Officials in my Office regularly accompany me on official overseas visits and I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend, the Member for Stalybridge and Hyde (Mr. Pendry) on 17 June 1999, Official Report, columns 196–97, which accounted fully for the costs of my official visits overseas during the period 2 May 1997 to 31 March 1999, including the costs of those accompanying me. In addition, during the conflict in Kosovo Anji Hunter visited Macedonia and Albania and Hilary Coffman visited NATO Headquarters in Brussels and Romania at a total cost of £4,166. Anji Hunter also visited Chicago in April this year on official business; her travel costs were £3,936. Normal subsistence rates for civil servants have applied and all visits have been in accordance with the rules set out in the Ministerial Code.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the visits made since May 1997 by Government Ministers to the Ukraine indicating the duration of each visit and its purpose. [98004]

The Prime Minister: There have been the following visits to the Ukraine by Ministers since May 1997:

Visitor	Dates	Purpose
Secretary of State for Defence	16–17 September 1997	Attend the UK-Polish-Ukranian exercise ("Cossack Steppe")
Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Department for International Development	23–26 November 1997	Consultations on the UK's technical assistance strategy for Ukraine
Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Department for International Development	11–12 May 1998	Attend European Bank for Reconstruction and Development's Annual Meeting
Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office (Minister for Europe)	23–25 June 1998	Consultations on bilateral and multilateral issues
Secretary of State for Defence	17–18 June 1999	Consultations on bilateral defence co-operation, NATO and Kosovo

Select Committee Reports (Leaks)

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Prime Minister (1) what amendments have been made to the Ministerial Code in the past year in relation (a) to soliciting leaked drafts of select committee reports and (b) to their use and retention if their receipt was unsolicited; and if he will make a statement; [98135]

(2) what instructions have been given to (a) Ministers and (b) civil servants in relation to the handling of unsolicited leaked drafts of select committee reports. [98134]

The Prime Minister: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Normanton (Mr. O'Brien) on 28 October 1999, Official Report, column 953.

National Farmers Union

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Prime Minister (1) how many meetings he has had since August with the President of the National Farmers Union; who else was present; and what was discussed; [98391]

(2) how many meetings have been held since August between Mr. Alistair Campbell and the President of the National Farmers Union; who else was present; and what was discussed. [98393]

The Prime Minister: I met the President of the National Farmers Union on 8 September 1999, when we discussed a number of issues concerning the farming industry. My right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and the Director General of the National Farmers Union also attended the meeting.

My Chief Press Secretary has not held a meeting with the President of the National Farmers Union.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Hunting with Dogs

Mr. Michael J. Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on his plans in respect of hunting with dogs. [R] [98388]

Mr. Straw: I am announcing today how the Government wish to proceed on this issue.

The Government's manifesto commitment was for a free vote on whether hunting with hounds should be banned. Such a free vote took place during proceedings in the 1997–98 Session on the Bill to outlaw hunting with dogs sponsored by my hon. Friend the Member for Worcester. His Bill received a Second Reading by 411 votes to 151. I well understand the frustration of many hon. Members that no legislative conclusion followed.

I am, therefore, pleased to announce that the Government will offer reasonable time, if necessary, and drafting assistance for this issue to be considered by the House of Commons through a Private Member's Bill on a free vote. We shall consult the House authorities, as appropriate, on how this can best be taken forward.

The Government have decided that there should first be an inquiry. This will be a committee of inquiry not into whether hunting is right or wrong, which is a matter for Parliament to decide. Instead, the inquiry will be put in place better to inform the debate.

The inquiry will look at the practical issues involved in hunting with dogs, how a ban could be implemented and what the consequences of a ban would be. It will provide an opportunity for the facts about hunting properly to be considered.

Also, it will enable an examination of the effect on the rural economy, agriculture and pest control, the social and cultural life of particular areas of countryside, the management and conservation of wildlife and animal welfare of hunting and if hunting were to be banned. The inquiry will take evidence from all interested parties.

The inquiry will be chaired by the noble Lords, Lord Burns. It will be asked to report by late spring next year. The names of the other members of the inquiry will be announced as soon as possible. The report will be put before Parliament.

Once the inquiry has reported, the Government's offer of time and drafting assistance will take effect.

Copies of this reply have been placed in the Library and Vote Office.

Radio Communications

Mr. Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the total estimated cost of the Public Safety Radio Communications Project; and how much of this the Government are going to fund. [96404]

Mr. Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had with police authorities and chief constables regarding the allocation of funding for the Public Safety Radio Communications Project; and what estimate he has made of the project's cost in each of the police force areas in England and Wales. [97233]

Mr. Charles Clarke: My right hon. Friend, the Home Secretary, and I have frequent discussions with police authority representatives and chief constables about police resources, including funding for the Public Safety Radio Communications Project (PSRCP). In addition my officials and I have had discussions with the Association of Chief Police Officers and the Association of Police Authorities about the funding of PSRCP.

The Public Safety Radio Communications Project (PSRCP) is still in detailed negotiations on price and contract provision. Therefore, figures could change as contract negotiations are finalised, and so there are commercial sensitivities that limit the amount of detailed information I can provide.

Since 1995 the Police Information Technology Organisation (PITO) has used an indicative figure of £1.5 billion in estimated costs of this project. This figure was intended to be a guide to be revised after the intense two years' study, which has now concluded, to provide firm estimates of price and service quality.

The total cost for the service charge for the Public Safety Radio Communications Service (PSRCS) over the life of the service (15 years for each force) is likely, in today's money value, to be between £1.25 and £1.45 billion, excluding inflation and using standard Treasury accounting techniques. This is equivalent to £2.3 billion in cash terms if the Treasury 6 per cent. discount rate is not applied to the annual cash flows.

Approximately 80 per cent. of this cost goes to the core service which is to be funded centrally by means of a deduction from total police grant provision. The cost of services additional to the core, which all forces will purchase according to their own requirements, accounts for the remaining 20 per cent. These are net present costs (NPC) calculated employing a standard discounted cash flow technique for a base year of 1999 and using the Treasury's 6 per cent. discount rate.

Separately from the PSRCS charge, forces will need to purchase control room and radio terminal equipment. Based upon our understanding of the police service's overall requirement, we estimate the initial purchase and subsequent replacement costs for terminals to be around £300 million in NPC terms over the PSRCS service contract life. The need to replace terminals is ongoing and expenditure is currently being incurred as forces maintain their existing self-owned systems.

I announced recently that we are providing an extra £50 million of new money for the PSRCP. PITO the non departmental public body managing the PSRCP, has yet to decide, in consultation with the potential PSRCS service provider, BT, how best to use this money to reduce the cost of the service. The Government's intention is for it to be used in a way which reduces the charge in the third and subsequent years thus providing long-term benefit to all forces. PITO estimate that this money could reduce the service charge NPC given above by around £50 to £70 million over the life of the project.

These figures compare with the Government plans for police spending to increase by £186 million in 1999–2000 and further increases for 2000–01 and 2001–02 of £199 million and £290 million respectively. It is a matter for each police authority to set its budget and for each chief constable to decide how to deploy the available resources. The Government have also relaxed the rules on capital receipts from the sales of assets giving Police Authorities the freedom to use proceeds from sales for capital investment.

Since the costs remain to be finalised, for the reasons set out, there are no final figures for the cost of the non-core services to individual police forces. PITO does have estimates but these are subject to negotiation, and are therefore liable to very significant change. Information will shortly be circulated to forces to enable them to calculate their likely potential costs for these non-core services.

Correspondence

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to reply to the letter sent to him on 16 June regarding Mr. Khalid Shalabi Suliman of Birkenhead. [97943]

Mrs. Roche: I replied to my right hon. Friend on 10 November 1999.

Millennium (Policing)

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had with chief constables in England on their planning arrangements for 31 December and 1 January 2000; and if he will make a statement. [97962]

Mr. Charles Clarke: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave on 25 October 1999, Official Report, column 682, in response to a question from the hon. Member for East Surrey (Mr. Ainsworth). My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary and Ministerial colleagues met the President of the Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO), John Evans, on 18 October to discuss the millennium readiness of the emergency services. Mr. Evans chairs the ACPO millennium co-ordinating committee which advises police forces on these issues.

Police Constables

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the constabularies of England showing (a) their establishments and (b) the numbers of constables they are short of. [98121]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The powers of my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary to set police force establishment levels were removed under the Police and Magistrates' Courts Act 1994. It is for individual chief officers to determine the staffing requirements for each force within the overall resources available. Information on police officer strength is collected at the end of March and September. The figures for 31 March 1999 will be placed in the Library.

Future staffing levels are for chief officers to determine within the overall resources available. However, the Government are making available additional resources, in a new ring-fenced Crime Fighting Fund, to enable the police to recruit 5,000 officers, over and above those that they had otherwise planned to recruit over the next three years.

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the average earnings are of police constables in England, excluding the Metropolitan police. [98120]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The data to calculate the average earnings of a police constable in England are not held centrally and could not be obtained without disproportionate cost. A police constable on appointment will, however, receive £16,635 in salary, rising to £18,612 after initial training and £19,713 on successful completion of two years probationary service. The maximum salary is £26,325, exclusive of allowances and overtime payments where appropriate.

Women's Prison (Ashford)

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on his plans and timetable for building a new women's prison at Ashford, Middlesex. [98384]

Mr. Boateng: I will write to the hon. Member as soon as possible. Copies of the letter will be placed in the Library.

Casinos

Mr. David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to extend the opening hours of casinos in England and Wales. [98399]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: We have issued a consultation letter to interested parties regarding casino opening hours. Copies have been placed in the Library. At present, casinos must close at 4 am. We propose an extension from 4 am to 6 am (except Sundays) for casinos in England and Wales. Comments are requested by 31 January 2000.

The Gaming Act 1968 imposes restrictions on the hours that gaming establishments may open. Under section 18 of the 1968 Act, casinos must close between 4 am and 2 pm on Sundays. The hours on other days are prescribed by regulations made by the Secretary of State in respect of casinos in England and Wales. Under the Gaming Clubs (Hours and Charges) Regulations 1984, the opening hours of casinos are currently from 2 pm to 4 am.

The British Casino Association, which represents all casinos in Great Britain, has asked for a change in the law to allow casinos to open until 6 am on Monday to Saturday mornings.

Following consultation with the Gaming Board for Great Britain, we have agreed in principle to the proposed change. Casinos are places for late night entertainment and we see no objection to a later closing time. This change would not affect the current permitted hours during which casinos may serve alcohol—3 am in London and 2 am elsewhere.

Gaming is a reserved subject but some powers to make secondary legislation have been devolved to the Scottish Parliament, including gaming hours. The Scottish Executive is embarking on a similar exercise in respect of casinos in Scotland. We would aim to make regulations simultaneously.

Immigration and Asylum Bill

Dr. Palmer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what consultation is taking place with carriers prior to the implementation of the passenger information provisions of the Immigration and Asylum Bill. [98400]

Mrs. Roche: We anticipate that discussions with carriers or their representatives will commence in December. The purpose of these talks will be to establish the means whereby information on passengers may be provided. We understand that some carriers may have concerns about the implications for them of the new passenger information provisions and we will endeavour to minimise as far as is possible the resource and administrative burden on them.

I would like to take this opportunity to clarify the scope of the power to require carriers to provide additional information. This will be capable of requiring carriers to provide information over and above what they currently collect. However, it will not be used to require carriers to provide information to which they do not have ready access. We recognise the constraints under which industry must operate and we will work closely with them to ensure that these are properly considered against operational need.

The passenger information provisions are an important element of the intelligence led approach to the operation of the immigration control. Not only will they enable the Immigration Service to make more efficient use of its resources but they will also benefit carriers, operators and the travelling public.

Police Authorities

Charlotte Atkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the total staffing levels were for (a) 1994–95, (b) 1995–96, (c) 1996–97, (d) 1997–98 and (e) 1998–99, and what the projected level is for 1999–2000 for (i) the Derbyshire Police Authority, (ii) the Leicester Police Authority, (iii) the Cheshire Police Authority, (iv) the Yorkshire Police Authority, and (v) the Surrey Police Authority, broken down into total officer strength and total civilian strength. [98291]

Mr. Charles Clarke: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to a question from the hon. Member for Ryedale (Mr. Greenway) on 10 November 1999, Official Report, column 590, for the information requested on police officer numbers. The information requested on civilian strength is set out in the table.

Projected staffing figures for 1999–2000 are not held centrally. It is for individual police authorities with their chief constables to determine staffing requirements within the resources available to them.

Police Authority	31 March 1995	31 March 1996	31 March 1997	31 March 1998	31 March 1999
Derbyshire Police	625	656	723	787	818
Leicestershire Constabulary	680	667	755	774	802
Cheshire Constabulary	616	690	735	781	785
North Yorkshire Constabulary	508	520	520	543	541
South Yorkshire Police	1,149	1,418	1,291	1,243	1,273
West Yorkshire Police	1,965	2,037	2,234	2,304	2,216
Surrey Police	732	754	727	743	733

Charlotte Atkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what Government funding was received in real terms in (a) 1994–95, (b) 1995–96, (c) 1996–97, (d) 1997–98 and (e) 1998–99, and will be received in 1999–2000 by (i) the police forces in England and Wales in total, (ii) Derbyshire Police Authority, (iii) Leicester Police Authority, (iv) Cheshire Police Authority, (v) Yorkshire Police Authority and (vi) Surrey Police Authority. [98290]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The information requested is not readily available. I will write to my hon. Friend.

Departmental Waste

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to set targets for the recycling of waste (a) paper, (b) cardboard, (c) glass, (d) metal, (e) plastic and (f) other products created by his Department and its agencies; and if he will make a statement. [98225]

Mr. Straw: My Department is working towards implementing the new Government-wide target to recover a minimum of 40 per cent. of total office waste, with at least 25 per cent. of that recovery coming from recycling or composting. My Department's approach to waste management is based on the three "R"'s with "Recovery" (i.e. recycling, composting and energy recovery) following "Reduce" and "Re-use" as the preferred options for reducing waste sent to landfill. We have set no individual targets for paper, cardboard, glass, metal, plastic and other materials, although paper is recycled in most offices and a number of Home Office sites also recycle cardboard and glass.

My Department is about to undertake pilot waste minimisation schemes in three different types of buildings on the estate with the aim of reducing the amount of waste sent to landfill.

The Prison Service has a vital role to play in reducing waste. They have recently set up a service wide waste management project. The project will identify areas where wastage can be reduced and will address the efficient and effective disposal of prison waste and the recycling of usable waste. The primary aims are to reduce the amount of prison generated waste that is sent to landfill sites and to reduce the demand and consumption of items of clothing and equipment. Recyclable materials, such as paper, cardboard, metal and plastics will be reprocessed and re-usable clothing and equipment items channelled back into the prison estate.

Departmental Vehicles

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the total number of vehicles used by his Department and its agencies fuelled by (a) petrol, (b) diesel and (c) liquid petroleum gas; and what plans he has to increase the rate of conversion of those vehicles to liquid petroleum gas. [98205]

Mr. Straw: The Home Department currently operates a total of 1,171 vehicles. The majority of these, 759, belong to the Prison Service Agency. There are 272 petrol engine vehicles and 899 diesel engine vehicles. There are no liquefied petroleum gas (LPG) powered vehicles in the fleet as yet as there is a logistical difficulty in opting for LPG powered vehicles in view of the limited number of supply points available for a fleet of vehicles spread throughout England and Wales.

However, the Prison Service has adopted a policy that up to 70 per cent. of vehicles replaced in the financial year 2000 will be powered by either dual fuel petrol/LPG engines, or the latest high pressure direct injection diesel engines with particulate filters where available. The Home Office is planning to go out to consultation to adopt a similar policy by the end of the current year.

Deaths in Custody

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has responded to the petition about deaths in custody from families of the deceased; and if he will make a statement. [98150]

Mr. Straw: I met representatives of the United Families and Friends Campaign, the authors of the petition, on 26 April this year and my officials have subsequently been in correspondence with them. I am considering the petition and will respond shortly.

Dangerous Offenders

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what discussions he and his staff have had with Northumbria Police about present procedures for supervising discharged offenders, following the conviction of Dominic McKilligan; [98132]

(2) if he intends to give trial judges the power to extend the registration systems of the Sexual Offences Acts to convicted offenders whose offences contain a strong sexual motivation; [98131]

(3) what plans he has to impose a statutory obligation on social services departments and hospital authorities to consult statutory care agencies and the police authorities before discharging anyone from their care who may pose a known risk to the general public; [98129]

(4) if he intends to require an inter-agency risk assessment prior to release of anyone convicted of indecency with children under Schedule 1 to the Sexual Offences Act. [98130]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Protection of the public is a primary duty of the criminal justice agencies. The Government have put in place arrangements to enable risk assessment to be carried out on an inter-agency basis prior to the release of dangerous offenders, including those convicted of indecency with children. There are strong inter-agency liaison arrangements in Northumbria and throughout the country, in which the police play a major part. This work is overseen by a Steering Group on Dangerous Offenders, which includes representatives from all criminal justice agencies at very senior level. There is a support group within the Home Office, including seconded police and probation staff, which supports the Steering Group and helps local agencies with individual cases.

These Questions all arise out of the case of Dominic McKilligan, currently in custody for the rape and murder of an 11-year-old boy in 1998. A review of the work of all the agencies involved with the care and supervision of Dominic McKilligan is currently being undertaken in line with the Department of Health guidance contained in "Working Together Under the Children Act 1989—A Guide to Arrangements for Inter-Agency Co-operation for the Protection of Children from Abuse". Once it is completed the agencies concerned will consider what lessons can be drawn from this tragedy and what action is required.

The issue of judicial discretion in relation to the registration requirement in the Sex Offenders Act 1997 is one of a number of areas currently being reviewed by the Home Office. Once the review is completed, we shall then need to consider whether, and if so what, changes are necessary to improve the effectiveness of the Act.

Dangerous Cycling

Mr. Flight: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in how many police authority areas have police used spot fines powers to deter dangerous cycling; and if he will make a statement. [98345]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The police do not have the powers to issue fixed penalty notices for the offence of dangerous cycling. In order to assist the police to deal with inconsiderate cycling on the pavement, we introduced from 1 August 1999 a fixed penalty for the offence of cycling on the pavement. The fixed penalty is not an on the spot fine: payment is not required on the spot and the person receiving it can challenge its issue in court.

Information about how many police forces have issued fixed penalty notices for cycling on the pavement is not yet available. Each police force has been asked to monitor the fixed penalty provisions which came into force on 1 August 1999, but the details are not likely to be available until early in the new year.

Domestic Violence

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what research his Department has undertaken into the Canadian police campaign of zero tolerance of domestic violence and its suitability for the United Kingdom. [98288]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Earlier this year, the Home Office published "Domestic Violence Matters: an evaluation of a development project". This reported on a pilot domestic violence project in Islington, adapted from a scheme in London, Ontario. The project sought to establish a civilian crisis intervention service working with the police, promote a law enforcement response, and develop inter-agency links to encourage consistent and co-ordinated action. The report discusses current Canadian law enforcement policy in respect of domestic violence.

The Home Office has also published this year "Arresting Evidence: domestic violence and repeat victimisation" and "Policing Domestic Violence: effective organisational structures". The publications named are all available on the Home Office website www.homeoffice.gov.uk.

As part of the Crime Reduction Programme's component dealing with domestic violence, rape and sexual assault, reviews have been carried out of what is known from relevant research of different aspects of domestic violence and of the effectiveness and cost-effectiveness of different interventions. Policing was amongst the areas covered.

Electoral Register

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received from the Consumers Association concerning the effect on social exclusion of commercial use of the electoral register. [98171]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Consumers Association wrote to my right hon. Friend, the Home Secretary, on 21 October about the recommendation of the Working Party on Electoral Procedures that electors should be given a choice over whether their personal details should be included in the version of the electoral register which is available for sale.

Police (London Weighting)

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the value is of London weighting for (a) police officers and (b) civilian staff in the Metropolitan Police; what the rates were in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [98173]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Receiver for the Metropolitan Police District tells me that London weighting for police and civil staff in the Metropolitan Police over the last five years is as follows:

£ per annum

		Civil staff
Year	Police officers	Inner	Intermediate	Outer
1994	1,398	1,776	1,015	736
1995	1,440	1,776	1,015	736
1996	1,491	1,776	1,015	736
1997	1,542	1,776	1,015	736
1998	1,605	1,776	1,015	736
1999	1,662	1,850	1,056	766
		[1]1,622	[1]828	[1]538

[1] With effect from 1 August 1999, as part of the 1999 pay settlement, £228 of London Weighting for Civil Staff has been consolidated into basic pay.

Police Recruitment

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the total numbers of (a) applications and (b) recruits were in each police force in each of the last three years; what the ratio was of applications to recruits per force in each year; and if he will make a statement. [98174]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The following tables show the number of applications to join the police service received by each force in each of the last three years, the numbers of appointments on probation (the most accurate assessment we have of the numbers of new recruits to the police service) for each force in the same periods and the ratio of applications to new appointments on probation.

The figures have been supplied by Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary. The numbers of appointments on probation differ from the number of total recruits to police forces in England and Wales which my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary gave the hon. Member on 21 October 1999, Official Report, column 624. This is because the latter include transfers between forces.

Police (Length of Service)

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the average length of service is per police officer (a) per force and (b) for England as a whole; and if he will make a statement. [98175]

Mr. Charles Clarke: This information is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Police (Staff Costs)

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the total (a) budget and (b) expenditure were for police staff costs for the Metropolitan police in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [98172]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Receiver for the Metropolitan police district tells me that the budget and expenditure figures for police staff costs within the Metropolitan police over the last five years are as follows:

£.million

Year	Budget police staffing	Outturn police staffing
1994–95	949.105	947.697
1995–96	953.906	953.116

1997–98	950.294	954.126
1998–99	968.503	969.985

Commission for Racial Equality

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 1 November 1999, Official Report, column 64, if he will detail the settlements made with the five employees of the Commission for Racial Equality with regard to their claims of racial discrimination against the Commission. [98369]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Details of individual settlements are confidential between the parties involved.

Farouk Sarraj

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when his office received passports from Mr. Farouk Sarraj and his wife Haj Fadel of 5a Camper Road, Southend-on-Sea SS1 2YR with the request that they have printed on them the permanent right of residence granted by his Department in its letter dated 10 September 1973 (reference F95293), and when he intends to respond to the request. [98127]

Mrs. Roche: Mrs. Haj Fadel's passport was received in the Integrated Casework Directorate on 24 July 1999. We have asked for the recorded delivery details of a second package containing Mr. Farouk Sarraj's passport and we are trying to trace the record of receipt.

Once both passports and supporting documents have been traced they will be passed to a caseworker for urgent consideration and a decision will then be made as quickly as possible.

Siemens Contract

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if the Government received all payments and compensation owing from Siemens for computer work at the Immigration Department before Siemens was allowed to bid for the Vehicle Inspectorate system. [98242]

Mrs. Roche: Yes. Under the terms of the contract between the Immigration and Nationality Directorate (IND) and Siemens Business Services (SBS), the financial risk for the late delivery of elements of the IND Casework Programme is borne by SBS. In September 1998 a package of changes to the contractual payment terms—in part to compensate for expenditure wasted as a result of the delays in delivering the Information Technology application—was negotiated with SBS and all agreed compensation payments have been received when due. Details of this package are commercially confidential and disclosure would place us in breach of contract.

Special Constabulary

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people served in the special constabulary of each police force in each of the past five years for which figures are available. [89552]

Mr. Charles Clarke [pursuant to the reply, 5 July 1999, c.330–31]: The table setting out the number of special constables in post in each police force in England and Wales for the past five years has been revised to take account of some typographical errors in the figures given in the columns for 1996 and 1997. The figures have been further revised to take account of corrections which forces have made in their returns for 1996.

Qualified Majority Voting

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list those areas of extension of qualified majority voting agreed at Tampere; and if he will list those areas where he has declared he will veto any extension. [96573]

Mr. Vaz: I have been asked to reply.

No extension of qualified majority voting was agreed at Tampere. For a statement of the Government's position on qualified majority voting I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister gave him on 9 November 1999, Official Report, column 486.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Pensioners (Income Support)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the estimated cost of income support for pensioners in (a) 1999–2000, (b) 2000–01 and (c) 2001–02; and what levels of take-up are assumed, as a percentage of beneficiaries and potential expenditure. [97554]

Mr. Rooker: The current forecasts of expenditure on income support for pensioners is given in the table. I shall make an announcement on our plans for a national programme to encourage take-up of the minimum income guarantee in due course.

Social Fund

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many benefit claimants received a social fund (a) grant or (b) loan in each of the last five years in (i) Greater London, (ii) Leaside district and (iii) Edmonton constituency; what was the total amount of (A) grant and (B) loan in (i), (ii), and (iii); and if he will make a statement. [98056]

Angela Eagle: The administration of the Social Fund is a matter for Peter Mathison, the Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Andrew Love, dated 10 November 1999:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked Peter Mathison to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how many benefit claimants received a social fund (a) grant or (b) loan in each of the last five years in (i) Greater London, (ii) Leaside district and (iii) Edmonton constituency; and what was the total amount of (A) grant and (B) loan in (i), (ii), (iii). As Mr. Mathison is currently on leave I am replying.

Although the Benefits Agency (BA) does not collate information in exactly the format you have requested, the figures available are included in the attached appendix.

The number of loans and grants awarded does not correspond to individual benefit customers, as some will have received an award more than once. We do not have information on the latter.

Data is held at district office level. BA districts do not correspond to the boroughs within Greater London. In order to answer your question, the following BA districts have been used:

Barking and Havering, Ealing, Bankside, Euston, Neasden, Newham, Thames Valley, South Circular, City East, Barnet, Leaside, Thameside, Palace, Hackney, Harrow & Hillingdon, SW Thames

Leaside district consists of Edmonton, Tottenham and Wood Green offices. Information at a sub-district or constituency level is not available and therefore, I am unable to provide information on the Edmonton area in isolation.

I hope this is helpful.

Pensions

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security which software providers have responded to Stakeholder Pension Consultation Brief 6. [98119]

Mr. Rooker: One software provider, Quality Management Software Ltd. responded to Stakeholder Pension Consultation Brief 6.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people are currently waiting for their pension application to be processed by Newcastle Benefit Office; and when the Office expects to process applications from people who reached the age of 60 in September. [98190]

Mr. Rooker: The number of people who reached pension age (60 for a woman and 65 for a man) in September 1999 and are currently waiting for their pension application to be processed by the Benefit Agency's clerical section in Newcastle is 888. It is expected that most of this number will have been completed by 30 November.

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many pensioners are not claiming the minimum income guarantee; what is the average resulting loss of income to those pensioners; and if he will make a statement. [98062]

Mr. Rooker: We estimate that the number of pensioners not claiming their Income Support entitlement is between 530,000 and 870,000. The average weekly amount unclaimed is estimated to be £18.80. We will announce our plans for a national programme to encourage take-up of the minimum income guarantee in due course.

3. All years are calendar years except 1990–91, which refers to the combined calendar years 1990 and 1991, and 1994–95 onwards, which refer to financial years.
4. Receipt of occupational pension is based on survey respondents' own assessment and may be subject to under-reporting.

Family Expenditure Survey

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate (a) the net cost and (b) the gross cost of paying SERPS to widows and widowers at (i) 100 per cent. of spouse's contributions made to 5 April 2000 and (ii) 50 per cent. of spouse's contributions made after 6 April 2000, broken down by each year from 2000 to 2020. Notes:

1. Gross costs have been provided from the Government Actuary's Department.
2. Costs are rounded to the nearest £10 million, and are in 1999–2000 prices.
3. Exact figures for net costs are not available. It is estimated that gross costs are likely to incur an offset of around 0–5 per cent. in the years up to and including 2010 and around 5–10 per cent. thereafter.
4. Estimates assume average earnings growth from 1999 onwards of 1.5 per cent. per year above prices. The State Second Pension and Welfare Reform Bill changes are not taken into account in these figures.

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many meetings of the working group on Best Practice Guidelines for occupational pensions have taken place so far. [98294]

Mr. Rooker: The Best Practice Working Group met for the first time in October. Their second meeting will be in January 2000.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many inquiries (a) by letter, (b) by telephone and (c) in total have been received by the Benefits Agency since October 1998 on SERPS for widows and widowers after April 2000; [98093]

(2) which Benefits Agency Pensions Bulletins issued since October 1998 mention SERPS for widows and widowers after April 2000; and if he will publish them. [98095]

Mr. Rooker: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is in the tables.

The Benefits Agency has collected data on the number of inquiries received within Local Offices and the Pensions and Overseas Directorate on the changes to SERPS for widows and widowers from April 2000, since April 1999.

Month	Inquiries received by letter	Inquiries received by telephone

May	467	137
June	345	114
July	289	52
August	151	53
September	143	63
Total	2,890	927

Note:
Prior to April 1999 the data has not been collected

In addition to the data provided above the Benefits Agency Chief Executive has responded directly to 56 SERPS related inquiries since October 1998.

Since October 1998 the Benefits Agency has issued six procedural bulletins in the Pensions Bulletin series on the subject of the changes to inherited SERPS from April 2000. These are 2/99; 13/99; 16/99; 18/99; 20/99; 28/99.Benefits Agency Pensions Bulletins are not priced publications available from HMSO. However, in line with the Benefits Agency's commitment to the Open Government Code of Practice, the bulletins are in the public domain and can be viewed at Benefit Agency Local Offices.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many (a) hon. Members, (b) members of the public and (c) organisations have written to him since October 1998 about SERPS for widows and widowers after April 2000. [98092]

Mr. Rooker: The information is not available in the form requested. Such information as is available shows that since October 1998 we have received 1,381 letters from hon. Members on this subject. Since November 1998, 834 letters have been received from organisations and members of the public.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to consult outside organisations before he publishes regulations under Clause 1 of the Welfare Reform and Pensions Bill relating to additional pension for widows and widowers. [98094]

Mr. Rooker: We plan to write shortly to interested organisations to invite them to be involved in a consultation group.

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many meetings of the Pension Forecasting Advisory Group have taken place so far. [98293]

Mr. Rooker: The Pensions Forecasting Advisory Group met for the first time in October. Their second meeting will be in January 2000.

Mortgage Interest

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 4 November 1999, Official Report, column 310, if in response to his Department continuing to make payments direct to lenders, lenders have undertaken under the 1991 agreement to continue not to take possession; and if the agreement relates only to cases where income support covers 100 per cent. of the mortgage interest. [98191]

Mr. Bayley: The payment of mortgage interest direct to lenders clearly reduces significantly the number of people who will fall into arrears or increase arrears that they might have had before they claimed Income Support

Mortgage Interest. The Code of Mortgage Lending practice produced by the lending industry clearly states that people with arrears will be considered sympathetically and positively.

Departmental Vehicles

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the total number of vehicles used by his Department and its agencies fuelled by (a) petrol, (b) diesel and (c) liquid petroleum gas; and what plans he has to increase the rate of conversion of those vehicles to liquid petroleum gas. [98203]

Mr. Bayley: The Department has a fleet of 2,849 vehicles of which 506 are fuelled with petrol, 2,287 with diesel and 56 with liquid petroleum gas (LPG). There are currently 15 LPG cars on order and it is departmental policy to replace all 'pool cars' primarily operating in urban areas or other Air Quality Management Areas with diesel-fuelled LPG cars when they become due for replacement.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to set targets for the recycling of waste (a) paper, (b) cardboard, (c) glass, (d) metal, (e) plastic and (f) other products created by his Department and its agencies; and if he will make a statement. [98229]

Mr. Bayley: The Department's approach to waste management should help us to achieve the Green Ministers' target for Government Departments of recovering a minimum of 40 per cent. of total office waste, with at least 25 per cent. of that recovery coming from recycling or composting, in 2000–01.

To date the following targets have been established:

Recycling of "Confidential Waste" paper—target 100 per cent.—at present 75 per cent. is being achieved.

Recycling of glass from spent fluorescent tubes—target 100 per cent.—which is being achieved.

Plans are being developed to site bottle banks for both departmental and domestic glass recycling on DSS sites. Target—to site banks on 10 per cent. of sites within 12 months.

Recycling facilities for metal waste from drink cans already exists at a number of sites. Target—to cover 10 per cent. of sites within 12 months.

Targets for the recycling of carpets and of toner cartridges are being investigated.

In addition, an Environmental Management System (EMS) is being introduced at the large DSS site at Peel Park, Preston, and a further six sites have been identified for development of EMSs from next year.

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what was the percentage withdrawal of benefit following all work test referrals and examinations at each Benefits Agency office in Scotland for each month in (a) 1998 and (b) 1999 up to the latest available month; and how many appeals against withdrawal of benefit and what percentage of such appeals were successful; [98413]

(2) what the percentage success rate was for applications for incapacity benefit at each Benefits Agency office in Scotland in each month in (a) 1998 and (b) 1999 up to the latest available month; how many appeals there were against refusals: and what percentage of such appeals was successful. [98412]

Mr. Bayley: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will define the category of individuals classified as credits only in his quarterly incapacity benefit statistics; and if he will make a statement on the reasons for the increased size of this group since 1995. [98278]

Mr. Bayley: Incapacity Benefit is payable to people who satisfy both the test of incapacity for the purposes of benefit entitlement and the relevant National Insurance contribution conditions. Where a person satisfies the test of incapacity but does not meet the contribution conditions, they are not entitled to Incapacity Benefit but can be awarded National Insurance credits (and may also be eligible for Income Support paid on the grounds of incapacity). Such cases are known as "Credits Only" cases.

The number of Credits Only cases has been increasing steadily since the contribution conditions were changed in 1988. The continued increase is likely to be the result of a number of social and economic factors, including changes in patterns of working.

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many letters his Department has received about his proposals on incapacity benefit; and how many of these were (a) in favour of and (b) against the proposals. [98148]

Mr. Bayley: The information is not available in the format requested.

We have received around 800 letters about the Incapacity Benefit changes. Around 600 of these were from Members of Parliament and around 200 were from members of the public. There is no comprehensive record of the total number received by the Department as a whole on the subject, or of the breakdown between those in favour or those against the changes.

In addition, the Department received a total of 342 responses as part of the consultation exercise on the proposals for disability reform held earlier this year. A list of those organisations and academics who responded to the Welfare Reform Green Paper, excluding those who requested confidentiality, has been placed in the House Library. The Department has also placed a summary of responses in the Library.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Curry: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the communications addressed to local authorities by his Department on the administration of housing benefit since 1 January. [98299]

National Insurance

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many staff who worked for the Contributions Agency before it was transferred to the Inland Revenue continue to work on national insurance in his Department. [98343]

Mr. Rooker: On 1 April 1999 responsibility for National Insurance (NI) contributions operations and policy passed from DSS to the Inland Revenue. As my hon. Friend, the then Minister of State, explained in his written answer on 31 March 1999, Official Report, column 429, the staff working in those areas were transferred to the Inland Revenue. No Contributions Agency staff were retained in the Department to work on NI contributions matters because the Department has no residual responsibility for the collection or recording of contributions.

This Department and Inland Revenue continue to work together closely on National Insurance matters including, for example, the integrity of the National Insurance number.

Benefits Agency

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 5 November 1999, Official Report, column 339, concerning Benefits Agency information, if he will set out the findings and actions arising from the review. [98274]

Mr. Rooker: We are satisfied that action has been taken to ensure that the accuracy of information available to the public has been reviewed and will continue to be reviewed in the future.

Personal Service Companies

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 8 November 1999, Official Report, column 385, if he will publish a list of the seven companies currently contracted to his Department to provide information technology contractor staff. [98151]

Angela Eagle: The seven companies are Ajilon, Computer People, FI Recruitment, QA Myriad, Parity Resources, Nesco and Rullion.

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 8 November 1999, Official Report, column 385, how many individuals trading as personal service companies are currently working for his Department and its agencies. [98152]

Angela Eagle: The Department's contractual arrangements are with the Framework companies and not the individual contractors. The Department has no information on the trading arrangements of individual contractors

Benefits (New Year)

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what action he is taking to ensure that vulnerable people will receive their benefits over the New Year, with particular reference to people with disabilities and those receiving direct and manual payments; and if he will make a statement. [93483]

Angela Eagle [pursuant to her reply, 27 July 1999, c. 297–98]: The administration of benefits is a matter for Peter Mathison, the Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Alexis Cleveland to Mr. Tim Boswell, dated 10 November 1999:

I am writing pursuant to Peter Mathison's letter of 27 July, Official Report, columns 297–298, in response to your Parliamentary Question asking what action would be taken to ensure that vulnerable people will receive their benefits over the New Year, with particular reference to people with disabilities and those receiving direct and manual payments. As Mr. Mathison is currently on leave, I am replying. Mr. Mathison's original letter contained an error, therefore, I enclose the revised text in full.

Each year the Benefit Agency (BA) brings forward the production of order books, Girocheques and Automated Credit Transfers (payment directly to bank accounts) so that people receiving direct and manual payments of benefits can have their money in advance for holiday periods when Banks and Post Offices are closed. These arrangements will again be made for people in receipt of all BA benefits, including disability benefits, for the forthcoming Christmas and New Year period.

Throughout the year, the BA has continuity planning arrangements in place which could involve manual payments being implemented where problems such as postal disruption are anticipated. In the most vulnerable cases, such payments could be issued to the customer in the office the same day. The BA will also consider sending a visiting officer to those who are unable to attend the office.

Over the Christmas and New Year period, BA local offices will not be open on Friday 24 December in England and Wales. Scottish BA offices, however, will be open on 24 December. All BA local offices will be open on 29 and 30 December, and 4 January (except in Scotland, where offices return to normal working hours on 5 January). Working hours will be advertised in the local office.

The BA also provides an out of hours service (OOHS) to help customers who find themselves in particular need outside normal office hours. On weekdays this service operates until at least 20.00 hours. At weekends and on statutory holidays, it will operate for at least six hours daily, normally between 9.00 and 20.00 hours. Contact with the OOHS is normally made through the social services or police who liaise with a central emergency officer through a telephone message service. The officer then considers the individual person's needs in consultation with outside agencies.

In addition, the BA has been aware for some time of the issues which may arise as a result of the Year 2000 date change. A full programme of work was established in 1996. Most of the major mainframe systems (the benefit payment computer systems) hold their dates in a way which is largely unaffected by the Year 2000 problem. Nevertheless, a full regime of checking has taken place and all benefit payment systems are now fully year 2000 compliant.

Interfaces with external computer systems, including the systems which pay benefits directly to bank accounts, have been rigorously tested, or plans are in place to do so. An intensive testing process is also under way on our major benefit paying systems to provide additional assurances. For example, BA has recently concluded a business confidence review of Jobseekers Allowance and Income Support that did not identify any risks of material disruption to payments of benefits.

I apologise for any inconvenience caused by the original error and I hope this is helpful.

Child Support Agency

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what representations he has received on (a) his proposals for reform of the Child Support Agency and (b) the length of time of the implementation of his proposals. [97925]

Angela Eagle: Our proposals which will benefit over a million more children have received widespread support. Many people have said that they want to see the reforms implemented quickly. However, we need to make substantial changes to the legislation and to the way the CSA operates. We will not repeat the mistakes of the current scheme by rushing these changes into effect before we are ready.

Pension Rates

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what the basic retirement pension rates for (a) a single person and (b) a married couple would have been in 1998–99 and 1999–2000, and would be in 2000–01, if they had been increased in April 1998, 1999 and 2000 in line with the increase in average earnings for the year to the previous September. [98414]

Mr. Rooker: The information is in the table.

	1998–99 rate	1999–00 rate	2000–01 rate
Single person	65.00	68.20	71.35
Married couple	103.90	109.00	114.05

Notes:

1. The rate has been calculated assuming 100 per cent. entitlement to Retirement Pension.
2. Average Earnings Index Whole Economy (non-seasonally adjusted), September on September, as published by the Office for National Statistics, have been used for the 1998–99 and 1999–2000 upratings.
3. Whole Economy Earnings—(headline rate 3 month average) at July 1999 as published by the Office for National Statistics, have been used to uprate 2000–01. The headline rate is the annual change in the average of the seasonally adjusted series over 3 months. The September 1999 index is not yet available.
4. Figures have been rounded to the nearest 5 pence at each uprating.

Departmental Targets

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many targets have been agreed between his Department and (i) local authorities and (ii) other bodies apart from his own agencies and non-departmental public bodies. [98317]

Mr. Rooker: Currently, the Department has no published targets with either local authorities or other bodies apart from DSS agencies and non-departmental public bodies.

Benefits (Annual Uprating)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 5 November 1999, Official Report, column 341, what assessment he has made of the practicability of the Benefits Agency's uprating plan being implemented if the annual uprating of benefits were based on the retail price index for the year to October, November or December preceding the uprating. [98425]

Mr. Rooker: I have made no such assessment.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how council tax is taken into account in the uprating of retirement pension and income support. [98426]

Mr. Rooker: Changes in Council Tax are included in RPI (all items) the index normally used to uprate Retirement pension. Changes in Council Tax are not taken into account in the Rossi index, the index normally used to uprate Income Support.

HEALTH

Road Accidents (Recovered Costs)

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much has been recovered from insurers of those responsible for road accidents under the Road Traffic (NHS Charges) Act 1999; in how many cases recovery has been achieved; and if he will make a statement. [97802]

Mr. Hutton: The Road Traffic (NHS Charges) Act 1999 came into effect on 5 April this year. From that date responsibility for the collection of charges passed from individual hospitals to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health, with the Compensation Recovery Unit, a part of the Benefits Agency, acting on his behalf.

In the first six months of operation the Compensation Recovery Unit has received notification of 271,251 new claims for compensation following a road traffic accident. One third of these cases have been confirmed as involving treatment at an NHS hospital, one third have no NHS element and one third are currently being checked. This has resulted in the identification of an estimated £40m potential income for NHS trusts in England, Scotland and Wales, to be released as and when the underlying compensation claims are settled.

The Compensation Recovery Unit took delivery of a new computer system on 5 April 1999, not only to deal with NHS charge recovery but also to replace the elderly system in place for the recovery of state benefits since 1990. Technical problems with the new computer system have delayed the transfer of around two million records of claims for all types of personal injury compensation from the old system to the new. This, in turn, has delayed the collection of NHS charges in many cases where compensation has been paid since the scheme started in April.

The technical difficulties are now being overcome and the scheme is beginning to deliver significant sums of money to trusts. An initial payment was made at the end of July when 185 trusts shared £230,305. August saw an improvement to 225 trusts sharing £713,162 and, at the end of September, 230 trusts shared £1,727,942. I can now confirm that the Compensation Recovery Unit recovered, and paid to 255 trusts, a further £3.7 million at the end of October, the largest ever monthly payment to the NHS in respect of recovery following road traffic accidents. This payment significantly exceeds the amounts previously collected by trusts in an average month in 1998–99 and shows a clear trend towards the step change in income we believe the new system will deliver.

I will be making a further report on progress at the end of December and again at the end of the full financial year.

NHS Direct

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS Direct schemes are (a) in operation and (b) planned; and if he will make a statement. [97964]

Ms Stuart: There are currently thirteen NHS Direct sites in operation and the service is available to over 40 per cent. of the population of England. From early December 1999, four new sites will become operational and five of the existing sites will expand their coverage, making the service available to over 60 per cent. of the population of England. NHS Direct will be available to the whole population of England by the end of the year 2000.

Arthritis

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many suffer from arthritis in (a) the UK and (b) Shropshire; and if he will make a statement. [96662]

Mr. Hutton: It is estimated that between 8 and 10 million people suffer from one of the different types of arthritis in the United Kingdom. The disease strikes people of all ages but is more common in older people.

Figures are not available on the prevalence of arthritis on a county by county basis.

Dental Services

Miss Kirkbride: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the number of dentists taking only private work by region in each year since 1995. [96200]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested is not available centrally.

NHS (Funding)

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the adequacy of the resources for the NHS in the current financial year. [97224]

Mr. Denham: For the current year, the National Health Service in England received an extra £2.8 billion providing real terms growth of 5.1 per cent. bringing the total net expenditure to £39.7 billion. These extra funds are allowing the NHS to deliver more responsive high quality services.

Macular Eye Disease

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what plans has he to introduce fast-track treatment for macular eye disease; [97356]

(2) how many people in the United Kingdom suffer from macular eye disease. [97357]

Mr. Hutton: Information on the number of people suffering from age-related macular degeneration is not collected centrally but I am aware of estimates made by the recently established AMD Alliance International that over half a million people in the United Kingdom have this condition. Only 10 per cent. to 15 per cent. of cases—"wet AMD"—are treatable by laser co-agulation and I am not aware that, where it is appropriate, patients are experiencing undue delay in obtaining treatment.

The extension of eligibility for free National Health Service sight tests to people aged 60 or over, introduced from April, is ensuring that more people at risk of AMD are receiving eye examinations from which patients with signs of eye disease are referred for specialist assessment.

Nursing Provision

Mr. Dobbin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the increase in nursing provision for regional health authorities in England since 1 May 1997. [97358]

Mr. Hutton: The data are shown in the table.

NHS Hospital and Community Health Services (HCHS): Total nursing, midwifery and health visiting staff, by region in England as at 30 September each year

'hc' indicates number. 19,300 nursing and midwifery training commissions are planned for 1999–2000, an increase of 4,000 over three years. Because of the time lag in completing training, this increase is not reflected in the workforce data

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the number of nurses (a) in the NHS and (b) at York District Hospital. [97795]

Mr. Hutton: Data on the number of nurses are shown in the table.

Epilepsy

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate the incidence of epilepsy (a) amongst those aged (i) under 16 years, (ii) 16 to 60 years, and (iii) over 60 years, and (b) in total in the most recent year for which figures are available. [97470]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested is not available in the format requested.

Age	Approximate incidence per 100,000
Under 19	60
Between 25 and 29	90
Between 35 and 39	80
Between 45 and 49	60
Between 65 and 69	87
Over 80	159

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the level of funding targeted by his Department on (a) the treatment of epilepsy and (b) research into epilepsy during 1999. [97469]

Mr. Hutton: The information is not available in the format requested.

It is for health authorities and Primary Care Groups to plan and arrange the services available to people in their care. However, complex epilepsy is included in the comprehensive list of specialised services in the Health Service Commissioning in the New National Health Service. This means that regional offices will need to give special consideration to commissioning services for people with complex epilepsy.

The Medical Research Council (MRC) which receives most of its income via grant-in-aid from the office of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry funds medical research as part of the Government's funding of the science and engineering base. In 1998–99 the MRC spent £3.6 million researching epilepsy. The MRC also fund a considerable amount of basic research in the area, (e.g. on nerve function and damage) which is not included in this figure.

Head Lice

Dr. Brand: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will provide a list of those health authorities that provide bug-busting kits for head lice free of charge. [97648]

Mr. Hutton: This information requested is not collected centrally.

Long-Term Care

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 25 October 1999, Official Report, column 752, on residential accommodation for elderly people, what representations his Department has received on the implementation of the recommendations of the Royal Commission on Long-Term Care for the Elderly; and if he will make public a summary of representations received. [97563]

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many representations from (a) organisations and (b) individuals he has received on the subject of long-term care since the publication of the Royal Commission's report. [97382]

Mr. Hutton: A large number of representations to Ministers on a variety of issues make reference to long-term care. Some representations specifically focus on the Royal Commission's report; around 250 letters have been received from hon. Members and around 70 letters have been received from organisations since the report was published earlier this year. Around a further 430 letters have been received direct from members of the public. Many of the representations have been broadly in support of the main recommendations in the Royal Commission's majority report; others have criticised the recommendations and some have put forward alternative proposals.

Diabetic Screening

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to receive the advice of the UK Screening Committee on the feasibility of introducing high risk type 2 diabetic screening. [97649]

Mr. Hutton: The United Kingdom National Screening Committee is considering the case for introducing a screening programme targeted at people at high risk of type 2 diabetes. We expect to receive the Committee's advice later next year. In England, this work will be linked in to the National Service Framework for diabetes.

Acne

Mr. Hilary Benn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if laser treatment to deal with acne scarring is currently available on the NHS. [97952]

Mr. Hutton: Laser treatment to deal with acne scarring is a new procedure which is currently being clinically evaluated. It is not yet therefore generally available in the United Kingdom.

NHS Laboratory Technicians

Mr. Gareth R. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the career structure for laboratory technicians in the NHS. [97818]

Mr. Denham: On 15 February 1999, the Health Departments published proposals for modernising the National Health Service pay system in "Agenda for Change". Initial discussions with NHS trade unions on pay modernisation resulted in a Joint Framework of Principles and Agreed Statement on the Way Forward which was published on 8 October. Negotiations continue, aiming for a pay system which pays fairly for work done, with career progression based on responsibility, competence and satisfactory performance.

Motor Neurone Disease

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the level of funding targeted by his Department on (a) the treatment of motor neurone disease and (b) research into motor neurone disease during 1999. [97790]

Mr. Hutton: The information is not available in the format requested. It is for health authorities and Primary Care Groups to plan and arrange the services available to people in their care.

The Medical Research Council (MRC) which receives most of its income via grant-in-aid from the office of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry funds medical research as part of the Government's funding of the science and engineering base.

The MRC funding for grants relating to motor neurone disease or to the function of motor neurones in general was almost £640,000 in 1998–99. The MRC also fund a considerable amount of basic underpinning research in the area such as nerve function and damage which is not included in this figure.

Multiple Sclerosis

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the level of funding targeted by his Department on (a) the treatment of multiple sclerosis and (b) research into multiple sclerosis during 1999. [97788]

Mr. Hutton: The information is not available in the format requested. It is for health authorities and Primary Care Groups to plan and arrange the services available to people in their care. However, complex multiple sclerosis is included in the comprehensive list of specialised services in the Health Service Commissioning in the new National Health Service. This means that regional offices will need to give special consideration to commissioning services for people with complex multiple sclerosis.

The Medical Research Council (MRC)—which receives most of its income via grant-in-aid from the office of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry—funds medical research as part of the Government's funding of the science and engineering base. The MRC spent approximately £640,000 in 1998–99. The MRC also fund a considerable amount of basic underpinning research in the area such as nerve function and damage which is not included in this figure.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate the incidence of multiple sclerosis (a) among those aged (i) under 16 years, (ii) 16 to 60 years and (iii) over 60 years, and (b) in total, in the most recent years for which figures are available. [97789]

Mr. Hutton: The information is not available in the form requested. However, the Multiple Sclerosis Society states that multiple sclerosis is estimated to affect between 80–90,000 people in the United Kingdom.

Population	New cases per year (incidence)	Total number of cases (prevalence)
England (approx. 50m)	4 per 100,000 (2,000)	100 per 100,000 (50,000)
Under 16	2.5 per cent. of all new cases (50)	50
Over 60	2.5 per cent. of all new cases (50)	12,500
Over 70	Very few	3,750

These figures are derived from epidemiological research studies. These studies all give slightly different figures. The table provides current best estimates for England. NHS figures do not provide accurate estimates of the epidemiology of MS. This is because many patients are not admitted to hospital and outpatient diagnostic data is not comprehensive.

Appointments

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the NHS Trust and Health Authority appointments which were not made by the due date and which remained outstanding on 1 November. [98110]

Ms Stuart: The appointment terms of 265 National Health Service trust non-executives and Chairs came to an end on 31 October 1999. Appointments were made to 257 or 97 per cent. of these vacancies at least four weeks before the due date. Fourteen of these appointments were short-term reappointments until January 2000. Eight vacancies were outstanding on 1 November 1999. They were:

Body	Number of Chairs	Number of non-executives
Northampton General Hospital NHS Trust	0	1
Oxford Radcliffe Hospitals NHS Trust	0	2
Oxfordshire Mental Healthcare	0	1
Queen Victoria Hospital	0	1
Two Shires Ambulance	0	1
Medway	0	1
Stoke Mandeville Hospital NHS Trust	0	1

Departmental Waste

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to set targets for the recycling of waste (a) paper, (b) cardboard, (c) glass, (d) metal, (e) plastic and (f) other products created by his Department and its agencies; and if he will make a statement. [98217]

Yvette Cooper: I shall let my hon. Friend have a reply as soon as possible.

Dominic McKilligan

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects the health authority inquiry into the discharge, supervision and later conviction for murder of Dominic McKilligan to be complete; what were the terms of reference of that inquiry; and whether those conducting that inquiry can insist on the cooperation of local authority social services departments. [98133]

Mr. Hutton: The Health authority has commissioned under Health Service Guidance 94/27, an inquiry into the services which Dominic McKilligan received from the National Health Service. That inquiry has an independent panel and work is underway. Although the inquiry cannot insist on the co-operation of the social services departments, information has been sought from involved local authorities. The inquiry aims to complete its work early in the new year.

The report of the inquiry will be made available to the independently chaired case review which is also being undertaken on behalf of Newcastle Area Child Protection Committee under Part 8 of "Working Together under the Children Act 1989" which has a wider remit in that it will be considering all the services involved.

Beta Interferon

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his oral answer of 30 March 1999, Official Report, column 845, concerning beta interferon, if he will convey to the hon. Member for Sutton and Cheam the results of his inquiries into the case of Mrs. Josephine Timms. [98275]

Mr. Denham: I will write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he plans to publish the final version of the Health Service circular on beta interferon. [98381]

Mr. Hutton: The Department is currently considering all comments received during the consultation on a draft circular on beta interferon.

Eastbourne Hospital

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the adequacy of the level of nursing staff at Eastbourne District General Hospital; and if he will make a statement. [97326]

Mr. Denham: The East Sussex, Brighton and Hove Health Authority and Eastbourne Hospitals National Health Service Trust have reviewed nursing levels and it has been agreed that funding will be allocated for an additional 10 nurses at Eastbourne District General Hospital.

Following the recommendation in the South East NHS Executive's recent Review of Nursing at Eastbourne Hospitals NHS Trust, the East Sussex, Brighton and Hove Health Authority, Eastbourne Hospitals NHS Trust and Eastbourne Downs Primary Care Group are also looking to agree a workload measurement tool that will help determine the skill mix and staffing required to deliver appropriate care at Eastbourne District General Hospital.

Electric Wheelchairs (East Sussex)

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many electric wheelchairs were issued or paid for by Eastbourne and County Healthcare Trust in each of the last three years. [98195]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested is given in the table.

Financial year	Number issued
April 1996-March 1997	0
April 1997-March 1998	22
April 1998-March 1999	13

Figures given in the table are the number of electric wheelchairs issued by Eastbourne and County Healthcare National Health Service Trust.

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to increase funding for electric wheelchairs in East Sussex; and if he will make a statement. [98196]

Mr. Hutton: Wheelchair services for residents of East Sussex are provided by Eastbourne and County Healthcare National Health Service Trust and Hastings and Rother NHS Trust.

Eastbourne and County Healthcare NHS Trust are presently discussing with Eastbourne Downs Primary Care Group the possibility of increasing funding for Electrically Powered Indoor Chairs. Hastings and Rother NHS Trust will shortly be considering increasing funding for Electrically Powered Indoor Chairs. Any increases in funding will be dependent on local priorities.

Benzodiazepine

Mr. Woolas: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many new born babies in each of the last five years have been damaged by the prescribing of benzodiazepine drugs to their mothers. [93726]

Yvette Cooper: Information on the number of babies born to mothers taking benzodiazepines during pregnancy who have congenital abnormalities or experience complications is not available. The number of congenital abnormalities and neonatal complications reported to the Committee on Safety of Medicines through the United Kingdom's spontaneous Adverse Drug Reaction Scheme from 1 January 1992 to 31 December 1997 suspected as associated with benzodiazepines is shown in the table.

Number of suspected adverse reaction reports of congenital anomalies and neonatal complications associated with benzodiazepines

1995	0
1996	1
1997	5
1998	2

A report of a suspected adverse drug reaction does not necessarily mean that it was caused by the drug as factors such as underlying disease and concomitant medication may be contributory. The level of reporting of adverse drug reactions with particular drugs is influenced by the scale of drug usage, the period of time the drug has been on the market and the publicity about the drug.

Mr. Woolas: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to request the Medicines Control Agency to review the use and prescription of benzodiazepine drugs. [93722]

Yvette Cooper: It is not the role of the Medicines Control Agency to advise on the prescription of medicines. Advice has already been issued in 1998 by the Royal College of Psychiatrists and the Department of Health.

Mr. Woolas: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to implement the advice of the Committee on Review of Medicines that benzodiazepines should not be prescribed to pregnant women. [93724]

Yvette Cooper: The product information for prescribers states that benzodiazepines should not be given during pregnancy unless there are compelling medical reasons. There are however some medical conditions in pregnancy where the use of these drugs can be life-saving to mother and child, for example when used to control fits in eclampsia. Patient Information Leaflets produced by the manufacturer and authorised by the licensing authority for benzodiazepines carry warnings that patients should not take the medicine if they are pregnant, might become pregnant or are breast feeding.

Mr. Woolas: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to implement the advice of the Committee on Review of Medicines on the prescription of benzodiazepine drugs. [93725]

Yvette Cooper: In 1980, the Committee on Review of Medicines recommended the short-term use only of benzodiazepines, and the addition of warnings about withdrawal reactions and advice on gradual reduction in dosage on cessation of therapy. The licences for benzodiazepines were amended to add these recommendations for use at this time and this was reflected in the product information for health professionals.

Subsequently the Committee on Safety of Medicines has given advice on the use of benzodiazepines. Doctors were informed in the bulletin, "Current Problems in Pharmacovigilance" in 1988. This advice is found in the British National Formulary, which the Department provides to all doctors and pharmacists twice a year.

Mr. Woolas: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to carry out research into the effects of long-term use of benzodiazepine drugs. [93723]

Yvette Cooper: There are no plans to carry out research into the long term use of benzodiazepine drugs. The Medicines Control Agency continually monitors the safety of all medicines in routine clinical practice. Benzodiazepines are currently licensed for short-term use only.

CABINET OFFICE

Concordat (Wales)

Ms Julie Morgan: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office when she expects to publish the bilateral Concordat between the Cabinet Office and the Cabinet of the National Assembly for Wales. [98356]

Marjorie Mowlam: I am pleased to announce that the First Secretary and I have agreed the text of the Concordat between the Cabinet Office and the Cabinet of the National Assembly for Wales. Copies of the Concordat have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses, and the text will be available on the Cabinet Office website.

Concordat (Scotland)

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office when she expects to publish the bilateral Concordat between the Cabinet Office and the Scottish Administration. [98353]

Marjorie Mowlam: I am pleased to announce that the First Minister and I have agreed the text of the Concordat between the Cabinet Office and the Scottish Administration. Copies of the Concordat have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses, and the text will be available on the Cabinet Office website.

Consultants

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office how much her Department spent on external consultants and advisers in each of the last four financial years. [97423]

Marjorie Mowlam: My Department's expenditure on external consultants and advisers in each of the last four financial years is given as follows:

Year	Expenditure on external consultants and advisers
1995–96	5,015,495
1996–97	4,708,290
1997–98	2,820,726
1998–99	5,534,507

Note:
The increase from 1997–98 to 1998–99 is largely because of new expenditure in the following areas: GCHQ consultancy services (CESG) by Central IT Unit (£1,483,858); combating the Millennium Bug expenditure by Y2K team (£502,956); and the Peoples Panel by Modernising Public Services Group (£451,812).

Departmental Waste

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what plans she has to set targets for the recycling of waste (a) paper, (b) cardboard, (c) glass, (d) metal, (e) plastic and (f) other products created by her Department and its agencies; and if she will make a statement. [98216]

Mr. Stringer: My Department's approach to waste management is based on the three Rs: with Recovery (ie. recycling, composting and energy recovery) following Reduce and Re-use as the preferred options for reducing waste sent to landfill. This should help us to achieve: the Green Ministers' target for Government Departments of recovering a minimum of 40 per cent. of total office waste, with at least 25 per cent. of that recovery coming from recycling or composting in 2000–01, as published in "Greening Government: First Annual Report of the Green Ministers Committee 1998–99". We are developing individual targets for paper, cardboard, glass, metal, plastic and other materials. Our associate bodies are similarly working towards the Green Ministers target.

Regulatory Impact Assessment

Dr. Cable: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office how many proposals to impose new regulations on business have been dropped as a result of the application of Regulatory Impact Assessment. [98049]

Marjorie Mowlam: Regulatory Impact Assessment is an iterative process that begins when policy options are first explored. During the development of a proposal, options may be dropped for various reasons, including the potential burden on business. But information is not collected on proposals that are dropped and could be collected only at disproportionate cost.

Proposals that come before Parliament, and which are accompanied by a final, published Regulatory Impact Assessment have been judged to be necessary and to strike the right balance between cost and benefit.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what estimate she has made of the costs (a) reduced and (b) avoided as a result of the use of Regulatory Impact Assessments for the last year for which figures are available. [98043]

Marjorie Mowlam: I have made no such estimates. Regulatory Impact Assessments show the expected costs and benefits of proposals that are brought forward. These individual assessments are placed in the Libraries of the House.

Where a new proposal has the benefit of replacing an earlier more costly arrangement, that would be shown in the relevant Regulatory Impact Assessment.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office if she will make it her policy to encourage (a) utility and (b) other sector regulators to adopt the principles contained in her Department's Regulatory Impact Assessment guidelines in respect of their regulatory decisions. [98051]

Marjorie Mowlam: The requirements of the Better Regulation Guide and Regulatory Impact Assessment apply primarily to Government Departments and agencies who bring regulations before Parliament. It is also appropriate for other agencies such as utility and other sector regulators where they do not already have such guidance built into their statutory requirements.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office if she will set (a) departmental and (b) overall targets for reducing the burden of regulation, measured by (i) volume of regulatory requirements and (ii) costs imposed by those requirements. [98550]

Marjorie Mowlam: The volume and cost of regulation is less important than its quality and effectiveness. To focus on the number of regulations or their cost is meaningless because it ignores the benefits to business, society and the environment that can result from targeted and proportionate regulation.

The process of Regulatory Impact Assessment aims to ensure that the costs of regulation are justified by the benefits.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what procedures are in place to ensure that departments comply with the Cabinet Office Regulatory Impact Assessment guidelines. [98089]

Marjorie Mowlam: The Procedure for compliance is in the form of ministerial agreement that regulatory proposals with an impact on businesses, charities or voluntary bodies should have a Regulatory Impact Assessment (RIA) prior to collective agreement being sought. Departments consult the Cabinet Office Regulatory Impact Unit as part of this process.

Ministers and their Departmental Regulatory Impact Units have responsibility for ensuring that RIAs are published and placed in the Libraries of the House. Copies of all final RIAs must also be sent to Cabinet Office Regulatory Impact Unit.

Financial Services and Markets Bill

Dr. Cable: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office if she will take steps to require that the requirement set out in Clause 125 of the Financial Services and Markets Bill should apply to all sector regulators in respect of their regulatory decision-making role; and if she will make a statement. [98088]

Marjorie Mowlam: There is no need to extend the specific requirements on consultation and cost benefit analysis, in Clause 125 of the Financial Services and Markets Bill, to all sector regulators. Best practice guidance on consultation and on Regulatory Impact Assessment (RIA) is already available to sector regulators in the Better Regulation Guide.

Drug Misuse

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office if she will instruct the Anti-drugs Co-ordinator to include within the remit of the drugs action teams the problem of drugs and driving. [98116]

Marjorie Mowlam: The issue of drugs and driving is predominantly a matter for the police, who have powers to deal with drivers who are impaired through the effects of drugs under existing road traffic legislation. Drug Action Team (DAT) membership includes chief officers of agencies—including the police—which have responsibility for tackling all aspects of the drug problem, and as such this issue is already covered by DATs.

Special Advisers

Mr. Evans: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office how many special advisers are employed by each Government Department, including the Prime Minister's Office; and how many there were in 1995–96, 1996–97, 1997–98 and 1998–99. [97766]

Marjorie Mowlam: For the numbers of Special Advisers currently in post, I refer the hon. Member to my answer to his question 98192.

The information requested for earlier years is as follows:

Year	Number of Advisers
1995–96	38

Details about an individual's previous employment are confidential in order to protect the privacy of the individuals concerned.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what is the total cost of special advisers currently employed by each Government department and by the Prime Minister's Office; and what was the total cost for each year from 1995–96 to 1998–99. [97606]

Marjorie Mowlam: The costs of Special Advisers within each department are confidential in order to protect the privacy of the individuals concerned.

The estimated cost in 1999–2000 of Special Advisers in No.10 is £1.5m. The estimated cost of departmental Advisers is £2.4m.

The total costs of Special Advisers in the years requested are as follows:

1995–96 £1.5m
1996–97 £1.8m
1997–98 £2.6m
1998–99 £3.5m

Departmental Vehicles

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what is the total number of vehicles used by her Department and its agencies fuelled by (a) petrol, (b) diesel and (c) liquid petroleum gas; and what plans she has to increase the rate of conversion of those vehicles to liquid petroleum gas. [98197]

Mr. Stringer: The information requested is as set out and covers the vehicles owned by the Cabinet Office, its five agencies and the Central Office of Information (CoI).

	Number
Vehicles fuelled by petrol	159
Vehicles fuelled by diesel[1]	76
Vehicles fuelled by lPG[2]	35
Vehicles fuelled by other energy sources	1
Total	271

[1] Includes vehicles fuelled by low-sulphur diesel
[2] Includes bi-fuelled vehicles

Some 242 of these vehicles are operated by the Government Car and Despatch Agency, which runs two fleets, the Government Car Service and the InterDespatch Service.

The Cabinet Office, its Agencies and the CoI are, individually, either implementing a replacement programme or investigating the scope for making greater use of alternative technologies and fuels, including liquid petroleum gas, for the vehicles they operate.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Financial Crime

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Solicitor-General what arrangements the Serious Fraud Office will make with the Financial Services Authority to ensure the effective enforcement of the criminal law in cases of financial crime. [97842]

The Solicitor-General: The Serious Fraud Office and the Financial Services Authority, together with the Crown Prosecution Service, the Director of Public Prosecutions for Northern Ireland, the Crown Office in Scotland, the Department of Trade and Industry, Her Majesty's Treasury and the Police are working to develop guidelines for deciding who should take the lead in investigating particular instances of suspected financial misconduct and for liaison both on a regular basis and during investigations and subsequent regulatory, civil or criminal action. It is proposed to publish these guidelines when they have been finalised.

Departmental Waste

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Solicitor-General what plans he has to set targets for the recycling of waste (a) paper, (b) cardboard, (c) glass, (d) metal, (e) plastic and (f) other products created by his Department and its agencies; and if he will make a statement. [98226]

The Solicitor-General: The Law Officers' Departments are working towards the Green Ministers' target for Government Departments of recovering a minimum of 40 per cent. of total office waste, with at least 25 per cent. of that recovery coming from recycling or composting, in 2000–01.

Towards this target, the Crown Prosecution Service has in place contracts for the collection, shredding and recycling of over 80 per cent. of classified waste paper, and is presently tendering a contract for the recycling of non-classified waste paper, cardboard, metal, glass and plastic. The Disposal Sales Agency is used by the CPS to dispose of information technology and other obsolete equipment either by sale or recycling.

The Crown Prosecution Service, Serious Fraud Office, Treasury Solicitor's Department and Legal Secretariat to the Law Officers seek to reduce the amount of waste produced and to deal with waste by re-use, recycling, composting or incineration to produce heat and power in preference to landfill.

Departmental Vehicles

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Solicitor-General what is the total number of vehicles used by his Department and its agencies fuelled by (a) petrol, (b) diesel and (c) liquid petroleum gas; and what plans he has to increase the rate of conversion of those vehicles to liquid petroleum gas. [98199]

The Solicitor-General: The Attorney-General and Treasury Solicitor use cars allocated by the Government Car Service. Details of their fuel types are provided in an answer given by my right hon. Friend the Minister for the Cabinet Office, on 11 November 1999, Official Report, column 828.

The Serious Fraud Office does not operate motor vehicles of any kind.

The Crown Prosecution Service operates a total of 21 vans and estate cars which are based at various locations throughout England and Wales. Of these one is fuelled by petrol and the remaining 20 run on diesel. The CPS periodically review the local availability of liquid petroleum gas with the aim of moving to this form of fuel as soon as practicable.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Janet Anderson [holding answer 10 November 1999]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for East Surrey (Mr. Ainsworth) on 10 November 1999, Official Report, columns 622–23.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will publish a list of assets sold by his Department and the value realised in each case, in each year from 1991–92 to 1998–99, together with an estimate of the value of asset sales planned in the (a) current and (b) next financial year. [97585]

Mr. Chris Smith: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before Prorogation. I shall therefore write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my reply in the Libraries of the House.

National Stadium

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) who was responsible for authorising the original design brief for the new National Stadium; [97981]

(2) what recent representations he has received from (a) the British Olympic Association and (b) other sporting bodies regarding the proposed capacity of the new National Stadium; and what response he has made; [97980]

(5) what requirements regarding seating capacity for track and field events were contained in the original design brief for the new National Stadium; [97982]

(6) if he will make a statement on what seating capacity options for the new National Stadium have been considered by his Department. [97986]

Mr. Chris Smith: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before Prorogation. I shall therefore write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my reply in the Libraries of the House.

TV Transmission

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what estimates he has made for the time when analogue television transmission will be discontinued, of the percentage of (a) the viewers of BBC1 who will have access to analogue but not digital equipment in their homes and (b) the viewers of S4C who will have access to analogue but not digital equipment in their homes. [97953]

Janet Anderson: The Government have set two tests to be met before switch over from analogue to digital television transmissions: first, at least everyone who currently receives analogue television signals should be able to receive digital signals; and second, digital receiving equipment should be affordable, so that at least 95 per cent. of UK consumers have access to digital equipment in the home. We believe that switch over could start to happen as early as 2006 and be completed by 2010.

The broadcasters estimate that 98.3 per cent. of the Welsh population have access to analogue terrestrial television services, with BBC Wales and S4C available to 97.6 per cent., and we will seek to ensure that at least the same proportion can receive television services in digital form in advance of switch over. At present, BBC Wales' and S4C's digital terrestrial services can be received by 70 per cent. of Welsh consumers and the ITC, BBC and digital broadcasters will be planning the development of terrestrial coverage over the next few years.

The BBC and S4C already transmit their services, throughout Wales, on digital satellite and they plan to broadcast on digital cable, when it becomes available.

SkyTV

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will make a statement in respect of his policy towards the percentage of home-produced material broadcast on SkyTV. [97590]

Janet Anderson [holding answer 8 November 1999]: In line with all EU broadcasters, BSkyB has an obligation to comply with the requirements of articles 4 and 5 of the Broadcasting Directive so far as European and independently produced content is concerned. Sky has committed itself to steadily increasing the amount of UK produced material both in its general channels and in new ones. Sky One is this year aiming to have 50 per cent. UK content during prime time and 40 per cent. European content overall, and will spend £20 million in original home-produced production. Sky Pictures annually produces 10 films to be shown on Sky Premier, plus 40 hours of original drama and up to 40 hours of comedy. In addition, Sky sport channels, with 20,000 hours of programming each year, have a majority of home produced material. Sky News and Sky Sports News contain nearly 100 per cent. home produced material.

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many sports are currently supporting scholarships in higher and further education; and if he will list them. [97993]

Kate Hoey [holding answer 10 November 1999]: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before Prorogation. I shall therefore write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my reply in the Libraries of the House.

Stonehenge

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if people using the proposed new visitors' centre at Stonehenge who are (a) members of English Heritage, (b) members of the National Trust, (c) members of the National Trust for Scotland and (d) local people exercising their right of free access to the stones will be charged for (i) car parking (ii) access to the visitors' centre and (iii) access to the stones. [98047]

Mr. Alan Howarth: The Stonehenge Master Plan sets out clearly that access to the Stones and the wider World Heritage Site will be free for all and that free transport will be provided from the visitor centre to the drop off point. The information pack circulated to bidders stipulates that they should provide free parking for: local residents with existing arrangements and for members of English Heritage and the National Trust. This includes members of other heritage organisations, such as the National Trust for Scotland, which have reciprocal arrangements. Proposed arrangements for admission to the Visitor Centre will be assessed in considering the final submissions received from bidders.

Departmental Vehicles

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what is the total number of vehicles used by his Department and its agencies fuelled by (a) petrol, (b) diesel and (c) liquid petroleum gas; and what plans he has to increase the rate of conversion of those vehicles to liquid petroleum gas. [98210]

Mr. Chris Smith: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before Prorogation. I shall therefore write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my reply in the Libraries of the House.

Departmental Waste

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans he has to set targets for the recycling of waste (a) paper, (b) cardboard, (c) glass, (d) metal, (e) plastic and (f) other products created by his Department and its agencies; and if he will make a statement. [98220]

Mr. Chris Smith: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before Prorogation. I shall therefore write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my reply in the Libraries of the House.

Departmental Targets

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many targets have been agreed since May 1997 between his Department and (i) local authorities and (ii) other bodies apart from his own agencies and non-departmental public bodies. [98319]

Mr. Chris Smith: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before Prorogation. I shall therefore write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my reply in the Libraries of the House.

Press Releases

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will break down the press releases issued by his Department in the past 12 months by broad departmental responsibility. [98147]

Mr. Chris Smith: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before Prorogation. I shall therefore write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my reply in the Libraries of the House.

Museums Challenge Fund

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport, pursuant to his answer of 5 November 1999, Official Report, column 362, what sums will be provided in 1999–2000, 2000–01 and 2001–02 to pre-eminent regional collections through the Designated Museums Challenge Fund. [98239]

Mr. Chris Smith: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before Prorogation. I shall therefore write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my reply in the Libraries of the House.

Millennium Experience (Tickets)

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many Millennium Experience tickets have been sold to date in (a) Wales, (b) Scotland, (c) Northern Ireland and (d) each of the English regions. [98126]

Janet Anderson: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before Prorogation. I shall therefore write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my reply in the Libraries of the House.

Television Licence Fees

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) what representations he has received from the BBC about the system of funding television licence fees by direct payment from the Department of Social Security; and if he will make a statement; [98377]

(2) what safeguards exist to prevent transfer of ownership of televisions to people aged 75 years or over in households where there are people younger than 75 years in order to avoid payment of the television licence fee; [98372]

(3) what estimate he has made of net revenue in each of the next five years which may be lost to the BBC as a result of proposals to introduce a free television licence fee to people aged 75 years and over; [98374]

(4) what discussions he had with the BBC about proposals to introduce a free television licence fee for people aged 75 years and over; [98375]

(5) what estimate he has made of the percentage of BBC television licence fee revenues which will be funded by the Department of Social Security following the introduction of free television licences for people aged 75 years and over; [98376]

(6) what discussions he had with (a) HM Treasury and (b) the Department of Social Security prior to the announcement of proposals to introduce a free television licence fee for people aged 75 years and over. [98373]

Janet Anderson: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State discussed the proposal for free television licences for people aged 75 or over with my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer prior to the announcement. The Government have received no representations from the BBC on this proposal. Officials from my Department, the Treasury and the Department of Social Security are discussing with BBC officials the detailed implementation of the concession, including funding issues.

The estimated cost of the concession in the first full year is around £290 million, or approximately 12.5 per cent. of current television licence fee revenue. Costs in subsequent years will depend on the level of the licence fee and on increases in the number of households including a person aged 75 or over. Since the concession will be available to people over the age of 75, regardless of the age of other members of their household, ownership of television sets will not be at issue.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Animal Feed

Mrs. Shephard: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on what date UKREP officials from his Department were informed that human and animal waste, and meat and bonemeal were being used in French animal feed; and if he will make a statement. [96015]

Mr. Vaz: As Minister responsible for Europe, I have been asked to reply.

UKREP Brussels officials first became aware of these allegations when they surfaced in the media in June.

Subsequent contact between the UK and the Commission was pursued by officials in the Joint Food Safety and Standards Group of the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and the Department of Health. I refer the right hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on 5 November 1999, Official Report, column 374.

Officials in UKREP Brussels received a copy of the Commission's report of its inspection mission to France on 22 October.

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when his Department first learned of the inclusion of sewage sludge in animal feedstuffs. [97571]

Ms Quin: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the right hon. Member for South-West Norfolk (Mrs. Shephard) on 8 November 1999, Official Report, column 461.

Quarantine

Mr. Prosser: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what support measures he plans to introduce for quarantine kennel owners during the transition period before the introduction of the pet travel scheme. [97377]

Ms Quin: We have no plans for any such support measures for quarantine kennel owners.

Brownfield Land

Mr. Flight: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if land, which has been used within the horticultural industry with buildings thereon but where agricultural rates have been paid, falls within his definition of brownfield land. [98333]

Ms Beverley Hughes: I have been asked to reply.

It does not.

Bovine Tuberculosis

Mr. Paice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many badger road casualties have been tested for bovine TB in each month since testing re-started. [96068]

Ms Quin [holding answer 1 November 1999]: The number of casualty badgers tested in 1999 is given in the following table:

1999	Number
January	72
February	184
March	196
April	139
May	128
June	107
July	101
August	41

Testing is currently suspended while facilities are upgraded in line with Health and Safety Executive recommendations. We expect to resume testing next year.

Beef on the Bone

Mr. Luff: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of (a) the legality of maintaining the ban on beef on the bone in England and (b) the scientific advice he has received on the subject. [95272]

Ms Quin [holding answer 26 October 1999]: The Beef Bones Regulations 1997 were properly made under the powers of the Food Safety Act 1990 and remain in force throughout Great Britain until revoked.

My right hon. Friend the Minister considered carefully the advice given to him by the Chief Medical Officer, Professor Donaldson, in his report of 30 July 1999, a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House. The Government have made clear they wish to lift the beef on the bone ban but consider that it would be preferable to do so at the same time in all parts of the United Kingdom. Further scientific evidence on this issue is scheduled for later this month. Provided that evidence is favourable, it is the Government's clear and firm intention, and that of the First Minister in Scotland and the First Secretary in Wales, to lift the ban throughout the United Kingdom.

Common Agricultural Policy Administration

Mr. Todd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he has taken to address the lack of a business or communication strategy identified in the Coopers and Lybrand review of Common Agricultural Policy administration. [97674]

Ms Quin: In its Business Plan for 1999–2000, published in May 1999, my Department set out its aims, objectives and targets, including objective 6 on CAP administration. The Plan sets out the context of this work, the key challenges, the MAFF programmes which contribute to it and the targets and output and performance measures which apply. These targets and other issues are also communicated through the Public Service Agreement, the Output and Performance Analyses and the Departmental Report.

Plans and targets are being communicated internally to help ensure that staff at all levels know what their work unit is about and are clear on their role and responsibilities within it. This forms part of the Department's Internal Communications Strategy, established in July 1998 following consultation with staff. The Strategy is currently being reviewed to ensure that it continues to meet the Department's business needs.

Correspondence

Mrs. Browning: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he expects to reply to the letter of 1 September from Mr. Robert Persey, a constituent of the hon. Member for Tiverton and Honiton, concerning human sewage sludge in French pig and poultry feed. [98181]

Ms Quin: My noble Friend the Minister of State replied on 8 November 1999 to the hon. Member's letter of 1 September on behalf of Mr. Robert Persey.

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he expects to reply to the hon. Member for Tewkesbury's letter dated 10 August on the subject of the pesticides tax. [95721]

Ms Quin [holding answer 26 October 1999]: My noble Friend the Minister of State replied to the hon. Member on 25 October 1999.

BSE Inquiry

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he expects the conclusions of the BSE Inquiry conducted by Lord Justice Phillips to be published. [97698]

Ms Quin [holding answer 9 November 1999]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Tewkesbury (Mr. Robertson) on 8 November 1999, Official Report, column 459.

GM Oilseed Rape

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if (a) honey and (b) other food, food ingredients or additives containing GM oilseed rape are permitted lawfully to be sold in the United Kingdom. [96713]

Ms Quin [holding answer 2 November 1999]: The European Commission, in response to questions from the European Parliament, has advised that honey that contains trace amounts (0.005 per cent.) of pollen from genetically modified crops is not classified as a novel food, and may therefore be lawfully sold throughout the Community.

As far as GM foods, food ingredients or additives derived from oilseed rape are concerned, only one GM variety currently has clearance to be marketed for this purpose. This variety does not however have the necessary authorisation to enable it to be grown commercially in the Community at the present time. It can therefore only be imported for processing.

Specified Risk Material

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to adopt the specified risk material disposal system as utilised by the French Government. [97813]

Ms Quin: I assume that the question relates to the methods permitted for removing the spinal cord from the carcases of sheep which at the time of slaughter had at least one permanent incisor tooth or were aged over twelve months. In France, the spinal cord of such sheep may be removed either by longitudinally splitting the whole vertebral column, as required in the UK, or by a method which involves suction from the unsplit carcase.

Methods involving suction have been evaluated in the UK but did not prove to be reliable in removing the entire spinal cord in all cases. It is also not possible to verify that no spinal cord remains in an unsplit carcase. We therefore have no current plans to adopt this method.

Beef Ban

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking to ensure the German ban on British beef is lifted quickly; and if he will make a statement. [97792]

Ms Quin: My right hon. Friend the Minister has been assured by the German Health Minister that the German Government are taking the necessary legal steps to lift the ban via the appropriate constitutional procedures which involve discussions with the Länder whose agreement is needed to lift the ban. The recent Scientific Steering Committee Opinion should make it clear to the Länder that British beef exports are safe.

Less-favoured Areas

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he will consult with the agricultural industry on the options available to the Government in relation to the future of less-favoured areas under Agenda 2000. [97811]

Ms Quin: We issued a consultation paper, setting out proposals for England, on 5 November. Copies have been placed in the Library of the House and the document may be found on the internet at http://www.maff.gov.uk/farm/agendatwo/agendatwo.htm.

Member requires on meetings which have taken place in the UK and third countries is not held centrally, and to obtain it would incur disproportionate costs.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many times Ministers in his Department have met members and officials of the US Government since 2 March; and if he will list the (a) dates, (b) locations, (c) Ministers involved and (d) names of the US members and officials at each meeting. I also met Mrs. Albright on a number of other occasions in the UK and in the margins of other international meetings, including the UN General Assembly in New York in September and receiving her as my guest at Chevening on 6 March.

Unfortunately, the information the hon. Member requires on meetings which have taken place in the UK and third countries is not held centrally, and to obtain it would incur disproportionate costs.

Departmental Publications

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the titles of the in-house publications and newsletters which were produced for the staff of his Department, excluding non-departmental public bodies and agencies, in the last five years, specifying the dates on which each title was first produced, the frequency with which each title is produced and the current secrecy classification of each title. Mr. Robin Cook: The Foreign Policy Centre is independent of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and has received no money from the Department. The purpose of its establishment and the criteria for judging its success are matters for the Foreign Policy Centre.

College of Diplomacy

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his policy on the establishment of a college of diplomacy of the European Union. [97524]

Mr. Hain: There is no proposal from the UK or other EU member states to create a European Union College of Diplomacy. We continue to co-operate with our EU partners in the provision of joint training programmes where such training will give our officials the skills and knowledge to promote British national interests in the European Union. These programmes are in addition to our own national programmes.

ASSIST Programme

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask, the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what has been the cost of training, provided under the ASSIST programme, (a) in total and (b) to China, Malaysia, Pakistan, Nigeria, Croatia, Russia and Turkey; [97511]

(2) how many personnel have benefited from training, provided under the ASSIST programme, (a) in total and (b) from China, Malaysia, Pakistan, Nigeria, Croatia, Russia and Turkey; [97512]

(4) which NGOs have been involved in compiling ASSIST training courses for (a) China, (b) Malaysia, (c) Pakistan, (d) Nigeria, (e) Croatia, (f) Russia and (g) Turkey. [97513]

Mr. Vaz: The content of ASSIST training programmes provided to personnel from (a) China, (b) Malaysia, (c) Pakistan, (d) Nigeria, (e) Croatia, (f) Russia and (g) Turkey has been:

In-country training for policemen on the rights of women and children and prevention of child trafficking;

Courses for military officers in early, middle and late career aimed at improving awareness of the operation of the armed forces in a democracy; the teaching of defence and international affairs set firmly within the context of democratic and constitutional principles, including the rule of law;

Technical courses designed to enhance the capacity of armed forces to participate in peacekeeping operations;

Training for military academy lecturers in the management of armed forces in a democracy;

The total cost of training provided under the ASSIST programme is £12,866,807. And to China £76,064; Malaysia £278,750; Pakistan £389,945; Nigeria £4,000; Croatia £38,696; Russia £95,386; Turkey £53,917.

In total, 664 personnel have benefited from training provided in the United Kingdom under the ASSIST programme. And from China—26; Malaysia—12; Pakistan—15; Nigeria—0; Croatia—27; Russia—16; Turkey—0.

Immigration (DNA Tests)

Mr. Sarwar: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what percentage of immigration cases required DNA tests to prove family relationships in each of the last three years. [97577]

Mr. Vaz: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer my right hon. Friend the then Minister of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (Mr. Hoon) gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Watford (Ms Ward) on 29 June 1999, Official Report, column 118.

"The Raspberry Ice Cream War"

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many copies of the European Commission booklet, "The Raspberry Ice Cream War", were printed in (a) English and (b) other Community languages; what determined these numbers; and if he will make a statement. [97764]

Mr. Vaz: This is a matter for the Commission. No copies of the booklet were distributed in the UK.

EMU and EU (Public Opinion)

Mr. Cash: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what opinion research his Department has commissioned on attitudes to economic and monetary union and the European Union; which polling organisations have been awarded contracts for such research; when such contracts were awarded; and what the costs of such contracts have been. [97768]

Mr. Vaz: I refer the hon. Member to the answer the Prime Minister gave to him on 1 November 1999, Official Report, column 5.

Mr. Mark Davey

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 2 November 1999, Official Report, column 125, what progress has been made in obtaining the report of the Nigerian police on the death of Mr. Mark Davey in April 1998. [97956]

Mr. Hain: The British High Commission in Lagos and Abuja continue to press the Nigerian authorities both in writing and verbally for a copy of the complete police report.

Minority and Regional Languages

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he plans to sign the Council of Europe Charter on Minority and Regional Languages. [97883]

Mr. Vaz: It is our firm intention to sign the charter. We will move to signing and ratification as soon as the full implications for the UK are clear.

Correspondence

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he expects to reply to the letter sent to him on 12 July regarding Dr. Amin of Birkenhead. [97944]

Mr. Vaz: A member of the Migration and Visa correspondence Unit sent my right hon. Friend a reply to his letter on 27 October. A reply was sent on 10 August but, regrettably, incorrectly addressed. I apologise to my right hon. Friend for the administrative error. He is of course at liberty to discuss this matter with me if he wishes to do so.

Chinese Embassy, Belgrade

Mr. Forth: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the total amounts paid in compensation for the bombing of the Chinese Embassy in Belgrade to (a) the Government of the People's Republic of China and (b) individuals in the People's Republic of China. [96144]

Mr. Vaz: I will write to the right hon. Member shortly.

Intergovernmental Conference

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he plans to report on preparations for enlargement of the EU at the next Intergovernmental Conference. [97924]

Mr. Vaz: I will write to the hon. Member shortly.

Minke Whale

Mr. Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has made to the Norwegian Government on the resumption of Minke whale hunting by Norwegian whalers. [98085]

Mr. Hain: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs has not made any recent personal representations to the Norwegian Government about Minke whale hunting. However, we take every suitable opportunity to make clear to Norway the UK's views on whaling.

Sri Lanka

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the Government's current assessment of the political situation in Sri Lanka. [98060]

Mr. Hain: We believe a lasting solution to the ethnic conflict in Sri Lanka can only be reached through a political settlement. We have made clear that we stand ready to help in the resolution of the conflict if both sides ask us to play a role.

Greek Cypriots

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has made to the authorities in the north of Cyprus regarding the situation of the Greek Cypriot community; and if he will make a statement. [98058]

Mr. Vaz: We have regular contacts with the Turkish Cypriot authorities and continue to urge them to implement measures to improve living conditions for the Greek Cypriot community in northern Cyprus. Measures were taken in October last year to relax some of the restrictions on the Greek Cypriot community, and we consider these a step in the right direction. But we have made clear that more should be done.

Arms Exports

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the value of armaments exports to (a) Greece, (b) Turkey and (c) Cyprus in each of the last 10 years; on what occasions a licence for the export of arms to each country was refused during that time; and if he will make a statement. [98061]

Mr. Vaz: HM Customs and Excise collect and compile information on the trading of goods between UK and other countries. However, extracting and quality assuring some of the information requested could be done only at disproportionate cost. This relates to exports before 1997.

Information on the value of military equipment exported during 1997 and 1998 and countries of destination can be found in the Government Annual Report on Strategic Export Controls for 1997 and 1998 respectively.

Export licence refusals for the last 10 years are recorded by the DTI. This information is not immediately available but the DTI have undertaken to write to me with full details as soon as possible.

All defence exports for all destinations are considered on a case by case basis against national criteria announced by the Secretary of State in July 1997 and, since June 1998, the EU Code of Conduct on Arms Exports. Exports to Cyprus are additionally assessed against guidelines announced by the previous administration on 14 February 1997, Official Report, column 282.

Chechnya

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what measures the Government have taken to assist in the relief of the refugee crisis in Chechnya. [98311]

Mr. Vaz: We have provided £0.5 million in response to the Red Cross' emergency appeal. The EU has also 1.2 million euro available for humanitarian assistance. We and our partners have pressed the Russians to allow free movement across the Chechen/Ingush border of those fleeing the fighting, to allow access by international humanitarian missions, and to support the rapid, secure and reliable distribution of international aid.

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what measures the Government have taken to persuade the Russian Government to seek a diplomatic solution to the conflict in Chechnya. [98312]

Mr. Vaz: My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister urged Russian Prime Minister Putin to seek a political solution when he wrote to him on 4 November. My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary reinforced this message when he spoke to the Russian Foreign Minister on 6 November. The EU General Affairs Council on 15–16 November, and the OSCE Summit on 17–18 November, will be further opportunities to press the Russians on this.

World Trade Organisation

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many members of his Department are deployed in the United Kingdom's mission to the WTO in Geneva; and what are (i) the personnel costs and (ii) the office costs of maintaining them. [98234]

Mr. Hain: Five members of the United Kingdom's mission to the UN and other International Organisations in Geneva are employed fully or partly on WTO. The personnel cost for these staff (including accommodation and support staff costs) is approximately £550,000 per annum. The Office costs are difficult to calculate as they are bound up with the overall costs of UKMis Geneva and the UK's other two diplomatic missions in Geneva which are all co-located.

Departmental Vehicles

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the total number of vehicles used by his Department and its agencies fuelled by (a) petrol, (b) diesel and (c) liquid petroleum gas; and what plans he has to increase the rate of conversion of those vehicles to liquid petroleum gas. [98206]

Mr. Battle: The information is as follows:

Overseas

There are currently 1,235 vehicles in use at our overseas Posts. A breakdown of the fuel types used is shown below:

Fuel type	Number of vehicles fuelled
Petrol	514
Diesel	347
Unknown	374
Total	1,235

Detailed information about the fuel types to be chosen for replacement vehicles to be purchased at FCO Posts overseas is not known. In each case this will depend on the type of vehicle required, and the availability of fuel types at the time of purchase.

The choice of the best fuel type for each new vehicle is decided by each Post, based on any local legislation, the type of vehicle required and what fuel types are available locally. (Not all countries are able to offer unleaded petrol and supplies of either petrol or diesel can in some places be contaminated, of poor quality, or subject to irregular supply).

Posts are aware of the need to use the most environmentally friendly fuels available, where this is practical.

UK

There are currently 47 vehicles in the UK fleet.

	Fuel type
	Petrol	Diesel
Cars	10	5
Vans	2	24
Lorries	—	6

LPG vehicles are currently being evaluated. One vehicle will be introduced to the London Mail Van fleet in the year 2000.

Departmental Waste

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to set targets for the recycling of waste (a) paper, (b) cardboard, (c) glass, (d) metal, (e) plastic and (f) other products created by his Department and its agencies; and if he will make a statement. [98224]

Mr. Battle: My Department's approach to waste management is based on the three "R"s, with "Recovery" (i.e. recycling, composting and energy recovery) following "Reduce" and "Re-use" as the preferred options for reducing waste sent to landfill. This should help us achieve the Green Ministers' target for Government Departments of recovering a minimum of 40 per cent. of total office waste, with at least 25 per cent. of that recovery coming from recycling or composting, in 2000–01, as published in "Greening Government: First Annual Report of the Green Ministers Committee 1998–99". We are currently undergoing an environmental audit which will set baselines against which individual recycling targets may be set. Our associate bodies will be setting their own targets to help us achieve the corporate target.

Kosovo

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the timing of the release of funds allocated by international institutions for stability and reconstruction work in Kosovo in respect of their effectiveness; and if he will make a statement. [98097]

Mr. Vaz: We have been working in the EU and with other international organisations to ensure assistance is delivered to those in need in Kosovo. A programme for Reconstruction and Recovery in Kosovo will be discussed at the second international donors meeting on Kosovo, on 17 November. We shall continue to work to ensure that funds are released in an appropriate and timely way.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the prospects for continued operation of power stations in Kosovo; and if he will make a statement. [98098]

Mr. Vaz: British Trade International assess the overall power situation in Kosovo at present as poor, with frequent power outages. The main reason for this is because the two power stations are old and have been inadequately maintained for many years. There has been no war damage to either power station. A British management team, jointly funded by the EU Task Force and British Trade International, is currently working with the EU Task Force, UNMIK and the Kosovo Electric Company to manage the situation.

The period between now and the end of November, when we expect one of the power stations to become operational again following essential maintenance, may well prove difficult. There have also been difficulties maintaining a regular supply of consumables, funded by the EU Task Force, required to keep the power stations operating. However, DfID and British Trade International are now both providing funds for the hire of bulldozers until new machines funded by the Dutch Ministry of Development arrive. This will ensure that the coal supply to the power stations can be maintained.

Danish and Norwegian programmes are repairing the high voltage transmissions systems and the ability to import what power is available from neighbouring grid systems should be improved by the end of December.

DfID is working on the low voltage distribution system to ensure that essential services are maintained through the winter period. Our infrastructure engineering unit staff are heavily involved in co-ordination of the power sector to ensure that donor work is complementary.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will estimate the number of revenge attacks on (a) gypsies and (b) Jews in Kosovo since September. [98268]

Mr. Vaz: I will write to my hon. Friend shortly.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports he has received from the FBI about the number of bodies found in mass graves in Kosovo. [98263]

Mr. Vaz: The FCO has not received any reports on this subject from the FBI. National forensic teams who have been working in Kosovo are submitting their reports to the International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia (ICTY).

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if he will make a statement on attacks by ethnic Albanians on Serbs who have stayed in Kosovo; [98265]

(2) if he will make a statement on UN reaction to the grenade attack on Sunday 7 November on the Serb village of Pasjane; [98266]

(3) how many villagers from Ulastica are under arrest; and for what alleged crimes. [98267]

Mr. Vaz: I will write to my hon. Friend shortly.

Iraq

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs for what reason the UK rejected the Iraqi appeal to halt patrols over the no-fly zone on the day of the solar eclipse on 11 August. [98277]

Mr. Hain: We remain fully committed to patrolling the no-fly zones set up to limit Baghdad's repression of the Iraqi population. We are not prepared to leave innocent civilians exposed to attacks by the Iraqi air force. Our patrolling poses no threat to those on the ground. Only when Iraqi forces try to shoot down our aircraft are we forced to respond in self-defence. Civilian facilities would, of course, never be targeted.

Stability Pact (Yugoslavia)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what are the terms of reference of the Stability Pact in relation to the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia; what objectives it is designed to achieve; how it is organised; where is the Secretariat; and who are its signatories. [98264]

Mr. Vaz: The Stability Pact for South-East Europe aims to promote peace, stability and democracy in the region. The Pact brings together the countries of the region, the EU, the USA, Russia, a range of other countries, many international organisations and International Financial Institutions. The participating countries to the Pact adopted the founding document in Cologne on 10 June 1999. It has been stressed at all Stability Pact meetings that there is a role for the FRY when conditions permit. Meanwhile, Montenegro is fully involved in the Pact's work.

The Office of the Special Co-ordinator for the Pact is in Brussels. The Special Co-ordinator Chairs the Regional Table of the Pact. This acts as a steering board and facilitates co-ordination and information exchange between the Pact's three Working Tables. The three Working Tables deal with Democracy/Human Rights, Economic Reconstruction/Development/Co-operation, and Security Issues and meet every 3–4 months. Between these meetings work is taken forward through subject-specific Task Forces.

Ukraine

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the barriers to (a) UK and (b) EU investment and trade with the Ukraine; what (i) formal meetings and (ii) programmes and initiatives have been introduced to overcome such barriers; and if he will make a statement. [98005]

Mr. Vaz: I will write to my hon. Friend shortly.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on what occasions since May 1997 the British Ambassador to Ukraine held formal meetings with (a) the President, (b) the Prime Minister and (c) other ministers in Ukraine's Government; and on what occasions Ukraine's Ambassador to the UK has had meetings with Government ministers. [98006]

Mr. Vaz: The British Ambassador in Kiev has had two formal meetings with the Ukrainian President and 20 formal meetings with Ukrainian Ministers since taking up his post in May 1999. He has not had a formal meeting with the Prime Minister. There is no comprehensive record of the meetings which the previous Ambassador had with the President, Prime Minister and Minsters.

The Ukrainian Ambassador to the United Kingdom has had a number of formal meetings with United Kingdom Government Ministers since May 1997, including five meetings with Foreign and Commonwealth Office Ministers this year:

Baroness Symons (10 February), Ms Quin (14 June), Mr. Lloyd (29 June), Mr. Hain (16 September) and Mr. Hoon (21 September).

The Ambassador was also present when the Ukrainian Foreign Minister called on the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on 1 February 1999 and on 20 March. The Ambassador has had two meetings with Ministry of Defence Ministers this year:

Lord Gilbert (23 March) and Mr. Spellar (6 September).

Comprehensive information on the Ukrainian Ambassador's meetings is not held centrally. To provide a full answer to this question would incur disproportionate cost.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the (a) staffing levels and (b) budget spent by the British Council in Ukraine in each of the past five years; and if he will make a statement. [98002]

Mr. Hain: The staffing levels in Ukraine in each of the past five years was as follows:

Year	Number of staff
1995–96	44.5
1996–97	45
1997–98	51
1998–99	51
1999–2000	60

The amount of the grant-in-aid spent by the Council in Ukraine during this period was:

Year	£ million
1995–96	1.0
1996–97	1.0
1997–98	1.0
1998–99	1.1
1999–2000	1.0

Additional amounts earned from running programmes and contract work, and spent for the benefit of Ukraine over this period were:

Year	£ million
1995–96	0.1
1996–97	0.1
1997–98	0.8
1998–99	0.5
1999–2000	0.7

The British Council makes a substantial contribution to meeting FCO objectives in Ukraine, particularly in the field of governance and human rights, in support of reform and development and in contributing to the reform of the Ukrainian education system, including the updating of English language teaching. To accommodate its expanding activities it will shortly move into larger premises, which it will share with the Goethe Institute.

Departmental Language Skills

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information his Department collates on the foreign language skills of staff in diplomatic service grades. [98003]

Mr. Hain: I will write to my hon. Friend shortly.

Horses (Transportation)

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the Governments of Eastern European countries regarding the transportation of horses to the European Union. [98364]

Mr. Vaz: I will write to the hon. Member shortly.

EU Pavilions

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the cost to date of running EU pavilions at international exhibitions; what was the function of these pavilions; how many staff were involved; what was the pertinent budget line; and if he will list (i) display titles, (ii) videos and (iii) publications present. [97526]

Mr. Vaz: I will write to the hon. Member shortly.

International Criminal Court (Scotland)

Mr. Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the Scottish Executive about the amendments to Scots law needed to enable the ratification of the Treaty on the International Criminal Court. [98427]

Mr. Hain: I will write to my hon. Friend shortly.

Mr. Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the amendments to Scots law needed to enable the ratification of the Treaty on the International Criminal Court. [98428]

Mr. Hain: I will write to my hon. Friend shortly.

Biological Weapons

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on (a) his assessment of the threat from biological weapons to international security and (b) the policy of Her Majesty's Government towards early completion of the negotiations for an effective protocol to strengthen the Biological and Toxin Weapons Convention to enable the protocol to be signed at a conference in London during 2000. [98329]

Mr. Hain: I will write to my hon. Friend shortly.

HOUSE OF COMMONS PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES (HANSARD) ● 1998-99

CHADWYCK-HEALEY Vol. 337 Index pp1-55 (A-ZIN) 1 - 11 November 1999

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES SESSION 1998–99 VOLUME 337

1st November—11th November 1999

SCOPE OF THE INDEX, ARRANGEMENT AND ABBREVIATIONS

This index to the daily parts and weekly Hansard is derived from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Indexing Service (POLIS), and the subject terms used are based on those used in POLIS. There are often changes in column numbering, etc., between the daily part or weekly Hansard (which simply collects together the daily parts without revision) and the bound volume. The index for the bound volume is revised to take account of these changes, and cannot, therefore, be used in conjunction with the daily part or weekly Hansard. For these versions use the Fortnightly Index.

Scope and arrangement of the Index

Oral and Written Parliamentary Questions are indexed under subject headings and the names of Members asking and Ministers replying to them. Questions are not listed under the names of Departments replying. Departmental listings can be arrived at indirectly by looking under the names of the Minister(s) of that Department. There will, however, be headings 'Northern Ireland', 'Scotland', and 'Wales' under which one will find not only Questions answered by the Northern Ireland Office, Scottish Office, Welsh Office but also Questions about these areas of the United Kingdom which are answered by other Departments. Ministerial statements are indexed under subject headings, under 'Ministerial statements' and the names of Ministers making them and Members speaking on them. General debates are indexed under broad subject headings and under the names of all Members and Ministers taking part. Debates on legislation (Bills, Orders, Regulations etc.) are indexed under the name of the Bill, Statutory Instruments etc., under subject headings and under the names of those taking part.

Contributions by Speaker and deputies are brought together under the heading 'Speaker and deputies'. Significant rulings and statements are indicated by the sub-heading 'Rulings and statements'.

Opposition Day Debates and Estimates Day Debates are listed under those respective headings and under subject headings too.

The date of each item except Parliamentary Questions is inserted immediately before the reference.

Members' names are given in the form by which they prefer to be known and are printed in bold italics. Under their names, entries are arranged under one of the two headings Debates, etc. (to include interventions on statements, points of order and so on) or Questions.

Abbreviations

Bills 1R = first reading, 2R = second reading, Com = Committee stage, Rep = Report stage, 3R = third reading, res = resolution, amendt/amendts = amendment/amendments, * = matter taken formally, without debate.

Column numbers followed by the letter W refer to Written Questions. These appear at the end of each daily part or volume with their own sequence of column numbers printed in italics.
